PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

House Concurrent Resolution 4

Whereas the Federal land bank has persistently pursued a course in the foreclosure of mortgages against the citizens of this State adverse to the wishes of the President and the intent and purpose of the Congress; and

Whereas this practice has been most noticeable to parishes, localities, and neighborhoods where there are apparent possibilities of potential gas and oil development, this latter fact being so apparent as to cause universal criticism of the motions of this said Federal land bank; and

Whereas these unjust acts have not only been committed against old resident citizens who, together with their forbears, have been for generations the backbone and sinew of this country, but against many representatives of a new and fine citizenry who have moved into this State, invested their all in good faith, and yet have met with the same ruthless treatment; and

Whereas the purpose of our great President and the Congress of the United States in recommending and making appropriations to the said Federal land bank for the protection of these citizens in the security of their property rights and to aid them and tide them over these terrible years of depression, thereby giving them the help so badly needed to recoup from their misfortunes, and to enable them to become a substantial people who could and would contribute to their country's good; and most certainly not for the purpose of the said Federal land bank to make more money with, to create more high-salaried jobs, and create more moneyed potentates, but, instead, was for the stricken farmer and other sufferers who, due to no fault of their own, were engulfed by storms, droughts, excessive rainfall, innumerable pests—in short, by the cataclysms of nature—and who are rendered powerless to help themselves in their struggle for their very existence, let alone pay interest to said Federal land bank and taxes to the State government; and

Whereas we believe in the honesty and integrity of the American people as a whole and believe their inability to pay interest to this said Federal land bank and taxes to the State is due to a combination of the above-named causes and not to dishonesty and a desire to defraud, as evidenced by the fact that these same people or their forbears paid enormous sums and interest to English and Scotch loan companies in the '80's and '90's, as the parish records in Louisiana will show; and

Whereas we believe that moneys appropriated by Congress should be for the benefit of the common people and not for corporate interests: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Louisiana go on record as approving every word of this resolution, and that this legislature memorialize the Congress of the United States to immediately take proper steps to have this abuse of Federal funds corrected; and further be it

Resolved, That the Louisiana delegation in Congress use every means within their power to bring pressure upon the Congress to correct the evils as set forth in this resolution and to have all properties unjustly taken from their rightful owners restored to them; and still further be it

Resolved, That the Congress pass all necessary moratoriums and a mandatory act to govern said Federal land bank with proper restrictions as to use of Government funds and proper safeguards for the sovereign people; also be it

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Vice President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to the Secretary of the Senate, and the Clerk of the House, and also to each member of the Louisiana delegation in the Congress of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Common Council of the City of Buffalo, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Ellenbogen low-cost housing bill, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Central Labor Council of San Joaquin County, Calif., protesting against the alleged action of the Bureau of Reclamation in not observing the California law as to drilling in silica in rock tunnels located near Kenneth, Calif., which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. COPELAND presented resolutions adopted by Branch 4, Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, of Brooklyn, and the League of the Physically Handicapped, of New York City, both in the State of New York, favoring the enactment of the so-called workers' social-insurance bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution of the New York Board of Trade, protesting against the enactment of Senate bill 2134, to prohibit employers from influencing the vote of their employees in national elections, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALSH presented a resolution of the Board of Aldermen of the City of Chelsea, Mass., protesting against the admission into the United States of former President Calles, of the Republic of Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Roosevelt Council, No. 45, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, of Lowell, Mass., favoring the enactment of Senate bill 4011, restricting immigration and providing for the deportation of undesirable aliens, and protesting against the enactment of Senate bill 2969, to authorize the deportation of criminals, to guard against the separation from their families of aliens of the noncriminal classes, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Springfield, Mass., and vicinity, praying for the enactment of the so-called Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

LOW-COST HOUSING

Mr. WAGNER presented resolutions adopted by the annual meeting of the Unitarian Ministerial Union at Boston, Mass., which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN UNITARIAN ASSOCIATION,
Boston, Mass., May 25, 1936.

DEAR SENATOR WAGNER: As secretary of the Unitarian Ministerial Union, which held its annual meeting on Thursday, May 21, 1936, in Boston, I am very glad to transmit to you the following resolution in support of your housing bill:

Whereas the Unitarian Ministerial Union is vitally concerned in a national program of slum removal and the provision of better housing for people of small incomes; and

Whereas we believe that the passage of Senate bill 4424, setting up a Federal Housing Authority, will help toward this end: Be it

Resolved, That the Unitarian Ministerial Union go on record as favoring the passage of Senate bill 4424; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States and to Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER, the sponsor of the bill.

With every good wish for your success in this endeavor, I am,
Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR W. OLSEN,

[Translation]

MEXICO, D. F., March 20, 1936.

The Honorable Congress of the United States of North America, Washington, United States of America:

For 26 years Mexico has been agitated by an intense social upheaval which has attracted to this country, in the process of formation, the curiosity of all the world, principally because it was supposed that it was affected by a destructive tendency, since the intellectuals were few who had evaluated in a spirit of justice and historical recognition the true depth of our struggles which, in reality, date from very far back.

For the past few years the ends of our social agitation have been more clearly apparent to sociologists, politicians, and historians, and it is beginning to be understood that Mexico is making a colossal attempt to equilibrate its economic system and the peculiar racial differences in the Spanish-speaking countries.

This understanding has caused a friendly hand to be extended to us from everywhere, and we are taking advantage of this fact in order to deserve that those more advanced than ourselves look on us as a country that is anxious to attain the culture of the more advanced.

The intense work which the Government is carrying on in the educational field, creating annually thousands of schools, in accordance with the 6-year plan accepted in solemn promise of fulfillment by the President of the Republic has brought about, as a consequence, a keen interest in the establishment of libraries and the development and modernization of those already in existence.

The Congress of the Union, desirous of contributing to so noble a desire, resolved taking as a basis the libraries of the Chamber of Deputies, Senate, and of the Chief Accounting Office of Hacienda, a dependency of the first, libraries which were destined exclusively for the service of the representatives of the people to create a public library, with services and organization which may influence all those which exist and those which are being established in the vast extent of the Republic and, in order to carry out this work, a national library board has been constituted which will function even in the most modest villages.

For the adequate installation of the large library of the Congress of the Union, a spacious site, granted by the President of the Republic who is an enthusiastic collaborator in our work, and which is centrally located quite near the colegislative chambers, has been duly adapted.

Desirous that the intellectual manifestations of all the civilized countries be duly represented in the library in formation, we request that honorable Congress to patronize the new library in order that its name may be placed on an inscription which will appear on the walls of the central reading room, as well as the presentation of a collection of works of that nation, a collection which will have a special place.

Likewise, we beg that our request be transmitted, when it is convenient, to official departments, scientific, and literary societies, labor and cultural organizations of all kinds in your country in order that they may donate to us, through the undersigned commission, any publication, book, pamphlet, newspaper, or magazine of a scientific, historical, sociological, or legal character, which it may be possible to furnish us, dedicated to the library of the Congress of the Union, opened to the people by recent decree, and which our Congress is attempting to make a national center of study for all the social classes of our country.

The Congress of the Union of the United Mexican States, through us, and with the assurance that this petition which we make in its name will be heeded, presents in advance to Your Excellency and to the Members of that honorable Congress its appreciation and a greeting to you and best wishes for the prosperity and peace of your fatherland.

THE LIBRARY COMMISSION.

Deputies:

A similar bill has been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. I ask that the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys be discharged from the further consideration of the bill and that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS TO FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL, 1936

Mr. ROBINSON submitted an amendment providing for the appointment of boards to study and report upon the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal project, Florida, and the Passamaquoddy tidal-power project, Maine, and so forth, intended to be proposed by him to House bill 12624, the first deficiency appropriation bill, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 12624, the first deficiency appropriation bill, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE—AMENDMENTS

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to House bill 8555, the merchant marine bill, and ask that it be printed and lie on the table; also that there be printed in the RECORD an explanation of the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. WALSH to the bill (H. R. 8555) to develop a strong American merchant marine, to promote the commerce of the United States, to aid national defense, and for other purposes, is as follows:

On page 48, line 8, after the name "United States", to strike out "(2) in the Panama Canal Zone."

The explanation of the amendment submitted by Mr. WALSH is as follows:

The reason for the inclusion of these words is not clear. The effect of their inclusion is to render the section ambiguous. The section prohibits the granting of an operating subsidy for any vessel engaged in the coastwise or intercoastal trade. This is eminently fair, because the coastwise or intercoastal trade is reserved under our laws for American ships, and foreign-flag ships cannot engage in this trade. The American-flag ship in the coastwise trade has no foreign-flag competitors, and hence there is no occasion for the payment of an operating differential. The section makes an exception in favor of vessels engaged in "round the world" voyages which include intercoastal ports of the United States; but since the intercoastal part of such voyages is protected against foreign-flag competition, then it is provided that the operating subsidy should be reduced proportionately to the gross revenue received from such protected part of the voyage. This is entirely fair.

The section also authorizes a vessel on a voyage in foreign trade to receive a subsidy, even though it stops at an island possession or island territory of the United States, but upon the condition that there will be a similar reduction in the operating subsidy. This also seems fair, because in effect there is no subsidy for the protected part of the voyage. This section permits our American vessels to stop at Puerto Rico or Hawaii on their voyages in foreign commerce and yet receive a subsidy for the foreign and unprotected part of the voyage.

The section then seems to indicate an intention to place the Panama Canal Zone in the same status as an island possession or island territory. Apparently the author has a complete misapprehension as to the legal status of the Panama Canal Zone or has some rather vague notion that voyages with stops at the Panama Canal Zone should be treated differently from voyages with stops at foreign ports; or it is intended by these words to indirectly extend the coastwise laws to the Canal Zone? In the first place, the coastwise laws do not extend to the Canal Zone. Under existing law there is no restriction upon foreign-flag ships engaging in trade between the ports of the United States and the ports of the Canal Zone. As a matter of fact, there are dozens of very powerful steamship lines with ports of the United States and ports of the Canal Zone as ports of call. Trade between the United States and Puerto Rico and Hawaii is restricted to American ships and is covered by our coastwise laws. Such is not the case with the Canal Zone. The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Luckenback S. S. Co. v. United States (286 U. S. 180) clearly points this out. Since this is not within the protected trade, why should it be treated as such? In the second place, the foreign-flag competition in the trade between the United States and the Canal Zone is very intense and is probably more pronounced than on any other foreign trade route. No substantial reason can be advanced for penalizing those American ships engaged in foreign trade which make stops at the Canal Zone.

The adoption of the proposed amendment will prevent an obvious injustice to American ships stopping at Canal Zone ports, but will afford ample protection to those American ships engaged exclusively in coastwise trade against the competition of American ships engaged in the joint round-the-world and intercoastal trade and in the joint foreign and island possession or island territory trade. If an American shipowner engaged in foreign trade cannot make stops at the Canal Zone on a basis of competitive equality with a foreign-flag vessel, why would he build or operate American-flag ships when very obviously this bill does not create any advantages in favor of the American ship over a foreign-flag ship?

Let me illustrate the effect of this section unless it is amended as I have proposed. Any American ship sailing from any port of the Atlantic, Gulf, or Pacific to a port of Central or South America by way of the Canal Zone could not take cargo for the Canal Zone without losing a part of its operating subsidy, and the foreign-flag ships would carry the cargo. Certainly it is not the policy of this bill to do anything to discourage or prevent American ships from carrying cargo to the Canal Zone. The following foreign-flag ships are operating between Pacific coast ports and ports of the Canal Zone:

Outbound from United States	Flag	Inbound to west coast	Flag
Barber Line	British.	Barber Steamship Line	British.
Royal Mail	Do.	Donaldson Line	Do.
		Furness Line	Do.
French Line	French.	Riordan-Smith	Do.
		Royal Mail Steamship Line.	Do.
Hamburg-American Line	German.

Holland-American Line	Dutch.	Libra Line	Italian.
		Holland-American Line	Dutch.
		Fruit Express	Norwegian.
		Interocean Line	Do.

And the following foreign lines are in active competition with American ships on voyages between the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States and the Canal Zone:

Cargo for the Canal Zone as distinguished from the Republic of Panama is carried very largely by the Panama Railroad Steamship Co., which is owned by the United States. The ports of Cristobal and Balboa, in the Canal Zone, are the ports of entry for all cargo destined to the Republic of Panama, and for transshipment all over Latin America. It is of vital importance that this bill should encourage, in every possible way, the use of American ships in developing our water-borne commerce with our southern neighbors. If any restriction is placed on American ships so that they do not receive the full subsidy when calling at Canal Zone ports, then the cargo will move in foreign bottoms, or American companies desiring to engage in the Latin American trade will build and operate foreign-flag ships. Moreover, anything hampering the use of American ships in this trade would also result in a greater sale of European goods in the Latin American trade—to the great detriment of United States trade.

The purpose of the operating subsidy is to encourage the use and operation of American ships, and to place the operator of an American ship on a parity with his foreign-flag competitor. If the operating subsidy to an American ship calling at the Canal Zone is reduced and is less than the amount necessary to place the American on an equal footing with the foreigner, then this bill fails in its purpose.

Trade between the Canal Zone and the United States is foreign trade and not coastwise trade, and this section, if amended, fully protects unsubsidized ships from the competition of subsidized ships which engage in the joint coastwise and foreign trade.

Mr. WALSH also submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8555) to develop a strong American merchant marine, to promote the commerce of the United States, to aid national defense, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—DELLA ANDERSON

On motion by Mr. BONE, it was Ordered, That the papers filed with the bill (S. 2102) granting a pension to Della Anderson be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

COMMITTEE SERVICE

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] be assigned to service on the Committee on Patents, on behalf of the majority, to fill an existing vacancy.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SENATOR M'KELLAR'S ADDRESS BEFORE TENNESSEE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

Mr. BACHMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the able and interesting address delivered by my colleague the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] before the State Democratic convention of Tennessee at Nashville, Tenn., on May 21, 1936.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention, it is a refreshing and invigorating experience to drink at the fountainhead of Tennessee Democracy, and I deeply appreciate the honor you have paid me in the privilege of addressing this great representative convention. I do not believe there has ever been a period in Tennessee history when our party has had more occasion for pride and enthusiasm. I was never prouder to be a Democrat.

We are assembled in convention today primarily for two most important purposes. First, to give our earnest, hearty, and grateful thanks to a very great man—a man who at the psychological moment in our history in 1933, when despair, collapse, and ruin were staring us in the face, took over the affairs of our people, rescued us from the awful depression that then beset us, and restored us to recovery, prosperity, and happiness.

Our second most important purpose is officially to give Tennessee's pledge to that same man for renomination and reelection which he has so justly earned and which he so richly deserves. Of course I refer to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

TENNESSEE AT LAST TREATED AS AN EQUAL

For the first time in more than 75 years Tennessee has been and is being treated by the President of the United States as an equal in the sisterhood of States. She has been particularly blessed under the administration of this great President. He has made no discrimination against Tennessee in any sense. Her representatives are always welcome at the White House. He has treated her people fairly and justly. For the first time since I have been in public life at Washington it has been no handicap to come from Tennessee. Our President keeps up with our problems. If those problems are meritorious, he is ever ready to lend a listening ear to them. If he cannot see them in the way you do, he tells you so, frankly. It is remarkable, indeed, how he keeps up not only with our problems but with the problems of each State in the Union, even to the smallest detail. He is not a sectional President. He is not the president of any group, nor of any interest, nor of any division of our people, nor of any section of our country, but he is the active, industrious, vigilant, able, intelligent, and helpful President of all the people whose social and economic interests and welfare are close to his heart, and after all that he has done for our State and our Nation, I feel honored to have been chosen by you as a spokesman for him at this convention, and my most earnest hope is that this great democracy of Tennessee will unanimously endorse him for another renomination and reelection.

HELPS ALL

My friends, Mr. Roosevelt has been a wonderful benefactor to our State. There is not a city nor a county nor an institution nor a corporation nor an individual, white or colored, that has not been directly or indirectly tremendously benefited by Mr. Roosevelt's wise leadership, by his wonderful planning ability, and by his fair and just treatment of all the people of our State. He has indeed bestowed rich blessings upon us and upon all of us, and we should go to the polls on election day, and in the language of our own patron saint of democracy, Andrew Jackson, say by the eternal we are going to give him 4 more years in the White House.

APPOINTED TENNESSEEANS TO OFFICE

Nor has our President been inconsiderate of Tennessee in his appointments to office. He came to Tennessee for the highest minister in his official family. He came here for Secretary of State, and he made one of our most distinguished citizens, one of our ablest and best citizens, one of the strongest and best men in the country, the Honorable Cordell Hull, as his Secretary of State, and no man could have guided the foreign relations of this Government during the last 3 years better than Cordell Hull has done.

And there is Congressman JOSEPH W. BYRNS made Speaker by the House, and he is the President's leader in that body. It is the concensus of opinion in Washington that JOE BYRNS is one of the most capable and effective Speakers that the House of Representatives ever had.

Again, he appointed former Congressman Ewin L. Davis Federal Trade Commissioner, and a splendid Commissioner he is making in that important office.

He appointed George L. Berry to a high executive place in the labor relations in our country, and Major Berry is making good in the great trust assigned to him.

He appointed Mrs. Benton McMillin Civil Service Commissioner, and she is likewise making a great record in Washington.

He appointed Ed. Albright as Minister to Finland, where he is making a most enviable record.

He appointed Dwight Webb a member of the Home Loan Bank, that bank which has done more than any other for the home owners of the entire country.

And there is Ernest Rice, of Dyersburg, president of the farm land bank, who has done as much for the farmers as any other institution ever established.

There is Ashley Sowell, of Columbia, Tenn., appointed to a high position in the Department of Commerce, where he has made good all along the line and stands high in the estimation of his Department.

There is T. J. Murray, appointed Assistant Solicitor of the Post Office Department and making a great record.

Grover C. Sherrod, Solicitor in the State Department and making a most creditable record.

Jimmy Joe Murray, of Lewisburg, high in the councils of the Agricultural Department and making good.

Samuel E. Whittaker, of Chattanooga, Assistant Attorney General, and making good.

Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, high in the Department of Air Commerce.

Robert M. Gates, public-relations man in the Department of Justice and high in the councils of the Government.

Jack W. Gates, Postmaster of the Senate of the United States.

Mrs. Nancy Harfield, in the Rural Electrification Department, and stands as high as any woman in the Federal service.

And there is Paul Luton, of Waverley, who is an Assistant Solicitor in the Department of Justice; John W. Hilldrop, Assistant Solicitor in the Department of Justice; Neil Brooks, Assistant Solicitor in the R. F. C.; and many other Tennesseans representing practically every county in the State, appointed in almost all of the departments.

Mr. Roosevelt's appointments in the State of Tennessee of prominent Democrats, beginning with Judge John D. Martin, the first Democrat that ever was a Federal judge in Memphis and as honest and as fine a judge as ever sat on a district-court bench, and going along the splendid list of Federal officials in Tennessee too numerous to mention, but all of whom show the President's fine sense of discrimination in the selection of men and women to hold public office in the Federal Government.

POLICIES HELPFUL TO EVERYONE

Naturally, my friends, I have kept in close touch with all of Mr. Roosevelt's dealings with Tennessee and Tennesseeans, with the effect of his policies in Tennessee, and with his genuine interest in Tennessee and her problems, and I can truthfully say that these policies have benefited every person in our State, whether he be manufacturer, banker, capitalist, lawyer, doctor, laborer, merchant, businessman, railroad man—whether president or laborer, minister of the Gospel, farmer, Republican, Democrat, man without work or man with work, white or colored. His policies have helped every one of them, and the same is true of every State and Territory in this Nation.

REPUBLICANS ONE-TERMERS

I stop here long enough to recall to your minds a peculiar fact about our political history. Since the Civil War the Republicans have had 12 Presidents and only one of them has ever served two whole terms. While in that same period the Democrats have had three Presidents and two of them were reelected to succeed themselves and served two whole terms and the other one, Franklin Roosevelt, who is perhaps the greatest of them all, has already served one term and is going to be reelected to serve another.

What is the reason for this? There must be some underlying reason. To my mind it is perfectly plain. The Democrats when they nominate they select the best man they can for the nomination, while the Republicans when they select they select a man not because he will make a good President but because they think he will be a good candidate and that he will best serve the special interests. So far as the record shows, Ulysses S. Grant, and he was a war hero, was the only one of the 12 Republican Presidents that ever served two whole terms. McKinley was reelected but served only a few months of his second term. All the others served only one term, or a part of two terms.

There never was a better illustration of this policy of our Republican friends than their present attempt to nominate a President. Everybody knows that their outstanding candidate is Borah. He is able. He is eloquent. He is a learned man, a man of the highest character, a servant of all the people, and he would undoubtedly make a great President, but such a man does not please the Republican Party. They wish to have a man who primarily will serve the great selfish interests of the country. That is the reason they are thinking about nominating a man like Landon. They care less for the Presidency than they do about his qualifications to serve the Republican Party and the special interests. It may even take a Senate investigating committee to find out what his qualifications are. They certainly believe that Mr. Landon will serve the great special interests of the country, the oil people, the steel people, and the other vested interests.

TWO REPUBLICAN RECRUITS AND LIBERTY LEAGUE DINNER

But the Republican ranks have certainly been increased by two. How many they have lost in the last 4 years no man can tell. However that may be, they have added at least two converts who did not vote for Hoover 4 years ago. Perhaps I should tell you who they are. The first is William Randolph Hearst, capitalist and publisher of many papers. The other is Jouett Shouse, of Liberty League fame. When William Randolph Hearst announced that he was going to oppose Roosevelt, it probably added a million votes to the Roosevelt column. There are probably more than that many people in the country who would vote against any man who has the Hearst blessing, and Landon has already found that the Hearst support is a millstone around his neck. When Shouse announced that the Liberty League was going to oppose Mr. Roosevelt, that probably subtracted one vote and added another million votes to Roosevelt; but when the facts came out through the Liberty League Belshazzar feast in Washington that the 12 Du Ponts were furnishing the money for the Liberty League, it probably added more votes to Mr. Roosevelt. In fact, that Liberty League dinner virtually assured Mr. Roosevelt's election.

They call it the Liberty League, but that is a misnomer. It ought to be called the billion-dollar league for the 12 Du Ponts who have a corner on war munitions in this country, and the others who attended the dinner represented over a billion dollars, so the newspapers carried the day after the dinner occurred. The gaudy display of wealth at that banquet as represented by the Du Pont millions, as well as the fortunes of other nabobs of the Republican Party, was one of the most pitiful spectacles of ill-breeding and political assininity that I have ever known in the history of this country.

It is really astonishing to note the extent to which these lords of finance have concentrated the fear that their vested interests might be disturbed and they pour out all their venom upon Mr. Roosevelt. Fortunately this fanatical hatred which has taken hold of some of these people is more than compensated by the grateful love and admiration by millions of Americans who realize that Franklin Roosevelt is the leader of the plain people and has opened to them new gates of hope by restoring the Government to the people. The people will no longer be led to slaughter at the hands of the ancient vested oligarchy. Mr. Roosevelt and the Democratic Party are not for sale.

I am going to make a suggestion to my Republican friends, whether they like it or not. It is that they save their time and money and try to recuperate in time to make a future fight. Republicans are claimed to be opposed to waste, but if they spend their campaign millions in this year's contest it is going to be the greatest object lesson in waste ever pulled off in this country.

Their plight reminds me of the situation of an Arkansas farmer living near Wapanaca Duck Club, near Memphis, found himself in a few years ago. He had a dog by the name of Bee, and he was very fond of Bee and proud of his accomplishments. The alert Bee, with canine sense and intuition, discovered rich pickings in the vicinity of the clubhouse and his regular visits were proving profitable. Sometimes he would steal a hen, sometimes a chicken, then a beef, and for awhile he lived sumptuously on the very fat of the club's larder. Bee actually outsmarted the clubhouse cook, whose efforts to catch the invader were unavailing.

In desperation the cook resorted to heroic measures. He loaded a piece of beef with dynamite, inserted a fuse, and placed the infernal bait at a tempting spot. The dog greedily swallowed beef, dynamite, and all, and half a minute later the dynamite exploded and scattered dog all over the yard. The farmer, a short distance away, hearing the explosion and apprehensive that his dog had been shot, ran to inquire of the cook, whereupon the cook replied, "There he is lying out there all over the back yard." The farmer picked up a leg here, some hair there, a bone in another place, and despairingly said, "That sho' must be Bee; it looks like Bee and must be Bee; but if it is Bee, it is the damnedest busted Bee I ever saw in my life."

So when I look at the Republican Party and see dissensions here, discord there, and disputes going on between rival candidates, their lack of policy, their foolish issues, and pile them all in a heap, I am sure any Republican would say, "That is the Republican Party; but if it is the Republican Party, it is the damnedest busted Republican Party that I ever saw." In truth, the Republican Party is split into smithereens.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES

Our Republican friends are certainly in a quandry. If they nominate BORAH, their best man, the East will not support him and not much of the West, because the West is going for Roosevelt anyway. It is true that BORAH is the ablest man they have, but he has voted just as much with the Democrats as with the Republicans, and the Republicans are not going to accept him as nominee.

If they nominate Mr. Hearst's Landon, he won't know what it is all about, and his lack of ability would not be discovered until it was too late.

If they nominate the Michigan wolverine, Mr. VANDENBERG, though a very able man, they stand a chance at the single State of Michigan.

If they nominate Mr. DICKINSON their chances would be worse. Senator DICKINSON is a fine man but he has no show.

If they nominate JIMMY WADSWORTH, a splendid man but a violent reactionary, it would just be too bad, even as able and as accomplished as he is.

The truth is they have not got outstanding Presidential timber this time, and what they have got, the most of them are on record for having approved some or the most of the Roosevelt policies. Even their keynoter, Mr. STEIWER, will find himself in an embarrassing predicament when he rises in the Cleveland convention to view with alarm and point with pride because time and again he has both voted for and spoken for the Roosevelt policies.

Finally, there is poor, neglected and angry Hoover, who was never able to entice prosperity around the corner. He was one of those one-termers, but stands vigorously for three principles of the Republican Party, which are: Promise anything to get in, do nothing, and say nothing after you get in. The Republicans have not offered a Presidential possibility for whom they would not have to apologize in some way.

SPECIAL INTERESTS

Of course, Mr. Roosevelt has benefited everybody, but some people assert that they think there are certain special interests that President Roosevelt has not benefited, namely, the power companies, the capitalists, the railroads, and the bankers. Those who thus affirm are not advised. In 1933 power stocks all over the country, in Tennessee as well as elsewhere, were of little value. Their bonds were a long way below par. The values of these bonds and stocks under the President's wise administration have continued to rise, and the profits of these companies are more than they have ever been.

Those who assert that capitalists have not been benefited are contradicted in indisputable terms when you look at the individual tax returns of this State and of the country. The large increase in the individual income-tax returns shows the wide benefits they have received under Mr. Roosevelt's policies, and yet they are supposed to be against him.

As for the banks, my personal knowledge of the facts and the truth compels me to say that, in my judgment, Franklin Roosevelt has done as much for the banks of Tennessee and of this entire Union as any man who ever sat in the Presidential chair. To my certain knowledge if it had not been for the wise policies of Mr. Roosevelt, of which all sensible men ought to have knowledge, there are literally thousands of banks in this country prosperous today that long since would have failed.

But some say that he has not benefited the railroads as he should. In 1933 when Mr. Roosevelt came in the railroads were staring bankruptcy in the face. They have been the recipient of the Government's richest bounty. Their stocks had decreased almost to nothing, and they were facing ruin.

This administration has upheld them, looked after their business interests, and the large increase in the value of both their stocks and their bonds, and their increased earnings afford indisputable proof that this administration has helped them tremendously.

If there is a capitalist, if there is a railroad official, if there is a banker, if there is a representative of a power company in this country today, I challenge him to say that he and the organization which he represents is not better off today than he was on the 4th of March 1933.

When I see the constant and reiterated publication today of the violent criticism of Mr. Roosevelt by representatives of these four classes of our people, I am reminded of a story that a county trustee, which is the tax collector of that county in Tennessee, told me not long ago. He said that just after the war a young friend of his returned and had no money, that he, the trustee, was well to do and the young man came to him and told him he wanted to get married and wanted to borrow $100 to marry with, and he lent him the money. Later on, the young man came and told him he wanted to rent a farm and make a crop but they had no money and he wanted to borrow $1,000, and the trustee lent him $1,000. He did well and repaid the money. Later on, the young man concluded to buy a farm and he did not have the money, and he borrowed it from the trustee, and paid it back on the installment plan, and soon had a farm. He then wanted to go into the merchandising business and he got his trustee friend to stake him to $5,000 more to go into a general-merchandising business in the neighborhood. Later, he wanted to go into the cattle business, and again the trustee staked him and he continued to prosper. There was hardly a month or a year that passed that the young man did not borrow from his old friend the trustee.

And there arose a time when the trustee found that he had opposition for reelection, and he was talking to his manager and counting noses. The trustee said he knew that the now rich young man whom he had so often befriended and done things for was going to support him and be his friend. The manager told him he had better look into that. He went to see the young man and he said, "You know I cannot support you." The trustee said, "Didn't I stake you to get married, stake you to rent a farm, stake you to buy a farm, stake you to the merchandising business, and stake you to the cattle business?" He said, "Oh, yes; all that is true, but you have not done anything for me lately, and I have quit you."

And when Mr. Roosevelt fails to do the slightest thing that they think he ought to do they are against him.

FARMERS AND LABORING MEN

The farmers compose in round numbers about one-third of our entire population. The laboring men of the country, in round numbers, compose about one-half. The secret of Mr. Roosevelt's success in overcoming the depression lies in his fundamental idea that if these two groups of our people are made prosperous, then the entire country will be prosperous. I want you to note this carefully. I repeat that Mr. Roosevelt's economic policies of reasonable prices for all the products of the farm and a reasonable wage for all those who work with their hands constitute the basis of all wealth and all prosperity in this Nation. These two policies have brought about the present recovery. These two policies tell the whole story of the country's rehabilitation. Let me repeat again, it is a decent return for the products of the farm and a decent wage for industrial workers. For whenever the farmer gets a reasonable return for the products of his toil and the workman in industry gets a reasonable return for his labor, the country must of necessity be prosperous. Buying power is restored. Manufacturing is increased. Commerce, business, and banking are more necessary, and when these two classes of our citizens, those who work with their hands and their brains, are prosperous, the whole country is prosperous. In my judgment, this is the secret of Mr. Roosevelt's success. He has made the farmer wonderfully prosperous and the laboring man get a reasonable return for his toil.

THE UNEMPLOYED

But there are many who criticize the President's policies by saying that these policies have not yet put all men and women back to work. This is, of course, true. There are still unemployed in our country and probably always have been and always will be, but certainly these policies have restored, to the knowledge of every one of us, millions to work. There is not an intelligent man or woman in our country that does not know that never in history have our unemployed been so well looked after as in Mr. Roosevelt's administration, and the unemployed situation is getting better every day.

RELIEF

And then comes the criticism that Mr. Roosevelt has spent too much money for relief. Well, Mr. Roosevelt was not responsible for bringing on the depression. It was at its worst when he came in. He did not shirk his obligation. He took it as he found it. He immediately stated that he was not going to let men and women starve in the midst of plenty. There is not an individual who possesses a heart and a soul who can conscientiously condone starvation of people underprivileged and in a depression no fault of their own. Many of our Republican friends voted for relief. Indeed, I believe that most of them favored it. They voted in large numbers for the big relief bill last year, and many of them will vote for the big relief bill this year. Most of the Republicans in the House of Representatives, in substance, voted for the relief bill, and the Republican Senators are favoring the same amount of relief this year that the Democrats are favoring. The only difference between the two parties on the subject of relief is that the Republicans want it spent by the States, while the Democrats want the Federal money spent by the Nation.

Mr. Landon has probably stated that he is in favor of relief, and in addition to that he has accepted $44,000,000 from the Government for the relief of his own people in Kansas. His position on relief and on the Budget balancing was exactly the same as the President's before he became a candidate. He balanced his budget, not counting the $44,000,000 he received from the Federal Government. The President balanced his Budget, not counting relief.

Mr. BORAH voted for the relief bill, as did the Republican leader, Mr. MCNARY. In fact, the Republicans in Congress and the Governors of Republican States have put themselves in such a position that they cannot justly criticize relief or failure to balance our Budget.

TRIVIAL CRITICISMS

But, while they vote for relief measures, they are full of trivial criticism in the manner in which relief laws have been administered. There has always been a good crop of carping critics. I do not remember much about the old C. W. A. There may have been some ground for criticism in that activity, but surely there is no ground for criticism of the splendid work done by the P. W. A. and the W. P. A. in Tennessee or in the Nation as a whole.

In Tennessee the P. W. A. has built and is building three slum clearances, one in Nashville and two in Memphis, to the great benefit of those cities. The P. W. A. has built public buildings and waterworks and sewers and many other useful projects in almost every county in the State. It has done a wonderful work under Mr. Kenneth Markwell.

The P. W. A., under Col. Harry S. Berry, has done a simply marvelous work in this State. They have already built 2,882 miles of farm-to-market roads, and they have 3,000 additional miles under contemplation. They have built hundreds of new school buildings. Grade crossings have been eliminated and are being eliminated. The building of streets, sewers, courthouses, and other public buildings has been carried on.

In addition to that we have C. C. C. camps all over the State, to the tremendous benefit of the young men not only of our State but of other States. The results of the President's planning along these lines have been fine indeed, and we would be an ungrateful people if we were not grateful for it.

PUBLIC DEBT

My friends, others have criticized the President, saying that he has needlessly piled up our public debt. I do not think this criticism is fair. The facts are that in the last 2 years and 2 months of the Hoover administration that President increased the public debt by more than $5,000,000,000, and no one has ever heard of any benefits arising from that expenditure of money. However, in the 3 years of Mr. Roosevelt's administration, ending March 1, 1936, it is true that Mr. Roosevelt increased the national debt $11,000,000,000—but what a difference between the value of this increase of the debt and the value of Mr. Hoover's increase in the debt. Under the wise and beneficial policies of Mr. Roosevelt the national income of the American people has risen from $35,000,000,000 in 1932 to $65,000,000,000 in 1935.

Who are some of these beneficiaries? The income of the railroads has increased from $325,000,000 in 1932 to $500,000,000 in 1935. Manufacturing interests from $5,600,000,000 in 1932 to $9,800,000,000 in 1935, almost double. Agricultural income from $5,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 in round numbers, and yet these carping critics talk about the Roosevelt policies not benefiting the country. The increase of the wealth in the United States alone has more than compensated for the increase in the public debt of $11,000,000,000 under Mr. Roosevelt, and it has proven that his expenditures were fully justified. His increase in the debt has not been lost or dissipated. It was a successful investment in prosperity which has gone into the pockets of the American people.

REPUBLICAN EXPENDITURES

To show the difference between the benefits of the Roosevelt expenditures and the way the Republicans have handled their finances, I call your attention to the fact that during the World War and soon after its close we loaned the Allies a like sum of $11,000,000,000. The Republican Party came into power and it became their duty to collect that loan, but they did not collect it, and that $11,000,000,000 went abroad with nothing in return for it. Substantially, as the case now stands every dollar of it has been lost by the inefficiency and neglect of the Republican Party. Mr. Hoover, himself, declared a moratorium on those debts. He not only did not attempt to collect them, but he helped our debtors to evade them.

And while I am talking about this waste of American money under the Republican administration, another $1,500,000,000 of good American investment money has been eternally lost through the instrumentality of the last Republican administration in permitting investments in foreign governments and foreign corporations. All these expenditures under the Republican administration, $12,500,000,000 in all, went into foreign pockets. The $11,000,000,000 increase in the national debt under Mr. Roosevelt, however, has gone into American business and into American farms and to American labor and into American factories. President Roosevelt recommended and the Congress passed a law which prohibits the purchase of worthless foreign and domestic securities.

Again, under the Hoover administration bank depositors lost more than $4,000,000,000 in lost or tied-up funds. Under Mr. Roosevelt's administration the guaranty of bank deposits makes the people's money secure and the banks are prosperous.

Under the Hoover administration the income of farmers dropped below the cost of production. The Roosevelt administration created the A. A. A., and, to my mind, it was the best act ever passed on behalf of the farmers. It is true a divided Supreme Court, by a vote of 5 to 4, held the act unconstitutional, but, in my judgment, the invalidation of this act was a great misfortune, not only to the farmers, but to the entire country.

Under the new Soil Conservation Act I believe the farmer will continue, at least under this administration and under the next, if it is headed by Mr. Roosevelt, to realize his share of the national income as he most assuredly should.

ROOSEVELT'S ACCOMPLISHMENTS

My friends, when Mr. Roosevelt came in in 1933 he immediately began planning to restore the country to prosperity. We all remember his closing the banks which were facing destruction until it was determined just which ones should be permitted to go on, and this was a wonderful step in the restoration of confidence. It is remarkable to me that so many of our banker friends have forgotten it. It saved their banks.

The next step was the Federal guaranty of bank deposits law. The banks, for the most part, were against it, but the law has worked splendidly and everybody realizes what a wonderful step in advance that was. There have been substantially no bank failures, since the depositors have lost no money under the Roosevelt administration.

Farms were being sold under mortgage because the mortgagee could not pay. Steps were immediately taken and legislation passed authorizing the Government to lend money on farms to save these farms from foreclosure under mortgage. This not only relieved the farmers but it relieved the banks and made their assets more liquid.

In like manner, homes were being foreclosed and legislation was passed to save these homes from foreclosure, and more than $3,000,000,000 of the Government's money was used for this purpose and none of it has been lost.

The Agricultural Adjustment Act was passed and, to my mind, that did more good in restoring farm prices and restoring the farmers to prosperity than any other act that has ever been passed, and while by a divided court it was declared unconstitutional, the Soil Erosion Act was passed to take its place, as I stated a little while ago.

The N. R. A. was passed and did great good, but unfortunately it was declared unconstitutional, but it helped both business and labor, and was a vast benefit to the country while it was on the statute books.

The Social Security Act was passed, which in some measure takes care of the forgotten man and woman, and it is destined to do greater good as the years go by.

The Securities Exchange Act was passed, and by that act the American investing public have been saved hundreds of millions and perhaps billions of dollars. There were some critics of that at first, but I believe no sane man would now dare ask for its repeal.

The Gold Act was passed by which we went off of the gold standard, and by which we have recovered much of our foreign trade which is so essential to our prosperity. Talk about our currency not being stable. Why, of course, it is the most stable currency in all the world, because it is supported by more than two-thirds of all the gold in the world. The Nation's credit was never stronger, nor its securities more in demand.

The Soldiers' Compensation Act is a belated testimonial of the recognition due to soldiers of the World War, and while that act did not receive the President's approval, I am happy that that bill became a law in common justice to our soldiers.

Last but not least was the T. V. A. Act, one of the greatest blessings that has ever come to Tennessee or to the South. Under its provisions the waters of the Tennessee River are being harnessed for the benefit of the people as an inherent right rather than as a means of exploitation by New York speculators who would have used these great projects for their selfish purposes at enormous cost to the taxpayers of the entire Tennessee Valley. Already the price of electrical current has been more than cut in two, and as soon as this great project is in full operation the price of ordinary lighting will be from 1 to 3 cents per kilowatt. It will result in a saving of millions of dollars to the people of Tennessee and surrounding States every year for time to come. Moreover, it will put electricity within reach of every farm and hamlet of the State and enhance the happiness, convenience and welfare to all the people to whom this great national resource belongs. This great benefit for which some of us have been fighting for nearly a quarter of a century could not have been brought about except for the active and enthusiastic support of our great President, proving his progressive spirit and devotion to the interests of the people.

THE CONSTITUTION

In their desperate plight for a campaign issue, Republicans and Liberty Leaguers have made a studious effort to indict the administration for alleged disrespect of the Constitution. The Democratic Party has always been a party of the Constitution. It is today and it ever will be. I want to say that there is no conflict between the democracy of our constitutional fathers and the Roosevelt democracy. Neither closes its eyes to the requirements of the present nor the dangers of the future. Both will continue to be as progressive as the problems of the times impose and just as the founders intended. Jefferson himself realized that social requirements and knowledge change so rapidly as to require a revision of policies and laws from generation to generation.

I think my record will bear me out that no one is more devoted to that wonderful governmental instrument than I am. It has my most profound respect and admiration. I would not deliberately violate any of its provisions and I am confident that President Roosevelt has substantially the same view.

It so happens that some acts sponsored by the administration have been held unconstitutional. That does not imply that they were wrongfully conceived, nor is it the first time that unconstitutional measures have been passed. Four acts were declared invalid during the Hoover administration. In most of the decisions on acts of the Roosevelt administration the Court was about evenly divided, so that it became simply a question of the opinion of one man as to whether or not the Constitution in fact had been violated. There is no movement on foot either to violate or amend the Constitution, and most of the comment about violating the Constitution centers in a group who are not familiar with the terms of the organic law and who have either political or financial axes to grind. Our Constitution will remain the foundation stone upon which all our labors rest.

PLATFORM PLEDGES

But they say that we have violated our platform pledges. The answer to this is that they are evidently not familiar with the platform of 1932. There were 40 pledges given in that platform. Thirty-five of them have been carried out. Three of them have not been carried out, and two of them have not been carried out entirely. At worst, seven-eighths of the promises in our platform have been carried out literally, and I want to say in my judgment that no political party, either Democratic or Republican, or any other party, in this country has ever carried out so much of its platform.

The two planks that are most commonly referred to as not having been carried out are that we did not balance the Budget, and that we did not reduce expenditures, and that is true. We could not balance the Budget because of the depression that the Republicans brought on the country. We could not reduce expenditures because we were confronted with another promise in our platform that we would not let American citizens starve. In that dilemma we would do one or the other, and this administration chose not to let Americans starve, and that plank was violated, and I say we did the only honorable, honest, and proper thing when we violated that platform and expended this money to prevent human want and suffering.

TAXES

Perhaps our Republican friends become most vociferous over the Budget and taxes. They find themselves in a peculiar position. Ever since they started preparations for the 1936 campaign they have been fussing and fuming, orating and publishing that the Nation was headed for ruin because the President did not balance the Budget. Continuously they charge that the Government should either quit spending so much or levy more taxes and balance the Budget. Then, just as we were headed for Budget balancing the Supreme Court by a margin of one vote held the A. A. A. Act unconstitutional and invalidated about $500,000,000 a year of processing taxes. Of course, it was inevitable that this money had to come from some other source, and it was necessary to enact laws to take the place of the processing taxes. In order to better balance the Budget, the President recommended some $300,000,000 additional, making about $800,000,000 in all, and he also recommended placing a levy on the undivided earnings of corporations or on money that was being withheld from stockholders.

Immediately the Republicans turned about face and opposed the levying of these taxes, and of course the only result of their position is that they are opposed to Budget balancing themselves because the most of them have voted for all the expenditures of this administration.

The truth is, we are going to balance the Budget at the earliest possible moment, and I see no reason why it cannot be done in the financial year following this one.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

My friends, in all honesty I do not believe there is a well-informed person in the United States who seriously doubts the reelection of Franklin Roosevelt next November. I will go further than that; I do not believe there is an individual who conscientiously thinks it is best for the country for him to be defeated. There is one thing certain in politics—you cannot defeat somebody with nobody, and up to date the Republicans have nobody with whom to defeat President Roosevelt.

On a basis of merit and in consideration of what is best for the country, as well as in gratitude for what he has already accomplished, there should not be any opposition to Mr. Roosevelt. I believe we should emulate the example of history and give him a unanimous election, as Mr. Monroe received more than a hundred years ago. His vision, his lofty patriotism, and his love of humanity enable him to plan ahead. He is a courageous leader and he takes people into his confidence. He is not afraid to fight for the things he believes to be right, and he is not ashamed to acknowledge his mistakes. He is affable, lovable, even-tempered, and sympathetic. He does not waste energy in anger, but concentrates his great mental and physical resources on thought and deed. He keeps his eye on the goal and that goal is the public welfare. The rank and file of the people of this country are supporting him, and while I do not claim the gift of prophecy, as the situation appears at this hour, and having faith as I do, the sense of fairness and justice of the American people, I am convinced that he has a fair chance to carry every State in the Union. I know he will carry the great majority of them. Speaking confidently of Tennessee, I know you will be emphatic with the largest vote ever given a Presidential candidate in the history of this Commonwealth, not excepting his own majority in 1932, and possibly not excepting the majority of James Monroe in 1820, which majority was 231 electoral votes to 1 for John Quincy Adams.

Before I close, I must mention two other matters.

JOHN N. GARNER

Of course, the Democratic Party will renominate John N. Garner for Vice President, and I hope you will instruct your delegates to vote for Mr. Garner for renomination and reelection. Mr. Garner is another man who has earned his renomination and reelection. I have served in the Senate under many presiding officers, and I say to you that we have never had a finer, an abler, and a more gifted one than John N. Garner. He is fair, he is quick, he is able, and fearless in the enforcement of the rules. The Senate could not have a better presiding officer than Mr. Garner. He has had long experience. He is one of the President's advisers, and he has a record that every Democrat in the Nation should be proud of. All honor to him. John N. Garner is a great leader and a great man.

THE STATE ADMINISTRATION

I want you not only to endorse the national administration today, but I want you to endorse the State administration and Governor McAlister. Governor McAlister became Governor 4 years ago, under the most trying circumstances. The State was overwhelmingly in debt, and its affairs were topsy-turvy. He had a hard job, but by his honesty, his determination to do right, and by his skillful management of the State's finances, we are far better off in the State than we have been for years. There never was a finer man than Hill McAlister. He has made mistakes, as all of us have made mistakes, of course, but he is a fair and upright public servant, and has earned an endorsement. This is a year for all Democrats to stay together.

ADDRESS BY HON. JAMES A. FARLEY AT RHODE ISLAND DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a speech delivered by Postmaster General Farley at the Democratic State convention in Providence, R. I., on May 19, 1936.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Up to date the campaign against the reelection of President Roosevelt pretty closely parallels the Republican effort of 1932, and I think you will agree with me that the prospects are that the results of the 1936 election will not be very different from that of 4 years ago.

Do you remember when Mr. Ogden Mills, Secretary of the Treasury at that time, was telling of the terrible things that would happen to our fiscal system if Mr. Hoover was defeated? You perhaps will also recall how Mr. Mills was flattened out by Senator CARTER GLASS on this particular subject. That campaign of doleful prophecy culminated in the declaration that grass would grow in the streets of our great cities and ruin would spread everywhere if the Republican policies of that day and that administration were departed from.

Change the date, and we hear the same moans of prospective disaster reverberating over the air and cluttering up the pages of the antiadministration press. Once again we are warned that unless President Roosevelt is taken out of the White House the country is doomed to socialism, communism, dictatorship, and that our economic system will dissolve into chaos.

Well, where is this country today after the dire happening so mournfully presented as a hideous possibility by the anti-Roosevelt orators of 1932?

I will never forget how stanchly your State of Rhode Island stood by the Democratic Party in that campaign and how valiantly it figured in the election returns. You were part and parcel of the popular uprising which eliminated Herbert Hoover and the things for which he stood and substituted a President who had the heart and the brain to tackle the problems before which the Republican administration had fallen down. Now, I ask you, is there anyone in this State who voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 who has any cause to regret that vote? On the contrary, the lot of the citizens of Rhode Island is much better than it was when your banks were crumbling, your mills were closing, and a pall of gloom and apprehension hung over you all. And what is true of Rhode Island is true of every State in our great Nation.

Instead of grass growing in the streets of Providence, those streets are busier today than they have been in 7 years. Instead of the chaos with which you were threatened should Roosevelt be elected, your mills are going, your farmers are getting along, and the shops of your merchants are full of customers. Instead of the break-down of the national finances, our dollar today is the standard currency of the world, our Government bonds are at a premium, despite the circumstance that the charge of carrying them has in many cases been cut in half.

Let me put the question to you, Is there any sanity, any sense, any logic, in the face of our growing prosperity, to this stale repetition by the President's enemies of their old stories of disaster to come if you do not get rid of the administration that has brought about this magnificent change in our economic position?

The phantom of disaster raised in the campaign of 1932 has been laid. There is no more substance to that specter today than there was then. It is the general appreciation of this fact that is responsible for the surge of sentiment shown by every registration figure from the Atlantic to the Pacific; echoed in every sample balloting, or other method by which the American voters have been able to reveal where they stand as between the President and any as yet unnamed candidate who will bear the burden of a valueless nomination by the convention soon to assemble at Cleveland, Ohio.

I have been going over the files of some of your local newspapers, and I find in them published the story of our depression distress and the almost magical recovery from that period of hopelessness. It is a perfectly easy thing for our opponents to cry extravagance, waste, usurpation, and all that sort of thing. It is so easy that it is probable that there never has been a campaign when the same cries were not raised. George Washington heard them, and Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln, and Thomas Jefferson, and every other President whose memory is enshrined in the hearts of our people. Our first President was accused of wasting the public money in the planning of the White House and the Capitol. He was accused of violating the Constitution. He was accused of having carried his designs against liberty so far as to have put in jeopardy its very existence. It was a Philadelphia paper that made that charge. The same paper, by the way, which accused Washington of being perfidious, treacherous, and pretty much everything that he wasn't and never could have been. And you will find similar charges if you will dig into the musty files of our political history applied to one President after another.

Now they are saying the same thing about our present Chief Executive.

Does this sound familiar: "Why does the President seek to make the President of the United States the absolute lord over industrial life and death? * * * Thus to constitute * * * a despotism of which a Russian czar never dreamed."

That happens to be a quotation from a Chicago newspaper's arraignment of another Roosevelt. It was printed in 1908. At that same time a Baltimore newspaper was clamoring that "In addition to persistently bullying Congress, he has gone to the extreme of browbeating the courts until it is evident he would have but one power in the land, and that power Theodore Roosevelt."

I could go on indefinitely illustrating the triteness, as well as the baselessness of all the crimes of commission and omission that are now being attributed to the President of the United States by his political opponents.

As I said before, these things are so easy to say that in every campaign, where they have no valid or tangible cause of complaint, they resurrect the same old skeletons and tell you that you are threatened with dictatorship and all the rest of it.

It is not so easy to controvert the facts. I mean the simple record that tells where we were and where we are. I have to leave it to your own imagination to define where we would be if the people of the United States had heeded the Jeremiahs of 4 years ago.

I would like to call your attention to a few headlines in one of your own home papers, the Providence Journal. Just after the New Year of 1933 this paper printed—and this is the headline: "Grains, livestock decline severely—Year disastrous to farmers as prices slump while debt burden is unchanged."

A week later they told you: "Building activity off 57.9 percent, and General Electric orders drop 52 percent in 1932"; and on the 1st of February 1933 they presented: "United States Steel orders cut to 50 cents on its preferred—Thirty-one-million-dollar deficit shown."

Now let us jump to the new year of 3 years later. I am still quoting from the Providence Journal. "Steel production higher; eleventh consecutive increase carries operating rate to 39.2 percent." And "Auto sales 45 percent above a year ago." And "Real-estate issues reach best level in 3 years."

And yet on the second anniversary of Franklin D. Roosevelt's advent to the White House—that is, on March 4, 1935—the same newspaper dolefully recorded that "Concentration of authority in the Executive branch of Government and the building up of an egregious bureaucracy have exposed us as a people to difficulties and dangers that were never dreamed of when Franklin D. Roosevelt entered the White House."

During 1935 and 1936, despite this newspaper's mournful reflections on the perils that came with our President, its business pages—those unhysterical, sober-sided, matter-of-fact recitals of what was really happening—continued to record in their headlines "Increase in Rhode Island machinery"; "General business in Rhode Island registers gain during year"; "Textile mills report largest increase." And I might go on to report the cheerful headlines announcing improvement in practically every industry of this State.

Incidentally, a flock of orators and bales of editorials all over the country solemnly assure you that the business increases are not because of the Roosevelt policies but in spite of them. Now something caused the ledger figures of business throughout our land to turn from red to black, and while our opponents deny that they are due to the New Deal, I have yet to find any recital anywhere that tells what, in the opinion of democracy's critics, did cause the change.

Now, let's just suppose for a moment that the figures of business were down and not up, that the banks were again shaky, that business failures were happening all over the country, that the farm prices were at a point where they again took the farmers out of the purchasing class. Do any of my hearers think for a moment that his political enemies would not have charged President Roosevelt with full responsibility for such a doleful situation?

Do any of you imagine that if business were bad the Republican orators and the Du Pont Liberty League spellbinders would be talking about a natural commercial reaction, or a world trend, or any other of the generalities to which they try to attribute our progress toward recovery? Not a bit of it. The whole philosophy of the attacks on the administration is based on the theory that anything good that happens while that administration is in power is in spite of it, but that everything bad that might happen lies on the doorstep of President Roosevelt.

Of course, that does not make sense, any more than does the reiteration of the shrill cries that a continuation of the administration under which we have attained a measurable approach to prosperity means that the country is going to the dogs; that business, unable to stand all the things that they stupidly say the President is minded to inflict, would just fold up and die.

Ever since those people who begged the new administration to help them in their extremity have found their heads again above water they have been clamoring for a change back to the old conditions under which numbers of them piled up great fortunes and multitudes of us were made practically bankrupt.

In vain have these critics of the Roosevelt regime been asked to outline the policy they would pursue if they could succeed in supplanting this administration with a Republican regime. Their only answer has been more generalities, more vituperation, more vague promises that nobody can either analyze or define. They have no program, and their plea comes down simply to this: "Put us back in power and we will do the things the Democratic administration is doing, but because we are Republicans we will do them better." How many Americans are there, I wonder, who would be willing to take such a chance?

Our adversaries complain that the Roosevelt administration has been experimenting. Perhaps it has been doing that. What alternative was there in a situation that had no precedents? Does anybody think it would have been better to let things drift as they drifted prior to the advent of the present direction of national affairs?

Talking of experiments suggests another thought. The Republican Convention—if the political weather indications are correct—meditates the nomination for the presidency of a doubtless estimable gentleman, who, however, was unheard of in a national sense until the minority party began to beat the bushes for a candidate. Nothing anyone of the mentioned possibilities for the nomination has been able to say yet gives even the slightest clue of what he would do, or try to do, in relation to the continuing problems that beset us.

Can the hazard of anything the New Deal tried, or suggests trying, compare with the risk the country would run if the conduct of our Federal affairs was suddenly given into the hands of a man, with no experience in such matters; totally unversed in the larger processes of Government, and obviously with no clear idea of what can be done, should be done—or what has been done? That would be a perilous experiment.

And how has your State fared under the Roosevelt administration? I do not mean to imply by this that you have fared either better or worse than your sister States, because all of the States have been treated alike, with only the variation that their individual necessities or emergencies have compelled. So the same question might as well be propounded to each individual Commonwealth.

Has Rhode Island benefited or suffered since March 4, 1933? Has the cooperation with the Roosevelt policies of Governor Theodore P. Green, of Senator Peter G. Gerry, of Representative John M. O'Connell, who came in with the present administration, been of benefit to your State?

Rhode Island has participated in the use of Federal funds in excess of $72,000,000. A considerable portion of this was in the form of loans. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation loaned your banks, trust companies, etc., approximately $1,800,000, and another $90,000 in subscriptions for preferred stock of banks and trust companies. All but $500,000 of this has been repaid. Don't you believe that that helped your State? A similar amount was authorized for industrial or commercial businesses. This money was extended to your manufacturers and merchants at a time when no other credit was available, regardless of the securities that guaranteed the loans. You know perfectly well how much this credit did toward getting the wheels of industry turning and its effect is told in the headlines of your newspapers to which I have already referred. The total of loans extended was approximately $5,500,000, one-quarter of which has already been discharged and the balance of which is paying interest and will be paid as the amounts fall due.

The Department of Agriculture has spent up here upwards of $2,000,000, and the other departments of the Government another $500,000, not counting the emergency-relief expenditures.

The Farm Credit Administration advanced more than a million and a half to your farmers, and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has lent $24,660,000 on the domiciles of your cities. As the property itself in every case is security for the loan, that will of course be paid back and meanwhile your people were saved from foreclosure proceedings in innumerable cases.

None of this money, or that expended on emergency-relief jobs or given directly in the form of doles, was handed out because it was Rhode Island or because the Government desired to enter into an orgy of almsgiving, or anything of the kind. It was just a part of a program to which the Government was compelled, because of an emergency which the Government alone was competent to meet.

Perhaps the most tangible evidence of dividends in this connection is not these payments of relief loans, considerable as that is. What really tells the story is the report of the income-tax division of the Treasury, which shows that your people paid $3,000,000 more on their incomes for 1935 than on their incomes for 1933. A rough estimate shows that this means that the incomes of your aggregate population amounted to $100,000,000 more last year than they netted 2 years before.

The administration has been scolded by its critics because there was still a considerable amount of unemployment. Just the same, the statisticians tell us that there has been an increase in the number of jobs filled in this State of 19 percent since the New Deal began to function. Your farmers, on the same authority, have realized 26 percent more for their products than they did in 1933.

Those who have sought to stir up resentment among you against the Federal administration suggest that the western farmers have profited at your expense. I hate to burden you with more figures, but just to point out how the increase in western prosperity has come back to you, I may tell you that the increased output of your mills and factories is a direct reflection of the restoration of purchasing power to the agricultural part of the country. For example, your greater gains enabled the people to buy 4,500 more automobiles this year than they were able to buy 2 years ago. And for a further indication there is the fact that your people now have on deposit in the Rhode Island banks $5,000,000 more than they had then.

Best of all, the bank depositors can sleep nights now, where they used to lie awake wondering whether the banks in which their money was resting would open next morning.

I have talked so much about the evidence of prosperity for the simple reason that that is the only real issue of the coming election. The loud voices that talk of dictatorships, socialism, and extravagance, and waste, and coming chaos, comprise merely the smoke-screen thrown up to obscure the only question that concerns our citizens. It is vapor in its most negligible form. The figures of business tell the real story and it is because of what they tell that I assure you here tonight that President Roosevelt will be triumphantly, and enthusiastically, and emphatically reelected as definitely as he was elected 4 years ago, and I feel very happy at the assurance that Rhode Island will again play its part in bringing about that result.

THE AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE—ADDRESS BY JAMES C. PEACOCK

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address on the American merchant marine, entitled "Criticism Versus Accomplishment", delivered by James Craig Peacock, Director of the Shipping Board Bureau, Department of Commerce, before the Propeller Club of Baltimore, Md., on National Maritime Day, May 22, 1936.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The past several years have been a period of great distress for world shipping. Subnormal cargo offering, low freight rates, and severe competition for such business as still moves in international trade have caused shipowners everywhere to concentrate their efforts on the desperate struggle for survival. Not all of them have succeeded in weathering the economic storm. There have been failures and receiverships, an unprecedented laying up of tonnage, consolidation of services, restricted or staggered sailings, and a general cutting down of overhead. High tariff walls, import quotas, and other trade barriers, coupled with subsidies for domestic production and fluctuations of foreign exchange—all, I take it, manifestations of the post-war trend to economic nationalism—lie at the root of the shipowner's troubles. To add to his perplexities, there has been a marked, relentless, and heartbreaking rise in operating costs.

Faced with dwindling revenues and steadily mounting costs, shipowners the world over have appealed more and more to their governments for financial support. That they have not appealed in vain is shown by the fact that Government aid to shipping is now the rule rather than the exception. If the Great War accentuated the value of merchant shipping, post-war developments have convinced the maritime nations that their merchant marine must be maintained by whatever means possible—if not by private initiative, then by the taxpayers, through the medium of government aid. Our own Admiral Gleaves, chief of convoy operations during the World War, put the case tersely when he said, "The outstanding lesson which the war has driven home to us is the value both in peace and in war of a prosperous deep-sea merchant marine."

At no time in the world's history has competition on the oceans been more intense than during the past 15 years. In this period all of the countries of our principal maritime competitors have adopted a strong national shipping policy. They have assisted their private shipping industry to survive the terrific slump in world trade, with its disstrous effect on shipping, by the liberal extension of Government credit or by private credit guaranteed by the Government; the renewal and extension of contract services in their essential trade routes; construction loans at low rates of interest; construction bounties; navigation bounties and other forms of aid. The adherence to such a policy by these countries has enabled foreign shipowners to scrap millions of tons of obsolete ships and to build new ones. It has not only enabled our competitors to maintain their relative competitive status in the trade routes of the world but has greatly enhanced and strengthened their position by the introduction of high-speed passenger ships, combination ships, and fast cargo liners. It would have been impossible for private capital to finance, without liberal Government assistance, such ships in the important North Atlantic passenger service as the Rex, the Normandie, and the Queen Mary.

Under these circumstances, how can American shipping meet foreign competition successfully without adequate Government assistance when the capital and operating costs of American ships are far greater than those of any of our foreign competitors?

During the depression American shipping has experienced all the vicissitudes which have beset the merchant marine of other nations. In addition it has had to face, continuously for the past 3 years, a heavy barrage of high-powered criticism, orginating, strangely enough, not in the countries of its competitors, but among our own people. From every direction the pitiless spotlight of publicity has been turned upon its every weakness and shortcoming, leaving its virtues obscured in the shadows.

Such a steady stream of adverse criticism has poured forth from congressional and departmental investigations and hearings and debates, from news and editorial writers and columnists of influential papers, from after-dinner speakers, and even from radio commentators, that the man in the street can scarcely be blamed if he has come to believe that our shipping situation constitutes a veritable public scandal and nothing more.

It would be a waste of your time and mine if I should attempt to analyze in detail the many charges which have been made against the operators of American ships. These charges have been given wide circulation and have gained wide credence. Many of them are one-sided and carry their own refutation, as, for example, the sweeping charge in a recent report that instead of an adequate American merchant marine, the Merchant Marine Act of 1928 has produced unconscionable exploiters, intent upon wringing every possible penny from the public purse, while giving an absolute minimum of service in return.

Admittedly the act of 1928 has failed to produce an adequate merchant marine since it has not brought about the building of much-needed cargo liners. But when we say this we should at the same time present the other side of the picture and add that the 33 vessels built under the act's provisions, at a cost of approximately $144,500,000, are, for the size and type, as modern and efficient as any in the world, and that they represent the finest merchant fleet ever assembled under the American flag since the advent of steam.

Much the same objection may be taken to a reference in the same report to what is called the myth of private ownership, and to the repeated attempts made to show that the Government's mortgage liens and equities are so great that our merchant marine is in effect owned by the Government, rather than by private American interests. Here again only a part of the picture is revealed by the floodlight of unfavorable publicity which has been thrown upon the merchant marine. I shall take the opportunity in a moment or so to refer more fully to the status of debtor shipowners.

I hold no brief for the individual American shipowner, but as Director of the Shipping Board Bureau I do hold a brief for the American merchant marine. You will understand that in saying this I in nowise condone the abuses and improper practices which have been indulged in by some members of the industry. I offer neither apologies nor excuses for those who have overstepped the proprieties, or who for personal or corporate gain have been guilty of breach of faith, if not of contract, with the American people. The point I wish to make is that there has been enough criticism of the abuses of the past. Surely the American merchant marine finds its natural economic handicaps burdensome enough, without this added handicap. What it sorely needs—though in some quarters it is not the fashion to say so—is sympathetic and constructive help. We cannot permit the recent flood of adverse criticism to make us waiver in our allegiance to one of the country's most essential industries. We cannot proceed on the false assumption that its greatness has forever vanished; that its former virtues have degenerated into vices; that no hope remains of perpetuating its glorious traditions.

Believing that it is high time we shifted the spotlight so as also to show other and more favorable parts of the picture, I propose in my remarks tonight to point out that one can find real achievement and substantial progress even in this supposedly dark age of the merchant marine. I shall try to show that the history of the past few years, if rightly interpreted, gives ample assurance that we still have the foundation upon which to build an era of maritime achievement surpassing in glory even the golden era of a century ago.

The outstanding accomplishment which must be placed to the credit of the American merchant marine in recent years is the maintenance, on every one of the country's essential trade routes, of regular and dependable service during this entire period of unparalleled stress in shipping and foreign trade. Here is a record that will bear favorable comparison with the showing made by any other merchant marine in the world, a record which is all the more remarkable when we consider the obsolete types of cargo ships which comprise the greater part of our fleet. Not only have these services been maintained but the percentage of American waterborne foreign commerce carried in American bottoms has held constant, even during the worst years of the depression. What better testimony could be offered to prove the zeal and enterprise displayed by American operators in the face of conditions which have driven many of their foreign competitors out of business?

Although I am reluctant to bring statistics into a speech of this sort, a few figures are necessary if I am to avoid the charge of dealing only in glittering generalities. Let me state, then, that for the past 14 years American ships have carried an average of approximately 34.3 percent of the total value of our foreign waterborne commerce, ranging between a low of 32.2 percent in 1926 and a high of 36.5 percent in 1933. Now, in analyzing these figures, the interesting fact develops that during the past 7 years—the period of the great depression—the yearly average is found to be somewhat higher than for the 7 years preceding the depression. Does anyone suppose that this just happened by chance or accident? I for one give credit to the business acumen, the ingenuity, and the dogged determination of the American shipowner, who, refusing to take the depression lying down, rolled up his sleeves, improved and intensified his methods of freight solicitation, and more than maintained his relative position while the rest of the business world was in the doldrums praying for a favorable breeze.

There can be no doubt that the new ships constructed under the much-criticized Merchant Marine Act of 1928 have helped American operators to hold their own during the trying years of the depression.

The two splendid passenger vessels built for operation in the North Atlantic have proved so popular that they have revolutionized the entire passenger rate and classification structure in the world's outstanding ocean passenger route. During the travel season accommodations on these vessels have been taxed to capacity. For some months negotiations have been under way looking to the construction of a third vessel of the same type and size, though with still more modern equipment, with a view to rounding out this service on a weekly basis and securing a still greater share of the rich passenger traffic of the North Atlantic.

Four new vessels built for service from North Atlantic ports to ports on the Mediterranean Sea have also given an excellent account of themselves, as have the five outstanding passenger ships built under the provisions of the 1928 act for service on the Pacific. The all-round efficiency of these vessels, coupled with their excellent service and moderately priced fares, accounts for the high place they have won in the estimation of discerning patrons. If the Merchant Marine Act of 1928 had done nothing else, it would still deserve our gratitude for the way it has demonstrated that whenever the American shipowner is in a position to offer service comparable with, or superior to, the service furnished by foreign shipowners, the patronage of American shippers and travelers will gravitate to the ship flying the American flag.

The four new combination cargo and passenger vessels built for service to the west coast of Central and South America tell the same story. For their type and size they are as attractive and efficient as any ships ever built, and like other vessels constructed under the provisions of the Merchant Marine Act of 1928 they have won great favor with the shipping and traveling public. In view of recent criticism of American ships from the standpoint of safety, I think it well to point out that all the passenger-carrying ships built with Government aid since 1928 have exceeded the requirements laid down by the London Convention for Safety of Life at Sea, notwithstanding that this important treaty has not yet been ratified by the United States.

All told, as I have pointed out, 33 new and splendid ships, costing approximately $144,500,000, have been built under the 1928 act. The conversion or reconditioning of 42 old vessels, with a view to increasing their speed, installing refrigerator space, or making other betterments, has involved an additional expenditure of $17,700,000, making a total outlay of approximately $162,200,000 for modernizing the fleet during the depression years. The result is that our immediate needs in our principal passenger-carrying trades are, with a few notable exceptions, reasonably well taken care of. Our need for new cargo liners remains, however, a matter of very real concern.

A fair appraisal of the figures I have just quoted will show the unfairness of the highly critical views so frequently expressed as to the progress made in building up American shipping since the passage of the Merchant Marine Act of 1928. When we consider the employment benefits accruing to American labor through the expenditure of $162,200,000 for building or reconditioning these 75 ships, the added millions paid to American seamen employed to run the newly built vessels, and the increased prestige enjoyed by the American-flag services in which the ships have been operated, it is decidedly unfair to imply that the Merchant Marine Act of 1928 was barren of worth-while results. The chief defects of the act were that it disguised the nature of the subsidy; that it did not make mandatory the replacement of obsolete tonnage, and that the method prescribed for determining the amount of Government aid was loose and open to abuses if not properly administered. More than counterbalancing these admittedly serious defects, however, the fact stands out—and I believe that it will be given full recognition when the maritime history of the post-war era is finally written—that but for the subsidy provisions of the act of 1928, few American lines, other than the so-called industrial carriers, would ever have survived the depression.

As pointed out a moment ago, the critics charge that while American shipowners have taken advantage of the liberal provisions of the 1928 act to build or recondition a number of ships, and have also purchased Government tonnage at market prices or less, they have been so slow in meeting their financial obligations to the Government that, in effect if not in law, the ships are owned by the mortgagee—in other words, by the Government. Here again the spotlight of adverse criticism reveals only part of the picture. I would like to show you the other part—made up of facts which I think speak for themselves.

On August 9, 1933, when the Presidential order abolishing the Shipping Board and transferring its activities to the Department of Commerce became effective, outstanding ship sales and construction-loan mortgages amounted to $154,742,561.80. Today that total has been reduced to $105,728,539.77. In other words, in less than 3 years $49,014,022.03, or almost one-third of the total, has been paid back to the Government, notwithstanding that by the terms of the loans most of them were to run for 15 or 20 years.

On the same date—August 9, 1933—13 active companies were in arrears on such mortgages. Since then only 2 small companies have been added to the list, while on the other hand 6 of the original 13 have completely paid up all arrearages. A seventh has for more than 2 years been making regular payments on a schedule which has already reduced its arrearages from $853,800 to $169,600, with every indication that it will be completely caught up on its payments by November of this year. Two of the six other companies still in default are in appreciably sounder financial condition than they were a year ago, and only two of them have had occasion to resort to receivership.

I submit that in all fairness to the American shipowner these facts deserve as widespread publicity as that which has been accorded the pessimistic reports of recent years. I do not believe that the American people want Government ownership and operation of industry, even though the industry be one which is so highly specialized, so difficult to manage, and so hazardous from the standpoint of financial returns as the American merchant marine. Our former maritime glory, wrested from our competitors in those far-off days of "wooden ships and iron men", was achieved under private American ownership. On the other hand our post-war experience with Government ownership and operation was marked by so much waste and inefficiency that I, for one, hope that it will never be repeated.

DEPORTATION OF ALIENS—ADDRESS BY DANIEL W. MAC CORMACK

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "What Would Happen if All Aliens Were Deported?" delivered in Atlantic City, N. J., on May 26, 1936, by Col. Daniel W. MacCormack, United States Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, upon the occasion of the National Conference on Social Work.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF ALL ALIENS WERE DEPORTED?

It has been proposed as a simple cure for the depression that all aliens living in the United States should be summarily deported. The advocates of this measure usually argue that there are ten or twelve million aliens holding jobs in this country and an equal number of American citizens out of work. If the aliens are expelled, the idle citizens will step into their shoes, and, presto, the unemployment problem is solved.

Well, that may sound plausible enough in a stump speech or a rabble-rousing editorial, but it will not stand analysis. Let us examine this economic cure-all.

In the first place, those people who find the alien so convenient a scapegoat are careless about statistics. They invariably exaggerate the number of aliens in the United States. If the alien is a menace, as they claim, then the more aliens the greater the menace. It is easier to make our flesh creep when they multiply the figures by two or three. The number of aliens who are really living here today can be estimated with approximate accuracy. We know how many there were in 1930, at the time of the last census, for then they were carefully counted. We know that the recorded departures since 1930 have exceeded the recorded admissions by nearly 200,000. We know how many aliens have been naturalized since then, and we can estimate how many have died. On the basis of these figures the statisticians of the Immigration and Naturalization Service computed that the number of aliens in the United States today is 4,500,000.

We do not know how many of these 4,500,000 aliens are employed, but we do know that 4.5 percent of them are under 21 years of age, and that 43.7 percent are over 50 years of age. Included in these two groups there must be children too young and men and women too old to work. Slightly more than half of the 4,500,000 are females, and it is safe to assume that many of these are housewives and dependents. Just over a million aliens in this country are males between 20 and 50 years of age.

So the number of jobs which theoretically would remain to be filled by Americans after the expulsion of the aliens shrinks considerably.

Of course, it is by no means certain that the jobs vacated by aliens would be immediately or even eventually filled by Americans. Some of these jobs Americans would not readily accept, and for others they would not be qualified. I need not elaborate this point, but as a single example may I cite the agricultural labor performed by itinerant Mexicans in the Southwest. Perhaps southwestern agriculture would be organized ultimately on a different and possibly a better basis and Americans might be induced to enter into domestic and other personal services they now refuse as menial, but I merely wish to suggest that in many instances the immediate result of wholesale deportations would be not more jobs for Americans but the ruin of enterprises now dependent on alien labor or alien patronage.

I have said that there are something less than 4,500,000 aliens in the United States, and I have pointed out that by no means all of these are gainfully employed or competing in the labor market with American citizens. However, every one of these aliens is a consumer. The elimination of 4,500,000 consumers from the American market would be felt by every farmer and every manufacturer in the country. In certain localities the results would be disastrous. When the census of 1930 was taken there were 1,128,217 aliens in New York City. I suppose that there are nearly as many there today. I leave to your imagination what would be the effect on New York real estate, retail trade, and every business activity if 1,000,000 people were suddenly and permanently removed from the city. The results of mass deportation would be almost equally catastrophic in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, and many other cities and towns with a relatively large alien population.

It seems to me that if we want to start another depression on the heels of the last one, this would be an excellent way to go about it.

Socially the alien is not an isolated unit. He has varied contacts and affiliations. Frequently he has an American wife and American-born children. Preliminary reports of a test survey of alien families by a social agency indicate that the average alien here has two American-citizen members of his family. These dependents cannot be deported. Even if they elect to go into voluntary exile with the expelled husband and father, they may find that his native country will refuse to admit them. If we deport four and a half million aliens we will impose a quasi divorce and permanent separation on hundreds of thousands of American wives encumbered with children rendered fatherless by the same governmental act and deprived of their natural expectation of a normal and happy life. In other cases it may be the alien mother who is expelled, leaving husband and children behind.

Perhaps a truly patriotic economist and statesman can regard this wholesale destruction of families and wrecking of human lives with equanimity if only the goal is attained—more jobs for citizens. I fear that not many of us can take this detached and philosophic view. The whole procedure smacks too much of cannibalism. It recalls the shipwrecked mariners who, when they grew hungry, converted the cabin boy into steaks and chops. It may have been a sound idea but repugnant to one of a squeamish disposition.

But this idea of wholesale deportations is not even sound. The mere physical difficulties incident to the deportation of four and one-half million aliens deserve some consideration. More than half of them certainly would be destined to Europe. In 1917 and 1918 we sent approximately 2,000,000 men to France. It took all of our own shipping and all we could beg or borrow from our Allies. We were dealing then with men only, and with young men in sound health, who could endure a reasonable amount of discomfort and hardship. They slept in hammocks slung in cargo holds and in triple-deck bunks. To transport the same number of aliens of both sexes and all ages, including the sick and the infirm, would require a vastly greater tonnage. It could be done if it had to be done, but it would be a complicated and difficult undertaking and would take years to complete.

There remains a more serious obstacle which, as far as I know, the advocates of mass deportation have never taken into account. This is the probable reaction of the other nations of the world. Deportation, after all, is a transaction in which the country to which the alien is destined is no less concerned than the country from which he is expelled. We already find that in many cases in which deportation is mandatory under our law we cannot proceed because the alien's native land regards him as an expatriate and refuses to permit him to return.

If we undertake to deport all aliens, I think we may anticipate that the nations of the whole world will protest most vigorously, not only because of the hardship imposed on their citizens who came here in good faith and were legally admitted for permanent residence, but also because of the complication of their own domestic problems which would follow the enforced return of hundreds of thousands of their citizens who had severed all ties with the homeland and could not be easily reabsorbed in the national framework. This protest almost certainly would go to the length of a categorical refusal to admit these returning citizens. At any rate, international relations would be seriously strained to the detriment of our national prestige, accompanied on a material plane, if that alone must be considered, by a serious loss of the goodwill which makes for foreign trade.

To sum up, if we deported all the aliens in the United States it might indeed result in the employment of some citizens who cannot now find jobs, but not nearly so many as the advocates of this measure suppose. This would be offset by a serious dislocation of business due to the loss of four and one-half million consumers. The effects would be felt over the whole country, including those sections which have little or no alien population but must find an outlet for their products in the national market. In cities and towns with a large alien population the results would be no less than catastrophic.

Certain branches of agriculture, industry, and trade which employ alien labor or depend on alien patronage would face difficult readjustments. The sum total of these economic losses would far outweigh any gains that might reasonably be expected, and in the end for every citizen who found a job by stepping into an alien's shoes another somewhere would be thrown out of work.

In any case the whole scheme is impracticable for the one reason that it could not be carried to conclusion without the consent and the cooperation of the principal nations of the world, which would certainly refuse, both on grounds of equity and from motives of self-interest.

I will not stress the moral objections, except to say that these aliens came here with our consent if not on our invitation, usually burning their bridges behind them. Hence we would seem to be under some obligation to consider their interests as well as our own. With the inevitable byproduct of wrecked homes, women widowed, and children made orphans by administrative decree I have already dealt.

There is one final point which I wish that I could impress on those nervous citizens to whom the alien is an alarming bugaboo. Just this: To all intents, immigration has ceased. During the past 5 years more aliens left the United States than were admitted. In April 1930 the census enumerators found 6,234,613 aliens here. Many of these have since died. Others have been naturalized. We now have an alien population of about 4,500,000. Of these, approximately 1,500,000 have taken the first step toward naturalization. They are aliens today but they will be citizens tomorrow.

If the present policy of restrictive immigration is maintained, and it undoubtedly will be for years to come, the alien population of the United States will, in 10 years, be reduced almost to the vanishing point. Even foreign-born citizens will not be numerous, for most of them are in the higher age groups and rapidly dying off, and the new immigration from which they derive is reduced to a minimum. By 1946 it may be as hard to find an alien in the United States as a wild buffalo. Then even the professional patriots can sleep in peace.

DEBTS DUE THE UNITED STATES BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Dallas Journal of the 18th instant, entitled "France Remembers", having relation to the debts due the United States by foreign governments.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Dallas (Tex.) Journal of May 18, 1936]

FRANCE REMEMBERS

Leon Blum says that France is interested in coming to a debt settlement with the United States. England is mumbling something about the idea also. But America ought to be clear-eyed in greeting such approaches. As realists, we can afford to reflect that Europe has come to understand two things: (1) Another world war is threatened. (2) Another world war without another Uncle Sam to furnish the war materials on credit will be the end of Europe. Also, as realists, we must face the fact that the only way Europe can pay us the war debts is in goods or services. If Europe pays us in goods, the defaults alone would require three-quarters of a billion dollars worth of European goods dumped into the United States to make the defaulters square with the books.

What, then, shall we do? Strange as it may seem, idealism has an answer to realism's problem. France, for example, owes us about $40,000,000 in defaulted payments. Suppose the United States should propose to France that this $40,000,000 should be laid out not in goods but in education? At $4,000 per student, that would provide for 10,000 students, half of them French and half of them American—the Frenchmen to come to American colleges and universities of their choice and the Americans to go to French schools and art centers of their choice.

A like application of this scheme to the war indemnities due from Germany to France and the interallied obligations would mean that thousands of young men and women would learn the language and customs and viewpoint of countries abroad and would form personal friendships there. No greater international bonds for peace could possibly be forged by treaty or agreement. It affords to American politicians who have said there shall be no repudiation an "out" which will not glut American markets with foreign goods and will not drain Europe of desperately needed food and clothing. It will stimulate travel abroad, both now and in the future, and save the "face" of foreign statesmen who have contended that their poverty-ridden constituents should not pay tribute to America.

Why not?

COTTON

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article which was published in the Daily Times of Wilson, N. C., under date of Thursday, May 14, 1936, pertaining to the cotton situation in this country.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wilson (N. C.) Times of May 14, 1936]

TAR HEEL IMPRESSIONS IN WASHINGTON

By Hubert Holloway

From the standpoint of North Carolina—in fact the whole South—the Senate investigation of the decline of cotton prices is of sweeping importance. It undoubtedly affects—directly and indirectly—the livelihood of every single son and daughter of the Old North State. And it is, perhaps, the most comprehensive survey of marketing conditions ever undertaken under congressional sanction.

Digging, and digging deeply, the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry has uncovered the story of cotton from the time it is planted, through the mills, and to the shoulders of the wearers of goods made from cotton manufacturers.

Yet, strange to say, this inquiry has received scant attention: It has not been due to any lack of sensations, because the market manipulations disclosed would cause the noted pirate Captain Kidd to blush with shame; it has not been due to lack of importance, because everyone concerned realizes that the fate of the South hangs largely on cotton. Possibly it has been because the trade lingo—such as "badges", "straddles", "call cotton", "spots", and what not—is just too dry in this day of sensation-giving headlines.

Guiding the inquiry has been Senator E. D. SMITH, of South Carolina, who has been wrapped up in cotton since the days when he had to stretch his arms upward to touch a fluffy boll. Thirty-one years ago he helped to organize the American Cotton Association. Some say he has grown weary. Well, it is impossible to serve 27 years in the United States as King Cotton's prime minister and be as chipper as a young man just selected as class orator.

The investigation has disclosed some startling things. Of chief interest is the fact that the Government holdings of around 6,000,000 bales of cotton hangs over the whole industry like a sword of Damocles; that the cotton market is as the promises of last year's candidate for office; that mills are unable to buy cotton from the overstocked Government warehouses because of trade conditions that make it necessary for them to deal through cotton merchants, and that manipulation of the market through speculation is the rule rather than the exception.

All these things vitally affect the price the grower receives for cotton, the wages of mill workers, and dividends from mill stocks. In other words, a great cross-section of North Carolina people and interests.

"Inside sources" say that congressional experts are burning midnight oil drafting a measure for the regulation of the cotton industry. It may pop up on the floor of the Senate most any day. And it now seems certain that drastic steps will be taken to control "straddle" operations (speculation in cotton) and probably elimination entirely of "call" cotton, the present method of selling for future delivery. Approximately 90 percent of the cotton now sold to mills is "call" cotton.

In this latter connection, Alfred S. Wyllie and Levi H. David, attorneys for the committee, have been extremely busy "watching the record." It is interesting to note that numerous mill operators—including many from North Carolina—were invited to appear before the Senate committee. Only one came. He was H. B. Richardson, of Union, S. C. The transcript of the hearings—including Mr. Richardson's testimony—is now in the hands of the printers. It is, to say the least, astonishing.

On April 27, the following testimony appears:

"Mr. WYLLIE. What is your opinion regarding the selling of cotton by merchants to mills on call? Do you favor the practice?

"Mr. RICHARDSON. I do, provided no straddles are effected or manipulation of the base month."

However, on the following day, and after he had been shown committee reports indicating the intricate methods used by cotton merchants to build up a speculative interest in cotton sold on call—and the manipulative practices involved, Mr. Richardson expressed the view that the only relief for mills would be elimination of call sales. The committee may seek to do just that. Anyway, it was one of the high spots of the inquiry.

With reference to the Government holdings of cotton, the testimony is equally as astonishing. This for example—

"The CHAIRMAN. During the time that the Government was holding it (cotton) at 12 cents couldn't your mills buy cotton from the Government at around 12 cents?

"Mr. RICHARDSON. No, sir.

"The CHAIRMAN. You couldn't buy it at that?

"Mr. RICHARDSON. No, sir; we didn't want to buy it.

"The CHAIRMAN. Why?

"Mr. RICHARDSON. Because the terms made it impossible for the mills to go directly to the Government. We were absolutely dependent upon going to merchants for our supply, due to the fact that we buy specified grade and staple, for which we pay a premium."

What may finally happen in the way of regulation is problematic; executive and legislative branches of the Government often differ as to what is best. But there is one thing evident. Growing in the field, with white bolls flashing in the sun, cotton is beautiful. But from then on it is a nightmare. And it is a particularly big nightmare to those trying to solve the industry problems through Federal legislation.

CHILD-LABOR AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune of last Sunday in relation to a national poll taken on the pending child-labor amendment to the Constitution, which showed that the country stood 6 to 4 in favor of the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, in connection with that request, may I ask the Senator from New York if he knows how many of the 48 States have child-labor laws of their own?

Mr. WAGNER. I do not. I think the article points that out, too, so that the Senator may be informed. A number of States have such laws. New York State has, but there are a number of States that have not.

Mr. GLASS. I should like to ascertain how many States have not such laws. I doubt if many States have not child-labor laws of their own. I know Virginia has a very complete, and some persons think a very severe, prohibition against child labor; and I shall be glad if the Senator can ascertain and put in the RECORD the number of States and the particular States that have child-labor laws of their own.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune of May 24, 1936]

NATIONAL POLL IS 6 TO 4 FOR CHILD-LABOR REGULATION BY CONGRESS—VOTERS IN 45 STATES BACK AMENDMENT'S PRINCIPLE—"AMERICA SPEAKS", INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION POLL, NOTES NEW YORK SENTIMENT 63 PERCENT IN FAVOR OF ACT; DEMOCRATS 72 PERCENT IN SUPPORT, WITH REPUBLICANS 54 PERCENT AGAINST PROPOSAL

(By Dr. George Gallup, director, American Institute of Public Opinion)

By a vote of approximately 6 to 4 in a Nation-wide poll, the American people have declared in favor of giving Congress the power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age.

This is tantamount to approval of the much-mooted child-labor amendment, around which fights have been waged ever since it was submitted to the States for ratification in 1924. Although 24 States have ratified the amendment through their legislatures, and 22 have rejected it, the poll reported today is the first Nation-wide referendum of the actual voting populace on the child-labor issue.

It reveals dramatic clashes between the will of the people and the action of State legislatures in rejecting the amendment, between Republicans and Democrats, farmers and city folk, young people and the elderly.

The question asked on poll ballots which went to 130,951 voters, representing a cross-section of American opinion, was based on the wording of the child-labor amendment. It read: "Do you favor an amendment to the Constitution giving Congress the power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18?"

Replies for the Nation as a whole were: "Yes", 61 percent. "No", 39 percent.

THREE STATES VOTE "NO"

If the child-labor amendments were officially submitted to the people for ratification, 45 States would probably vote "yes", only 3 "no", according to the results of the poll. The three States that voted "no" in the poll were South Dakota, Kansas, and Maryland, indicating that the people in these States see eye to eye with their legislators, who have never ratified the amendment. Elsewhere, however, there is a clash of will between people and legislators.

In 19 States which have rejected the amendment in one or both houses of the legislature in past years, the voting public is today in favor of adopting it, the poll indicates. Connecticut's legislature, for example, has voted against ratification but, the results of the poll in Connecticut show 61 percent today in favor of Federal child-labor control. A scientifically selected cross section of voters in North Carolina, important southern textile State, are 56 percent in favor of the child-labor amendment now, although the State legislature has previously opposed it. New York, whose legislature killed the amendment in committee, a few weeks ago, votes 63 percent in favor of adopting it.

HOW PARTIES LINE UP

The divergences among the political parties in the poll are shown in the following figures:

	Percent
	Yes	No
Democrats	72	28
Republicans	46	54
Socialists	81	19

Small towns voted 57 percent in favor of the amendment, and 43 percent against, and the large cities 66 percent for and 34 percent against.

Cross sections of varying groups of the population show similar disparities of viewpoint. A break-down on these figures follows:

	Percent
	Yes	No
Farmers	46	54
Women	61	39
Reliefers	67	33
Young persons	72	28

The lively public interest in the child-labor question, which led the institute to take its poll, was largely brought about by depression. As unemployment grew adult laborers found themselves unable to get jobs, while children were being put to work. This condition speeded up the movement for ratification of the child-labor amendment. In the 2 years from 1933 to 1935 three times as many States ratified as in the 9 years from 1924 to 1933. No time limit for ratification is specified in the amendment.

Although today's poll shows that the Nation agrees on the fundamental principle of child-labor regulation, it is interesting to note that public enthusiasm chills considerably as soon as the age of the children is defined. For example:

QUESTION REWORDED

The Institute of Public Opinion conducted a preliminary poll on child labor in which it used the general question, "Do you favor an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting child labor?"

Voters, apparently having visions of 6-year-old urchins chained all day to factory machines, replied with an overwhelming affirmative. The actual vote was—yes, 82 percent; no, 18 percent.

This was clearly a vote on a principle.

Next the institute experimented with another, more specific question, "Do you favor an amendment to the Constitution giving Congress power to regulate labor of persons under 18?" Even though the word "regulate" was used instead of "prohibit" as in the earlier question, the affirmative vote cascaded sharply. Only 86 percent of the voters replied "yes" to this question, against 82 percent on the first question.

When, in the third and final question, the words "limit" and "prohibit" were added to "regulate," thus conforming to the reading of the child-labor amendment, the "yes" vote dropped some more, to 61 percent.

Many sincere opponents of the child-labor amendment pitch their argument on the point illustrated in the foregoing figures, i. e., that a person of 18 is not a child. Others, notably Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, maintain that the words "limit, regulate, and prohibit" give Congress too sweeping power over the lives of the 45,000,000 persons under 18. Fearing that Congress could forbid children to sew, to help with the dishes or to sweep out the kitchen, these opponents favor a rewording of the amendment.

The answer that proponents of the amendment make is that Congress would do no such thing. They quote the late Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who said, apropos of the amendment, "If we are going to hesitate to repose power of any body because that power may be abused we shall have to stop legislation altogether."

In general, today's poll would seem to indicate that public approval of Federal child-labor legislation would be greater if the age limit specified in the amendment were lowered.

Several thousand voters in the poll wrote across their ballots that the 18-year minimum was too high, but that they would favor the amendment if the limit were reduced to 16 years.

HOW STATES AND OTHER DIVISIONS VOTED

In the national poll on an amendment to the Constitution giving Congress the power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18, 61 percent voted "Yes", and 39 percent "No." The following tables show the poll percentages by State and other subdivisions:

CHILD LABOR NOW CITY-FARM AND POLITICAL ISSUE—CENTRALIZED POWER OVER LIVES OF YOUTH CHIEF OBJECTION OF OPPOSITION—FARMERS 54 PERCENT AGAINST BAN BY LAW; CITIES 66 PERCENT FOR IT, YOUTH 70 PERCENT IN FAVOR

The child-labor amendment was originally a nonpartisan issue. Endorsed in principle by Calvin Coolidge, it was passed by a Republican Congress with the aid of Democratic votes, and its ratification is now being urged by President Roosevelt. But today it is one of the most bitterly partisan of all issues.

Whereas in today's poll 72 percent of Democrats approve the child-labor amendment, 54 percent of Republicans oppose it.

Moreover, the amendment not only sets the parties at war against each other, but divides classes and age groups. Farmers are squared off against city folk, young people against their elders.

Farmers are, on the average, opposed to the amendment by a vote of 54 percent in the poll, whereas inhabitants of the 10 biggest cities are 66 percent in favor of it.

Enthusiasm for the amendment among young persons is marked by an affirmative vote of more than 70 percent. Older people, less willing to see child labor regulated by the Federal Government, are only 58 percent in favor of the amendment.

And so it goes, with class voting against class.

What made child labor a partisan issue? Why are many Republicans, whose party first sponsored the amendment in Congress, now lined up against it?

There may be several explanations. Probably the most important is simply the fact that the Roosevelt administration has come out strongly in favor of Federal child-labor regulation. Other polls of the institute have shown that whenever one party heartily espouses an issue, the other tends to take the opposite side, on principle, even though it may mean reversing a historic position.

Many of the N. R. A. codes abolished or regulated child labor, particularly in the textile manufacturing business. But even before N. R. A. was killed by the Supreme Court, President Roosevelt was urging uniform Federal control through the child-labor amendment. In November 1934 he said: "In the child-labor field the obvious method of maintaining the present gains is through ratification of the child-labor amendment. I hope this may be achieved." Political opposition to the amendment probably dates from this time, on the basis that it would centralize governmental power over private lives of young persons, as some critics contend.

FARMERS OPPOSE AMENDMENT

Next to Republicans the largest single group opposed to a child-labor amendment are the farmers. The explanation of this is probably that farmers look to their children for help during harvesting and planting. Undoubtedly they fear that Congress, in attempting to wipe out abuses of child labor in berry fields, onion fields, beet fields, etc., might jeopardize a farmer's right to ask his son to milk cows in the morning, or help with the spring plowing. Part of the farm opposition may also be due to the age limit of 18 years specified in the amendment. The average farmer looks upon a boy of 18 as an adult, not a child.

The poll vote of persons in big cities is in striking contrast to the farm vote. With an average of 66 percent in the affirmative, all of the 10 biggest cities favor the amendment.

CROSS SECTION OF OPINION

There are four principal reasons why a majority of voters favor a constitutional amendment granting Congress power to deal with child labor. As given by the voters themselves, the first and most typical reason is:

"Children under 18 should all be in school, not out working. There's plenty of time for that later."

The next most typical reason mentioned by voters is an economic reason:

"It will help solve unemployment by providing more jobs for older people who need work most."

This same point was touched upon last month by President Roosevelt in his speech at Baltimore where he went on record in favor of limiting work to persons more than 18 and less than 65.

The other two reasons given by voters who favor Federal regulation of child labor are:

1. We must protect our children. They can't stand shop work. It ruins their health.

2. Child labor is a national problem, and Congress is most capable of handling it.

VIEWS OF THOSE AGAINST IT

As for the other side of the question, a half dozen reasons are given by voters who believe that the child-labor amendment should not be approved.

1. Many children under 18 have to help support their families. Look at farm youngsters and children of poor city families.

2. Many boys and girls under 18 have to work to keep from starving.

3. There's too much interference in private life already. Congress should be kept out of it.

4. Child labor is a problem for each State to handle.

5. A minimum age limit of 16 years would be acceptable. Eighteen is too old.

6. Anyone who can get a job should work. I did before 18, and it never hurt me.

JAPANESE ACTIVITIES IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, a little more than a year ago I presented to the Senate a report of my investigation of conditions in the Philippines. This report called attention, among other things, to the efforts of the Japanese to secure a foothold in the islands through infiltration.

In the same connection I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD an article by Robert Aura Smith, special correspondent for the New York Times, entitled "Japanese Forge Ahead in Philippines."

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JAPANESE FORGE AHEAD IN PHILIPPINES—THE QUESTION RAISED BY THE SPREAD OF THEIR INFLUENCE IS BROUGHT TO THE FORE BY THE LAND-LEASE ISSUE

By Robert Aura Smith

MANILA.—The question of Japanese penetration, brought sharply to a head by President Quezon's personal investigation of Japanese landholdings in the Province of Davao, now looms as the possibly deciding factor in the economic and political future of the Philippines.

Japanese penetration has been a growing problem. As early as 1931 a plea was made in the Philippine Legislature for the rescue of the Philippine fishing industry from the Japanese. The situation in the Province of Davao had come to notice from time to time.

In 1935, under the direction of the then Governor General, Frank Murphy, a comprehensive examination of Japanese landholdings in Davao was conducted by the Secretary of Agriculture and Commerce, Eulogio Rodriguez, and it is upon the basis of these findings that an attempt is now being made to enforce Philippine law and safeguard Philippine land from alien penetration.

JAPANESE IN DAVAO

The Province of Davao is situated in the southeastern part of the island of Mindanao. Of its total area of about 4,500,000 acres only about 250,000 acres in the valley and coastal plain of the Davao River are arable. Of this arable land, the Japanese are in control, legally or illegally, of almost exactly one-half. The findings of the Rodriguez committee were that about 55,000 acres are held by the Japanese in direct violation of Philippine law.

It was during the World War that the Japanese, in the form of 31 corporations, went into Davao for the purpose of getting control of the rich timber land in the upper part of the Davao Valley. With the connivance of a Filipino official, Vicente Ceballos, Japanese companies received forestry permits for the cutting of timber.

In 1919 the Bureau of Forestry discovered the malfeasance of Ceballos and he was dismissed. Charges were preferred against him, but he fled the country. The Bureau discovered that Japanese penetration existed not only for the purpose of getting lumber out of Davao, but also for the purpose of clearing the land, by burning, if necessary, to prepare the way for agricultural crops. The Bureau estimated that commercial lumber destroyed by burning alone amounted to 200,000,000 pesos ($100,000,000).

Charges were filed against the 31 corporations, of which 20 were known to be Japanese. The corporations were found guilty, but the Governor General remitted their fines, holding that they had acted in good faith, and assessed against them only the ordinary charges for forestry service.

While it was expected that this would result in a wholesale cancelation of Japanese concessions and leaseholds in Davao, exactly the reverse was the case. Japanese attention was deflected from forestry and illegal forest operation to agriculture and particularly to the cultivation of hemp.

Some land was acquired by outright purchase from private individuals. Some was legally leased under permit from the Philippine government. The passage of an alien land law made further legal leases impossible and the practice arose of obtaining leases in connivance with Filipinos.

A Filipino would lease from the Government an area of hemp land. He would then employ a Japanese to develop and cultivate that land for him. The Japanese, however, instead of receiving wages would take the produce of the soil and pay an insignificant sum to the Filipino for the use of his name in securing the title.

DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES

Credit for these operations was abundant. Several large development companies were formed, financed either in Manila or in Japan, and it was easy for the pioneers to market their product. Davao was a port of entry and was put on the regular steamship runs between Japan and Australia.

The Japanese settlers were hard-working and progressive. They supplanted the painfully slow hand stripping of hemp by decortication with up-to-date machinery. Their exports jumped amazingly and by 1930 this one province was in control of 40 percent of the hemp exports from the Philippines. The Japanese were able to set the standards and to set the price.

The colony meanwhile was growing steadily. The official figures of the Japanese consulate at the present time for Japanese in Davao show 12,742 residents. The estimate of the Rodriguez committee is 14,000. The total population of the province is 145,000, including the wild tribes in the mountains and 98,000 Christian Filipinos.

This group of 14,000 Japanese has gained a control of economic and social life in Davao out of all proportion to its numbers. The city of Davao is almost completely Japanese. Signs on the shops are in Japanese. There are excellent schools conducted in the Japanese language and the bulk of the trade is with Japan. In 1934 Japanese ships carried more than twice as much cargo in and out of Davao as the ships of all other nationalities combined.

QUESTION OF LEASES

The crux of the matter today is the illegal land leases held by the Japanese. The violation of the land law is clear and there exists, moreover, a direct violation of the Philippine constitutional provision that the agricultural land of the country may not be alienated.

When cancelation of the illegal leases was suggested the Japanese in Manila and Tokyo made strong protest, stating that many of the leases were acquired in good faith, and that the Japanese have an equity in the Province because of their work in its development.

The problem is now under consideration by President Quezon. If an attempt is made to enforce the provisions of the Philippine land law, it is apparent that a Japanese protest will be made and that in consequence the entire matter will be referred to the United States High Commissioner in the Philippines and eventually to the American State Department.

CONTROL OF FISHING

The "Davao question" is not the only one raised by Japanese penetration. Coordinately with the development of Davao, the Japanese have systematically taken over the power fishing in the Philippines. This they have done through the organization of companies nominally Filipino but actually Japanese in ownership and operation. In addition to the legal and quasi-legal Japanese fishing operations there is large-scale illegal Japanese fishing which the government, with its three inadequate coast-guard cutters, has been unable to stop.

The most spectacular case of Japanese penetration, however, has been in the field of retail trade. Prior to 1930 Japanese retail merchandising in the Philippines was negligible; most of it was done through Chinese stores. But when the Chinese boycott of Japanese goods in 1930–31 extended to the Philippines the Japanese found themselves without a retail outlet, and they set about systematically to create one.

In the city of Manila they matched the Chinese stores with bazaars on one street after another. In 3 years they jumped from controlling 7 percent of the retail merchandising in Manila to a control of 28 percent. The figure is still rising.

IMPORTS FROM JAPAN RISE

It was natural that this entrance into retail trade should be reflected in the entire field of imports. Japanese goods coming into the Philippines increased in 5 years by 300 percent. In the case of textiles the situation rapidly became so acute that the American State Department stepped in and consummated a gentlemen's agreement dividing equally between the United States and Japan the market previously controlled by the United States. Since then transshipments of textiles, particularly from Hong Kong, have already knocked this agreement into a cocked hat, and Japanese textiles are rapidly driving the American goods out of the Philippine market.

When a tariff proposal is made in the Philippine legislative body, which might possibly conflict with Japanese interests, it faces a powerful lobby called the Merchants Protective Association, which is directly traceable to Japanese sources. In 1934 the Japanese consul in Manila, in a public address, openly urged that the legislature turn down the tariff recommendations of the then American Governor General and the Filipino party leaders.

This was an open and frontal attack. What has gone on behind the scenes no one knows. The suggestion has been made that economic penetration, which is already an accomplished fact, is only the forerunner to political and policy penetration. Filipino newspapers, which 2 years ago were unwilling to say that Japan presented the one great menace of external aggression to the projected Philippine State, are now putting it in headlines.

FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF PROGRAM—ADDRESS BY HOWARD BRUCE

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a speech delivered by Mr. Howard Bruce, a prominent businessman of Baltimore city, at the Town Meeting of the Air, May 7, 1936, on the subject of relief.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

In beginning, I wish to say that I have a warm personal regard for Mr. Hopkins and all of his associates with whom I have come in contact. I have the greatest respect for their sincerity and their singleness of purpose. Mr. Hopkins has had the most difficult administrative job that ever existed in this country. I may differ with him on policies, but that is all.

The greatest problem facing this country today is that of finding permanent and gainful employment for those out of work.

Estimates of the unemployed vary from less than 10,000,000 to over 12,000,000. Similar estimates of the employables in this country usually place the figure at somewhere in the neighborhood of 50,000,000. On this basis, the unemployed today are in the neighborhood of 20 percent of the total employables. Just what part of this 20 percent are normally unemployed, due to seasonal occupations, shifting of jobs, and other causes, no one really knows. Personally, I have the feeling that our problems will be over long before we absorb anywhere near 10,000,000 workers.

The destitute must be supported. There can be no difference of opinion between responsible people on that.

When a local community cannot take care of its own it becomes the responsibility of the State. When the States cannot bear this responsibility, it becomes the duty of the National Government. Should we falter in meeting this obligation fully, fairly, and in a humane way, we lose our self-respect.

There is no question that Federal aid for the needy and unemployed was essential. The burden was too great for the States and their political subdivisions. They were breaking under the load that they had up to 1933 been carrying. Their credit in many instances had been impaired and it was impossible for them to borrow. A great many States were prevented by constitutional restrictions from taking necessary steps, and plans for handling the situation had to be made by the Federal powers under great pressure; and a discussion of whether these were wise or unwise serves no good purpose at the present time.

In 1933 the country faced a tragic situation. People had lost hope of a restoration in our Government, and had lost hope of a restoration of prosperity. It was an emergency if such a thing ever existed. Emergency measures were justified and emergency measures were adopted. I am no critic of the measures that were adopted.

We have come a long way on the road toward complete recovery. Some of our problems have solved themselves; others have been solved by the Government; we still have many left; there is an outstanding one that up to the present time has not responded to treatment and that is our unemployment relief.

This is so clear that the time for treating unemployment as a temporary emergency has passed. It has been with us for years, and it is the part of wisdom to approach it on the assumption that in some form or in some degree it is going to be with us at least for a while longer.

This problem of unemployment relief is so complex and so enormous that I approach its discussion with a distinct sense of modesty. If I can accomplish anything by talking to you it will be by arousing discussion and interest among those who are interested in its solution.

My conclusions are as follows:

Such measures for the relief of the unemployed as were undertaken by the old C. W. A. and the present activities of the W. P. A. will not meet the situation; they do not supply even temporarily a satisfactory solution of the problem. Employment and relief for the destitute follow different lines and must be governed by different laws. Relief to be effective must be given to each case according to the needs of that particular case. Relief employment, on the other hand, is given at a specified wage without regard to the necessities of the individual. This means that a single man, or a married man receiving supplementary relief, which may be $10, $15, $20, or $30 a month, receives the same security wage as is paid to the head of a family of 10 or 12 children, receiving $80, $90, or $100 per month on relief. The one is being unnecessarily overpaid and the other is being underpaid.

In spite of the increased expenditures, it is my observation that there was more suffering immediately following the inauguration of the W. P. A. than was experienced under the system existing prior to W. P. A. made work.

Public work will and should form a part of any relief program, but the work project should first be selected for its intrinsic value and the unemployed should be fitted to the project, so that when completed the project approximates in value to the community the expenditure made upon it. If I agreed with Colonel Westbrook that the value of the project was 70 percent of the cost, I wouldn't argue so much. Work relief, where work under great pressure is devised to absorb millions of unemployed, which has this immediate absorption as its main motive, defeats its very object.

I maintain that made work under unorthodox regulations does not add to the self-respect of the individual. He knows he is on relief, and his effort will be to obtain the meager security wage with a minimum of effort. This results in actually detracting from the dignity of labor, and if employment on made work under artificial conditions is continued long enough, it is inevitable that it will make the worker less efficient and less effective should he secure employment where productivity has a bearing on wages and continuity of employment.

The further the source of relief money and the seat of authority are removed from the individual taxpayer, the less efficient will be the administration of relief, both from a humanitarian and a financial standpoint. No central authority can possibly appraise the needs of each city and county in this vast country. The fact that money comes from some far-removed national source creates the impression that it comes from an inexhaustible supply and destroys any feeling of personal or community responsibility for its proper and efficient expenditure. Instead of this sense of responsibility, there is created an urge for each community to get for itself as much as possible of this "easy money."

If I were to undertake to write a formula for unemployment relief during the next 12 months, I should say that the Federal Government should put up from 50 percent to 60 percent of the money required, the States and their subdivisions supplying the remainder; that the States and their subdivisions should be permitted to administer relief; that work relief as now handled would not play its present major part, and the part it would play would be at the selection of and under the control of semiautonomous subdivisions of the States.

From the funds supplied by the Federal Government there should be held back an equalization fund and the balance should be prorated among the States on a fixed basis. The moneys in the hands of the States should be similarly prorated among the political subdivisions after withholding an emergency or equalization fund.

Whatever the percentage of the Federal Government's expenditure may be, the policy should be to reduce this proportion until eventually the States and their subdivisions assume the major part of the load that they formerly carried and that really belongs to them.

I know the arguments against this policy, but I believe the citizens of counties and incorporated towns will have just as much human sympathy as either the States or Federal authorities, and they will have something that neither the States nor the Federal Government can possibly have, and that is a complete knowledge of their own neighborhood problems. [Applause.]

So long as the Federal Government makes grants in aid to States the Federal Government must retain a certain veto power and set up certain minimum requirements. The States, by the same rule, should retain the same control over their subdivisions. The influence of both Federal and State Governments should be to bring about the greatest amount of decentralization and the greatest administrative freedom in the hands of small political subdivisions.

In laying down rules for relief administration there should be established a balance of power between the social workers, on one hand, and the regular governmental powers on the other; complete domination by either is unfortunate. I don't know which is worse.

The objective of the Government, of business interests, and of the Nation as a whole is to reduce and demolish the citadel of unemployment. So far the strategy dictated by our Government has been in the main to accomplish this objective by frontal attacks—by storm. If we had succeeded at our first try, or even at our second, we would have nothing but acclaim for our strategy; but, after being repulsed twice—once in 1933–34 and once in 1935–36—isn't it time to count our losses? Maybe the strategy of direct action, of frontal attacks, entails too great losses with too small results, and possibly the indirect attack may yield greater success. I call the C. W. A., the W. P. A., and kindred projects frontal attacks; and I say that after the expenditure of billions we have accelerated recovery of consumption industries, but we still have the unemployment load undiminished.

Now, the indirect attack really has nothing indirect about it; it is just plain common sense. The American people must solve this problem by increasing employment and thereby gradually absorbing the army of employables now without work.

Agriculture and many lines of industry have already recovered from their depressed state; some industries have established new high records. The worst laggards are those enterprises that require the investment of money in capital or in durable goods. Money is notoriously timid and does not come out in time of uncertainty.

There is tremendous demand for the investment of money. Obsolescence and need for repairs have been piling up since 1930; buildings have continued to depreciate throughout the depression, possibly at a faster rate than the normal. Generally speaking, the needs for expenditure of this character are cumulative—what you don't do this year you must do some day.

This brings me to the question, Why are the American people not fully launched in this campaign of expenditure? The answer is in two parts:

The people of this country want to see a descending line of Government expenditures, with an ascending line of Government income. [Applause.] Then the average man can predict with some assurance the time when the two lines cross and the Budget is balanced.

No individual, no business, can go on indefinitely spending more than is collected as income without eventually landing in bankruptcy. The same is true of any government; its credit is measured by what the people think of it. If government extravagance is carried too far, there will be a collapse of credit, or inflation, or both, with all their tragic effect upon the citizens.

I don't think it is the size of our debt that worries people. It doesn't worry me. This is a big, rich country, and if we get the wheels turning, we can absorb the debt. The disturbing thing is not where we are but where are we going—when will we be in normal balance? [Applause.]

The other part of the answer is—and really it is the whole answer—we must create in the minds of those controlling expenditures, and through their faith transmit to the Nation, the belief that we are approaching a period of stability and security; that money can be invested with a reasonable prospect of return; that the rules of the game are not to be constantly changed; that we are not to have too large a dose of reform. When the average man recovers his sense of security, we will have restored to the American people the daring, aggressive, constructive characteristics that have made this Nation, and in my opinion, we will have a period of the greatest business, industrial, construction, and employment activity that this country has ever known. [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. Thank you Mr. Bruce and Colonel Westbrook. I am sure you all agree that you have heard two sincere, honest, and capable expressions of opinions, however different they may be, on this important question. Now, these gentlemen will be very happy to undertake to answer your questions.

Question. Mr. Bruce, how would your plan of local autonomy work in New Jersey? [Applause.]

Mr. BRUCE. I am not as familiar with New Jersey as I am with Maryland. I will tell you how we would do it in Maryland. We would take care of our own people, and we wouldn't throw away any money; and by the same rule, I think it will work in New Jersey.

Question. Mr. Bruce made the remark that the unemployed on the W. P. A. relief jobs should be fitted for the work they do. That will leave a certain balance. Wouldn't they be included among the group called boondoggiers?

Mr. BRUCE. I would leave them on direct relief. [Applause.] When I say "men fitted", I mean putting people on work relief who could be put on it without injustice to them or their communities; I mean putting them on work projects that have a value when they are finished approximating the cost of the project. [Applause.]

Question. Mr. Bruce, would you admit that the final and total cost of work relief would be less if the wages paid on works programs were prosperity wages rather than security wages, based on the proposition that higher wages would return purchasing power and make it possible for the average citizen to purchase the necessary commodities and thereby restore business?

Mr. BRUCE. I think the security wage is neither a wage nor is it relief. That is one of its greatest difficulties. I think it is too small as a wage and in many cases it is too high as relief. Does that answer you?

Question. Absolutely.

Chairman DENNY. Here is a written question to Colonel Westbrook: The city of New York receives $300,000,000 less from the Federal Government than it pays in taxes. In view of such large expenditures for such projects as C. C. C. in other parts of the country, ought not New York to have a larger W. P. A. program?

Colonel WESTBROOK. Because the people, the businessmen, the brokers, and others who constitute the city of New York are able to operate under the industrial mechanism that is set up under the protection of this Government, and because through the operation of that industrial mechanism they levy in effect what amounts to tribute all over the rest of the country, the city of New York is able to pay these taxes and it should pay them. New York is able to pay for the relief that is extended here. If in the city of New York people are not getting an adequate amount of relief, then that should be remedied on the merits of that case, not on the question of how much income the people who live in the city of New York get, and the corresponding amount of taxes they pay. They couldn't live without the hinterland—New York City couldn't.

Chairman DENNY. Mr. Bruce, here is a written question for you: Do you think that business is doing its utmost to end unemployment?

Mr. BRUCE. I will start by saying "No." [Applause.] When we started down the slide, and when we were in the darkest days of the depression, I think the performance of business was magnificent in maintaining themselves alive and taking care of their people way beyond cold-blooded business requirements. Now that we have turned the corner, the first impulse, and it is a natural one, is for business to extend the hours of those of its employees that were on short time. But I believe that is passing. I think business can do more than it is doing [applause] to put more people to work. I believe there is a tendency among business people to lay this too often on a Washington doorstep and let it go at that. [Applause.]

Question. Mr. Bruce, do you think we can rise from the depths of the business cycle and at the same time increase purchasing power without work relief?

Mr. BRUCE. I think you have got to have work relief. I have said so. But I say, let's get approximately 100 cents value for the dollar we spend on work relief. Let's cut out the boondoggling. [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. A written question to Colonel Westbrook: When you say "industry", do you mean the manufacturer or do you mean all business of city and country, including the retailer?

Colonel WESTBROOK. Well, when I say "industrial mechanism", I mean that in a very general way; I mean all business entities, including agriculture, which produce goods or which perform valuable services. I mean the grocers, and I mean the lawyers, and I mean all of the people who have the privilege of carrying out their trades and professions under the protection of this Government. That is what I mean by "industrial mechanism."

Question. Mr. Bruce, are you aware that the 100 mayors of the 100 largest cities of the country in asking for specific appropriations larger than the President has asked for relief have stated that in all their cities they agree that all the projects have, as you said, intrinsic value; and also that they were of a character that would be of a permanent benefit to the public in the time to come? Are you aware of that?

Mr. BRUCE. I am aware of it, and it has made no impression on me whatsoever. [Laughter and applause.] I had an active, personal part in working out the program for Baltimore and for Maryland. I cooperated with public officials, and I know the projects that we in the main brought out were worthy projects. I have looked at men tickling the ground with shovels when it ought to have been done by trenching machines. I have looked at 271 people making an atlas of Baltimore. I don't believe they need one anyhow [laughter], and it doesn't make sense. We are not getting 100 cents for our money. [Applause.]

Question. Both speakers seem to agree that the main interest is to eliminate relief and eliminate expense, and we all agree that the main burden of taxes is falling on the so-called forgotten man. Why not divide the working hours so we will not have the relief question? Why is the industrialist, who carries the burden, so much against dividing the working hours? If they were not, they would not have the problem at all. [Applause.]

Colonel WESTBROOK. I think that might be a pretty good emergency measure if we could put it into effect. I don't believe we could put it into effect. I would like to see it tried.

Chairman DENNY. Mr. Bruce, will you take that same question? Does the 30-hour week come under your question?

QUESTIONER. Yes, shortening the hours of labor. They are trying to raise them at the present time, now that we have no N. R. A.

Mr. BRUCE. I will answer the 30-hour week in two ways. I will say, "yes", and then I will say, "no." [Laughter.] I will say, "yes", if it is brought about in an orderly way over a period of time, and the production per man-hour is increased simultaneously so that in the final analysis we haven't had a great increase of price. If it has got to be done suddenly by edict, I say, "no", because you are going to raise the cost of consumption products directly in proportion to the cost of labor, and you are not going to correspondingly increase the purchasing power; you are going to decrease consumption; you are going to destroy your export trade; you are going to put a tremendous premium on labor-saving devices. When you get through, I think you will be worse off than you are today. [Applause.]

Question. Mr. Bruce, in view of the fact that you say unemployment up to the present time has not responded to treatment, do you not think that the W. P. A. lay-offs that are going on at the present time will aggravate the problem of unemployment rather than solve it? [Applause.]

Mr. BRUCE. You better ask Colonel Westbrook about that. He knows more about those policies than I do.

QUESTIONER. I asked that question paticularly of Mr. Bruce, because he is in favor of discontinuing the W. P. A.

Chairman DENNY. Let's have both of them answer, the colonel, and then Mr. Bruce.

Colonel WESTBROOK. Well, if I understand the question, the gentleman wanted to know whether the discontinuance of W. P. A. would operate to increase unemployment. I believe that if these people who are now receiving W. P. A. checks should cease to receive W. P. A. checks all over the country, we would have the beginning of another pretty sizable depression. [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. Now, Mr. Bruce, will you speak to that question now?

Mr. BRUCE. I don't advocate abolishing W. P. A. I advocate transferring the control to the local communities and getting 100-cents value for the money we spend. [Applause.]

Question. Colonel Westbrook, do you think that relief is being administered for the benefit of the needy, or for the benefit of the Democratic Party? [Applause and boos.]

Colonel WESTBROOK. Well, I think, in the first place, that is a frivolous question. In the second place, I think the people who have received relief are better qualified to answer that than I am. I think that the administration of relief, as far as the policy of the Federal Government is concerned, is honest and sincere, and I don't think that it can be successfully challenged by anybody who knows anything about it. [Applause.]

Question. Mr. Westbrook, would not the technological reforms advocated by Mr. Bruce increase the cost in the form of investigation and research, and would there be any benefit in that increase of cost?

Colonel WESTBROOK. I didn't gather that Mr. Bruce had advocated any technological reforms. My understanding of the principal thing he advocated was that we turn relief over to local communities. We tried that out during the F. E. R. A. and pretty well under the C. W. A.—principally under the F. E. R. A. While we had very excellent cases of administration, we had some very bad. It was not uniform. If the Federal Government agrees that it is the Federal Government's responsibility to provide the funds for relief, I don't think that it can avoid the responsibility for administering it.

Question. To both speakers: Being agreed, as we all are, that the best way to end unemployment relief is simply to end it, and the problem of ending unemployment being as it is, a man-made problem and not an adversity of nature like a famine or drought, but a problem arising out of our economic system of private property, shouldn't the solution be man-made? [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. I am sorry, but I am not going to ask either speaker to answer that. That is a question for another meeting. Our subject is: "Should the present Federal unemployment relief program be continued?"

Question. Mr. Bruce, you made a statement that you thought that the power of distributing relief should go back to the States, instead of remaining with the Federal Government, because you thought that relief would be better administered. What would happen to people in the State of Kansas?

Mr. BRUCE. This transfer to the community, accompanied by placing directly upon the community a part of the money load, will change the situation from spending somebody else's money to spending in part your own. This will stimulate the effort to find employment; next, work relief will yield greater value, and finally shake off those receiving relief that are not entitled to it. There are in every community, and there always have been, people with invisible, illegal sources of income. You can name them as well as I can, and they are all on relief. When the local people are putting up a part of the money, they will go off relief. I have no quarrel with the standards of relief or the wages of relief work. Every vote I have ever had on that subject has been on the side of raising them. My only quarrel is with the abuses of people that are not entitled to relief, and of spending money under the guise of work that is a fraud; it is not work. [Applause.]

Question. I want to ask this question of both speakers. They both seem to want to get to normalcy as far as employment is concerned. One says keep it in the Federal Government; the other says put it among the States and the localities. There is a difference of opinion there. Neither one is talking to the subject, which is how to end and when to end Federal relief, which is the real question, it seems to me. I would ask both of them to answer it. What is your remedy for unemployment in this the richest country in the world, and why don't you tell us? [Applause.] We want to know what is their solution for this anomalous condition of the richest country, with the greatest amount of science and machinery, and still people ready, able to work, unable to find it? Why not tell us about free trade, taxing industry——

Chairman DENNY. I am sorry, but the question is, "Should the present Federal unemployment relief program be continued?" That is our subject. Next question.

Question. Mr. Bruce said we could have prosperity and the wheels of recovery going around. I can't understand how we can have them if we are going to bear down on relief, when purchasing power will be trimmed and the economic state will only fall. I can't see your point there. It sounds very completely flat. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRUCE. I have not undertaken to bear down on anything. All I have undertaken to say is, let's put this back where it belongs; let's bring the Federal expenditures down in range with the income, and let's get a hundred cents' worth for the dollar we spend on work relief. That is all I have said. [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. Mr. Bruce, here is another written question. How would you establish nonpolitical control of relief? [Laughter.]

Mr. BRUCE. I will give you an illustration in the State of Maryland. There we have a State board. It is called the board of State aids and charities, and by long custom its membership is made up of people that are primarily interested in social welfare. They are not politically minded. I would have this board name for each local community a list of 15 names and allow in each county the county commissioners to pick 5 names out of the 15, and that board would be the county welfare board. I would have the finances come through the ordinary channels. I would have the spending in the hands of that welfare board, and when a disagreement occurs, public opinion would referee it.

I don't know which is worse; to turn it all over to professional social workers or turn it all over to politicians; one is as bad as the other, I think. [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. Colonel Westbrook, here is a written question for you. Should any work of the W. P. A. be carried out by private contractors?

Colonel WESTBROOK. I think a plan could be worked out whereby the private contractors would give employment to the people who are destitute and who are eligible for it. Under those conditions, I think, yes. [Applause.]

Question. Mr. Bruce, I mean nothing unfriendly in this question. I hope it will be taken seriously. Your greatest indictment against the W. P. A. is that the public doesn't get 100 cents for its dollar. Your implication is, therefore, that it should be liquidated. Do you believe that that vocational group known as the bankers give the public 100 cents for its dollar? [Applause.]

Chairman DENNY. Just a minute. We are discussing one problem at a time. We can't discuss the banking problem now. Let's stick to the subject.

Question. In view of what you said, Mr. Bruce, regarding industrial cooperation and the lack of it today, and also in view of the present surplus of corporations, don't you think that there is something in this issue for more industrial cooperation rather than abolishment of relief?

Mr. BRUCE. I have stated that there ought to be more industrial cooperation. Sometimes I think that now that industry is in black ink that maybe by the reduction of prices and a present diminishing of profits, they might profit in the long run and the country be better off. Does that answer you?

QUESTIONER. Fine.

Question. Mr. Bruce, you stated that you were not opposed to W. P. A. As a W. P. A. worker, I would like to ask you whether you are opposed to the present lay-off of 700,000 workers all over the United States on W. P. A.

Mr. BRUCE. Having adopted a policy of supporting by work the employables on relief, I am not in favor of throwing them off until some other policy is established that takes them on. [Applause.]

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, yesterday, as appears from page 8090 of the RECORD, I stated to the Senate that after a conference with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] I was "satisfied that the bill now under consideration can be and will be promptly disposed of tomorrow." For that reason the bill was not proceeded with further yesterday afternoon.

The Senator from South Carolina is not present; I am informed that he is ill. I therefore ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 12624, being the first deficiency appropriation bill.

I realize, Mr. President, that the friends of the commodity-exchange bill are anxious to have that measure disposed of, and it is my purpose to contribute to that end; but, in view of the absence of the Senator from South Carolina, who, I am informed by his secretary, will be present tomorrow, I make the request that is now being submitted to the Senate.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, I realize the situation as outlined by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON]. I think I may accept the assurance that we will go forward with the commodity-exchange bill tomorrow. I would not want the bill delayed over an extended period of time, even though the chairman might be ill. It is a committee bill, and the members of the committee are quite capable of handling it during the illness of the Senator from South Carolina. I think it is due to him, within the rules of propriety, that we may set aside the bill today, awaiting the return of the Senator from South Carolina tomorrow; but I should not want the consideration of the bill to be postponed for several days. With the understanding that the bill will be taken up tomorrow, I have no objection today, temporarily, to laying it aside and considering the deficiency appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none; the unfinished business is temporarily laid aside, and the Chair lays before the Senate House bill 12624.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be read for amendment, and that committee amendments be first considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The clerk will state the first amendment of the committee.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Title I—General appropriations—Legislative", on page 2, after line 2, to insert:

SENATE

To pay to Beatrice Trammell, widow of Hon. Park Trammell, late a Senator from the State of Florida, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 6, to insert:

For additional amount for the assistant clerk of the Committee on Appropriations to make the salary $4,800 per annum, fiscal year 1937, $600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 9, to insert:

For miscellaneous items, exclusive of labor, fiscal year 1936, $50,000: Provided, That no motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles shall be purchased from this or any other appropriation for this purpose.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, in his testimony before the appropriations subcommittee on the deficiency bill, Mr. Hopkins stated that at the peak of employment on work relief 3,800,000 were employed. This included 3,000,000 employed by the Works Progress Administration, 455,000 by the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the balance by the other agencies of the Government, including Public Works, Public Roads, and other Government agencies.

Mr. Hopkins plans, between March 1 and July 1 of the current year, to reduce the number employed by the W. P. A. by 700,000 and expects the number employed by the other agencies of the Government to increase by 400,000, leaving on the first of the coming month about 3,400,000 persons on relief work. To take care of these people on work relief, out of the $4,800,000,000 appropriation in 1935 the Government will have unexpended about a billion dollars; out of other balances unexpended under former appropriations since 1933, amounting to about $900,000,000, about $400,000,000, which will be available from the appropriations made for general public works; about $308,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps up to March 31 next, when that agency expires; and the $1,425,000,000 for works progress included in the present bill; or a total, including general public works, for work relief for the next fiscal year of substantially $4,050,000,000.

Much of the money included in the unexpended balances referred to is already allocated or obligated, but its actual expenditure and the work which it will enable the Government to carry on will be made during the coming fiscal year, provided the balances are not carried on into the following fiscal year, which Mr. Bell, the Director of the Budget, estimates may be done to the extent of some six or seven hundred million dollars. The whole amount of $4,055,000,000, however, is available for expenditure during the coming fiscal year should the program for its expenditure be speeded up to meet the immediate need of relief work.

Out of the available funds for relief during the present fiscal year up to the first of the coming July it is estimated that $3,618,000,000 will have been spent for relief work, including general public works, so that if this bill in its present form secures passage there will be available for relief work over $400,000,000 more than was expended during the current year.

To get the expenditures in the current year for work relief, out of the total expenditures for relief of $3,618,000,000 must be deducted the amount spent on the unemployables for the first 6 months of the year. On the first of last January or immediately prior thereto these unemployables were turned over to the State authorities. On the basis of $33 per month expended by the Federal Government for each unemployable case, which figure was given us by Mr. Hopkins in the relief hearings, and estimating the unemployables at 1,500,000—the President's figures—we must deduct $300,000,000 from the $3,618,000,000 spent to get the amount spent on work relief, or $3,318,000,000, which is $69,000,000 less than the expenditures estimated for the coming year and $737,000,000 less than is available if all of the unexpended balances are to be spent in the next fiscal year.

To sum up, we are to spend for work relief during the coming year as much as, if not more than, during the current year, and the one saving that the Government is making is a saving of $600,000,000 through turning the unemployables over to the State and local authorities.

On the other hand, Mr. Hopkins' testimony indicates that the average number on work relief for the coming year will be 2,875,000 in all. This represents a falling off, from the peak figures given us by the President for work-relief employment of nearly a million persons and a falling off of 409,000 from the lowest figures for work-relief employment given us by Mr. Hopkins covering the month of November 1935.

The additional cost per case comes partly from the fact that Works Progress is to employ less people and Public Works and other agencies more, but the actual increase for next year, through putting all Works Progress employees on the prevailing-wage scales, will involve a certain increase per person employed.

The relief appropriations since the present administration came into office in March 1933 aggregate $11,054,675,000. Substantially all of this money has been either expended, obligated, or allocated. If we add to this the $1,425,000,000 in the present bill for work relief and the $308,000,000 for the Civilian Conservation Corps, and also the $400,000,000 appropriated for the next fiscal year for general public works, we find that the total relief appropriations up to the end of the next fiscal year will be $13,187,675,000. Even allowing for a certain carry-over of balances to the fiscal year 1938, this will leave an expenditure per year under the present administration of well over $3,000,000,000 a year for relief.

In March 1933 the unemployed in the country estimated by the American Federation of Labor numbered 15,652,000. Its estimate for March 1936 was 12,184,000. The figures of the National Industrial Conference Board for the same dates were: March 1933, 13,496,000, and March 1936, 9,649,000. Both sets of figures indicate a reduction in the unemployed of slightly over three and a half million persons. If the figures given us by the American Federation of Labor and the National Industrial Conference Board are either of them in any way accurate, it would appear that the priming of the pump to bring back prosperity has been a good deal of a failure. Manifestly the Government cannot operate perpetually under a program where its receipts are lower than its expenditures every year by more than $3,000,000,000.

Having tried out the expensive system of work relief on the theory that at the same time we were priming the pump to bring back prosperity, and having failed to do any such thing, is it not about time that we cut out this expensive experiment of Federal work relief and turn to some much more economical plan for taking care of our unemployed; that we then bend our every effort to encourage the speeding up of the business of the country and allow it to go ahead without being constantly harassed by the Government, and with some prospect of being allowed to realize on its investment? If this be done, we can get back that prosperity which the whole country is ready and hoping for, and the unemployment situation will largely, I believe, take care of itself.

Personally I have never been very enthusiastic over work relief. I have never taken a great deal of stock in the theory that by creating work which in times of prosperity the Government would not think of undertaking and putting men and women at work on these unnecessary jobs we were saving their morale and their self-respect. If I am right and this be true of the more valuable type of public-works projects, how much more is it true of many of the strange and inconceivable boondoggling projects of the Works Progress Administration which from time to time we hear of in the newspapers of the country.

I should like to be able to furnish the Senate with a list and a description of some of these projects. At my request, and with the consent of the chairman of the committee, the clerk of the committee asked for a list of the so-called "white collar" projects and the women's projects of the W. P. A., with a brief description of the purposes of the projects, the number of persons employed, and the money allocated. My request drew forth the reply that it would take weeks, and probably months, to furnish any such data. Some general information was furnished, but nothing in the way of the specific information that I requested; and yet in this very bill we are asked to appropriate $171,000,000 for these very projects that are so difficult to define. I regret exceedingly that I cannot give the Senate the information that it really ought to have about the appropriation for these projects that it is called upon to make.

I say that I have never been very enthusiastic over work relief. I do believe that it is the duty of the Government to see that its people shall not starve or suffer from exposure; and, no matter in what straits the Government finds itself, that primarily important duty must first be attended to before any lesser obligations shall be placed on the Treasury. Human life may not be trifled with. That the Government, however, owes a job to every man and woman in the country who is without work is to my mind an entirely false and dangerous theory and must lead to economic collapse. At a time when men and women are out of work on account of business depression the Government should not be called upon in its own hour of stress, which must come with every depression, to spend one dollar more than is absolutely essential to take care of the bodily welfare of its citizens.

I am firmly of the belief, especially since we have tried out the work-relief program, that the unemployed and the employables of the country should be taken care of through direct and not through work relief. Until the latter part of last year the Government did provide both direct and work relief for the unemployed. At that time direct relief on the part of the Federal Government ceased, and the unemployables were turned over to the State and local authorities. According to Mr. Hopkins' figures, as worked out when the Government was administering direct relief, these people were paid in the neighborhood of $400 a year per case; and the estimate is that that is substantially what the States will have to pay for taking care of them. The cost per case for work relief under the Works Progress Administration, which furnishes the cheapest form of work relief, is $972. This includes the cost of material for the work relief and the average contribution of substantially 18.6 percent paid by the sponsors on all projects. Other work relief provided under public works costs very much more, running up as high as an average of $2,470 per case, depending on the extent and cost of the material used.

It is fair to say in this connection that Secretary Ickes explained to the committee that the employment of every man on public works meant the indirect employment of several others on the material used in the project on which he was working.

I cannot persuade myself that in times of stress the Government of this country is warranted in running itself into debt, and mortgaging the future of its citizens, to provide funds to take care of its unemployed at a cost of $972 per case, much less $2,470 per case, when it could take care of the actual physical wants of its unemployed for $400 per case; and when I give the figure of $400 per case as the low figure, I am not by any means sure that under economical local management the $400 per case could not be materially lowered. However, be that as it may, work relief is the plan that we have adopted to take care of our unemployed employables; and if the deficiency bill goes through in the form that it came over to us from the House, or as amended in the Appropriations Committee of the Senate, work relief is the program that will be followed during the next fiscal year.

One argument for work relief that has always been advanced is that it would not only take care of the unemployed but would prime the pump to bring back business prosperity, by creating a demand among the workers both directly and indirectly employed for commodities. To a certain extent, among the class of commodities that these work-relief employees are able to purchase, the turning loose on the country of several billion dollars a year for work relief has probably had that effect. Also, the demand for material used has helped the heavy-goods industries. This probably largely accounts for what we are told are signs of returning business prosperity; but when we balance against that the effect on the business fabric of the country of the enormous borrowings by the Government, the enormous spending of the Government, and its consequent inability to balance its Budget, I am afraid the outlook for business as a whole will not be found to be entirely favorable.

As I have said, we are likely to go along for a while, at least, with work relief; and if we are to have work relief, it seems to me there are a few cardinal points in its administration that everyone will admit ought to be observed. In the first place, it should be administered with the utmost economy if it is to deserve the support of the people of the country. It is not enough that the higher administration in Washington should be conducted on a low percentage basis of cost; the same principle should apply to the field and local administration costs, including the costs of the foremen on the projects; and the usefulness of the projects should be so demonstrable as to make the advisability of their initiative unquestionable.

I have already said that I have been unable to get the information I asked for about the "white collar" and the women's projects. Whether or not all or the bulk of these projects are useful or reasonable projects I cannot inform the Senate. I have my own doubts. It seems to me that full publicity on such matters should be had. That the projects are being economically run some of the testimony we have had before the committee and the recent exposures in the newspapers about conditions in Westchester County, N. Y., would seem to refute.

In estimating his administration expenses at the low figure of 3.6 percent, Mr. Hopkins has not included the expenses of his foremen; and the large percentage of foremen on the jobs is particularly noticeable. In view of the fact that all the people of the country must eventually bear the costs of the country's relief work, it certainly is fair that no political influence, prejudice, or discrimination should have anything to do with the administration of work relief; but if the reports from West Virginia, New York, Missouri, and various other States are in any way reliable, political discrimination seems to be exceedingly rampant.

Politics ought to be and must be cut out of work relief if the people of the country are to have any confidence in its administration.

Last year we had a very considerable fight in the Senate over the question of whether relief work should be paid the prevailing-wage scale or the lower rate that would not subject business to competition with work relief for employment. The labor unions fought strenuously for the use of the prevailing-wage scale, but the President's recommendation for a lower relief scale prevailed. Mr. Hopkins last year was very much in favor of the lower wage scale, but this year he tells us that in nearly all cases the prevailing-wage scale has been adopted. This inevitably will have the effect of creating an unwillingness on the part of the workers to go back to private work, and will tend to prolong the maintenance of work relief.

As a matter of fact, in a great and rich country like ours I cannot subscribe to the claim we hear on many sides that we must always in the future keep up a work-relief program by the Federal Government. Federal buildings, river and harbor improvements, Federal highways, and other legitimate Federal projects will every year undoubtedly be undertaken; but, in my belief, such projects will be undertaken because we need the projects, and not because we need to take care of unemployment.

Work relief or direct relief should not be made attractive to those who are unfortunate enough to be on its rolls. All men and women on the relief rolls ought to realize that the employment they are getting on the rolls is but temporary and but a makeshift until they can get back to normal work.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] has proposed an amendment to the present bill turning back to the States the appropriation in the bill for the Works Progress Administration, and providing a minimum contribution by the States to the relief fund, to be administered by a bipartisan board in each State.

Already the care of the unemployables has been turned back to the State and local authorities. I am firmly of the opinion that with the States themselves contributing one-third toward their local relief program, and with the administration of the program entirely in their hands, a real economy in relief can be brought about. The people of each State know their own problems and know their own people. There will be little soldiering on relief when the local bipartisan boards realize that one-third of any waste incurred in relief work must be locally paid for.

I know that many people do not have the views that I have about relief work. It may well be that the States themselves will set up some form of work relief. That they are privileged to do under the amendment of the Senator from Michigan. At the very least, if they do set up such work relief, we know that in the interests of the localities such work relief will be as economically administered as its local committees can make it.

I very much hope that when this amendment is offered in the Senate it will be adopted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee, on page 2, beginning in line 10.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 13, to insert:

For expenses of inquiries and investigations ordered by the Senate, including compensation to stenographers of committees, at such rate as may be fixed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, but not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words, fiscal year 1936, $75,000: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for services, personal, professional, or otherwise, in excess of the rate of $3,600 per annum: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for per-diem and subsistence expenses except in accordance with the Subsistence Expense Act of 1926, approved June 3, 1926, as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 3, to insert:

The unobligated balance of the appropriation for expenses of inquiries and investigations ordered by the Senate, contingent fund of the Senate, for the fiscal year 1936, is reappropriated and made available for the fiscal year 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "House of Representatives", on page 3, after line 9, to insert:

For payment to the widow of Randolph Perkins, late a Representative from the State of New Jersey, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 11, to insert the following:

For payment to the widow of William D. Thomas, late a Representative from the State of New York, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 23, to insert:

For payment to Lincoln Loy McCandless, contestant, for expenses incurred in the contested-election case of McCandless against King, as audited and recommended by the Committee on Elections No. 2, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 3, before the word "foregoing", to strike out "two" and insert "three", so as to read:

The three foregoing sums to be disbursed by the Clerk of the House.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, after line 7, to insert:

Expenses of special and select committees: For an additional amount for special and select committees authorized by the House, fiscal year 1937, $20,000 to be immediately available: Provided, That such sum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be available for each and every expense of the select committee of the House of Representatives acting pursuant to House Resolution 460, adopted April 29, 1936, including the employment of personal services, the traveling and incidental expenses of such committee or any subcommittee or member or employee thereof, and the pay and travel of witnesses; all such expenses to be paid on vouchers authorized by the committee, signed by the chairman thereof, and approved by the Committee on Accounts: Provided further, That no person shall be employed under such appropriation at a rate of compensation in excess of $3,600 per annum: Provided further, That the committee is authorized to procure information and assistance from any Federal executive agency, including the services of personnel therein, and any such agency is hereby authorized to render such assistance, furnish such information, and detail such personnel as the committee may request: Provided further, That the official committee stenographers of the House of Representatives may be used at all hearings held in the District of Columbia if not otherwise officially engaged.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, after line 19, to insert:

JOINT COMMITTEE ON INAUGURAL CEREMONIES OF 1937

To enable the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives to pay the necessary expenses of the inaugural ceremonies of the President of the United States, January 20, 1937, in accordance with such program as may be adopted by the joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives, appointed under a concurrent resolution of the two Houses, including the pay for extra police, fiscal year 1937, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Office of Architect of the Capitol", on page 6, after line 17, to insert:

Senate Office Building: For rewiring electrical circuits and new panel boards, $5,000; for parts for air-conditioning plant electrical equipment, $500; for electric-light bulbs, $1,500; in all, $7,000, to remain available during the fiscal year 1937.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator in charge of the bill about the appropriation for the Senate Office Building? Did the officials in charge of the Senate Office Building ask for more money?

Mr. ADAMS. They did. They asked for a substantial amount in addition to that allowed. We took the matter up with the Architect of the Capitol, and this item is approved.

Mr. COPELAND. The matter I have in mind relates to the painting. As I understand, an air-conditioning system is to be installed in the Senate Office Building this summer. Of necessity, there will be marring of the walls, and I wondered whether or not any request had been made for an increase in the appropriation for painting in connection with that improvement.

Mr. ADAMS. As I recall, the request was for money to paint the new wing. Some of us who have offices in the new wing have felt that it was not necessary, because the air conditioning is already in that wing.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator will forgive me for speaking about the matter. As former chairman of the Committee on Rules it was my duty to look into the needs of the Senate Office Building, and so I wondered whether the committee had given the officials in charge of that building all they thought they needed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 6, beginning in line 18.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, was the amendment on page 2, line 14, passed over?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I may say that the senior Senator from Kentucky asked me to request that that amendment be passed over if I was present when it was reached. I was not present when it was acted on.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wanted to have the amendment appropriating the money for the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses passed over. There are some matters I desire to look into in connection with the amendment. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment was agreed to be reconsidered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the amendment be passed over for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be passed over for the present. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 7, after line 5, to insert:

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

For the printing and binding of a compilation containing the provisions of Federal laws held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States, to remain available during the fiscal year 1937, $1,200.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Colorado whether the amendment on page 7, relating to the compilation of laws, includes all laws from the beginning of our Government which have been held to be unconstitutional?

Mr. ADAMS. I may say that the compilation has already been made and is available. The amendment is merely for the purpose of having it printed so that it may be distributed.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, is sufficient money provided so that those acts which will be invalidated in the future may be included in the compilation?

Mr. ADAMS. I think the Senator knows the answer to the inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment on page 8, line 6.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Executive independent offices—Executive Office", at the top of page 8, to insert:

National Emergency Council: The President of the United States is hereby authorized to allocate to the National Emergency Council, out of funds appropriated to him by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 (49 Stat. 115), not to exceed $100,000 for the expenses of the committee designated by him, as an adjunct of the National Emergency Council, to make a study of the emergency and regular agencies of the executive branch of the Government for the purpose of making recommendations to secure the most efficient organization and management of that branch of the public service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, after line 18, to insert:

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ALLEY DWELLING AUTHORITY

The unexpended balance of the "Conversion of inhabited alleys fund" of $500,000 established pursuant to the provisions of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling act, approved June 12, 1934, is hereby continued available for the purposes of said act until June 30, 1937, together with all receipts derived from sales, leases, or other sources, prior to June 30, 1937, as authorized in section 3 (b) of said act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Emergency conservation work", on page 9, line 7, after the word "regulations", to strike out "and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended", so as to read:

For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the act entitled "An act for the relief of unemployment through the performance of useful public work, and for other purposes", approved March 31, 1933, as amended, including personal services, without regard to civil-service laws and regulations, supplies and equipment, purchase and exchange of lawbooks, books of reference, periodicals and newspapers, printing and binding, travel expenses, rents in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, purchase, exchange, maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled, passenger-carrying vehicles, also the purchase (including exchange) of one at not to exceed $1,500, and other necessary expenses, fiscal year 1937, $308,000,000, to be expended under the direction of the President and to remain available until March 31, 1937, of which sum $10,000,000 shall be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, this amendment was considered in the committee and tentatively adopted as it has just been approved by the Senate, and as a result of conferences which have been held since that time I desire to offer an amendment to be added at the end of the paragraph.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 10, line 9, to add the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to affect the status under the civil-service laws of any positions created under and by virtue of the act of April 27, 1935, or brought under the civil-service laws by Executive order heretofore or hereafter issued.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is not now in order, except by unanimous consent. It is an amendment to the House text. Does the Senator in charge of the bill object to the consideration of the amendment at the present time?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I do not object, but I should like to make an inquiry of the Senator from Wyoming as to the inclusion of the word "hereafter." It seems to me the amendment is rather broad when he attempts to have it apply to things which may happen in the future.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The thought was that the power of the President to make an Executive order should not be restricted by an appropriation.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, this is an individual amendment, is it not?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is in the nature of an amendment to the committee amendment, inasmuch as it is part of the general subject which was under discussion at the time the amendment just agreed to was adopted.

Mr. McNARY. I am not interposing objection to the amendment but only to the procedure. We have an agreement to consider first committee amendments. Does not this impinge on that agreement?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am frank to say that probably it does.

Mr. McNARY. If it does, I shall insist that the unanimous-consent agreement be adhered to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The holding of the Chair is that it is an amendment to the House text and is not an amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I withdraw the amendment for the time being and will offer it after the committee amendments shall have been acted on.

Mr. McNARY. I hope the Senator will follow that course. There is always confusion when we deviate from a general agreement.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I quite understand that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming withdraws his amendment, and the clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 16, after line 5, to insert:

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

Salaries and expenses: For administrative expenses and expenses of studies, investigations, publications, and reports necessary to carry out the provisions of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, approved May 20, 1936, including the salary of the Administrator and other personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; traveling expenses, including expenses of attendance of officers and employees at meetings when determined by the Administrator to be necessary in furthering the work of the Administration; contract stenographic reporting services; special counsel fees, consulting engineering fees, and expert witness fees; materials, supplies, equipment, and services; rentals, including buildings and parts of buildings and garages, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; purchase and exchange of books, law books, books of reference, directories, and periodicals; financial and credit reports; purchase, rental, exchange, operation, maintenance, and repair of typewriters, calculating machines, and other office appliances; purchase (not to exceed two), rental, exchange, operation, maintenance, and repair of motor-propelled, passenger-carrying vehicles to be used only for official purposes; printing and binding; and all other expenses necessary to administer said act, fiscal year 1937, $1,000,000: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5) shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service rendered for the Rural Electrification Administration when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed $100.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to say to the Senator in charge of the bill and to the other Senators present that I did not anticipate that we would take up the deficiency bill this morning. On my way to the Senate from the office building I was shown a memorandum from Mr. Cook, which I did not have time even to read, and I should like to consider it before the Senate passes on this amendment. I do not know that I shall desire to offer any amendment to the committee amendment, but I may wish to do so when I have time to consider the memorandum. I should like to have the amendment temporarily passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be passed over. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Smithsonian Institution", on page 17, after line 9, to insert:

Astrophysical Observatory: For the establishment and maintenance of solar observing stations, under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution, including assistance, subsistence, purchase of books, periodicals, and apparatus, making necessary observations in high altitudes, construction, rental, repairs, and alteration of buildings, preparation of manuscripts, drawings, and illustrations, traveling expenses, and other necessary expenses, fiscal year 1936, $200,000, to remain available until June 30, 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Social Security Board", on page 23, line 14, after the word "elsewhere" and the semicolon, to strike out "employment of persons or organizations by contract or otherwise in the District of Columbia and elsewhere for special accounting, statistical, and mechanical services determined necessary by the Board, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5) and the provisions of laws applicable to the employment and compensation of officers and employees of the United States", so as to read:

Wage records, Social Security Board: For all expenditures necessary to enable the Social Security Board to collect and record initial basic data concerning employers and employees, which, together with current individual wage records subsequently to be maintained, will thereafter constitute current total individual wage records and a basis for the identification of employees incidental to, and necessary for, benefit payments under title II of the Social Security Act, approved August 14, 1935, including furnishing identification cards and emblems to employers and employees; personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; travel expenses, including expenses of attendance at meetings concerned with the work of the Board; supplies; reproducing, photographing, and all other equipment, office appliances, and labor-saving devices; services; advertising, postage, telephone and telegraph; printing and binding; rentals, including garages, in the District of Columbia or elsewhere; and miscellaneous items, including those for public instruction and information deemed necessary by the Board, $12,400,000, to remain available until June 30, 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, after line 3, to insert:

TARIFF COMMISSION

Printing and binding: For an additional amount for all printing and binding of the Tariff Commission, fiscal year 1936, including the same objects specified under this head in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1936, $4,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Tennessee Valley Authority", on page 24, line 16, after the word "Dam", where it occurs the second time, to strike out "(hereafter to be known as 'McReynolds Dam')"; in line 19, after the name "Fowler Bend" and the comma, to strike out "and the continuation of preliminary investigations as to the appropriate location and type of a dam on the lower Tennessee River" and insert "a dam at or near Gilbertsville, Ky., and a dam at or near Watts Bar, Tenn."; and on page 25, line 9, after the figures "1937" and the comma, to strike out "$39,900,000" and insert "$41,100,000", so as to read:

For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "The Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933", approved May 18, 1933 (U. S. C., title 16, ch. 12a), as amended by the act approved August 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 1075–1081), including the continued construction of Norris Dam, Wheeler Dam, Pickwick Landing Dam, Guntersville Dam, and Chickamauga Dam and the beginning of construction on a dam on the Hiwassee River, a tributary of the Tennessee River, at or near Fowler Bend, a dam at or near Gilbertsville, Ky., and a dam at or near Watts Bar, Tenn., and the acquisition of necessary land, the clearing of such land, relocation of highways, and the construction or purchase of transmission lines and other facilities, and all other necessary works authorized by such acts, and for printing and binding, law books, books of reference, newspapers, periodicals, purchase, maintenance, and operation of passenger-carrying vehicles, rents in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, and all necessary salaries and expenses connected with the organization, operation, and investigations of the Tennessee Valley Authority, fiscal year 1937, $41,100,000.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to make a statement in connection with the amendment on page 24, line 16. The House designated one of the dams under the Tennessee Valley Authority the "McReynolds Dam." The Committee on Appropriations received a letter from Representative McREYNOLDS in which he asked us, as an accommodation to him, to strike out the provision naming one of the dams "McReynolds Dam", as he preferred not to have a dam named after him. So that the change is made at the instance of the man who was sought to be honored by the designation of the name.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 27, to insert:

UNITED STATES HARVARD UNIVERSITY TERCENTENARY COMMISSION

For the expenses of carrying out the provisions of Public Resolution No. 88, approved May 7, 1936, authorizing the recognition of the three-hundredth anniversary of the founding of Harvard College and the beginning of higher education in the United States and providing for the representation of the Government and people of the United States in the observance of the anniversary, including personal services in the District of Columbia or elsewhere without reference to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; stenographic reporting and other services by contract if deemed necessary without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5); traveling expenses; rent; printing and binding; official cards; entertainment; and such other expenses as may be authorized by the President, fiscal year 1937, $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, after line 17, to insert the heading:

TITLE II—RELIEF AND WORK RELIEF

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I suggest that perhaps it would be well to pass over title II, dealing with the relief matters, until we conclude the miscellaneous amendments, because if there is to be any discussion probably it will be in connection with this subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments in title II will be passed over, and the clerk will state the next amendment of the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 36, in line 9, to insert "Title III", so as to make the heading read:

TITLE III—DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Supreme Court, District of Columbia", on page 40, after line 12, to insert:

Pay of bailiffs, etc.: For an additional amount for pay of bailiffs, etc., Supreme Court, District of Columbia, including the same objects specified under this head in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1936, $2,240.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Water service", at the top of page 47, to insert:

The appropriation of $123,000 contained in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1936, approved June 14, 1935, for the purchase and installation of two 25,000,000-gallon-daily electrical motor-driven centrifugal pumping units at the Bryant Street pumping station, including all necessary appurtenances and alterations and removal of one 12,000,000-gallon and one 20,000,000-gallon obsolete steam pumping unit, is continued available in the fiscal year 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, line 6, after the numerals "475" and the comma, to insert "and Senate Document No. 211", and in line 8, before the word "together", to strike out "$9,011.35" and insert "$10,161.35", so as to read:

JUDGMENTS

Nos. 442 and 475 and Senate Document No. 211, Seventy-fourth Congress, $10,161.35, together with the further sum to pay the interest at not exceeding 4 percent per annum on such judgments, as provided by law, from the date the same became due until the date of payment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, after line 20, to insert:

Audited claims, District of Columbia: For the payment of the following claims, certified to be due by the accounting officers of the District of Columbia in Senate Document No. 211, under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874 (U. S. C., title 31, sec. 713, p. 1022), being for the service of the fiscal year 1933 and prior fiscal years: Refund taxes, District of Columbia, $747.99.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 50, after line 12, to insert:

WEATHER BUREAU

Salaries and expenses: For an additional amount for the same objects specified under this head in the Agriculture Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1937, for the reestablishment, maintenance, and operation of the Weather Bureau station at Lynchburg, Va., $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, after line 10, to insert:

BUREAU OF CHEMISTRY AND SOILS

Soil survey of the Hawaiian Islands: Not to exceed $15,000 of the funds appropriated by section 12 (a) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, is hereby made available, to remain available until June 30, 1937, to meet all necessary expenses of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Department of Agriculture, for the completion of a soil survey of the Hawaiian Islands, including personal services for map-drafting work in the District of Columbia and elsewhere.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Department of Commerce—Bureau of Air Commerce", on page 52, after line 17, to insert:

For an additional amount for the establishment and maintenance of aids to air navigation, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1937, $247,000.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I recall that a goodly appropriation for aids to air navigation is carried in the Agricultural appropriation bill which is now in conference. I have no objection to the item, but I do not know why it should appear in the bill under consideration when a similar item or one very much like it, touching the same subject matter, is contained in the Agricultural appropriation bill which is now in conference.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if I may answer the question asked by the Senator from Oregon, let me say that an effort was made to increase by a very considerable amount the appropriation for air navigational aids. As a result of the investigation into the Cutting disaster and safety in the air it has been made very apparent to our committee that not enough money is being spent for such navigational aids. Some additional money was appropriated in the Agricultural Department bill for weather reporting, but the item now under consideration has to do with radio beams and the other aids to navigation. The reason the sum is fixed at $247,000 is because there is an unappropriated balance of that amount already authorized by the Bureau of the Budget, and there was apparently no disposition on the part of the Bureau of the Budget to make further recommendations at this time. Therefore the $247,000 was added to the pending bill in order that at least that much might be available for the protection of those who navigate the air.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have simply one observation to make. I observe that the two preceding amendments, which were agreed to, deal with matters also touched upon in the Department of Agriculture bill. Why should those items be carried in two appropriation bills—the one now being considered and in the other which is in conference?

Mr. COPELAND. One of the other items had to do with weather reporting. That was contained in the Department of Agriculture bill. The item under consideration in the bill we are now discussing has to do with the Bureau of Air Commerce in connection with ground aids to navigation. I hope I have made it clear.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator has made it clear.

Mr. COPELAND. I urged both the appropriation referred to by the Senator from Oregon, contained in the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill, and the one contained in the bill under consideration. As I previously said, the item contained in the Department of Agriculture bill had to do with weather reporting and the Weather Bureau.

Mr. McNARY. I am speaking now more of the practice than I am of the result which may be accomplished. I observe on page 51 an item for the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils and on page 50 an item for the Weather Bureau. All the items referred to are associated with the activities of the Department of Agriculture and carried in the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill. The able Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], now on the floor, is chairman of the conference dealing with that bill. When the bill making appropriation for the Department of Agriculture contains items similar to those in the present bill, and when the first bill is still in conference, it seems strange to me that similar items should be contained in the bill now under consideration dealing with the same subject matter.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I made inquiry concerning that matter, and I have to say in answer to the inquiry of the Senator from Oregon that the bill now under discussion reached the Congress after the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill had been considered by both the Senate and the House. The matters referred to by the Senator from Oregon were not touched upon in the hearings on the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill. They were contained in the supplemental estimates, and therefore could not be submitted in the original appropriation bill. In that view I think they are proper items to be contained in the bill now under consideration.

Mr. McNARY. I think that observation covers the amendment referred to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 52, after line 17.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 53, after line 2, to insert:

BUREAU OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC COMMERCE

District and cooperative office service: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1937, $15,000.

Domestic commerce and raw materials investigations: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1937, $15,000.

Lists of foreign buyers: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1937, $2,860.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Lighthouses", on page 53, after line 20, to insert:

Repairs, etc., due to flood damages: For rebuilding, repairing, and reestablishing such aids to navigation and structures connected therewith as were damaged or destroyed by flood conditions in March 1936 on the Atlantic coast and tributary rivers, and in the Mississippi River Basin, $91,500, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Interior Department—Office of the Secretary", at the top of page 56, to insert:

War Minerals Relief Commission: For payment of awards made by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the act of Congress approved May 18, 1936 (Public, No. 602, 74th Cong.), amending section 5 of the War Minerals Relief Act of March 2, 1919, as amended, March 13, 1929, fiscal year 1936, to remain available during the fiscal year 1937, $900,000: Provided, That all awards made by the Secretary of the Interior for payment under this appropriation shall be certified to the General Accounting Office for settlement through that office.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in connection with the amendment appearing at the top of page 56 dealing with the War Minerals Relief Commission, in order to correct an error I ask that the word "March" in line 6 be stricken out and that the word "February" be substituted in lieu thereof.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment to the committee amendment is agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I observe that the committee amendment carries an appropriation of nearly $1,000,000. What is the function of the War Minerals Relief Commission? What is the money appropriated for?

Mr. ADAMS. It is to carry out the provisions of an act passed during the present session, which is now a law, which carries out the provisions of the law previously enacted, which really requires the appropriation of a million and a quarter dollars. That amount was reduced to $900,000. It is a matter in which the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is very much interested, and it was justified by reason of making payments of awards which have been made to certain claimants under the War Minerals Act. Perhaps that is not a very clear explanation, and I shall ask the junior Senator from Georgia to make a further explanation.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I hesitate to undertake the explanation of this item because various bills for the purpose of compensating those who engaged in the production of minerals during the war have been passed from time to time, and the matter has become somewhat complicated. As I understand, the act undertakes to compensate those who at the solicitation of the Government entered upon the production of various minerals during the war. An act was passed and approved providing for the payment of the principal of the amount, but due to the fact that some time elapsed before the payment of the principal could be made, those who responded to the call of the Government during the war suffered considerable loss of interest on the amount they had borrowed at the instigation and solicitation of the Government to start producing various minerals. The amount provided in the act which was approved only the other day, May 18, this current month, as I understand, will wipe out the entire question of claims under the War Minerals Relief Commission for all time in the future. It will provide a final liquidation of all claims against the Government growing out of the War Minerals Relief Act. The Senator from Maryland knows a great deal more about the matter than I do and will perhaps make an explanation thereof.

Mr. TYDINGS. As the Senator in charge of the bill already knows, this is about the sixth appropriation requested under the War Minerals Relief Commission. I do not doubt that many of the claims are meritorious, but it seems to me to be rather peculiar that there should be carried provisions for relief of the war minerals claimants in the last six deficiency bills. I should like to understand why the matter cannot be terminated in one bill. I should like to know why it is deemed necessary to provide an appropriation of a million dollars to four or five million dollars for war minerals relief in the various appropriation bills. Such items have been contained in the last six bills. I wonder whether similar items will not be found in other bills which shall come up for consideration.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the objection raised by the Senator from Maryland might be well taken. Frankly I do not know all the details of the various claims. I know, however, that some of the claimants have presented their cases to me, and if their representations are correct their claims are meritorious. I may say to the Senator from Maryland, however, that I understand the pending bill finally liquidates the matter, and I do not think any claims for this purpose will appear hereafter.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may I make the request that the amendment at the top of page 56 be passed over until the return of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE]?

Mr. RUSSELL. I think it would be wise, Mr. President, to take that course. My colleague fully understands the matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment at the top of page 56 dealing with the War Minerals Relief Commission will be passed over. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "General Land Office", on page 57, after line 6, to insert:

Payments to States of 5 percent of proceeds from sales of public lands: For an additional amount for payment to the several States of 5 percent of the net proceeds of sales of public lands lying within their limits, for the purpose of education, or of making public roads and improvements, fiscal year 1936, $1,291.39: Provided, That expenditures hereunder shall not exceed the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury in accordance with section 4 of the Permanent Appropriation Repeal Act, 1934.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "National Park Service", on page 61, after line 22, to insert:

Homestead National Monument of America, Nebr.: For the acquisition of land, and development and improvement of the Homestead National Monument of America, in Nebraska, in accordance with the act of Congress approved March 19, 1936 (Public, No. 480, 74th Cong.), fiscal year 1936, $24,000, to remain available until June 30, 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, for the benefit of the conferees after this bill shall go to conference I desire to make a brief explanation of the amendment which has just been agreed to. I think when it is understood there will be no question whatever in regard to it.

By the act of March 19, 1936, Congress provided for the purchase as a national homestead monument of the first homestead claim that was ever taken up under the Homestead Act of 1862, which went into effect on the 1st day of January 1863. I supposed that an appropriation would be inserted in the deficiency bill, as a matter of course, but the House committee rejected it, and the matter was not further considered on the floor of that body. I was greatly surprised at the action of the House committee, and I read a copy of the hearings, from which it clearly appears that the members of the House committee did not understand just what the act provided.

The measure to which I have referred, having been passed by Congress, I thought, as a matter of course, that the Appropriations Committee would carry it out by recommending the proper appropriation for the purpose. So I appeared before the Senate Committee on Appropriations, submitted this amendment, and asked that it be incorporated in the bill, which was done, and the Senate has agreed to it.

Mr. President, Abraham Lincoln signed the first homestead act. It was introduced by then Representative Grow, of Pennsylvania, one of the great Members of the House of Representatives, as all Senators know. The act provided by its terms that it should go into effect on the 1st day of January 1863. Under that law a vast empire has been redeemed from a desert and a great portion of it has been made the most fertile region of our country.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I will yield to the Senator from Tennessee in just a moment.

Millions of acres of land, where at one time buffaloes roamed and the inhabitants were chiefly Indians, have been converted into the great American bread basket. Included in that area are a large portion of the States of the great Mississippi Valley and other States outside that valley, some of them, States in the South. Under the beneficent homestead law, that imperial domain has been as highly developed as is any portion of our country. The homestead law is still on the statute books, but is practically inoperative because there are no more homesteads available, and the idea is, since it belongs practically to history, that there ought to be preserved as a national monument for future generations some place, somewhere that would commemorate the gradual transition of a vast region from the conditions of frontier life to a high state of civilization.

The House committee thought it was merely a Nebraska project. It is located in Nebraska because it happens that the first homestead entry made under the law was in the State of Nebraska, and so the act which was passed last March specifically described this tract of land and provided that it should become a national monument, so as to commemorate throughout all time the trials and tribulations of frontier life and exemplify for the benefit, enlightenment, and education of future generations the marvelous changes and progress which have followed the enactment of the homestead law.

Now I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to interrupt the Senator from Nebraska merely to make an observation. As the Senator will recall from history, and as I recall from history, former President Andrew Johnson, who served both as Representative and as Senator before he became President, made the homestead law his political life work while he was a Member of the two Houses and urged in season and out of season its passage. I merely wanted to make that reference to a former distinguished President from the State of Tennessee.

He offered his first homestead bill in March 1846, when a Member of the House.

In 1853, when he was elected Governor of Tennessee, "he brought his homestead hobby from Washington to Nashville." He urged the Tennessee Legislature "to instruct our Senators in Congress and to request our Representatives to use all reasonable exertion to procure the passage of a bill granting to every head of a family who is a citizen of the United States a homestead of a hundred and sixty acres of land, upon condition of settlement and cultivation for a number of years." While in the Senate in 1858, Johnson brought up his favorite bill and it was passed by a vote of 44 to 8. The House also passed it, but President Buchanan vetoed it. Though the act was not finally passed and approved until 1863, the homestead law was the result of Mr. Johnson's farsighted and humanitarian efforts. But for him it doubtless never would have been passed. It was a wonderful piece of legislation.

I took great pleasure in voting for the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska in the committee and shall be glad to support it here. I only wish to add this bit of history to the proposal.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator from Tennessee for his observation. All he has stated is, of course, historically true.

Mr. President, the implements of agriculture have been gradually changing and developing since the homestead law was enacted, and it is the theory of those who believed in and advocated the project of making the first homestead ever taken under that law a national monument that there should be there preserved all the things that go to show the development and improvement of agriculture and at the same time the advance of the section in which this homestead is located from a buffalo country, an Indian country, to its present high state of civilization.

In the hearings that I read it was apparent from some of the questions the members of the committee asked that they were of the opinion that this was still an unsettled region. In Gage County, Nebr., is found one of the most fertile areas under the sun. Some members of the committee at least were of the opinion that it was still a frontier. It is within 5 miles of Beatrice, county seat of Gage County, which has a population of between ten and fifteen thousand, and is as enterprising a city as exists anywhere in the United States. It is 40 or 50 miles from Lincoln, which is located in the adjoining county of Lancaster, and is the capital of the State.

Mr. President, this is a national project, not a State project. The site only happens to be in the State of Nebraska, because there is where the first homestead that was taken under the law was located.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. GLASS. Does the Senator understand that anyone is objecting to this appropriation?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes, though not in the Senate; but, as I have said, I want the RECORD to show the explanation of this matter in order that the conferees, when they go into conference on this bill, may have the record before them.

Mr. GLASS. Well, the Senators who probably will be members of the conference committee had the benefit of the Senator's statement to them, and I think they understand this proposition.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not think all those who will be conferees were present, although, perhaps, they were. However, I want the RECORD to show the facts, in order that the conferees on the part of the House and any probable conferee on the part of the Senate who was not present and did not hear the explanation, may understand what they are.

The objection was raised that probably the next thing we would have to do would be to build a road into this particular section of country. The road that formerly, in the days of the frontier, in the pioneer life of that section, went from the Missouri River west passed right through this tract of land. It is a well-graded gravel road today. It is 5 miles from Beatrice, where there is a paved road that will take one to the capitol at Lincoln, and, in fact, connects with paved roads which reach every part of the United States.

A question was asked about the cost of this project. My information is that the heirs of Daniel Freeman, who still own this land, have agreed to take $150 an acre for it. I have been there; I have seen the land. I lived for some time in the city of Beatrice, and practiced law there whenever I got anything to do. I have been over every foot of this land. It was selected by Daniel Freeman. There is no better land anywhere under the sun than this 160 acres. I think that $150 an acre for this land would be a fair price. Land in the vicinity can be bought for $125 an acre, but it does not have the traditions and other associations connected with it that are attached to this particular homestead. There is no desire to profit privately on the part of anyone in the purchase of this homestead. Occupying a central location in an area that has been settled and developed and civilized by the operations of the homestead law, it will eventually become a rendezvous for those who are interested from historical and other standpoints.

Daniel Freeman was a soldier in the Civil War; he was in that section in Nebraska for some time, serving his country under the direction of his superior officers.

I think he was a lieutenant or, at any rate, an officer of a lower grade. He was making some investigations and was ordered back to his regiment. He did not have time to wait until the land office opened the 1st day of January 1863 to make a filing if he was to obey the orders of his commander and return to his post.

There were a great many other prospective settlers who came to Brownville, where the land office was located, ready to file on homesteads the next day, the 1st of January. There was a dance that evening, attended by many of the prospective homesteaders who were going to file the next day. The officer who was going to open the land office the next morning was at that dance. Daniel Freeman knew if he stayed to file his homestead and waited until office hours began he would be unable to get back to his command. So he hunted up the official, told him his dilemma, and asked, "Will you not open the land office, so that I may file on this land right after 12 o'clock midnight?" The land-office official finally agreed; that is what happened; and before 1 o'clock in the morning Daniel Freeman had made his filing and was on his way to St. Louis. He served the remainder of his time in the Army and then went back to the homestead and acquired title under patent.

Mr. President, I understand that when Representative Grow retired from public office and went back to Pennsylvania there was a celebration. Daniel Freeman was there and made a short address, and I want to read from what was said:

When Congressman Grow retired in 1903 and returned to his home he was surprised to find waiting at the station Freeman, the first homesteader. At the community celebration a little later Freeman told his story.

Now I quote from what Freeman said:

I was stationed at Brownville, Nebr., as a young soldier, to do some secret-service work. The town was the seat of a Government land office, and the place was filled with prospective settlers, who were waiting for the 1st of January, when the Grow homestead law was to become operative. I had in several details—

I presume he means military details of service—

I had in several details seen a good deal of Nebraska. I liked the soil of Gage County, so I staked my claim near Beatrice and waited anxiously for the time when I could make my filing at the Government office.

The fates seemed against me. I was ordered to St. Louis, and I had to leave early January 1, the day the homestead law went into effect. On the night of December 31 the prospective settlers had a dance. I sought out the assistant register of the land office, who was in the ballroom, and urged him to let me file on my claim at midnight so I could leave for St. Louis early next morning. He agreed to do this, and we went to the land office, where the preliminary papers were made out. Before 1 o'clock homestead entry no. 1 was signed, and I went on my way to St. Louis a happy lad.

At the expiration of my service in 1865 I returned to Nebraska, built a log cabin, married the young woman who owned the adjoining claim, and we lived happily on this property for 50 years.

That is the story of homestead no. 1. Little Creek runs through one part of this land. It was from the timber which grew on this land that the first log house was built in which Daniel Freeman and his bride made their home and raised a family. They became leading citizens in the development and growth of Gage County, Nebr.

It is that land which it is proposed shall be bought and maintained by the Government in commemoration of the homesteaders of America. This is the appropriation intended for the purchase of that land. We are erecting monuments, setting aside parks, and building roads to commemorate various events in our history. It is, I think, eminently fit and proper that the first homestead ever entered under the homestead law should be purchased and set aside and become a monument whereon may be recorded in a manner which can be evident to tourists the story of the different trials and tribulations which were suffered in order to make out of a desert, once roamed by the buffalo and inhabited by the Indians, one of the most fertile tracts in our entire country.

Mr. President, I thought this much of an explanation should be made to insure that the item will be retained in the bill when it is finally enacted into law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next committee amendment will be stated.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 62, after line 5, to insert:

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, earlier in the day I asked that the amendment on page 2, line 13, be passed over in order that I might look into it. I have examined the amendment and now have no objection to its adoption.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may I ask if representatives of these various groups came before the committee and made a showing with reference to the payment of their expenses? In other words, are the items which are now being considered similar to those which have appeared in this bill each year?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, these items seem to be cumulative. They came to the committee on the recommendation of the Budget Bureau, and, of course, with the customary letter from the President. There was no testimony before the committee and no statement other than that of the Director of the Budget, who made the statement that the items are based on acts passed by Congress, so apparently it was not optional with us whether or not they should be included.

Mr. McNARY. They are all supported by Budget estimates?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 91, after line 2, to insert:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 91, after line 17, to insert:

International Hydrographic Bureau: For the contribution of the United States to the International Hydrographic Bureau, together with such additional sums, due to increases in rates of exchange, as may be necessary to pay in foreign currencies the contribution required by the statutes of the Bureau, fiscal year 1936, $308.80.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Procurement Division—Public Buildings Branch", on page 101, line 9, after the word "thereto", to insert "including post office and courthouse at Shawnee, Okla.", so as to read:

Public buildings outside the District of Columbia: For emergency construction of public-building projects outside of the District of Columbia (including the acquisition, where necessary, by purchase, condemnation, exchange, or otherwise of sites and additional land for such buildings; the demolition of old buildings where necessary and construction, remodeling, or extension of buildings; rental of temporary quarters during construction, including moving expenses; purchase of necessary equipment for buildings and such additional administrative expenses and salaries as may be required solely for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this paragraph, including reimbursement to the appropriation "Emergency construction of public buildings, act August 12, 1935", for expenditures made for advance planning of public buildings), $60,000,000; such projects, including the sites therefor, to be selected by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General, acting jointly, from the public-building projects specified in statement no. 1 contained in House Report No. 1879, Seventy-third Congress, second session, as revised February 29, 1936, and statement no. 2 attached thereto, including post office and courthouse at Shawnee, Okla., and the projects so selected shall be carried out within the respective estimates of proposed limits of cost specified in such statement no. 1 and those hereafter fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General for projects selected from statement no. 2 and otherwise, except that the unobligated balance of the $2,500,000 fund established by the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, approved June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1061), is hereby increased in an amount not to exceed $500,000 from the funds heretofore appropriated for emergency construction of public buildings, and such fund shall be available for the augmentation of limits of cost of projects heretofore or hereafter selected under the provisions of the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, approved June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1061) and under the provisions of the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, approved August 12, 1935 (49 Stat. 571), in an amount not exceeding 15 percent for any project; and shall be available also for the augmentation of limits of cost of projects selected under the provisions of this act in an amount not exceeding 10 percent of any project.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 102, line 21, after the word "paragraph", to strike out the comma and "and he is hereby authorized, when deemed by him desirable and advantageous, to employ, by contract or otherwise, temporary professional, technical, or nontechnical employees, firms, or corporations, to such extent as may be required to carry out the purposes of this paragraph, without reference to civil-service laws, rules, regulations, or to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, or to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5)", so as to make the further proviso read:

Provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to direct the preparation of all sketches, estimates, plans, and specifications (including supervision and inspection thereof), and to enter into all contracts necessary for carrying out the purposes of this paragraph.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have not had an opportunity to read and to gather from the reading the purport of the language stricken out. I should like to have some explanation of it. What reason does the able chairman of the subcommittee assign for the removal of this language?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will note line 3, of page 103, he will observe a reference to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes. That is the section which requires all contracts for services and for materials to be advertised before they are let. The language which was stricken out apparently would have had the effect of permitting all contracts for services of the kinds mentioned to be let without reference to that statute; and the committee felt that the statute should not be waived.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I think I should add that as the language was drafted it apparently would have allowed public-building contracts to be let without competitive bids.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 104, after line 9, to insert:

Memorial to persons killed in the wreck of Navy dirigible Shenandoah: For the erection near Ava, Ohio, on the spot where the Navy dirigible Shenandoah fell, of a suitable tablet or marker to commemorate the heroic services rendered by Commander Zachary Landsdowne and other members of the crew who died when the Shenandoah was destroyed, in accordance with the provisions of the act approved May 22, 1936 (Public, No. 614, 74th Cong.), fiscal year 1936, to remain available until June 30, 1937, $2,500: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be available for expenditure until title to the land upon which the tablet or marker is to be erected is acquired by the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That completes the committee amendments, with the exception of those passed over.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I requested that the amendment on page 56, with reference to the War Minerals Relief Commission, be passed over until the return to the Chamber of the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE]. That request was granted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia has not as yet returned. There is an amendment on page 16, relative to the Rural Electrification Administration, which was passed over at the request of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. Title II also has been passed over.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I think we had better have a quorum present.

Mr. McNARY. Yes; in view of that situation, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Clark	Keyes	Pope
Ashurst	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Austin	Coolidge	La Follette	Reynolds

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The clerk will state the first amendment passed over.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It is my understanding that the adoption of amendments to title II will not subsequently preclude the presentation of a complete substitute for title II, as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I call attention to the fact that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] is now present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment on page 56 was passed over during the absence of the Senator from Georgia. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the top of page 56 it is proposed to insert a new paragraph, as follows:

War Minerals Relief Commission: For payment of awards made by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the act of Congress approved May 18, 1936 (Public, No. 602, 74th Cong.) amending section 5 of the War Minerals Relief Act of March 2, 1919, as amended, March 13, 1929, fiscal year 1936, to remain available during the fiscal year 1937, $900,000: Provided, That all awards made by the Secretary of the Interior for payment under this appropriation shall be certified to the General Accounting Office for settlement through that office.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, it will be recalled that an appropriation of a very large sum of money—I believe about $50,000,000—was authorized in an act passed during the war period, the purpose of the act being to stimulate the production of certain necessary minerals for war purposes. After the end of the war the War Minerals Relief Act, approved March 2, 1919, provided for the adjustment of certain claims by those who had been induced to enter the field of production for the purpose of increasing the supply of certain necessary war materials. The act provided that losses sustained should be paid to the claimants, and the War Minerals Relief Commission, of course, followed as the agency through which the adjustments were to be made.

Controversies early arose, and for several Congresses the matter in one form or another has been before the Congress. Cases have been brought in the District of Columbia courts, and those cases have gone to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court itself more than once has passed upon one question in controversy. As a result of the decision of the Supreme Court, it finally was held that interest accrued up to the date of the passage of the act of March 13, 1929, was a proper item to be included in an award where all the other elements were present, but that no interest after the date of the act could be added. Courts in the District of Columbia took a view contrary to that, but the Supreme Court finally made that ruling. Several acts have been passed for the purpose of adjusting these claims where they had gone through the courts, and where a court itself had made an adjudication, or where the claims were filed by the date specified in the original War Minerals Act.

Finally a bill was passed at this session by both houses of the Congress, appropriating $1,250,000 in final settlement of all these war mineral claims. The $1,250,000 is not carried in the pending bill because it is still required that the several claimants shall have an adjudication of the amounts due them, and the only claimants who are now prepared to claim their pro-rata part of the appropriation have claims amounting to some $900,000, and it will be after the next Congress meets before the other claimants can have an adjudication of their claims. That will be the end of it.

I may say that this is one appropriation out of an original appropriation of $50,000,000, $40,000,000 of which was returned to the Treasury, and this is the end of the war minerals cases. Nine hundred thousand dollars is ample to cover all of the claims which are adjudicated, and I may say that there are several hundred of them. The claimants reside in various States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Most of the claimants are in the western mining areas of the country.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator whether the $900,000 carried in the bill covers all adjudicated claims?

Mr. GEORGE. It covers all adjudicated claims, or all the claims which probably could be adjudicated prior to the meeting of the next Congress. At that time it will be necessary to appropriate the balance provided in the bill, to wit, the difference between $900,000 and $1,250,000. It is not necessary that the appropriation be made in the pending bill, and therefore this estimate is sent to us. I make this statement by way of explanation of this particular item.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment at the top of page 56.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee passed over.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 16, after line 5, to insert the following:

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

Salaries and expenses: For administrative expenses and expenses of studies, investigations, publications, and reports necessary to carry out the provisions of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, approved May 20, 1936, including the salary of the Administrator and other personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; traveling expenses, including expenses of attendance of officers and employees at meetings when determined by the Administrator to be necessary in furthering the work of the Administration; contract stenographic reporting services; special counsel fees, consulting engineering fees, and expert witness fees; materials, supplies, equipment, and services; rentals, including buildings and parts of buildings and garages, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; purchase and exchange of books, law books, books of reference, directories, and periodicals; financial and credit reports; purchase, rental, exchange, operation, maintenance, and repair of typewriters, calculating machines, and other office appliances; purchase (not to exceed two), rental, exchange, operation, maintenance, and repair of motor-propelled, passenger-carrying vehicles to be used only for official purposes; printing and binding; and all other expenses necessary to administer said act, fiscal year 1937, $1,000,000: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5) shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service rendered for the Rural Electrification Administration when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed $100.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have not had opportunity to communicate with anyone connected with the Rural Electrification Administration, but I have conferred with several members of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, and I should like to have the Senator in charge of the bill tell me whether the information I have received is correct.

I understand that the Budget estimate was about $400,000 or $450,000 greater than the amount carried in the bill for this item; that the committee cut the estimate because this is a new activity, which has recently been provided, and no one can tell with certainty just what the administrative expenses will be; that the committee was of the opinion that, since it was a new activity and no one could tell definitely just what the amount should be, since Congress would meet again in January, there would be sufficient time so that we could have a pretty good idea as to just how much money for administrative purposes may be necessary.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Senator has made a correct statement of the views of the committee.

Mr. NORRIS. With that understanding I have no further objection, because I think that if more money should be needed, as demonstrated by experience, we could readily get it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, if that concludes the committee amendments, I have an amendment which I send to the desk, and which I should like to offer at this time.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, this does not conclude the committee amendments. We passed over the amendments in title II.

Mr. WHEELER. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment of the committee passed over.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 27, line 18, to insert the following:

Title II—Relief and work relief.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I thought another amendment of the committee had been passed over.

Mr. FLETCHER. The whole title was passed over.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate that, but there were three committee amendments passed over, and two of them have been considered within the last few minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk informs the Chair that all the amendments passed over have been agreed to except those in title II.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I understand inquiry is now being made by the Senator from Oregon as to what the parliamentary status is with respect to a substitute for the committee amendment.

Mr. McNARY. No, Mr. President; I desire to know whether the committee amendments, save those in title II, had been considered by the Senate. I am advised that they have been.

Mr. ADAMS. There are a number of miscellaneous committee amendments, in different sections other than title II, which have not been presented; but I had rather assumed that in the regular order perhaps we would now take up title II.

Mr. McNARY. Of course, under the unanimous-consent agreement we could consider individual amendments as to parts of the bill, excepting title II, and consider the amendments in that part of the bill separately from the other divisions of the bill.

Mr. ADAMS. There is no objection, if the Senator would prefer that we take up the other items. There are some miscellaneous committee amendments to be offered. We will go ahead with them, if the Senator prefers.

Mr. McNARY. I think it would be quite orderly and practicable to clean up the individual amendments to the text, excepting as to title II, and let that stand by itself.

Mr. ADAMS. I am entirely willing to follow the suggestion of the Senator.

I have an amendment to offer on page 4, line 3, and I ask that the vote by which the committee amendment at that point was agreed to be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to is reconsidered.

Mr. ADAMS. To the committee amendment I now offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment to the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 4, line 3, it is proposed to strike out "three" and insert in lieu thereof "four", so as to read:

The four foregoing sums to be disbursed by the Clerk of the House.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I offer another amendment, at the request of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the proposed amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert at the proper place the following:

For payment of Samuel Wilder King, contestee, for expenses incurred in the contested-election case of McCandless against King, as audited and recommended by the Committee on Elections Numbered Two, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I have another amendment I am directed by the committee to present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 47, after line 8, to insert the following:

For the payment of claims approved by the Commissioners under and in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to settle claims and suits against the District of Columbia", approved February 11, 1929 (45 Stat. 1160), as amended by the act approved June 5, 1930 (46 Stat. 500), and reported in Senate Document No. 252, $1,708.77.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I present an amendment to be inserted on page 51 after line 4.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, on page 51, after line 4, the following:

For the purchase of land and erection of laboratory, greenhouse, and service buildings and purchase of equipment, to be used in connection with the sugarcane investigations of the Department of Agriculture, including the employment of personal services in the District of Columbia for the preparation of the plans, $100,000, to remain available during the fiscal year 1937.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I submit another amendment at the direction of the committee. It would operate to repeal certain provisions making appropriations which are no longer needed by reason of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Guffey Coal Act case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 74, after line 5, it is proposed to insert the following:

The appropriations for "Salaries and expenses" and "Printing and binding" for the Bituminous Coal Labor Board for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, contained in the "Department of Labor Appropriation Act, 1937", are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I submit another amendment at the request of the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 103, after line 9, it is proposed to insert:

United States Public Health Service buildings: For erecting, furnishing, and equipping suitable buildings for the use of the National Institute of Health and the United States Public Health Service, in or near the District of Columbia, authorized by the act of May 26, 1930, $1,363,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, that completes the committee amendments except as to title II. There are a number of rectifying amendments to title II.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, before taking up title II I wonder whether I may be permitted to offer an amendment concerning which I spoke to the Senator from Colorado. I do not think there will be any objection to it. The amendment provides for the acquisition by the Bureau of Fisheries of a site for a fish hatchery at Jessup's Mill, near Glacier National Park, in the State of Montana, $10,000, which shall be immediately available. The amendment has been approved by the Department and is an item which was passed by the Senate in connection with another bill, but was stricken out in conference.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, if the Senate is now going to consider individual amendments, some of us have amendments we should like to offer. I have no objection to the amendment of the Senator from Montana, but it was understood that we were to complete the committee amendments before we should take up individual amendments.

Mr. WHEELER. I was wondering whether title II was to be considered before individual amendments were taken up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was agreed by unanimous consent that committee amendments were to be first considered.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, it was unanimously agreed that committee amendments should first be considered, and that was done, except as to title II. A few moments ago it was understood the title II would be passed over, inasmuch as we had considered all other committee amendments, and that the Senate would proceed to consideration of individual amendments.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I did not so understand the situation, I will say to the Senator. If I misunderstood the Senator from Oregon I regret it, but I thought the Senator from Oregon was dealing with miscellaneous committee amendments; that they were to be disposed of and that then we were to take up title II. I did not mean that we should take up miscellaneous individual amendments before we took up title II. I should not be willing to have that done.

Mr. McNARY. Very well. I was trying to assist the Senator in amending his bill. Probably he does not need any assistance.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am always glad to receive assistance.

Mr. McNARY. I have no choice in the matter at all, except that I thought consideration of title II might well be deferred for a short time, and we could then dispose generally of all amendments to the text of the bill. However, if the Senator from Colorado desires the Senate, as I understand, now to consider miscellaneous committee amendments——

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, they have all been considered. There are no miscellaneous committee amendments pending other than as to title II. We have now reached the point of consideration of title II.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator does not desire to proceed with individual amendments?

Mr. ADAMS. No, Mr. President; I should prefer to go ahead and complete committee amendments, which include title II.

Mr. GLASS. If that is done, then it will put some of us, who should like to present individual amendments, to some inconvenience.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say, Mr. President, that if the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations desires a different order, I acquiesce instantly.

Mr. GLASS. No, Mr. President; I do not desire a different order. It is rather inconvenient for us to debate title II when we desire to present amendments.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Clark	Keyes	Pope
Ashurst	Connally	King	Radcliffe
Austin	Coolidge	La Follette	Reynolds
Bachman	Copeland	Lewis	Robinson
Bailey	Couzens	Loftin	Russell

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, we have now reached the consideration of title II. There have been some changes made in the provisions as passed by the House. I, as well as other Senators, should like to have the able Senator from Colorado advise us what changes have been made, the reasons therefor, and the general purposes of the changes.

Mr. ADAMS. I shall be glad to try to do so. I do not mean to say that I can supply all the information asked for, but I shall be very glad to make a statement of my understanding of the changes.

We have modified the bill as it came from the House in one particular which appears in the first paragraph. The House bill placed the disposition of the appropriated funds in the hands of the W. P. A.; that is the organization headed by Mr. Hopkins. The Senate Committee on Appropriations believed that the form of the law which is now in effect was preferable, and consequently have amended the bill so as to place the authority for the distribution and allocation of the relief funds in the hands of the President rather than in the Works Progress Administration. The reasons for that, I think, are sufficiently obvious to require no further explanation. The President, being the head of the executive department, and having the authority for distribution and allocation of relief funds under the present law, it seemed wise to the Committee on Appropriations to continue that policy.

The committee has made one or two suggestions in reference to the various classifications to which relief money may be devoted. They are rather for clarification than otherwise.

The committee has changed textually the provisions with reference to the employment of aliens, not changing the substantial character or purposes of the House provisions but rather seeking to clarify them. As the bill is now framed it is provided that the President shall cause to be made a survey of unemployable persons who are applicants for work under the Relief Administration, and that aliens who are illegally within the United States, and other aliens who have not filed declarations of intentions to become citizens, shall be excluded from employment under the Relief Administration.

The Appropriations Committee of the Senate provided that no Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted with funds provided in this appropriation unless and until an amount sufficient for its completion has been allocated and irrevocably set aside for its completion. It was the intention of the committee that the relief appropriation should not be used for the inauguration of projects unless adequate funds were set aside from this appropriation to complete them.

An amendment was adopted by the committee, at the instance of the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], making provision that not more than one-half of 1 percent of the total number of persons employed within a State shall be nonresidents of the State and that not more than 1 percent of the total amount allocated out of the appropriation within a State shall be paid to those who are not citizens.

A provision has been inserted to the effect that the fact that a person is entitled to or has received either an adjusted-service bond or a Treasury check in payment of adjusted-compensation certificate shall not be considered in determining his need of employment. In other words, the ex-service man who has a bond or a check shall not be denied relief, if he be in need, because of his possession of money derived from his adjusted compensation.

The Government, having argued with the ex-service men that they should, if possible, retain their bonds, it seemed to the committee that it should not at this time say to them, "You are not entitled to help unless you use up the bonds or the funds which are given you as compensation for war service."

The next important provision is in reference to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works. It provides for what may be called an earmarking of certain funds for public works under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior. At the present time the Administrator, who is now the Secretary of the Interior, has some $400,000,000 in securities. These securities may not be used for the purpose of making grants. They may be sold, but the proceeds can then only be used to make loans.

The Administrator of Public Works has $50,000,000 in cash available for grants. The committee felt that the public-works program of the Public Works Administrator should be carried on under reasonable limitations. The present law provides that the R. F. C. may purchase securities owned by the Public Works Administration, but limits the purchase by the R. F. C. by a provision that the R. F. C. may not hold in its portfolio at any one time to exceed $250,000,000. That is not the limit of their capacity to purchase but the limit of their holdings at one time.

So the committee have proposed an amendment to the effect that moneys received from the R. F. C. upon the purchase of securities by that organization shall be released from the requirement that they can only be used for loans; so that to the extent of $250,000,000 the proceeds received from the sale of securities by the R. F. C. are available for loans and grants. In substance this amendment makes possible a continuation of the Public Works Administraion program on a very substantial basis.

We have limited in the amendment the grants that may be made to 30 percent of the cost of the project where its cost is over $100,000, and to 45 percent where the project costs less than $100,000; in other words, feeling that by placing the 30-percent limit we will make the money go farther. Under the present program 45 percent in grants may be given to all projects. We are now proposing to restrict the grants to 30 percent. We are further putting a restriction that the only projects that may be authorized and constructed which receive grants must be those which can be substantially completed within 1 year. It seems to us that that will result in the construction of more projects. It will eliminate what some of us thought was the danger of the commencement of large projects which could not be completed. So by this provision we have given $250,000,000 in cash, made it available from their own funds, but it can be augmented by loans for construction, so that construction may be undertaken up to the amount of perhaps $800,000,000 under that provision, if minimum grants are made.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I gladly yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Is my understanding correct that nothing in this amendment reduces the funds which are available to the Public Works Administration under the present law:

Mr. ADAMS. There is not a reduction of a cent.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. So that the Public Works Administration may continue, as now authorized by law, to expend any money that is available to it, and this provision merely exempts the P. W. A. from the limitation as to loans $250,000,000 which may be obtained through the R. F. C.?

Mr. ADAMS. In substance, I will say to the Senator from Wyoming it releases from the restrictions that their money shall only be used for loans $250,000,000 and makes available to the Public Works Administration $300,000,000 which may be used for grants, some of which may be made to the city of Cheyenne.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Or to the city of Pueblo.

Mr. ADAMS. Well, we hope so.

Mr. GLASS. And ought not to be made to either of them. [Laughter.]

Mr. ADAMS. We say both.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think that Lynchburg has had some.

Mr. GLASS. If it has had, it ought to be ashamed of itself, as any other city ought to be.

Mr. ADAMS. I think, Mr. President, we will move off to some other State and get away from Virginia, Wyoming, and Colorado.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. What has been stated was my understanding of the effect of the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. By way of illustration, if the Public Works Administration should make a grant of $300,000 for a project which might cost a million dollars, it would be left for the municipality, or the city, or the county, or the water district, or whatever type the organization might be, to borrow the additional $700,000. If the grant was to a smaller project, a hundred-thousand-dollar project, $45,000 could be loaned, and it would be left for the beneficiary to provide the $55,000.

No provision is made by the bill in reference to the making of additional loans. The Public Works Administration may continue to use all its funds for loans or may use up to $300,000,000 for grants and loans.

I think, Mr. President, that covers the substantial features of the bill as reported to the Senate.

The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] inquires how much the Public Works Administration has available? I do not know the full extent, but they do have available $450,000,000; that much I know. I understand that there are certain projects in process of completion which will run on through the year, but there are in the form of available securities and securities about to be available $400,000,000 and $50,000,000 of cash.

Mr. WAGNER. Does that include the $300,000,000 to which the Senator has referred?

Mr. ADAMS. That includes the $300,000,000 as a conversion of securities into cash, and making it available for grants where it is now only available for loans.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. ADAMS] has made an exceedingly clear explanation of the changes the Appropriations Committee has made in the House bill except that he has omitted something which I undertook to explain to the committee, but which ought not to need any explanation anywhere.

I voted against the so-called grant or gift of so-called Federal funds to States or communities. It is a misnomer. It is not a grant. The Federal Treasury has not a dollar and never has had a dollar that it does not have to pick out of the pockets of the taxpayers of the country. When a city, whether in Colorado, Wyoming, Virginia, or elsewhere, is given a grant, the impression is produced upon the people of that city that they are getting something for nothing; that they are getting something which they do not have to pay back. Some States and some cities are getting something which they do not have to pay back, but just in the measure that a city or a State has wealth of any sort it has to pay back every dollar, not only of the alleged grants to itself, but it has to help pay back grants to States and cities which do not pay any taxes and which will not have to pay back any of the grants.

This matter of grants has induced States and subdivisions of States to tax their every ingenuity to trump up useless projects upon which the funds of the taxpayers may be expended; to trump them up under the popular impression that they are getting something for nothing; that they are getting a gift from the Federal Government. They are simple enough not to know that they have to pay back to the Federal Government in the shape of taxes every dollar of the loan, every dollar of the grant as well as the loan. After the election is over they will find it out.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I should like to submit for the RECORD a statement in reference to the Public Works Administration prepared and sent to me by Mr. E. H. Foley, Jr., director of the legal division of the Public Works Administration, giving his interpretation of the provision.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT

The purpose of the provision relating to the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works is to authorize the Administrator, upon the direction of the President, to use any funds now available to the Administrator for any purpose under existing law for the making of grants and loans and grants under this provision to aid in the financing of projects capable of being substantially completed, in the determination of the Administrator, not later than June 30, 1937. In addition to these funds available to the Administrator, the Administrator is authorized to use funds (not exceeding $250,000,000) hereafter received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation pursuant to Public, No. 412, Seventy-third Congress, for grants alone or grants made in connection with loans for such projects.

The provision is not intended to disturb the use of the revolving fund for loans as authorized under Public, No. 412, or under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 (Public Resolution 11, sec. 12, 74th Cong.), but its purpose is to permit the Administrator to use for grants moneys now available to him under previous appropriations, including the moneys now in the revolving fund, and up to $250,000,000 of moneys hereafter added to the revolving fund.

It is estimated, therefore, that the Administrator will be able to make grants amounting to $250,000,000 from moneys hereafter received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation plus $50,000,000 from unobligated balances now available to him, and such additional amounts, if any, as may be made available by the release from commitment of unexpended funds.

The provision confers supplemental and additional powers upon the Administrator and does not curtail any of his powers or functions under existing law.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, can the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] enlighten me as to certain unexpended balances which I am informed remain to the credit of the Public Works Administration? I have a memorandum from the Budget Director that on April 30 there were unexpended balances to the credit of relief and public works to the extent of $2,488,000,000, and that of that amount $750,000,000 had not been obligated. The balance had been obligated but was unexpended.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Director of the Budget submitted to the House committee a statement in reference to unobligated and unexpended balances. His statement which was there made was as of the 31st of March 1936. The hearings before the House committee were in progress shortly after that time. The figures which he then gave as to the Public Works Administration were that there was then available $751,000,000. That was the figure as of that date. The estimate which he made was that for the fiscal year 1937 there would remain available $500,000,000.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator is referring to the unobligated amount. I am speaking of the unexpended balance as well.

Mr. ADAMS. The total unexpended in the Public Works Administration as of that date was $893,000,000. In the Works Progress Administration the total funds made available were $1,397,000,000. Of that the estimated expenditures up to the end of the fiscal year would be $1,350,000,000 with the estimate that only $47,000,000 would remain unexpended and unobligated at the end of this fiscal year. These figures appear at pages 426 and 438 of volume II of the House hearings.

Mr. BYRD. I do not think the Senator has included the items the Director of the Budget has given to me. I asked the Director of the Budget for all the funds under the head of relief which were unexpended as of April 30, and likewise the funds under public works, which includes the loans and grants to States and municipalities, which had not been expended, the loans to railroads for construction which had not been expended, funds for public highways, river and harbor work, Rural Electrification Administration, Works Progress Administration, and all others. The total of those unexpended balances he gave as $2,488,000,000. Of that amount $750,000,000 had not been allocated.

Mr. President, a few days ago I addressed a letter to the Director of the Budget asking for certain information with reference to appropriations and deficits. I ask the privilege of having the clerk read the letter which I received from the Director of the Budget so that it may appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, May 23, 1936.

Hon. HARRY F. BYRD,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR BYRD: I have your letter of May 16, 1936, requesting (1) a statement of unexpended balances of any appropriations that relate to emergency relief or expenditures which result in employment; (2) a statement of the Federal income for the fiscal years 1933, 1934, 1935; (3) the expenditures and deficits for the same period; and (4) estimates for the fiscal years 1936 and 1937.

It is not possible to furnish you with an accurate statement of the unexpended balances of each of the emergency appropriations, except for the relief appropriation of $4,880,000,000, the accounting for which is centralized in the Treasury, without a great deal of effort and a delay of possibly more than 2 weeks in furnishing an answer to this question. There is, however, enclosed a statement showing, among other things, the total unexpended balances of the various emergency appropriations combined, as of April 30, 1936. This statement will also show the unobligated balances under each of the emergency appropriations, which it seems to me are the proper figures to be used in any discussion of this matter. There is also transmitted a summary report of the status as of April 30, 1936, of the appropriation provided in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935. Table 2 of this report shows the unexpended and unobligated balances of allocations made to the various organizations of the Government from this appropriation. For your further information I am submitting a similar report showing the status of this appropriation as of May 10, 1936, which is the latest information available as to this appropriation.

As to the Federal income, expenditures and deficits for the fiscal years 1933 to 1937, inclusive, there is set forth below a table furnishing this information.

Fiscal year—	Receipts	Expenditures	Deficit
1933	$2,079,696,742	$5,142,953,627	$3,063,256,885
1934	3,115,554,050	7,105,050,085	3,989,496,035
1935	3,800,467,202	7,375,825,166	3,575,357,964
1936 (estimated)	3,949,043,334	9,915,709,874	[1] 5,966,666,240
1937 (estimated)	5,596,917,650	8,272,554,370	[1] 2,675,636,720

[1] Based upon estimates contained in the 1937 Budget, adjusted as indicated in the following paragraph.

The estimated receipts for the fiscal year 1936 are adjusted to show the loss in processing taxes during that year because of the Supreme Court decision on the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, while the expenditures for 1936 contain a revised estimate of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration expenditures and include the entire cost, amounting to $2,237,000,000, of the adjusted-compensation payments to be made to veterans. The estimate of receipts for the fiscal year 1937 has been adjusted to show the loss in processing taxes due to the Supreme Court decision and include an estimate of additional revenue expected under the pending tax bill as passed by the House of Representatives. The estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1937 also include the revised estimated expenditures of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the anticipated expenditures under the pending relief bill. The adjusted estimates for the fiscal years 1936 and 1937 furnished herewith are in accord with the adjusted deficits for those years furnished the Senate Finance Committee by the Secretary of the Treasury in his recent testimony on the pending tax bill.

Very truly yours,

D. W. BELL, Acting Director.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. Has the Senator been able to interpret these figures, to know what they mean?

Mr. BYRD. Yes; I shall try to explain them to the Senate.

Mr. COPELAND. I shall be glad if the Senator will.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I am astonished to discover, and I think many will share my feeling, that in the fiscal year beginning July 1 next the Administration proposes to spend $600,000,000 more for ordinary expenses and for relief than for the present fiscal year. With improving conditions, I and nearly all other citizens expected a reduction in the colossal spending program.

The Budget Director says that for the current fiscal year we shall spend $9,915,709,874, less bonus, $2,237,000,000, net for ordinary expenses and for relief $7,678,709,874. For the current fiscal year our deficit will be approximately $6,000,000,000. For the appropriation year starting next July the Federal Government proposes to spend $8,272,554,370, an increase of nearly $600,000,000 over the present year. This means that we shall spend nearly $1,000,000,000 more than in 1935, and $3,000,000,000 more than in 1933; yet conditions today are greatly improved, and the need for relief and governmental expenditures much less than in these previous years.

Even after including the revenue expected from the House bill, the deficit in 1937 is estimated by the Budget Director to be $2,675,636,720, and this does not include the flood-control bill and other appropriations recently enacted.

The Budget Director also advises me that on April 30 for relief and public works we had unexpended $2,488,000,000, and of this amount $750,000,000 was not obligated; yet Congress is being asked to pass another heavy relief bill, notwithstanding the balances on hand.

In 1937 we shall collect in taxes $1,600,000,000 more than in 1936, and still the deficit continues in an alarming amount.

Mr. President, I ask that there be incorporated in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a list of the unexpended balances now in the Federal Treasury.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. RUSSELL in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the first amendment passed over in title II.

The first amendment passed over in title II was, on page 27, after line 18, to strike out the subhead "Works Progress Administration."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, after line 19, to strike out:

To continue to provide relief, and work relief on useful projects, in the United States and its Territories and possessions, by the Works Progress Administration, $1,425,000,000, to remain available until June 30, 1937 (except as herein otherwise authorized).

And in lieu thereof to insert:

To continue to provide relief and work relief on useful projects in the United States, and its Territories and possessions, $1,425,000,000, to be used in the discretion and under the direction of the President, together with the combined unexpended balances of funds heretofore made available to the Works Progress Administration, which are hereby reappropriated for such purposes under the provisions of the Relief Act of 1935, to remain available until June 30, 1937 (except as herein otherwise authorized).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 19, after "(f)", to strike out "white collar projects" and insert "assistance for educational, professional, and clerical persons", so as to read:

(f) Assistance for educational, professional, and clerical persons, $85,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 23, before the word "and" where it occurs the second time, to strike out "rural rehabilitation" and insert "loans"; and in line 24, after the word "farmers", to insert "and livestock growers", so as to read:

(j) loans and relief to farmers and livestock growers, $85,500,000.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Colorado what is the effect of striking out the words "rural rehabilitation"?

Mr. ADAMS. Not very much, if it has any particular effect. I should not attempt to interpret it.

Mr. LAFOLLETTE. If the Senator knows, what was the object of the committee in striking out that language?

Mr. ADAMS. I am unable to answer directly as to what was the intention of the members of the committee or of the Member who offered the amendment. The suggestion was that loans ought to be definitely specified, and that "relief to farmers" was broad enough to include practically everything which had been undertaken; but I do not pretend to put a personal interpretation on those words.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am very anxious to know what the effect of striking them out will be upon the program of the Resettlement Administration.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Colorado if it was intended to discourage further expenditures by the Resettlement Administrator? The fact that the words are striken out naturally raises that inquiry; or is it the opinion of the committee that the Resettlement Administration may proceed under the broader powers of the bill, notwithstanding the elimination of this particular language?

Mr. ADAMS. I can only give to the Senator my own view of the words. That is, that there is a more definite specification of powers in the bill now than under the more vague term "rural rehabilitation." That is, the word "loans" has been substituted—a word which has a very definite meaning. "Rural rehabilitation" is a term of rather indefinite signification to me.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, if no definite purpose is to be accomplished by striking out these words with respect to some phase of the program, I hope the committee amendment will be rejected.

I realize that a great deal of criticism has been directed against the activities of the Resettlement Administration. In my opinion, a large amount of that criticism is not justified when the facts are all known. Be that as it may, however, every Senator must realize that we are confronted in this country today with one of the gravest problems which any nation has had to face in all history. The problem is to turn back the tide of evil results flowing from profligate and wasteful use of our soil resources. This phase of the program of the Resettlement Administration, if that is what is aimed at in this amendment, is, to my mind, one of the things which in the end may prove to have been one of the most constructive steps this Government has taken in a great many years.

We have today in this country over 100,000,000 acres of land which has been rendered absolutely worthless for farm purposes by the manner in which we have used the soil. The loss this country is incurring from year to year in soil resources is conservatively estimated to be in excess of $400,000,000. So I sincerely trust this amendment is not aimed at the efforts, feeble and experimental though they may be, that are now being made in an attempt to meet the problem which generations of wasteful and profligate use of our most precious resource have now brought upon us.

The history of many civilizations that have gone down in the past proves that their collapse was due to wasteful use of soil resources.

Today in this country we are in a situation where, instead of curtailing our activities in this direction, we ought to be mobilizing the resources of the Nation in order to stem the tide of the destruction of our soil resources, to the end that we may transmit to the oncoming generations the heritage which we received, impaired though it was, from the generation which preceded us.

Despite all of the political attacks made upon R. A. and all of the prejudiced criticisms which have been leveled at the Resettlement Administration, when history comes to evaluate the efforts of this administration, in my opinion, this beginning which has been made in an effort to find a solution for the problem of the preservation and restoration of our soil resources will stand out as one of the most significant and constructive which it has undertaken.

Therefore, Mr. President, feeling, as I do, that this problem is of paramount importance, feeling, as I do, that we are trustees for the oncoming generations in this country, and that it is our duty in that light to protect and to preserve one of the most important resources in the gift of nature, I believe we should have a sound and a legitimate reason for action in respect to the amendment which is now pending before the Senate.

Personally, I trust that the committee amendment will be rejected. Under action already taken the resettlement program will be tremendously curtailed. Already it is evident that the rural population of this country is to have as a maximum out of this $1,500,000,000, $85,000,000 to be devoted to direct relief in agricultural areas, and to the further carrying on of this program in an effort to stem the wasteful use of our soil resources.

Therefore, while I am reluctant to see this program curtailed in its operations, so far as the total amount of money which may be available for it is concerned, I sincerely hope we will not eliminate language from the pending measure which will prevent this constructive side of the program being carried forward, and further improvement in it accomplished through experience which will come as a result of the efforts which have been made thus far.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I recall the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin to the fact that we are dealing fundamentally with a House bill. The amendments we are making are to the House bill. In the House the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations said that of the money provided by the bill not one dollar would be available to the Resettlement Administration. That is the bill we are seeking to amend. If we are making any changes, I am not sure but that the changes are along the line of the wishes of the Senator from Wisconsin. I am merely calling his attention to the bill as it came to us, and to the fact that we are dealing with a bill as to which the chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations made the statement which I have repeated. So that we are now broadening, if anything, the terms of the measure.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, a few moments ago I made inquiry of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] with reference to this language, and it was his interpretation that as "rural rehabilitation" was stricken out and "loans and relief to farmers and livestock growers" was inserted, that did give to the Resettlement Administration the right to make loans and grant other relief, except to purchase land. Is that the understanding of the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. ADAMS. I may say to the Senator from Idaho that I think the amendment which has been offered by the Senate committee is a relaxation of the limits put upon the activity in the House and a broadening of the powers.

We had before us Mr. Hopkins, who said that under his program he never made a loan. He said, "I make only grants." Here is a broadening of the authority which he has exercised. We have taken this and put it in the hands of the President, and if we may, as we doubtless can, believe the press comments the President has said at a press conference, "I propose out of the measure to take care of the resettlement situation."

Mr. POPE. I was advised by representatives of the Resettlement Administration that under the language as it came from the House, "rural rehabilitation and relief to farmers", no part of the money could be used for the resettlement program.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the House bill provided for appropriating the entire fund to W. P. A. This fact was no doubt the basis for the statement made by the chairman of the House committee that no money was available for R. A. I am not resisting the insertion of the word "loans." I am in favor of it. I am resisting this amendment to strike out "rural rehabilitation." I think the language should read "rural rehabilitation, loans, and relief to farmers and livestock growers."

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I was advised that the use of the words "rural rehabilitation" would not permit the Resettlement Administration to carry on any part of this program, that rural rehabilitation would be carried on by the Department of Agriculture in some other way, but it would not permit the present resettlement program to be carried on in any particular. I was advised by the Senator from South Carolina, as I suggested a moment ago, that the Resettlement Administration could make loans and grant other relief to livestock growers under the new language, but could not under the language as it came from the House.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the Senator is mistaken, I believe. The words "rural rehabilitation", if included, will permit carrying on work of that type.

I think the committee has made a very important and valuable contribution in inserting the words providing for loans. I certainly am not desirous of defeating my own ends by resisting that language. "Rural rehabilitation" is a term which will include the activities which I have had in mind, namely, the effort to take some of the exhausted acreage which is now by this further cultivation helping to bring about an exhaustion of soil resources, to return it to a suitable public use, and to obtain for the farmers who are now situated on this worn-out land acreage upon which they may have an opportunity to provide themselves with an income sufficient to maintain them without relief assistance in the future.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wisconsin yield to me?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am glad to yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I ask, for information, whether or not it is the Senator's conception of the matter that the land which is to be improved in its soil fertility, and prevented from erosion, is now owned by private individuals?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have not looked into this matter recently, but, as I understand it, about 9,000,000 acres have been taken out of production, acreage which was found to be no longer suitable for agricultural purposes because the soil had been so completely exhausted that crops could no longer be produced in sufficient amounts to make it possible for the farmers to exist without help from Federal or local agencies. About 9,000,000 acres have been taken out of agricultural production and have been restored to reforestation and other purposes to which they are now suitable. The farmers who were attempting to operate on that land have been established on other acreage which is productive, where they will have an opportunity to become self-sustaining again.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I was particularly directing my inquiry to whether or not, if this money is spent for the purposes outlined by the Senator, it will be spent upon land the title to which is now in individuals, or in the States, or in the name of the Federal Government.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. As I understand, this 9,000,000 acres was purchased from individual owners. There were secured other lands, in other places, where the soil was more productive, and the title to the 9,000,000 acres thus purchased from private individuals came to the Federal Government; then that land was restored to forest uses or other public purposes to the end that erosion and the waste of the soil fertility could be checked and the soil eventually restored.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator perceives the purpose of my question. It would be one thing to spend this money on land the title to which was in the Federal Government and another thing to spend the money on land the title to which was in individuals, because it would be equivalent to the Federal Government repairing houses in the cities without any contribution on the part of the owners of the said houses. I think that language ought to be written in the bill, if the amendment is retained, to prevent the expenditure of any of this money on land to which the Federal Government does not own title. Otherwise, it might be expended to improve the quality of the soil owned by some individuals; and thus, where one farmer would buy fertilizer to improve the quality of his farm, another one would have the quality of his farm improved by an expenditure made by the Federal Government. I think safeguards ought to be thrown around the amendment, if it is to be retained, so that none of the money provided for shall be expended on any land save that to which the Federal Government holds title.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the Senator from Wisconsin seems to have so soon forgotten that about 2 weeks ago the Congress enacted a bill appropriating $450,000,000 for soil conservation, and that the bill now under consideration carries the sum of $128,000,000 for soil conservation.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The 100,000,000 acres I have mentioned are in such an exhausted and depleted condition that the rotation of crops and other features of the program that is contemplated under the Soil Conservation Act cannot rehabilitate them. This land has been so exhausted that about all that can be done with it now is to restore it by reforestation and planting it to grass. Therefore I am against this amendment, which would result in preventing the resettlement program from being carried on, or such portion of it as could be carried out under the limitation of funds provided by the committee. We should not waste the experience that has been had in this field. We should not halt the progress which is being made under this very important program which seeks to check soil depletion and to restore the farmers who are in this unfortunate position to a situation where ultimately they will be able to take care of themselves and will not be in need of rural relief.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, as a matter of fact it is my interpretation of the amendment that it will not permit further purchases of land by the so-called Resettlement agency, which has no statutory status whatsoever. We were told by Professor Tugwell that he was contemplating the purchase of a million acres of land in a single State. I do not think he could do it under this particular amendment. It may be that under title II, which puts into the hands of the President of the United States nearly one and one-half billion dollars, the President may allocate to Professor Tugwell a sufficient amount of money to engage in such vagaries as purchasing 100,000,000 acres of land in a single State, but he cannot do it under this amendment. Therefore, I hope the amendment will remain in the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Virginia to an existing situation.

The Government of the United States already owns, in some of the Western States, irrigation projects which are not fully settled up. By reason of the drought in South Dakota and in eastern and western North Dakota and in various other sections, farmers located there are in difficult circumstances; and as a matter of economy to the Government of the United States those farmers should be taken off the lands on which they are now located and put on some of the irrigation projects on which they can make a living.

That is a project which has been talked about for many years. I do not know anything about the program of having the Government buy more land, but I do know that the railroads in the Northwest have been cooperating in an effort to get people off some of the poor lands which were taken up a few years ago, and getting them on smaller tracts of irrigated land, and in that way making the people self-supporting.

Unfortunately, a few years ago in the Northwest Territory there were brought out a great many persons who were placed on lands which never should have been settled for farming purposes. Those lands should have been left entirely as grazing lands. However, through the advertisements which were placed in the newspapers, and the propaganda that was carried on at that time, a large number of persons were placed on those lands. They never should have been placed there. The persons on those poor lands can raise a wheat crop only once in 3 or 4 years. Therefore the Government has been obliged to give them relief. It would be very helpful not only to the Government but to the citizenry of the United States as a whole if some way could be devised in the rural-rehabilitation program whereby those persons could be moved off of the poor lands and put on irrigated lands on which they could be self-supporting.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I desire to point out to the Senator from Montana that under the wording of the bill, as proposed by the committee, the situation he envisages could be carried out, for the bill reads:

> Loans and relief to farmers and livestock growers, $85,500,000.

So "loans and relief to farmers" certainly would be broad enough to take care of the situation he pictures.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, such is not the fact. It is true that loans could be made to the people the Senator from Montana has been describing. It is true that they could be given direct relief. However, if the words "rural rehabilitation" shall be stricken out, it will end the program for transferring persons from these exhausted lands and obtaining an opportunity for them to make a new start, just as the pioneers did during the time when free lands were available. In the past, when farmers exhausted the land, there was plenty of good free land left. They moved West, and took up new land when the old land was exhausted. Now the frontier is closed. For the farmers who are living on these 100,000,000 acres of exhausted land no free land can be open without the assistance of the Government. I contend that in the last analysis it is the cheapest course for the Government to take, if one desires to look at the matter from the pure, hard, cold dollars-and-cents point of view, because, so long as the farmers stay on this exhausted land they are going to be in a situation where they will have to have relief in the form of money, either from the Federal Government or from the local governments, or from both. In the last analysis, the only way in which we can permanently solve the problem that confronts the farmers upon those 100,000,000 acres of exhausted land is to open up new land for them, and to give them another start.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, does not the Senator recall that the chairman of the subcommittee has stated to him that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives stated very definitely on the floor of the House, and it has been printed in all the newspapers, that the words "rural rehabilitation" do not authorize the expenditure of a dollar on the thing he is now suggesting?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Such was no doubt the case when the House bill appropriated all the money to W. P. A. Under the Senate bill, if the part of the committee amendment which provides for striking out the words "rural rehabilitation" is rejected, and the part of the amendment which provides for the insertion of "loans" is accepted, the resettlement program can go on.

If I may say just a word more about this subject, Mr. President, I should like to have Senators for a moment endeavor to forget the prejudices which have been created in their minds by the attacks which have been made upon this program. In the northern part of Wisconsin we had great timber resources. They were stripped off by the lumber companies. Then the land agents of the lumber companies advertised and offered cheap transportation. They took people into those northern counties and got them to buy the land from the lumber companies. People went on those lands, some of the lands not being suited to agriculture. In many instances failure was inevitable. What happened? Those communities nevertheless are compelled to provide schools, to provide roads, to provide all the facilities of government which are in the sum total measured in the tax bill of the community and the county as a whole.

Those areas can once more be restored by forestation and reforestation, and the tax burdens upon those communities can be relieved. In some places schools and roads are maintained for one or two families, because they are in these isolated areas unsuited for farming. In the last analysis, the taxpayer foots the bill.

In Wisconsin we feel that we have taken some steps forward. We have provided for the zoning of counties, in order that their uses may be scientifically determined and so that people may be removed from the exhausted lands and an opportunity given to them to start elsewhere, and thus the local communities be relieved of the terrific tax burden of providing roads and schools and other services of government which are so expensive.

However, this program cannot be carried on alone by the counties or by the States; assistance must be had from the Federal Government. I say again, I reemphasize and repeat, that in the last analysis this will prove to be the cheapest method, if we wish to measure the cost in the terms of cold, hard dollars and cents; for so long as these farmers continue their effort to subsist upon land which has become exhausted and which under the most frugal and scientific kind of management will no longer provide a living for them and their families we shall have a rural relief problem, and we will continue to have a relief problem, so far as such individuals and their families are concerned, so long as they have to live upon land of the character described.

A great deal of thought has been given to this program; and though many epithets have been hurled at it by individuals and by the newspapers and by men in public life, yet I say again, Mr. President, that the wasteful use of soil resources can be assigned as an important factor in the decline of most of the past civilizations during the recorded history of the world.

Nature is slow to punish. We had perhaps the greatest endowment of resources that any nation has ever known. Pioneers came into this country; they thought that its resources were unlimited and they were prodigal in their use of the soil. Throughout New England, the South, and nearly every other section of the country the abandoned farms tell the story of the first resettlement and rural rehabilitation problems in this country; but the farmers of the East could "solve" their problem by leaving it behind them. The frontier was still open and all they had to do was to gather their families, pack their tools, harness their oxen, start westward, and take up new lands on the frontier across the Alleghanies. Those lands were so vast and unlimited in extent that they did not even wait, in many instances, to cut down the trees; they burned the virgin timber, little realizing that by that process they were destroying the humus of the soil which it had taken over 400 years to provide. As that land became exhausted, they pushed westward again and again and again, until finally the frontier of this Nation touched the Pacific Ocean.

Then, Mr. President, came the World War and the demand for wheat. We put the grasslands to the plow in that great stretch of territory which reaches from the northern Montana boundary on the north to the panhandle of Texas on the south. We not only put it to the plow but we put it to the gang plow drawn by batteries of tractors operating day and night. It was harvested by the combines. All in an effort to help win the war by producing more wheat. Breaking those grass lands, Mr. President, was the blow which caused nature to speed up her relentless punishment for the abuse of her bounty. Breaking the grasslands broke the cover, subjected it to high winds and to heat and reduced the rainfall until such a condition has now been brought about that those upon the Atlantic seaboard in this country should be impressed with the fact that nature, for the profligate waste of our resources, is beginning to take its toll at a dear price from this generation. For the past two summers the dust blowing out of the panhandle of Texas and the former grasslands of Oklahoma and other States has soiled the furniture in the households of those living along the Atlantic seaboard.

Fun has been poked at this program of resettlement by those too stupid or too blind to care about the future. Nevertheless, it is a constructive effort. Mistakes have been made, it is true. It would be too much to expect that the mistakes made in 300 years could be corrected overnight and without error. I say that, taken as a whole, the program is constructive. It is a sincere effort to turn back the tide of destruction brought about by the profligate waste of soil resources that has gone on in this country ever since the Pilgrims first landed upon Plymouth Rock. To abandon that program now would be a tragic mistake. I therefore ask, Mr. President, that we may have the committee amendment divided, and I sincerely hope that the first part of the amendment which proposes to strike out the words "rural rehabilitation" will be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to dividing the question? The Chair hears none, and the question is on the first branch of the amendment to strike out the words "rural rehabilitation."

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the first branch of the committee amendment on page 28, line 23, proposing to strike out the words "rural rehabilitation."

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, it seems to me that it is very unfair to strike out the provision for rural rehabilitation and insert the word "loans." When loans are made, of course, they are made on security, while a great deal, at least, of the rehabilitation and resettlement work is for the benefit of farmers who have no security. The resettlement work has been taking care of many farmers throughout the United States who were taken off the relief rolls when the P. W. A. was started and made direct loans or grants to them.

Eighty-five million five hundred thousand dollars would not even allow loans or grants of that kind, as I understand. In other words, the farmers of this Nation, under this bill, are given $85,500,000 for loans, and the remainder of the appropriation of $1,339,500,000 goes for useful work projects, and under such work projects, according to the present plan at least, the farmers who may be just as badly in need of work as are those who are employed in the cities and towns are not included. I say it is hardly fair to allow $85,000,000 for a quarter of the people of the United States, those who work on the farms and produce food and other necessities which the people must have—and produce them most of the time at a loss—and to allow the remainder of the people on work projects $1,339,000,000.

I am very much interested in the work the Resettlement Administration has been doing, because they have done some excellent work in my home State, and I know they have been doing good work in other States. When the seed-loan question came up a few weeks ago the Resettlement Administration finally had to make arrangements to take care of the farmers who were on what they termed "grants" during the winter months or practically on relief. They told us, at that time, that last winter they had been taking care of 150,000 farm families throughout the United States.

I have a statement here from the Administrator of the Resettlement Administration dated May 18. I have taken up this question with him, and he finally wrote me a letter. I wish to read a paragraph or two and give some of the figures which he sets forth in his letter. He says that—

> There has been delegated to the division—

He means the Resettlement Administration—> the responsibility for performing a number of services for destitute and low-income farm families by loans, grants, and debt adjustments. By June 30—

That is June 30 of this year, the coming June 30—> including $17,000,000 authorized from funds of the Rural Rehabilitation Corporation previously granted to the States by the Federal Government under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1933 there will have been expended in excess of $125,000,000—

Mr. President, the Resettlement Administration is spending for this year, the year ending June 30 next, $125,000,000, and all they are granted under this bill is $85,500,000 for loans. Recurring to the Administrator's statement:

> There will have been expended in excess of $125,000,000, of which approximately $108,000,000 will be for loans and the balance for grants. Almost $90,000,000 of these amounts have already been paid to destitute and low-income farmers. It is further estimated that, at an administrative cost of less than 2 percent of the total indebtedness involved, debts of 30,000 farmers will have been adjusted, with scale-downs in excess of $25,000,000, or 27½ percent of the original indebtedness.

Mr. President, that work alone performed by the Resettlement Administration is worth while. They have scaled down for 30,000 farmers in 1 year 27½ percent of their indebtedness and have adjusted the debts of others and allowed those farmers to stay on their land and continue to carry on. That is worth while.

> Making allowance for duplications more than 700,000 farm families will be aided through the rural rehabilitation program this year, as follows.

Then he gives the various standard loans, and so forth.

More than 700,000 farm families will be taken care of. A total of $85,500,000 for 700,000 farm families would make $122 per farm family for the coming year. That is not enough to take care of a family which is down and out. I had a telegram from one of the counties in the southwestern part of my State a day or two ago stating that the situation is getting worse. It is in the drought territory, where dust storms are again occurring. The grasshoppers are beginning to hatch out. It is said a thousand farm families in that county must be taken care of; and if the Resettlement Administration cannot take care of them, then some other provision must be made. I was told that taxes are not being paid, that the county is broke. It is a serious situation, not only in the drought area in North Dakota but in the drought areas in all the other States.

When the seed-loan bill was under consideration the Resettlement Administration made the statement that they were taking care of 150,000 farm families throughout the United States. Eighty-five million dollars is not enough and does not begin to be enough to take care of the situation.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. FRAZIER. Certainly.

Mr. LEWIS. Will the Senator from North Dakota, if it does not impose upon him too much, give some detail? What is the procedure or the method pursued in the resettlement work? What is done that resettles those in distress, and by what methods?

Mr. FRAZIER. In many instances where farmers, because of poor crops and low prices, have been unable to meet their payments on their mortgage indebtedness the Resettlement Administration has made adjustments for them, has persuaded the creditors to scale down the indebtedness. In the 30,000 cases which they readjusted the creditors were persuaded to scale down the amount of the indebtedness 27½ percent of the original debt, and arrangements were made to refinance the farmers so they could carry on.

Mr. LEWIS. But on the same land?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; on the same land. In other cases, where the land was so poor that officials of the Resettlement Administration did not feel the farmers could profitably proceed and make a living, the farmers have been moved to some other location and have been financed. If they did not have anything they were loaned money to buy a team of horses and a cow or two and a little machinery. It was believed it was much cheaper to take care of them in that way, giving them a chance to make a living, than to carry them on the relief roll. I think it has proven much cheaper.

A number of projects have been started in North Dakota. Farmers have been moved from the so-called dry territory to the new projects. Some land has been purchased in North Dakota and other States. After the land is appraised and made ready for purchase, then the farmers are moved to it. In some instances submarginal lands have been bought and the farmers transferred to other lands. If enough money is not provided to carry on the work, what will it mean? It will mean many disappointed families. Some 140,000 or 150,000 farm families throughout the Nation will be vitally disappointed if the work shall not be continued.

Dr. Tugwell, the Administrator, told me only a short time ago that unless money is provided his work will be practically finished the 30th day of June of this year because there will be no money to carry it further. If that is the wish of the Senate, I suppose it will have to be accepted, but I cannot see how the Senate, after appropriating money to start this work, can now take that attitude. A lot of good work has been done. As the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] has said, perhaps mistakes have been made and perhaps too much money has been expended in overhead, but a lot of good work has been done. Dr. Tugwell in his letter said that less than 2 percent has been used for overhead expenses.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REYNOLDS in the chair). Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. FRAZIER. Certainly.

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator from North Dakota interests me very much because the details are not only necessary to me for my own understanding, but sometimes in reciting to me in my own behalf it is informative to others. When the Senator says if this appropriation is not continued there will be great disappointment to many families, does he mean they will be homeless and taken off their lands and displaced completely? Will they be driven into the cities or onto other lands?

Mr. FRAZIER. That would be the situation in thousands of cases. They would be forced to leave the farms and go to the cities and join the unemployed.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I wish to make an inquiry of the Senator so that I may be certain I am correct. I understood him to say there were certain lands in North Dakota which the Government desired to obtain for resettlement purposes. Is that correct?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. There are certain other lands in North Dakota which the Government wishes to obtain so the farmers may be taken off of them?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. Does the Government contemplate the purchase of good farms as well as the purchase of farms which are no longer useful for cultivation?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. In other words, they want to buy good farms, and useless or worthless farms, too. Is that correct?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct. The so-called submarginal lands, or what they consider worthless for agricultural purposes, will be revitalized. The soil fertility is to be built up and they are to be used for grazing purposes.

Mr. TYDINGS. So it really involves the purchase of two farms by the Federal Government, one good farm and one bad farm of comparable size, in order to take one family off the bad land and put it on the good land?

Mr. FRAZIER. Of course, that does not apply to many of the farms. Many of the poor farms are mortgaged for more than they are worth and the farmer has no equity under present values. He is simply transferred to other land where he will have a chance to make a living.

Mr. TYDINGS. But that is good land?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course, he could not be transferred to it unless it was purchased for him and someone paid for it?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. There is no one else to pay for it except the Federal Government, is there?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct. The Resettlement Administration is making loans to these men to purchase the land.

Mr. TYDINGS. The theory is that eventually the entire purchase price of the good farm is to be paid back to the Federal Government by the man who has been transplanted to it from a bad farm?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. Could the Senator enlighten me by giving me the average price of good farm lands in North Dakota?

Mr. FRAZIER. I have not the exact figure. I imagine good land in the eastern part of the State is probably bringing $25 or $30 an acre.

Mr. TYDINGS. Are those good farms which are to be bought by the Government for resettlement purposes now occupied?

Mr. FRAZIER. Most of them are not occupied; or if they are occupied, where the farm is large, the Resettlement Administration is buying a part of it. Much of the land has been taken over by insurance companies and banks.

Mr. TYDINGS. Where it is not occupied, who owns it?

Mr. FRAZIER. Generally some insurance company or some bank that has foreclosed on it.

Mr. TYDINGS. Then there is no land contemplated for resettlement purposes that at some time has not been used for farming and acquired by some individual either under tax sale or mortgage foreclosure?

Mr. FRAZIER. Not in North Dakota, at least.

Mr. TYDINGS. There is none in North Dakota?

Mr. FRAZIER. No; not in North Dakota.

Mr. TYDINGS. What happens is that the man who now owns the land sells it to the Federal Government; in many cases the land is not now occupied; the Federal Government transfers a family from the poor land to the good land under terms which envisage the repayment to the Federal Government of the money invested in the land. Is that the idea?

Mr. FRAZIER. That is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. Then what is to become of the bad land after the Government acquires it?

Mr. FRAZIER. Through the soil-conservation program it is expected to build up the fertility by seeding it back to grass and making grazing land of it.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the short answer to the Senator's question, which I think is a very proper one, is that it becomes Government land.

Mr. TYDINGS. It comes out of taxation?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; it becomes Government land, just as it was before it was ever taken, and becomes subject to any laws that may be passed in regard to Government land; in other words, subject to any action Congress may take regarding it.

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator will allow me one question more, I should like to say that I am not trying to reflect on the proposal. I am trying to get the details of it.

Does the Senator from North Dakota feel that there is now sufficient profit in agriculture, say in North Dakota or in any comparable State, to enable the man who has been taken off bad land and put on a good farm to pay his county taxes and other expenses, and repay the Government the sum of money which the Government will have to put up in order to make the transfer?

Mr. FRAZIER. Under present conditions, I am sorry to admit that there probably is not much chance of his paying out; but, unless conditions change, the farmers are all going to go broke, and the Government or somebody else will have to take over all the land; and I do not believe that is going to be done.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not think all the farmers are going broke.

Mr. FRAZIER. Well, a great many of them are.

Mr. TYDINGS. Some of them are not making the return that they should make, but I do not for a moment feel that they are all going broke. The point I make, however, is that certainly a scheme which is not going to allow a man to keep the farm which he starts to farm and starts to bring into productivity, and which he improves with the addition of buildings, fences, and so forth, which is not going to permit him to pay his debt, in the long run is only a form of deception, because if he does not make his payments, the Government must inevitably take the farm away from him again.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. FRAZIER. Just a moment. The Senator from Maryland admits that the farmers will go broke unless they can get cost of production and a little profit for the products they have to sell, does he not?

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course they will, but——

Mr. FRAZIER. And the Senator is interested in seeing such conditions brought about that the farmer can make a little profit?

Mr. TYDINGS. I am.

Mr. FRAZIER. If he does get cost of production and a little more, the farmer under those circumstances will be enabled to make a profit.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator from North Dakota will yield to me a moment more so that I may pursue this matter to its logical conclusion, if the Senator from North Dakota and others who are familiar with this matter feel that the farmer put on a good farm can make enough to own the farm eventually, then the scheme is sound from a business standpoint. If, on the other hand, there is no opportunity for the farmer placed on a Government farm to make enough to own it eventually, with some mercy and latitude shown him so that he can pay it out, then all we do is to give him a temporary rather than a real solution of his dilemma.

Mr. FRAZIER. If we are going to admit that that will be the case, of course we might as well let all the farmers go off the land and put them on the unemployment lists in the cities.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; I am glad to yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I should like to make a suggestion to the Senator from Maryland.

In many instances, farmers have mortgaged their land at very high values; and, as a result, under present conditions many are probably suffering. I should like to emphasize the point that where a resettlement operation is undertaken for a farmer and his family, it is all on a voluntary basis. Some effort has been made to create the impression that it is contemplated forcibly to move people. Nothing of that kind is to be done; but, as I understand, in each case a very careful survey is made of the situation of the particular farm to which the farmer and his family are to be transferred, or on which they are to be resettled; and it is contemplated and it is estimated—and I understand the authorities are convinced that the estimates are conservative—that even if present conditions as to farm prices should prevail, under the long amortization period which the Federal Government of course can afford to allow, as distinguished from some commercial or private credit agency, the farmers will pay out.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator has answered my question. What I have been trying to elicit is whether or not the farmer who is taken from a bad farm and put on a good one can, if given the greatest possible latitude in terms, really get the farm in the end. If he cannot get the farm in the end, obviously we are only fooling him and everybody else.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I agree with the Senator about that; but I am convinced that the program is set up on a conservative basis, and that the overwhelming majority of the farmers will be able to pay out under the conditions they have been given.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] has asked some very proper questions which ought to have candid consideration. I do not believe anybody can give an answer which will apply to all the cases. In other words, nearly every case has its exceptions and its points in which it differs from any other case. Like fingerprints, cases differ, and each one will have to be decided on its individual merits.

The theory is that if a man is on a piece of land and, after investigation and examination, it is concluded that under all the circumstances the probabilities are that nobody can farm that piece of land successfully, that is a case where it will not be desirable to have him continue longer on the land. The sooner he gives it up the better. If he can be transferred from that land to another piece of land which is believed to be of such character that he can make a living on it if given the time the Senator from Wisconsin has indicated—a long time at a low rate of interest—he may eventually pay for and own the land.

All those circumstances will be considered. The individual will be considered. An examination will show that some individuals are more likely to succeed than others. All the elements will have their weight. They will all enter into the equation. With the experience a farmer has had, he is not likely to do again what he did in the past, even if he had an opportunity, and mortgage land at a high rate of interest on the theory that he is always going to produce crops on it or that it is such land that it can support him and his family. He is a little wiser than he was before, when he went through that operation.

The land he leaves, which the Government buys, will become Government land. It seems to me the idea we may have right at the moment as to what shall be done with it is somewhat immaterial, because, as I see the equation, no one can tell just exactly what will be done.

I will say to the Senator from Maryland that in some of these cases the efforts to establish the farmer will fail. I do not think we ought to deceive ourselves. No matter how careful the administrators of the law may be, failures will occur; there will be instances where the farmer will not be able to pay for the land; but the theory is that in the great majority of cases he will be able to do so, and we shall get a contented man instead of one who, if we do not do something for him, will become a burden on the taxpayers and will have to be supported, and his family will have to be supported. In other words, he will be on relief. The idea is that he may be self-sustaining, and it seems to me that is the only hope left in some of these cases. If we must abandon that hope, we know disaster and ruin and suffering must follow.

At the very best we are going to have difficulty about the matter. It is a difficult problem, impossible of administration without mistakes occurring here and there; but, as I view the problem, those administering this agency are doing the best they can. This seems to me the thing that is best to be done; and I believe we ought to give the administrative officers all possible encouragement, knowing that we are not dealing with a "dead cinch" or a sure thing. We are going to run some risk, but we are going to extend charity to persons who otherwise, we know, are going to be burdensome, and thrown entirely for their living upon the taxpayers.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I have not the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Assuming for the sake of argument that the $85,500,000 used for this purpose is all the money the Government has with which to acquire some good farms—not the marginal lands—for the 105,000 farm families which I understand are circumstanced as described by the Senator from Nebraska, it is an average of $850 per family. Now, if this is all the money that is to be used to purchase the good farms, I imagine we cannot get a very large farm, or a very good farm, for $850. So far as I am concerned, I am trying to get some information on how these men are going to come out, and the terms under which they are to resettle, and if they can pay off the debt, and whether we are really going to rehabilitate them or just provide some sort of a temporary makeshift.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. If $85,500,000 is all the money the Federal Government has for the good farms to which these farmers are to be transferred, and that is only $850 per farmer, in my opinion we cannot do the job for that much money.

Mr. FRAZIER. The Government has already spent $125,000,000 for the purpose.

Mr. TYDINGS. But that was for the purchase of marginal lands which are to be abandoned or reforested.

Mr. FRAZIER. And for the purchase of some good lands, too. There were several projects where farmers were moved on better land.

Mr. TYDINGS. I shall not take issue with the Senator, and I am not going to intrude further on his time; but I do wish to make a concluding observation. It is my impression, though I have not the facts to support it, that the Government has acquired very few good farm lands in the rehabilitation program. What it has done is to buy up marginal lands; and, as the program is now set up, there probably is not going to be sufficient good land to rehabilitate the 105,000 farm families who are living on land which is nonproductive.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. I think the Senator from Nebraska can well claim the credit of being the best constitutional lawyer in the Senate, because his is the only problem passed upon by the Congress which has been decided to be constitutional.

Now, I desire to ask the Senator a question. Is there any constitutional warrant for the Government acquiring lands in the way proposed here, or in any other way, except for actual Government purposes? The Government is not permitted to acquire a foot of land in any State of the Union without the specific sanction of the State itself.

We recently had a suit in Virginia contesting the right of the State of Virginia to condemn lands in the Shenandoah Valley in order to make a gift of them to the Government of the United States for park purposes, the contest being based upon the contention that the purpose was not a governmental purpose. The court decided that it was a governmental purpose, and therefore the complainant was thrown out of court.

It seems to me that in the case before us the purchase of lands from individuals for the mere purpose of transferring those individuals to some other lands to be purchased by the Government is not, in the strict sense, purchasing lands for a Government purpose. The Government is not using the lands; individuals are using the lands.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I am not going to discuss the constitutional question any further than to say that, as I understand, the Government is not condemning or getting title to any of this land by any attempt at condemnation; it is all voluntary.

Mr. GLASS. But is the Government authorized to purchase lands except for Government purposes? Remember, the Senator is the outstanding constitutional lawyer in the Senate; his reputation is at stake, and I want a square answer to that question. [Laughter.]

Mr. NORRIS. I do not think it is strictly a Government use; but I do not believe that question will be raised here, because we are not going to give the Court a chance. If a man does not want to sell, he does not have to.

Mr. GLASS. That is what we were told when we protested to the proponent of the N. R. A. that the act was unconstitutional, and his reply was, "Well, suppose it is unconstitutional; we can carry out its terms before it can ever get before the Court." And that is the answer of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. No; that is not the answer. But if no one complains, it will not get into court; and there cannot be any complaint, if we make no attempt to force a man to sell. He sells if he wants to. If he does not want to sell, he does not sell.

Mr. GLASS. The taxpayers who are to be taxed to pay for this land and this transition it seems to me might apply to the courts for a restraining order.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I know that no one desires to get into a discussion of the legal questions, but it strikes me that jurisdiction would be conferred on the proper courts, through the medium of a taxpayer in the county in which the land acquired was located suing out a writ for an injunction against illegal acquisition of the land by the Federal Government, because his rights would be invaded by having the amount and volume of the local taxes curtailed, and consequently his expenditure increased. That would bring into question whether or not the Federal act was good or bad as a matter of law.

I desire to say to the Senator from North Dakota, however, that my point in rising originally was to direct attention to the fact that, while his motive was a very humane one, I did not see, unless agriculture was going to be made profitable, how the man who got onto the good farm was ever going to pay for it.

Mr. FRAZIER. Unless agriculture is made profitable, the farmers who are on the farms now cannot pay for them. The Government will hold a mortgage on the land, and if it is not paid for, the Government will be the owner of the land, and it can open it for homestead entry, or for anything Congress desires to do with it.

Mr. GLASS. Suppose the new farm goes to waste; does the Senator propose that the Government buy the man another one?

Mr. FRAZIER. No; he would probably have to go to the city and go on the relief rolls.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator, before he asks for my attention, permit me to conclude by saying that while I have not read the opinion, I understand that the question I raised was decided in the courts, and the contention that the Government had no right under such circumstances to engage in a certain kind of operation was sustained. While I have no desire to argue the law of the case, I am afraid the Senator from North Dakota is setting up a proposition and proceeding with a theory which is going to be found not to hold water. If the farmers are to be helped, in my judgment, they ought to be helped in such a way that whatever is done for them will be permanent.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I was interested in the original point the Senator raised, as to whether it was an effective philanthropy to put the farmers on these farms. I wish to give him the record of the first and original effort that has been made in creating resettlement farms, namely, the project at Matanuska.

Mr. FRAZIER. Both the Senator from Wisconsin and I have admitted that some mistakes have been made, and this may be one of them.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I wish to emphasize the challenge. Mr. Hokins, who handled the Matanuska project, told us on June 24, 1935, that it would cost $1,093,000. That was to create two hundred 40-acre farms. At the end of 6 months he found that he had missed his estimate by a little matter of 100 percent, and on December 27, 1935, he reported that the two hundred 40-acre farms had cost $2,325,000, and that they probably would cost $100,000 more.

He also said that half of that amount would be chargeable as a mortgage against the farmers themselves. So we have this contemplation: A farmer removed to Matanuska on a 40-acre farm starts out upon an alleged humane adventure with a $6,000 mortgage on a 40-acre farm. I do not believe that is humane in any language or in any land.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am glad to yield.

Mr. MINTON. I am getting a little bit confused about the legal proposition and desire to propound an inquiry. If the Senator does not wish to answer this legal question, I hope he will permit the distinguished senior Senator from Nebraska to answer it.

It seems to be a public purpose for the Federal Government to buy preferred stock and save a lot of banks that are about to go to ruin. It seems to be a public purpose for the Federal Government to buy stock in, to take bonds of, and to lend money to business interests which are about to collapse. But it does not seem to be a public purpose, or in any way a governmental purpose, to help a farmer save his farm or to get a farm which he does not own in order that he may make a living on it. Can the Senator straighten me out on that legal proposition?

Mr. FRAZIER. There seems to be a difference in the definition of "general welfare" as it is provided in the Constitution. There seems to be quite a difference between the general welfare of a farmer and the general welfare of a banker.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I do not think anyone can stand up against the illustration drawn by the Senator from Indiana so far as justice is concerned. If it is right for one, it is right for the other. But from the standpoint of business, in a capitalistic society, sometimes the amount of security has a great deal to do with the question.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield further?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I think an examination of some of the securities held by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will reveal that the capitalistic system was not so kind to the Government when it made some of its loans to business in this country.

Mr. FRAZIER. I do not think there would be any more danger in lending on farms than in making some of the capitalistic loans which have been negotiated. It seems to me so utterly unfair to strike out rural rehabilitation in this measure that I hope the committee amendment will be rejected. Then I hope we can increase the amount of money appropriated in the bill for the farmer.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, it is particularly unfortunate that any discussion of the faults of our relief system shall be interpreted as opposition to relief. I was one of those who voted for Federal aid for relief in the very early stages of the effort which our Government has made to care for those in distress. I hope that my views concerning some features of the bill will not be interpreted as opposition to Federal contributions for relief. On the contrary, I still am very much in favor of Federal participation in a program which I know is far too heavy, far too extensive, for the local agencies to deal with successfully.

I cannot, however, escape the conclusion that there is a right way and a wrong way to meet our responsibility to the destitute, and I cannot escape the conclusion that the bill now pending before the Senate in many of its aspects reflects the wrong way.

The bill as reported from the Senate Committee on Appropriations in every important sense is a continuation of the program which was initiated last year by the Emergency Relief Act of 1935. It is a continuation of that program, Mr. President, because the Appropriation Committee's amendment takes the expenditure of the money away from the Works Progress Administration and by express terms makes the appropriation available "to be used in the discretion and under the direction of the President." This is the precise language that was used in the bill of last year.

At the time the $4,880,000,000 bill was before the Senate, I voiced my objection to the writing of a blank check to any President to be expended in his discretion for uses that were only illy or partially defined, and in amounts which he alone would determine, in areas which he might select. I objected particularly to the failure of the Congress to write the program and to create the formula under which our Government should make its contribution for relief. I regarded it as unconstitutional, and I characterized it at that time as a perversion of the American system.

The act has never been construed by the court of last resort, but the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia has considered it and held it unconstitutional.

I do not propose to read at length from that opinion, but I desire to call attention to two or three excerpts which state more clearly than I could state the constitutional objection to this sort of procedure. The court said, in referring to the Presidential discretion, as follows:

> His discretion, in the language of the Schechter decision, is "virtually unfettered." He is at liberty to set up agencies and to prescribe such rules of conduct and fix such standards as he may deem proper. There is no criterion to govern his course as to housing and the various other projects enumerated in the act. The only possible guide or policy laid down by Congress is in the words "in order to provide relief, work relief, and to increase employment by providing for useful projects", which appear at the beginning of the act.

I will interrupt the reading at that point to say that under the committee amendment now before the Senate the language is:

> To continue to provide relief and work relief on useful projects in the United States—

And so forth. So that the constitutional evil which the court found in the bill of last year is deliberately repeated in the terms of the Senate amendment in the bill which is now pending before us.

I continue to read from the court's opinion:

> But this declaration of purpose is even more general and vague than the declaration of policy rejected in the Panama and Schechter cases.

So, Mr. President, we find ourselves dealing with language which one court of appeals of our Government has held is less definite than the language which the Supreme Court of the United States condemned in two very important cases.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Does the opinion from which the Senator is reading hold that Congress may not make an appropriation to an agent so that he may use the money?

Mr. STEIWER. No, Mr. President, I think not. The court holds that the Congress may not make an appropriation for vague and indefinite purposes and leave to an agent, either the President or anyone else, the determination, first, as to whether he spends the money at all, and, if he does elect to spend it, then the determination as to what he shall spend it for.

Mr. BORAH. Does the court hold that the Congress may not appropriate money and turn it over to the President to be used for relief purposes?

Mr. STEIWER. I would not so construe it. I do not think that is the effect of the decision.

Let me read further from the decision. I am reading now from page 12:

> If the power here granted to increase the maximum amount specified by 20 percent of the entire appropriation be invoked, we find that it is possible to expend, during the indefinite project of "housing", the sum of $976,000,000 in excess of the maximum specified, or a total upon this project alone of $1,426,000,000. It logically follows that the President and not the Congress is to legislate with respect to housing. The President, not the Congress, is to set up governmental agencies to carry out the purposes of the act. The President, not the Congress, is to prescribe the regulations and rules of conduct which shall govern. The President, not the Congress, is to decide where and when and how, if at all, this enormous sum of money is to be expended for "housing."

It may be said in behalf of the proposal which is pending before the Senate, that the discretionary latitude for expending additional amounts is not as extensive as it is in the bill which the court was discussing in the opinion just read. In the pending bill, the latitude is only to make an increase of 15 percent of the amounts in each of the several categories.

The conclusion of the court with respect to the Emergency Relief Act of 1935, which it was considering, is that it constituted an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power. The court said:

> There nowhere appears that adequate definition of the subject called for in the Schechter case. The money appropriated is made available for classes of projects, among which is one designated merely as "housing."
> There is nothing in the act directly prescribing the powers or duties of the President with respect to housing. Assuming that it may be inferred from the act that the funds are to be used by the President, yet there is nothing requiring their use, either absolutely or in any specified condition or circumstance. He is free to use them or not, as he sees fit.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I was called out of the Chamber just as the Senator was starting to speak. Are the Senator's remarks directed to the provisions which are mentioned on page 23, where, apparently, some effort has been made to identify or characterize the work that may be done under the Works Progress Administration?

Mr. STEIWER. Yes, Mr. President; my remarks are directed, first, to the amendment which starts at the bottom of page 27, and then to the categories which are listed on page 28, and I had intended before I concluded to discuss the matter which is immediately before the Senate, the subhead (j), which, according to the House bill, provided for rural rehabilitation, and, according to the Senate committee's amendment, for loans and relief to farmers and livestock growers.

Mr. BONE. I have great respect for the Senator's viewpoint and judgment. I understood him to be quoting from the decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the recent case.

Mr. STEIWER. No, Mr. President; the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BONE. Yes. The decision wherein the Court declared the Resettlement Administration provision of the law was unconstitutional?

Mr. STEIWER. Yes.

Mr. BONE. Is it the Senator's viewpoint that these characterizations and identifications on page 28 are too vague to be lawful designations and lawful allocations of the money?

Mr. STEIWER. The court from which I am quoting is not the Supreme Court and is not a court of last resort, but if that court's view shall be sustained by the Supreme Court, then each of the designations on page 28, or at least most of them, are entirely too vague. They are not only ambiguous because they are uncertain and vague in themselves, but the whole language of the bill is vague because it does not mandatorily direct the President to make the expenditure, nor does it state any rule as to how he might make the expenditure. There is no rule of justice written into this bill. There is no formula suggested; there is no basis upon which the money is to be distributed between the States or between individual sufferers from the depression. The objection which I see in this matter is the complete, unfettered, discretionary power of the President to take a lump-sum appropriation and do with it much as he would like.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, if the Senator objects to my interrogating or interrupting him, I will be glad not to bother him further.

Mr. STEIWER. Not at all. I think we should all attempt to understand this question.

Mr. BONE. I take it that the language in line 9, "shall be available for", is what has challenged the Senator's attention. In other words, here is a blanket grant to the President to use this money without attempt to divert it into specific channels in the manner the Senator has indicated. If that be true, if my understanding and viewpoint be correct, what kind of language would the Senator from Oregon, as a good lawyer, suggest to make the provision more specific and certain? I seriously question that we can just tie down the distribution of relief money to too definite and too minute a category. I do not see how that would be possible.

Mr. STEIWER. Let us take the question of direct relief. Congress could provide that the President should distribute the money in accordance with need, subject to variation on account of difference in cost of living. What I object to is that there is no requirement upon the President to do anything with the money except to do as his discretion might suggest, and that is the basis of all unconstitutional delegation of powers.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. STEIWER. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, what the Court held was that the Congress could not delegate legislative power to the President——

Mr. STEIWER. That is true.

Mr. BORAH. And I certainly would not contend for a moment that we could or should undertake to do so; but when we appropriate money to be turned over to the President for the kind of work which is here proposed what legislative act of his is called into existence? He is not legislating.

Mr. STEIWER. To determine whether or not, in fact, there is need——

Mr. BORAH. That is not legislative.

Mr. STEIWER. To determine whether or not relief must be extended, and then to determine what kind of relief he will extend, or if he will extend any; to determine whether or not he will deal with one State as he does with another State.

Mr. BORAH. That is all administrative; that is not legislative.

Mr. STEIWER. I am not prepared to concede that; I think it is legislative, because unless Congress acts upon that particular point Congress loses the entire control of the public purse; it is guilty of appropriating money to the President or to somebody else and letting that somebody else determine what is to become of the money.

Mr. BORAH. It may be an unwise thing to do; it may be an impolitic thing to do, but is it, in any sense, in violation of the provision of the Constitution that the Congress may not delegate legislative power to the President——

Mr. STEIWER. I so regard it.

Mr. BORAH. Because, it seems to me, he is not called upon to perform any legislative act but purely an administrative act? The Congress might appropriate a million dollars to John Doe, if it saw fit to do so, and tell him to build a bridge. He might not build it or he might build it in the wrong way, but it would be an administrative act which he was called upon to perform.

Mr. STEIWER. I know the Senator will agree that acts may be both legislative and administrative. The Court has said in dealing with the case from which I have been quoting that the determination and the use to be made of the money is a legislative act. I base my contention upon the decision of the Court.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. STEIWER. Yes.

Mr. BONE. I know the Senator is familiar with the rather wide discretion and certainly the extreme latitude given many regulatory bodies set up under State statutes for the regulation of private utility enterprises.

Mr. STEIWER. But there is a rule.

Mr. BONE. I have thought of that so many times in our debates when we have talked about the delegation of so-called legislative power. We have set up railroad commissions and rate-making bodies.

Mr. STEIWER. But it has been held that the rule against a discriminatory rate is itself a standard by which such commissions must be guided.

Mr. BONE. Yes; but there is such a vast field there as to become almost a "twilight zone" in the realm of logic into which the Senator is entering.

It will certainly appeal to the Senator's practical sense, for he is familiar with the drafting and administration of statutes, to suggest the difficulty which would be encountered if we should go into the minute details the Senator has suggested in this instance. Just imagine what a mess we would get into if we undertook here to set up our own judgment and say so much must go here and so much must go there; that the man who is to administer the fund must have a certain state of mind or a certain attitude of mind toward the particular problem. If it touches his heart very deeply, he must give the applicants a little more money.

The Senator's viewpoint has probably much in it to commend it to those who think seriously, but, in the very nature of this problem, how in the world can 96 Senators undertake here to chart a course for the man who is trying to relieve the miseries of the people? I have a great deal of sympathy for the Senator's viewpoint, and I think I know what in his heart he desires, but I think this job is beyond the 96 Senators here. Shall we get a map and say we will put a road at a certain place, and mark the roadway which the executive who administers the law must traverse? I think it is too much for us to do. We have 96 judgments that we bring to bear; I doubt if there are two men in this body who could agree; and yet they would be perfectly sincere and perfectly honest.

I know in my own mind—perhaps, it is of no great moment—I have wrestled with this problem the Senator now confronts, whether it is better for us by legislative enactment to chart a course for the man in the White House or the men under him or to give him discretion, which, it seems to me, is within the four corners of the Constitution, a discretion which, in the very nature of things, he must be permitted to exercise, because certainly we cannot do it. The legislatures of the States have recognized the limitations not only on their own powers, but their own discretionary rights by vesting a wide authority in bodies of all sorts in the Senator's own State.

I hope I have not intruded too long on the time of my good friend the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. STEIWER. The Senator need not apologize. I agree that there are difficulties in any approach to a question which is as involved and intricate as the question of relief has grown to be in this country; but there are no difficulties in writing a formula which the Congress may wish to provide for the expenditure of money for relief. There is no difficulty in prescribing in a way that binds effectually every executive agency of the Government that there shall be a rule of justice as between relief families and as between areas and as between all those who may be the beneficiaries of the Government's great bounty.

It will appear as I proceed, I think, that the present lack of a formula, against which I contend is not only at fault because it is unconstitutional but it is at fault in the practical results which it achieves. The failure of Congress to write a formula has resulted in certain conditions which I wish now to outline to the Senate.

One result of the enactment of legislation such as the Relief Act of April 1935, is that there is a complete lack of restraint upon all executive agencies, including the President. Such lack of restraint has resulted in a want of responsibility with respect to the distribution of money for the purposes which Congress vaguely hinted in the act.

The first evidence of the want of responsibility is found in the immediate effect upon our accountancy system. I will not take the time of the Senate to discuss a matter with which all Senators, in varying degrees, are familiar, but I am going to proceed upon the theory that all Senators believe in an accountancy system, in an agent of Congress to determine whether expenditures are lawful and are authorized by law, or whether they are in violation of law. We have such a system as to a greater part of the appropriations which Congress makes, but we have effectively destroyed that system by reason of the type of legislation to which we resorted in 1935, and we will destroy it further by the type of legislation which is now pending before the Senate.

The General Accounting Office has not exercised any effective check over the expenditures under the $4,880,000,000 act. There has been no such check as might assure the expenditure of relief appropriations for the purposes contemplated by the Congress, namely, for relief and for work relief.

If a warrant submitted by the President states that the project is to "provide work relief and increase employment", or if the nature of the project is such that some employment would necessarily result, the General Accounting Office looks no further. I think someone said that if the evidence disclosed that the acquisition of land for some other sort of project which was put up to the Accounting Office would provide work for one man, the project would be regarded as qualified and eligible under the vague terms to which we have resorted.

There was an allocation of $100,000 to Prison Industries Reorganization, which affords a good example. I want to read to the Senate the whole justification that was sent to the Accounting Department in order to establish the eligibility of this particular project. It will be seen immediately that in a very substantial sense it was not a relief project at all. This is the justification:

> To provide funds for the making of surveys of industrial operations and allied activities of State penal institutions, to develop and recommend to the President for approval programs for the reorganization of State prison activities in such a way as to minimize the burden of competition between prison industries and private industries.

That I think is a very proper and laudable objective. I am not criticizing it at all. I am merely attempting to exhibit to the Senate by this illustration that there is no way by which our accounting office can determine whether or not the money is being expended for relief or work relief.

Let us pursue that a little further. The result is that very considerable sums of money are diverted from relief. It means that the taxpayers' money which we have appropriated to feed hungry mouths is diverted into some other avenue and either not used for relief at all, or, if used for relief, is used under a system so expensive, so inadequate, and so inequitable, that it may be substantially charged that our agencies have failed to carry out the will of Congress.

It is not for us to criticize the agencies. I make no criticism either of the President or the others who are distributing this money. I am trying to assert here in the most constructive way of which I am capable that the Congress of the United States should not evade the responsibility of writing the formula, so we can have some assurance that the money appropriated for relief will be used for that purpose.

Let me show briefly one or two of the consequences of the procedure we have followed and are here asked to continue. Dr. Tugwell appeared before the Senate subcommittee and the following is quoted from his testimony, on page 129 of the hearing:

> In doing this work, we have not done it as a relief job, although we have been guided by the mandate in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935. But the money we have used has not been given for relief, except a very small part of it, which has been given as emergency grants to farm families in difficult circumstances, faced with disaster from drought, flood, or some circumstance of that kind.

Here is the word of an agent of our Government who is charged with the responsibility of expending $232,000,000 out of the appropriation of last year. He does not hesitate at all to appear before a committee of this body and to say to that committee that this money was not expended "for relief, except a very small part of it." We know the story of his administration. I make no attack upon him personally. I have no grievance because of the details with which he has carried out the work entrusted to him. I think none of us now is interested in those details when faced with the greater responsibility which is ours. We know what he has done. He has purchased between eight and nine million acres of land. He has under option, in addition, in excess of ten million acres of land.

I find a memorandum of the figures to which I shall now refer. The total amount that has been allocated to his administration is $278,347,170. Approximately $34,950,000 of this sum has been used or is to be used for administrative purposes. We have not made any requirements of these agencies respecting their administrative expenses. With respect to other agencies of our Government, we have fixed most definite limitations on the amount which they may expend for administrative expenses both in the field and in the District of Columbia, but with respect to this greatest of all expenditures in our Government we have not even hinted at a limitation upon the administrative expenses which may be indulged in by those who are distributing the money.

We find here a relatively obscure official of the Government reporting that he has used and will use nearly $35,000,000 in the administrative expenses of his department. A sum in excess of $44,000,000 will be used in the purchase of submarginal land. A total of $55,125,000 will be spent for land purchases.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. STEIWER. Certainly.

Mr. HATCH. Is it not a fact that the purchases to which the Senator is referring were not made by the Resettlement Administration but were turned over to him for the purposes indicated by Mr. Hopkins, who made the purchases under the homestead administration, and they were not in reality made by the Resettlement Administration at all?

Mr. STEIWER. These particular purchases were the purchases of the Resettlement Administration.

Mr. HATCH. I understood the purchases were made by the Resettlement Administration in some cases, but Mr. Tugwell was carrying out the program which had previously been started and involved purchases made by Mr. Hopkins.

Mr. STEIWER. A number of the projects were inherited from the Interior Department and the F. E. R. A. Some of the most expensive ones were started under an administration previous to Dr. Tugwell's administration.

Mr. HATCH. That is what I thought.

Mr. STEIWER. I am very happy to say in fairness to Dr. Tugwell that I think some of the most expensive projects in terms of relief were started before the responsibility was his. Nevertheless, he completed the carrying out of the projects. There is one at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., where the expense per family unit was between $13,000 and $14,000. Dr. Tugwell was asked what justification there was under any relief program for such expenditures. His answer was that there was no justification. He was merely content to say that the project was started under an earlier administration.

But, Mr. President, the evils of this type of legislation were exhibited in the earlier legislation. What I am attempting to say to the Senate is that the whole system is wrong and that the responsibility is ours. If we fail to meet the responsibility, these agents of the Government will say that the Congress has placed its approval upon all this type of waste which has gone on before; and if the waste continues, we shall be charged, and not they, because apparently we shall have put our stamp of approval upon their conduct.

Thirty-one million dollars has been allocated for the development of four suburban resettlement projects. An additional $15,000,000 will be utilized for the completion of the subsistence homestead program.

In April of this year there were 17,055 administrative employees on the pay roll of the Resettlement Administration. At that time approximately 73,000 persons were working on relief projects under the Resettlement Administration. This means that there was one administrative employee to every four persons on work relief. It should be added, however, that there are a large number of families—I think 500,000 rural-rehabilitation cases—that were being cared for by the same administrative organization.

Mr. Hopkins submitted a statement which shows the amounts earmarked for land purchase, making a total in excess of $35,000,000 from the Emergency Relief Act of 1935. Over $22,000,000 of this sum was allocated to the Resettlement Administration. Resettlement has received from all sources for land purchases in excess of $55,000,000, so that $32,768,000 has been available to that agency from appropriations other than the 1935 act. Adding this to the total allocated from the 1935 act, the total sum earmarked for land purchases amounts to $67,986,000.

I have been unable to identify any figure which shows the total acreage of land purchases made or contemplated. Last year evidence was submitted that the total purchases were approximately 15,000,000 acres. The total amount under option at that time, I think, was seven or eight million acres more. I am told unofficially that the total purchase now is some twenty-two or twenty-four million acres of land. This area is substantially equivalent to one-half of the entire area of the State of Maine.

These purchases are made for a number of purposes. One is to take land out of production and to convert it to different uses. Another is to provide homes and gardens and small farms and better living conditions for low-income workers from suburban communities. A third is to remove families from poor land and rehabilitate them on locations better suited for contained self-support; and a fourth is to remove stranded industrial or agricultural workers and resettle them in more favorable locations.

It might be interesting on that score to notice what the court has said. I am referring again to the decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia:

The following excerpt from the opinion in the Butler case seems almost prophetic of the Federal Government's attempt to "resettle" destitute and low-income families: "Suppose that there are too many garment workers in the large cities; that this results in dislocation of the economic balance. Upon the principle contended for, an excise might be laid on the manufacture of all garments manufactured and the proceeds paid to those manufacturers who agree to remove their plants to cities having not more than a hundred thousand population. Thus, through the asserted power of taxation, the Federal Government, against the will of individual States, might completely redistribute the industrial population."

That language is quoted from the decision of the Supreme Court; and it applies most forcefully to the contention here that we may write into this bill words like "rural resettlement" or "land rehabilitation", or something of that sort, and thus authorize somebody in the executive branch to go into any area he may choose, to take a population he may desire, and to place that population anywhere he may care to place that population, without consulting the wishes of the States of the Union. In Montana there is an acquisition of a million acres, and the control of that million acres, which was privately owned land, has been taken over by the Resettlement Administration, and they propose to administer it as a grazing area; and in that instance they have neither sought nor obtained, as I understand, the consent of the State of Montana or of anyone else.

These land purchases are removing large areas from local tax rolls. For instance, the Montana project will result in the removal of one-third of the tax base of the county in which the project is located. No steps have been taken, and, so far as I know, no steps have been contemplated by the Resettlement Administration to reimburse the counties and States for the taxes lost as the result of its program.

We have, among the numerous results of this program, certain variations in the treatment which has been accorded by the Works Progress Administration to the various communities and the different States of the Union. We find in the House hearings, at page 229, the figures of contribution. They have developed the phrase "sponsor's contribution." As most of you know, the "sponsor" is the local agency that cooperates with the Works Progress Administration and makes a contribution either in cash or in materials or in the use of machinery or in the use of personnel of the local municipality in order to defray the expense of the project. At this page of the House hearings we find that the variation in contribution by States runs from a low of 8.2 percent to a high of 43 percent. There are several States where the contribution is 11 or 13 or 14 percent. There are numerous States where the contribution is in excess of 20 percent; there are some few where it is in excess of 30 percent; and one or two cases where the contribution is in excess of 40 percent.

The point I desire to make of this is that in the distribution of these funds our failure to write a formula to protect the rights of the several States and the different areas of our country has resulted in an inequitable and unfair distribution of the money and an inequitable and unfair distribution of some communities which have been permitted to enjoy the benefits of Federal contribution and at the same time make practically no contribution of their own.

The record discloses that the States which enjoy this favoritism are not always the weaker States, that the communities which enjoy this favoritism are not always the weaker communities. The place where we found the most notable favoritism was in the city of Greater New York, where the amount of the local contribution was exactly nothing at all and where the entire work program is financed with Federal money.

Another phase of the same thing is the variation in benefit as between families in different areas of the country. In this respect there has been no formula, and there are no two States upon the same basis.

Mr. President, I illustrate this situation by calling attention to a chart which I ask leave to place in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCGILL in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the tabulation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[1] Obtained by adding to the official census estimate of population in each State on July 1, 1934, an amount equal to the net change in the population in that State between July 1, 1933, and July 1, 1934, as shown in estimates of the Bureau of the Census (Statistical Abstract 1935, p. 9). This procedure assumes, therefore, that the population in each State increased over 1934 by the same amount that it increased in 1934 over 1933.

[2] Obtained by dividing the estimated population in each State by an estimate of the average number of persons per family in that State. The average population per family in the United States in 1930 was 4.1, but this figure has been decreasing by two-tenths of a unit per decade since 1890, and it seems reasonable on the basis of the assumption that this decrease is continuing to reduce the 1930 figure by one-tenth in connection with the 1935 estimated population. This procedure has been used for each State, the 1930 figure for the average number of persons per family in the State being reduced by one-tenth for use with the 1935 estimated population in that State.

[4] F. E. R. A., division of research, statistics, and finance, release of Mar. 18, 1936, no. 8579, which states that these figures include: "Obligations incurred for relief extended under the general relief program, under all special programs, and for administration; these figures also include purchases of materials, supplies, and equipment, rentals of equipment (such as team and truck hire), earnings of nonrelief persons employed and other expenses incident to the emergency work-relief program." It should, however, be noted that the expenditures under the works programs (W. P. A.) are not included. Before July 1, 1935, the F. E. R. A. program attempted to provide for both employables and unemployables. A transfer of employables to the works program began July 1, 1935, so that the expenditures for emergency relief declined from $188,571,767 in May 1935 to $70,555,119 in December 1935.

[8] United States figures calculated on basis of official estimate of United States population and family estimate based on assured continental United States, average of 4.0 persons per family. The percentage of families on relief for United States, and the per family figures in the final columns are all based on continental United States figures rather than being averages of figures for individual States.

Mr. STEIWER. This chart, I should say, is not abstracted from the hearings before the committee, but was prepared by reference to the various publications of the different relief agencies, and I believe correctly portrays the basis of spending.

The chart to which I call attention is headed "Expenditures under the F. E. R. A. program, January 1–December 31, 1935." The chart discloses the amounts paid in relief by States. It discloses in the several columns the number of families or local units which were the beneficiaries of relief payments. Then in column no. 11 it discloses the total emergency relief expenditures per family on relief. I desire to read some of those relief expenditures per family.

In Alabama the expenditure was $303. That, Senators will remember is for 1 year, from January 1 to December 31, inclusive, 1935.

In Arizona the figure was $488.

In Arkansas the figure was $332.

In California it was $762.

In Colorado it was $585.

I will not read further, inasmuch as the chart will appear in the RECORD, but I desire to say that in one State of the Union the payment per family was as low as $192, and in another State in the Union the payment was as high as $1,640.

Let Senators give consideration to this method of haphazard distribution, which results in such a disparity between relief units.

I call attention also to another tabulation which I should like to have inserted in the RECORD at this point. It is entitled "Allocation of funds under the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935 compared with relief cases by States."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon?

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[1] Data on allotments from House of Representatives hearings on first deficiency appropriation bill, 1936.

[2] Data from Federal Emergency Relief Administration monthly report for June 1935.

[3] Includes some duplication of families or individuals who received relief under both the general relief and rural rehabilitation programs.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, in the two right-hand columns of this tabulation we find the headings "Total funds per case" and "W. P. A. funds per case." The one last mentioned is, of course, the allocation only from the Works Progress Administration.

I shall not read these figures separately at this time, but I call attention to the fact that the low figures per case of W. P. A. fund allocations were $101.37 in the lowest State, with a high of $459.99 in another State.

In the first chart I mentioned there is some explanation for the disparity between States, which comes from the fact that in some States nearly all the relief has been expended in the form of direct relief and in other States the relief has been in the form of public-works projects, which, by necessity, sometimes are very expensive. But in the last chart from which I read this comparison is not involved.

In the last column the figures relate only to allocations by the Works Progress Administration and the comparison is a comparison of allocations by that administration on a family basis, or unit basis, in the various States of the Union.

Mr. President, another variation of some interest, although probably not of controlling importance, is the variation in the annual cost on the basis of man-years. That variation throws much light on the total lack of system with which relief moneys are disbursed.

Our hearings disclosed that the peak of employment on relief was 3,800,000 relief workers. Of these, 3,000,050 were W. P. A. workers. This is 80.3 percent of the total number of relief workers. Please carry that figure in mind for just a moment.

All the other agencies of our Government furnished employment for 19.7 percent. But when we examine the figures of the amounts allotted in dollars we note the astounding fact that W. P. A. had only $1,363,926,000 and the other agencies had $2,216,000,000.

The conclusion we are forced to make is that W. P. A., with all its faults, is the most economic distributor of relief moneys we have yet found. The conclusion we are forced to make is that W. P. A., having 38 percent of the funds, has provided work for more than 80 percent of those who were getting aid by work relief, and that all the other agencies combined, having 62 percent of the funds, are providing work for 19.7 percent of those who are on work relief.

Mr. President, I have sometimes been a critic of the Works Progress Administration. I am still a critic of some of the political irregularities and abuses which we find in that administration; I think these figures tell a most eloquent story. If it is the desire of the Congress to provide the maximum relief within limits of the ability of our Treasury to pay, we would do well not to adopt the amendments suggested by the Senate Committee on Appropriations, because the bill that came to us from the House lodged the authority for the expenditure of this money in the Works Relief Administration, whereas the amendment of the Senate Committee on Appropriations goes back to the old error of permitting discretionary determination by the Executive as to how, and when, and where, and if the money is to be expended.

There is one other matter I want to consider, Mr. President, before I conclude. I want to refer briefly to the result of our policy of relief in aggregate cost. This consideration in my humble opinion is the most important of all. I think most of us would say that although we prefer a good system to a bad one, that if our Treasury were able to stand the strain we would be willing to indulge some irregularities, some unavoidable difficulties, in order that our Government might contribute to the relief burden which it should help to relieve. However, when we consider whether the program is one which we can meet we may very well pause and wonder not only as to the direction in which we are tending but as to the ultimate destination at which we will arrive if we shall permit this thing to continue.

I have here a statement taken from the record of hearings of the Senate committee. I desire to read some of the answers made by Mr. Hopkins in order to exhibit to the Senate and to the country, if the country is interested, the fact that as the relief load goes down the relief standards go up, and the cost of relief is increasing and not decreasing, and it is going to continue to increase, and it will never decrease under the system which we are now following. These questions were asked and these answers were given by Mr. Hopkins:

Senator STEIWER. Was the policy to raise the level of relief benefits and standards throughout the country in operation during the time of the F. E. R. A.?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Senator STEIWER. Is that your policy?
Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.
Senator STEIWER. Who determined that policy?
Mr. HOPKINS. I did.
Senator STEIWER. On what basis?
Mr. HOPKINS. On the basis of the studies of our nurses, and our nutrition workers, and competent people, as to the amount of relief people were getting and the amount of relief that people needed.

We found families, for instance, getting $2 a month relief. It did not take any expert to know that was miserably inadequate, and we insisted in our relations with the States as a part of our standards that they give reasonably adequate relief.

The results of this policy were different in various places, because in the last analysis relief largely is a matter of local public opinion. But we did deliberately attempt to increase the standards of relief. I do not think we ever got them up high enough.

Senator STEIWER. You are not suggesting further elevation of standards out of this appropriation?

Mr. HOPKINS. We have done it by our works program, because the average benefits in wages they get is higher than the amount they got in relief.

Senator STEIWER. But let me have a little more definite answer to my question. You do not plan from this appropriation to create a higher standard of relief as against the existing standards.

Mr. HOPKINS. No.

Senator STEIWER. As against the appropriation for last year.

Mr. HOPKINS. No; we do not intend to. We may modify existing wages in some instances, but we do not intend to make any general increases.

So, Mr. President, the President of the United States has not fixed the relief standards. The Congress failed in its responsibility to fix the relief standards. Apparently they have been fixed by one subordinate agent of our Government, and that agent was Mr. Hopkins; and he puts us on our guard by telling us that, although he does not propose to elevate the relief standards from this particular appropriation, that it is his judgment they are not high enough.

What is the conclusion to be drawn from that? I think the fair conclusion to be drawn is that if we permit him to go forward in his way the time will come when he will take advantage of the unfettered authority which Congress and the President confer upon him, and will further elevate the relief standards and consequently the relief costs in this country.

Let us see what this situation has done to us up to this time. I have had prepared a chart of recovery and relief expenditures from February 1, 1932, to May 22, 1936, by months, with totals for each fiscal year. The table is in millions of dollars, the last six ciphers being omitted, and is based upon information secured from the Bureau of the Budget. I ask, Mr. President, that it may be printed in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table is as follows:

Recovery and relief expenditures from Feb. 1, 1932, to May 22, 1936, by months with totals for each fiscal year

[In millions of dollars]

Total	893	1,277	4,002	3,656	[1] 2,930

[1] To May 22, inclusive.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, this tabulation shows that the relief expenditures starting in February 1932 were $130,000,000. In March of that year they were $96,000,000; in April, $189,000,000; in May, $182,000,000; in June, $296,000,000.

Starting the new fiscal year in July 1933, the relief expenditures were $150,000,000, and they continued through that year to a high in excess of $193,000,000.

In the fiscal year 1934, commencing in July, the relief expenditures were $75,000,000. They went up in December 1934 to $423,000,000. In January 1935 they went up to $808,000,000. In February they were $447,000,000. At the end of the year, June 1935, the amount was $423,000,000.

In the fiscal year 1935 relief expenditures varied from a low of $236,000,000 to a high figure of $425,000,000.

In the fiscal year 1936 relief expenditures varied from a low of $214,000,000 to a high of $347,000,000. The figures are only given down to May 22 of this year. It is anticipated that June 1936 will show the largest relief expenditures for any month in the year.

The total shows that the high cost of relief for the fiscal year 1934 was slightly in excess of $4,000,000,000. It is estimated by the Bureau of the Budget that the cost this year will be in excess of $3,600,000,000.

The grand total of Federal relief expenditures for this period was $12,808,000,000.

To this should be added State and local expenditures which will bring the total to approximately $15,000,000,000.

Mr. President, the conclusion that may fairly and properly be drawn from this array of figures is that although the relief load has gone down slightly, according to the claims of those in authority, the cost of relief continues to go up. As I said a while ago, as the relief load goes down the relief standard goes up, so that the cost is kept up. The Works Progress Administrator told our committee that he wants the standard raised yet higher. I do not know but that they ought to be raised. I am not in favor of niggardly relief. I am not in favor of harsh and unfair treatment of people who are destitute. I am merely trying to say to this body as earnestly as I can that the relief costs are not coming down, that the lowering of the relief load is not reducing the relief costs. We are geared up to an expenditure of about $3,500,000,000 per year of Federal contribution for relief. The Congress did not fix the amount. The President did not fix the amount, but the various heads of the relief agencies have fixed the standard and have determined the amount, and all we are called upon to do is to appropriate the lump sum of money necessary to meet the requirements which they have fixed upon our Government.

I do not undertake to deal with detailed instances. For the purposes of this discussion I do not care anything about inefficiency in administration or the criticisms so often directed against relief projects; nor do I even refer to the fact that there has been political irregularities over many areas of the country. I am trying to say only that we have failed to meet our responsibility to our country. We continue this failure by the form in which the committee would have this legislation enacted. We are asked now to give to the President the unfettered discretion with respect to the expenditure of this money. Then we are asked to put Dr. Tugwell's Resettlement Administration back in the bill. We are asked to put our approval upon everything that has been done, and to vote another lump sum without restriction as to its expenditure.

We are asked to approve this thing of employing 17,000 administrative assistants in the Resettlement Administration. We are asked to continue to leave to the executive departments and to subordinate agents the determination of what our policy is to be, and to permit under the cloak of humanitarianism and in the guise of beneficent paternalism the evolution of impractical and visonary projects which are utterly without justification. By the action of the Senate committee we are asked again to write a blank check for the President of the United States, and by doing so, to put our stamp of approval upon a system which makes of human misery a shield for the initiation and prosecution of projects which the Congress would not even seriously consider were they required to stand on their own merit.

I know that no word I can say will stay this Congress from doing that thing, but I am not willing to let the bill be passed without discharging my obligation to my country by standing here and, as vigorously as I can, condemning the whole thing of the delegation of powers and the appropriation of money without restraint, without control, without definition.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD at this point letters from mayors of various cities in Oregon expressing their views as to the program of the Works Progress Administration in Oregon, approving it in every instance. They give their full approval to the program of the Works Progress Administration and pay tribute to the manner in which the funds have been administered in the State of Oregon.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MYRTLE POINT, OREG., April 20, 1936.

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION,
Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

(Attention: Mr. E. J. Griffith, State administrator.)

DEAR SIR: Replying to your letter of April 17th regarding the program of the Works Progress Administration and asking certain pertinent questions regarding the success of the program.

We feel that the idea of giving work rather than the dole is the proper method because, first, it has been demonstrated to us that the people who are in need of help would rather perform some labor for the help received and, secondly, that the sponsors of the various projects are securing much-needed assistance in work that is, or will be, within a couple of years necessary to be done, by the sponsors.

The work being done by us is a much-needed item. In our case we are making an extension to our water system which serves a number of people and which is at present inadequate as well as obsolete.

We have yet quite a lot of work that should be done in the matter of obsolete water mains, these already having served their allotted time, but which we would be unable to complete when necessary without the help of some governmental agency, so we would say that we have quite a lot of useful work yet to be done.

There is only one real criticism we would make and that would be in the time consumed in the passing on applications. It would appear that each State director should be allowed the privilege of passing and allowing project or else some method devised to secure more prompt action in the office at Washington, D. C., so that the work could be done at a time when the labor surplus is greatest. Taken all in all we feel that the W. P. A. is one of the most-needed governmental agencies both from the labor carry-over standpoint and as related to the necessary assistance given the sponsors.

Thanking you for giving us this chance of expressing our opinions and criticism, we are,

Yours very truly,

RALPH D. KING, Mayor.

PORTLAND, OREG., April 27, 1936.

Mr. E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator, Works Progress Administration,
Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: In response to your letter of April 14, I offer you the following answers to your numbered inquiries:

1. Yes.
2. Yes; in the main.
3. Yes.
4. At a recent regional conference of the United States Conference of Mayors held in San Francisco, the attending mayors seemed to be unanimously of the opinion that until industry takes the initiative and provides for those who wish to work it will be necessary to carry on the W. P. A. program; certain it is our people do not wish to be on the dole.

Yours very truly,

JOSEPH K. CARSON, Jr., Mayor.

AMITY, OREG.,
April 22, 1936.

State Administrator, W. P. A.,
Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of a questionnaire from your office asking as to how well the program of the Works Progress Administration is meeting the unemployment problem, etc. In reply would say:

1. Is work the proper method of meeting the unemployment problem as compared to the dole and idleness?

In my opinion work is far more preferable, as that is what self-respecting people want.

2. Are we doing useful and needed work under the W. P. A. program?

So far as this locality is concerned, all work that has been done has been on projects that were well worth while.

3. Is there useful work yet to be done under a continued W. P. A. program?

In this community there are a number of projects, such as more improvements to the city water-works system, street improvements, etc., that could be undertaken if they could be financed in part with Federal assistance.

4. Any comment you care to make.

The interest taken by W. P. A. officials who are connected with the rebuilding of our water-works system is greatly appreciated. The W. P. A. engineer (Mr. Hicks) has saved the city of Amity several hundred dollars by showing us where changes could be made that has saved us money. And nothing escapes his eagle eye.

Yours very sincerely,

THE DALLES, OREG., APRIL 28, 1936.

E. J. GRIFFITH,
Administrator, Works Progress Administration,
12th Floor, Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR SIR: Your letter to Mayor Willerton has been given this office for reply.

It is the unanimous opinion of the members of Dalles City Council that under the Works Progress Administration the unemployment problem has been aided materially, that the work done or in progress is much needed and the W. P. A. programs should be continued.

For the past several months there has been several projects in this community, some sponsored by the State of Oregon and others by the port of The Dalles.

This city to date has not participated, although we have been trying, through Mr. W. M. Bartlett, division engineer, to get some W. P. A. projects under way.

Should W. P. A. programs be continued, we can assure you that this city will sponsor several. Sewers, sidewalks, and recreation grounds.

Yours very truly,

J. H. STEERS,
Recorder of Dalles City.

NORTH BEND, OREG., April 21, 1936.

E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator W. P. A., Portland, Oreg.

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: In reply to your inquiry of April 17 regarding the unemployment problem:

1. Work is the proper method in meeting the unemployment situation, most of the unemployed do not want charity.
2. The W. P. A. projects now in operation constitute valuable public improvement of a permanent character, which we need but could not take care of if it were not for the W. P. A.
3. Yes; there is a lot of useful work yet to be done under a continued W. P. A. program.

Trusting that this is the information you desire, I remain,

Very truly yours,

L. A. CUTLIP.

HILLSBORO, OREG., April 27, 1936.

Hon. E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator, W. P. A.,
Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: In replying to your letter of inquiry as to the success and progress of the W. P. A. program, we are pleased to report as follows:

1. We favor work relief in preference to the dole or idleness for able-bodied unemployed men and women.
2. The Works Progress Administration in our city has been a success. Our efforts have been to furnish needed and useful projects of a general public benefit, such as improving and beautifying our city park and recreational center, constructing concrete sidewalks, curbs, and macadamizing streets.
3. There is much work yet to be done under the above-outlined projects and still other worthy projects which could be carried out under a continued W. P. A. program.
4. With few exceptions the employees have worked well and appreciated the opportunity of having such public work during the off season or at a time when private work was unobtainable.

We are of the opinion this community will continue to need some such a program as W. P. A. this coming winter to relieve unemployment when seasonable employment slacks up.

Very truly yours,

THE CITY OF HILLSBORO, OREG.,
By J. H. GARRETT, Mayor.

PENDLETON, OREG., April 17, 1936.

Mr. E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator, Works Progress Administration,
Twelfth Floor, Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: I have received your letter of April 14, 1936, in which you request me to express an opinion on the program of the Works Progress Administration.

These questions I shall endeavor to answer in the order in which you have asked them.

No. 1. Is work the proper method of meeting the unemployment problem as compared to the dole and idleness?

My opinion on this subject is much the same as that given in the report of the United States Conference of Mayors, a copy of which you enclosed. There is, of course, a small percentage of workers from relief rolls who prefer, through sheer laziness, to accept a grocery order instead of doing a day's work. The great majority, however, always say, "I want a job, not charity." Enforced idleness, encouraged by the dole, is essentially destructive to the moral well-being of our people. Particularly in an agricultural area, where most of our people have been accustomed all their lives to manual labor, a work program is highly desirable as the solution of the relief problem.

No. 2. Are we doing useful and needed work under the W. P. A. program?

Decidedly; yes. I know from first-hand experience that the projects sponsored by Umatilla County have been useful and they are unquestionably needed. Any project for construction of a road is useful and needed, and most of our projects have been of that type.

No. 3. Is there useful work yet to be done under a continued W. P. A. program?

I should estimate that there is sufficient work already planned in Umatilla County, some of which has been submitted and approved, to take care of the situation for 3 years at least.

No. 4. Any comments you care to make.

On this subject, it is rather difficult to answer you. We have been exceptionally well pleased with the operation of the program and have no criticisms to offer. However, one point should be stressed in planning of your projects. I believe you should exercise extreme care that you do not undertake any work which would normally be done by the political subdivision acting as the sponsor. While I don't know of any specific cases where this has been overlooked, I do believe that it is quite possible that some counties or cities and school districts are taking unfair advantage of the availability of relief labor. Whenever this occurs, it, of course, throws men out of employment who would ordinarily be employed directly by the political subdivision involved. This causes harsh criticism.

Along another line, I should urge you to operate projects which offer a maximum of expenditures for labor, with the material cost held very low. Projects of this type would include clearing of river channels to prevent flood damage, and the strengthening of roadsides for erosion control and better drainage.

I trust that my remarks will be of some interest to you, and assure you that any cooperation we can offer will be most cheerfully given.

Very truly yours,

G. F. HODGES, County Judge.

TILLAMOOK CITY, OREG., April 24, 1936.

Mr. E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator, Portland, Oreg.

MY DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: In answer to your letter of April 18, outlining four questions in relation to the work of the relief administration in Tillamook City, I will answer them as follows:

1. I believe wholeheartedly with the administration that the only proper method of meeting the unemployment problem is through public work, such as we have been doing with the relief money.

2. The work that we have been doing in Tillamook City and Tillamook County with the W. P. A. program has been of the most useful kind and is of a permanent nature, and benefits from it will be derived by the public in general for years and years to come.

3. We feel that there is more work that can be done and accomplished through a continued W. P. A. program. Tillamook City itself has several further projects that we would be interested in cooperating with if the program is continued.

In summary, I would say the method of furnishing employment through the W. P. A. to the unemployed public has been, to my mind, an outstanding accomplishment of the Democratic administration.

I feel that this method of unemployment relief is so far superior to the dole system that there is absolutely no comparison whatsoever, and I sincerely hope that the leaders in our country will never come to the point where they will simply dole money out to the unemployed, rather than have them work for what they get.

I am sure that the above expresses the viewpoint of all of the thinking people of our city and country.

Wishing you continued success in your operations, I am,

Yours sincerely,

A. J. SWETT,
Mayor, City of Tillamook.

GRESHAM, OREG., April 20, 1936.

E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator, Works Progress Administration,
Bedell Building, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: It is a pleasure to reply to your letter of April 14 inquiring as to our experiences, etc., with the Works Progress Administration's program.

In the first place any red-blooded American citizen wants and is definitely entitled to work, and all of them resent the dole idea.

We feel that all of the work which has been done under W. P. A. in our community through the numerous recent small projects have been of useful nature and actually provided betterment to our public buildings, highways, drainage areas, etc., of a distinct improvement. There is now under construction in the city of Gresham, a P. W. A. sewage system and disposal plant, and we sincerely trust that your organization's facilities will be available for a street-repair and general clean-up project late this fall.

Yours very truly,

R. K. AKIN, Mayor.

MADRAS, OREG., April 17, 1936.

Re: W. P. A. program in Oregon.
Mr. E. J. GRIFFITH,
State Administrator, Works Progress Administration,
Portland, Oreg.

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: Your letter of the 14th received and read carefully, and in reply I will give you my opinion as to how well the program of the Works Progress Administration is meeting the unemployment here.

1. I think work is the proper method of meeting the unemployment problem as compared with the dole and idleness. The men say, "We want work, not charity, as we still have our pride with us and wish to maintain our freedom, liberty, and self-respect."

2. I want to state emphatically that the work projects in Jefferson County are not only useful but necessary. It is helping us to keep the men at work. It is also allowing us to get some needed road improvement which it would be impossible for the county to bear all the expense. We are beginning a grade Tuesday, the 21st, which is badly needed and could not be built by the county without the aid of the W. P. A. funds.

3. There is much more needed and useful work to be done in this county. We have on file in your offices a blanket county projects, totaling about $18,000, which I hope we may soon have approved.

4. I am sure that if we could have the rule amended, so that men who had been on the relief prior to May 1, 1935, to reach back to January 1, 1935, it would be a godsend to this country. I also believe the minimum rate should be raised to $45 per month and semi, and skilled, according.

Thanking you for this opportunity to express views on the W. P. A. program and assuring you of continued cooperation, I am,

Most sincerely yours,

W. R. COOK, County Judge.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I have had called to my attention recently a difficulty from which not only my own State but I think many other States have suffered, and I suspect that not many Members of the Senate have had it brought to their attention.

Under the regulations of the Works Progress Administration it has clearly appeared that a man might not be employed on public works unless he was on the relief rolls of the State in which he lived. I think all of us will realize how terribly humiliating that has been to many very fine people. I have been in homes where, by dint of greatest effort and by most humiliating sacrifices men had thus far, at the time I contacted them, kept off the relief rolls. I think it presented one of the saddest pictures I know of, where men I have known for years were spending every effort to keep from going on relief rolls and thus publicly announcing themselves to be paupers. I think my colleague, the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH], in the early part of the session introduced a bill which would have authorized those who were in need, and who had been out of work for any length of time, to take advantage of the Works Progress Administration program which was being carried on.

It seems to me the correction of the condition I have described is something that should appeal to every Member of the Senate. I think all of the Senators perhaps have had conditions of that sort brought to their attention at some time. Perhaps their own friends, through adversity, have been placed in that humiliating situation, and I think it is very unfair. It is just degrading.

On page 31 of the pending bill I observe this language—and it is to this language that I direct the attention of the Senator from Colorado:

> That in the employment of persons applicants in actual need whose names have not heretofore been placed on relief rolls shall be given the same eligibility for employment as applicants whose names have heretofore appeared on such rolls.

Let me ask the Senator if he thinks that language is broad enough not only to apply to the situation I have described but to remove that kind of a humiliating situation.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Washington that the very purpose of the language he has read is to remove that situation and to cure it. In my judgment, it will solve the problem, because no longer is it to be required that in order to receive employment under the Relief Administration the applicant shall have been upon the relief rolls as of a particular date. The only test is that he shall be unemployed and in need. The amendment specifically says:

That in the employment of persons applicants in actual need whose names have not heretofore been placed on relief rolls shall be given the same eligibility for employment as applicants whose names have heretofore appeared on such rolls.

Mr. BONE. I am sure the Senator will agree with me that this condition has had a most demoralizing and degrading effect on many men, and it has compelled them virtually to take a pauper's oath. I really think we should not any longer impose that sort of a condition on decent Americans. I know abuses might grow out of a different course; but certainly the Senate has no right to put up that sort of a yardstick to a decent American.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. BONE. I do.

Mr. GLASS. I may say to the Senator from Washington that it was the purpose of this provision to correct the very condition he points out. In my State a considerable public project had to be closed down because there were not enough persons on relief rolls in the particular two counties to do the necessary work. I will say, however, that when I brought the matter to the attention of the director of public relief he immediately corrected the situation; and the work, which was a large road project, went on.

Mr. BONE. I imagine the Senator probably feels as I do; and I suspect that in the very locality concerning which the Senator speaks there were a small army of persons who were in the position I have described, who gladly would have taken the jobs.

Mr. GLASS. Gladly; and, as a matter of fact, in that entire congressional district just one-half of 1 percent of persons were on the relief rolls, not nearly enough to complete the project which was then in progress.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE, BATON ROUGE, LA.

Mr. OVERTON. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 4618, Calendar No. 2206.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand that it is a bridge bill.

Mr. OVERTON. It is a bridge bill. It meets with the approval of the departments, and is for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Baton Rouge, La.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 4618) granting the consent of Congress to the Louisiana Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free or toll highway bridge, or a railway bridge in combination with a free or toll highway bridge, and approaches thereto across the Mississippi River at or near Baton Rouge, La., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Louisiana Highway Commission, an administrative body created and acting under the constitution and laws of the State of Louisiana, to construct, maintain, and operate a free or toll highway bridge, or a railway bridge in combination with a free or toll highway bridge, and approaches thereto across the Mississippi River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Baton Rouge, in the State of Louisiana, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. If tolls are charged for the use of such bridges, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of the bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the costs of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

SAVANNAH RIVER BRIDGE, AUGUSTA, GA.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 4549, Calendar No. 2196. It is a bill providing for the reconstruction of a bridge which was recently damaged by flood conditions in the Savannah River Basin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 4549) authorizing the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia to replace, reconstruct, or repair the free highway bridge across the Savannah River at or near the city of Augusta, Ga., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the Postal Service, and provide for military and other purposes, the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia is hereby authorized to replace, reconstruct, or repair the free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Savannah River, known as the North Augusta Bridge, at or near the city of Augusta, Ga., and to maintain and operate such bridge as a free highway bridge, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, replacement, reconstruction, repair, operation, and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

SEC. 3. The authority granted by this act shall cease and be null and void unless the replacement, reconstruction, or repair authorized herein is actually commenced within 2 years and completed within 4 years from the date of the enactment of this act.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

PRODUCTION COSTS OF WOOLEN KNIT GLOVES AND MITTENS

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, on the calendar is Senate Resolution 270, being Calendar No. 2217, submitted by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], providing for an investigation under section 336 of the tariff act of the production costs of woolen knit gloves and mittens. It is in the usual form for resolutions of this character and was unanimously reported yesterday by the Finance Committee. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a resolution, which will be read.

The legislative clerk read Senate Resolution 270, submitted by Mr. COPELAND on March 31, 1936, for an investigation of the production of costs of woolen knit gloves and mittens, and it was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the United States Tariff Commission is directed, under the authority conferred by section 336 of the Tariff Act of 1930, and for the purposes of that section, to investigate the differences in the costs of production of the following domestic articles and of any like or similar foreign articles: Knit gloves and mittens made wholly or in chief value of wool, dutiable under paragraph 1529 (a) of such act.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on that portion of the committee amendment on line 23, page 28, striking out the words "rural rehabilitation." [Putting the question.] By the sound the "noes" seem to have it.

Mr. BYRNES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BONE. I should like to have the Chair advise us—I did not hear the question put—as to the effect of yea-and-nay votes on this question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yea-and-nay vote is being taken on the question whether the Senate will strike from the bill, as proposed by the committee amendment on line 23, page 28, the words "rural rehabilitation."

Mr. BONE. What would be the effect of a vote "yea" or a vote "nay" on this question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An affirmative vote would be a vote to sustain the committee amendment striking out the words "rural rehabilitation", and a vote in the negative would be a vote to retain the language in the bill as it passed the House. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON], who is absent. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who is unavoidably absent. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. FRAZIER (when Mr. NYE's name was called). My colleague the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] is absent. He is paired on this vote with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY]. If my colleague were present and voting, he would vote "nay", and I understand that the Senator from Pennsylvania, if present and voting, would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], which I transfer to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BROWN], and vote "yea."

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Florida [Mr. LOFTIN], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from Louisiana [Mrs. LONG], the Senator from California [Mr. McADOO], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] with the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING]; and

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], if present and voting, would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 38, as follows:

YEAS—28

Adams	Byrnes	Hale	O'Mahoney
Austin	Carey	Hastings	Pittman
Bachman	Copeland	Hayden	Radcliffe
Barbour	Couzens	Johnson	Steiwer
Bulkley	Gerry	Keyes	Tydings

Byrd	Glass	Metcalf	Walsh

NAYS—38

Ashurst	Clark	Minton	Schwellenbach
Bailey	Connally	Murphy	Sheppard
Barkley	Fletcher	Murray	Shipstead
Benson	Frazier	Neely	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Hatch	Norris	Thomas, Utah

Coolidge	Gore	McAdoo	Van Nuys
Costigan	Guffey	McCarran	White
Davis	Harrison	McNary
Dickinson	King	Moore

So the amendment of the committee was rejected.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I present an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill and ask that it be printed and lie on the table. This amendment is substantially Senate Joint Resolution 266, introduced by me on the 12th of May, and having relation to the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tidal power project. The amendment is proposed as an amendment to the committee amendment after line 10 on page 30. The amendment is not offered at this time, as it would not be in order, but I ask to have it printed and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Arkansas move a recess at this time?

Mr. ROBINSON. I thought that perhaps the particular amendment which is under consideration might be acted on. Then I will make a motion that the Senate take a recess until tomorrow.

Mr. President, there was a division, the Chair will recall, of the committee amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes. The question now is on agreeing to the insertion of the word "loans", after the word "rehabilitation", on page 28, line 23.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Colorado if, in his opinion, a comma ought not to be inserted after the word "rehabilitation"?

Mr. ADAMS. If the Senator thinks it ought to be inserted, I will accept his judgment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am asking the Senator's opinion about the matter.

Mr. ROBINSON. It makes a great deal of difference whether or not the comma is inserted.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senate having rejected the committee amendment striking out the words "rural rehabilitation", thereby retaining those words in the bill, a comma should be inserted after the word "rehabilitation."

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; Mr. President, a comma should be inserted at that point.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That would make the clause read:

(1) rural rehabilitation, loans and relief to farmers and livestock growers,

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I am in favor of a comma being inserted at that point. It may restrain Mr. Tugwell from buying millions of acres of land.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, a comma will be inserted after the word "rehabilitation."

The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 28, line 23, to insert after the word "rehabilitation" and the comma the word "loans."

The amendment was agreed to.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate passed House Bill 12120, to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories. This was in form and substance the Senate vocational education bill; but in passing the House bill the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] suggested that one phrase in the text of the Senate bill be incorporated as an amendment.

I have since talked with the Senator from Nebraska, and we have gone over the matter. He has authorized me to say that if it is agreeable to have unanimous consent to reconsider the votes by which the amendment was adopted and the bill was passed, the amendment may be eliminated, so that there will be no necessity of sending the bill to conference. Accordingly, I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the votes by which the Senate amendment was engrossed, and the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I gather that this course meets with the approval of the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. GEORGE. It does meet with the approval of the Senator from Nebraska. He authorized me to make the statement if he should be absent from the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia? The Chair hears none, and the votes are reconsidered.

Mr. GEORGE. I now ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska was adopted may be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Mr. GEORGE. I now withdraw the amendment. I will state for the information of the Senate that one of the appropriations carried in the bill provided for the pay of teachers and directors of trade and industrial subjects. The amendment inserted the words "including public service and other service occupations." By withdrawing the amendment those words will not become a part of the bill.

I now ask that the Senate pass the House bill without amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION IN WEST VIRGINIA

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a digest of favorable comments of mayors and county and State officials on the conduct of the Works Progress Administration in the State of West Virginia under the leadership of Hon. F. W. McCullough.

There being no objection, the digest was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

O. E. Hogan, mayor of Williamson: "I feel that we have gotten wonderful results from the W. P. A. and have made much better progress than under any former set-up."

Ben F. Morris, mayor of Marmet: "* * * The projects have operated satisfactorily to the citizens of the town, and in a manner most commendable to the W. P. A. officials."

H. F. Brittingham, mayor of Philippi: "The W. P. A. has cooperated with us in every manner possible, and we are not only putting all our streets and alleys in good condition but giving employment to practically all our unemployed."

E. S. Tisdale, director, division of sanitary engineering: "* * * I want to thank you for the hearty cooperation which has been extended to our forces by your organization in dealing with flood sanitation."

Sidney E. Goad, mayor of Clendenin: "May I take this means of expressing the appreciation of the town of Clendenin, as well as personally, for the manner in which the W. P. A. and your Clendenin supervisor, Mr. J. Frank Huffman, handled the W. P. A. situation in your district, and for the great service which you and your assistants rendered our community?"

F. L. Larkin, mayor of Terra Alta: "The mayor and Town Council of Terra Alta desire to express to you our unqualified approval of the entire administration of projects sponsored by the town of Terra Alta."

Elmer W. Prince, city manager, Morgantown: "The cooperation of our townspeople and W. P. A. employees has been most gratifying, and we desire to take this opportunity to again express our appreciation of the assistance being rendered the city of Morgantown by the W. P. A. in making greatly needed permanent improvements about the city."

Paul W. Watson, secretary, Preston County Board of Education: "Without W. P. A. assistance it would be impossible for the board to make any of the many improvements which are now being effected."

Mattie Thomas, mayor of Sabraton: "So far as I know, there is absolutely no corruption of any kind in connection with the project (Sabraton Avenue project no. 1973). It is going along fine, everybody is satisfied, and we hope the project will continue as it is."

Goebel W. Harr, Fairmont, W. Va.: "The W. P. A. shouldn't apologize for the time or money spent on this job, which will affect the lives of at least 350 people and will continue to serve a useful purpose for an increased number long after its cost is forgotten. In fact, one good old-fashioned typhoid epidemic, which this sewer may prevent, would cost a great deal more than 8,500 feet of ditch and tile."

Warwood Boosters Club: "The Boosters have worked hard and long to secure a recreation and athletic center for our community, but we cannot overlook the fact that only through your influence and able assistance have we been able to realize our ambitions."

W. C. Bailey, superintendent, Wyoming County schools: "Since November 20, 1935, I have had under my supervision a county-wide school-repair project, no. 1958. Since this project has been of much value to Wyoming County please allow me this opportunity of saying a few words in behalf of same. * * * The men employed on this project were all taken from the list of unemployed and such work has enabled them to live, send their children to school, and fit into society in general in a much more efficient manner than they had formerly."

Troy M. Gillum, mayor of Shinnston: "I wish to extend to you and the W. P. A. our sincere appreciation for the assistance and cooperation received from you during the construction of the various projects in this city. * * * I desire to particularly emphasize the fact that absolute harmony exists between the W. P. A. and the city of Shinnston, and that the selection of foremen and subformen on the various projects has been entirely satisfactory to us."

J. A. Deegan, mayor of Bridgeport: "We appreciate the hearty cooperation received from your office and the supervisors and foremen, and we appreciate the wonderful improvement being made to the streets of this town."

R. J. Steward, mayor of Nutter Fort: "In behalf of the officials and citizens of the town of Nutter Fort, I wish to express to yourself and the directors of the W. P. A. our sincere thanks for the many services rendered the town in connection with its street-improvement projects under the W. P. A. The treatment accorded us has been of the highest type, courteous, and prompt."

Linn B. Ferrell, mayor of Salem: "* * * I want to express my appreciation to you and those connected with the Fairmont office of the W. P. A. for the splendid cooperation you and they have shown the city in connection with our W. P. A. sanitary sewer project. The same can be said for the foremen and timekeeper supervising the work locally."

F. W. Thompson, councilman, Salem: "We consider ourselves very fortunate in securing the grant now being used to take care of our sewage. The men we have at the head of this project are doing a great work—and a much-needed work—in our beautiful little town; work that the city itself was unable to do."

K. M. Jarrell, M. D., Princeton Sanitarium: "Mr. Wilfong, district engineer here, seems to be getting along nicely, and he will receive 100-percent cooperation from this outfit at the sanitarium."

K. M. Jarrell, M. D., superintendent, Pinecrest Sanatorium: "I appreciate greatly your approval on project no. 399 for Pinecrest Sanatorium. This project was badly needed and will be one which will be of great worth to this institution, as it falls in line with other plans for making Pinecrest Sanatorium an outstanding institution in the State of West Virginia."

R. E. Stewart, clerk, Hampshire County: "We have been very much encouraged all through the various channels regarding approval of the above-mentioned project, as it is designed to absorb a class of labor what might be called the white-collar class, and I do not believe there is another project submitted from Hampshire County that will absorb this class of labor. It is also work that will be of untold value to future generations." (The project referred to was that of reclassifying, rerecording, and reindexing old wills, appraisements, and settlements of estates.)

J. A. Chambers, president, West Virginia Board of Control: "Your cooperation on all of our projects has been 100 percent to date."

Elmer W. Prince, city manager, Morgantown: "Assuring you of the appreciation of the cooperation of your organization with the city administration, and further assuring you of the permanent work that is being accomplished by the Works Progress Administration."

S. C. Rothmann, Assistant State Director, United States Public Health Service: "It gives me great pleasure to bring to your attention the fact that we have met with utmost cooperation and friendliest of spirit upon the part of all of your district officials. We have found most of them helpful and eager to assist us in every way."

A. M. Price, M. D., collaborating epidemiologist, division of rural sanitation, State department of health: "I wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation, as well as that of the United States Public Health Service, for the cooperation received from you and your staff in the field with the community sanitation program."

Guy Payne, Payne's Drug Store, Barrackville: "We would like to express our appreciation of a W. P. A. project that was worked on in Barrackville last summer and fall. That was the sanitary sewer that was laid from just back of our drug store through the Ice and Harden land to Buffalo Creek. Previously the sewage from approximately a dozen to 15 homes and business places was carried to a point less than 50 feet back of our store and emptied there, where it made a perfect breeding place for flies, disease, and mosquitos.

* * * It would be in the same condition today had it not been for the work of the W. P. A."

W. F. Alexander, Charles Town, W. Va.: "I wish to thank you for the attention you have given to the matter of getting the roads clear in this county."

H. T. Diehl, vice president, Bradshaw-Diehl-Homer Co., department store, Huntington, W. Va.: "When the work of repaving Tenth Street in front of our store, which is a W. P. A. project, was started the first part of November we were very much disturbed over the matter, because we thought it would be impossible to get the street reopened for the holiday business. * * * The merchants were shown every courtesy by Mr. J. J. West, district administrator, W. P. A., and he finally convinced them that he could complete the job and get the street opened during the first part of December. * * * The street was thrown open for traffic on Saturday, December 7, and * * * we think it was about as good as could be expected, taking everything into consideration."

Ira J. Baer, judge, juvenile court, Huntington: "The recreational program and the community-center program that was developed in Cabell County under the E. R. A. set-up, and in which you played an important part, was worth so much as a preventive measure in our juvenile-delinquency work that I was worried for quite a while for fear the W. P. A. might not follow this up. But it is following it up, and the investigation of this court leads me to believe that this work is increasing in importance."

A. C. Spurr, Monongahela West Penn Public Service Co.: "I want you to know that splendid progress has been made on the Adams Street widening job here in Fairmont. Excellent time has been made and it has brought about much favorable comment on the type of work that is being done."

James E. Allen, president, Marshall College, Huntington: "I believe I am recording the desire of everybody here connected with the college when I state that we all recognize the great work you have done for Marshall College and Huntington and, for that matter, for the State, in making it possible to get this splendid new training school."

E. S. Tisdale, director, division of sanitary engineering: "I wish to express my appreciation for the cooperation you have given us up to date."

M. V. Chapman, mayor of Huntington: "Great as have been the material gains of W. P. A. projects of this community, I feel that they have been superseded by the moral gain of providing useful employment to the needy unemployed of this community. The projects now carried on by W. P. A. represent useful work of permanent benefit to the community."

Grover C. Evick, ex-mayor of Franklin: "* * * we Pendleton folks have been getting good accomplishments from the W. P. A. * * * and without this work we would have around 400 to 500 families who just could not exist unless they had some help from some source or other. * * * Never at any time has politics taken part in our county."

John B. Grumboin, superintendent of buildings and grounds, West Virginia University, Morgantown: "* * * It does not matter to me what anyone may say regarding the Works Progress Administration, for I know very definitely that in our two projects we have had sincere cooperation from all officials whom we contacted, and I know of not one case where politics entered in the slightest degree. The university has certainly profited by the assistance given through W. P. A."

J. T. Dailey, mayor of Kingwood: "We feel that the money expended in our small city has given much needed employment and has resulted in permanent and needed improvements, which, because of the constitutional tax limitation, we could not possibly have done."

Albert R. Field, mayor of Milton: "The vastness of the undertakings of the W. P. A. doubtless lays it bare to frequent public indictment, but I am sure our citizens here accept its endowments in the worthy and beneficent spirit in which the President and the Congress have provided them and are grateful."

R. F. Lipscomb, mayor of St. Albans: "The citizens of the town feel that they are getting the worth of the money spent and hope to get two more sewer projects as soon as these are finished."

Paul W. Watson, Preston County superintendent of schools: "The Preston County Board of Education has submitted 11 W. P. A. project proposals. At the present time three of those projects are in operation and one other has been approved. These projects are making it possible for a great many improvements to be made in connection with school properties which could not be made at all if it were not for this assistance from Federal funds."

J. W. Blakely, mayor of Welch: "Our projects are all working, except the Welch Municipal Airport, which was about 60 percent completed when the work was stopped, and we have absolutely no complaints to make on the treatment we have received from your office or executives."

Clarence B. Bishoff, member of house of delegates, Manheim: "I wish to express to you, on behalf of my good friends and neighbors in this community, their appreciation for the good work that the W. P. A. is doing on our road, from the town of Rowlesburg to our village here."

L. M. Smith, Manheim: "As one who has long been a resident of the community, I wish to express to you and your associates my commendation of the road project you are now engaged with between Manheim and Rowlesburg. This has been a long-necessary road and is now beginning to fill a long-desired ambition of the people of the community."

Homer Ransberger, Leivasy, W. Va.: "I have found that your organization has not undertaken any project in the neighborhood of our lands except such projects as are permanent in their nature and for the benefit of the largest number of people. They have been designated so as to take care of the greatest number of unemployed, and as far as I have been able to observe, those projects have been carried out economically."

J. A. Jackson, secretary, Harrison County Board of Education: "This road is not only a credit to yourself and the organization you represent, but it is a great help to the many students who attend the Shinnston High School, as well as the bus drivers who must use that road. We assure you that we are all proud of this improvement."

N. D. Hooton, recorder of Rowlesburg: "As a resident of this town, I wish to express to you my appreciation of the road project now building between Rowlesburg and Manheim. * * * Everyone speaks of this road in the most favorable terms.

G. C. Billups, chairman flood-relief committee: "Permit me, as chairman of our flood-relief committee, to express to you and to your entire organization our deepest appreciation for all of your splendid cooperation and resources that you have placed at our disposal."

J. B. Couch, mayor of Point Pleasant: "At present we are just emerging from a disastrous flood. * * * Had it not been for the ceaseless, untiring efforts of W. P. A., the unstinted use of their entire facilities, together with other unselfish agencies, we could not have emerged in the excellent state of health and mind we are happily able to master."

W. C. Bailey, superintendent, Wyoming County schools: "The projects have all been very beneficial and have added quite a bit to the effectiveness of the present school term."

Ava Stanard, superintendent, West Virginia Industrial School for Girls: "May I take this opportunity of expressing to you my appreciation of the splendid work of the W. P. A., as demonstrated in the projects at this institution."

J. C. Matthey, councilman, city of Salem: "It is also my opinion, formed from general observation, that the general public is well pleased with the work, and it has certainly been a great help to business in this community."

R. W. Rogers, mayor of Hillsboro: "* * * the W. P. A. in Hillsboro is working out satisfactorily to all of the men employed on the project and to almost all of the people who occasionally pass judgment on it. The general feeling of the people toward our street project would indicate that there is but little, if any, opposition."

E. S. Tisdale, director, division of sanitary engineering, quoting from a report from the assistant director in charge of the mine-sealing program: "I also saw fish in the Coalton Dam where no fish has been able to live for 25 years. This, I think, is a particular commentary on the efficiency of mine-sealing operations."

C. T. Taylor, M. D., superintendent, Huntington State Hospital: "Without the assistance of W. P. A. it would have taken many years for us to have accomplished in the way of improvements what the W. P. A. has done in less than a year, and would have held up indefinitely our plans."

H. H. Kerr, mayor of Elkins: "Project 65-41-1640, Cravens Run Bridge, is now completed, and we accept this project and at the same time extend thanks for this needed improvement to our city."

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock meridian.

The Reverend Clifford H. Jope, D. D., pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Our divine Father, we thank Thee for the rich heritage which is ours from the years that are passed. It seems to us today that every privilege we enjoy is tinged with the red blood of the Nation's patriots.

We are grateful to Thee and to them for liberty and the opportunity to achieve, for safety and the institutions that nurture and protect us.

We praise Thee for the men and women among us who have consecrated themselves to the Nation's good. Grant, O Father, enlightenment in the making of laws and the compulsion of Thy spirit in the creation of a wider fraternal sympathy and comradeship between men. Give the necessary inspiration to enable us to seek and achieve peace and happiness. Free us from secret and open iniquity. Save us from dark forces that seek to destroy.

Grant to the President and all who share in the government of the realm the guidance of Thy spirit, and use them as ministers in Thy kingdom of truth.

In the spirit of Him who is truth. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

INTER-AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing an address delivered by the American Ambassador to Mexico, on inter-American relations.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following address by Josephus Daniels, American Ambassador to Mexico, at the luncheon of the Mexico City Lion's Club in honor of the proposal of the President of the United States of America, Franklin D. Roosevelt, to group in one sole social and economic idea all the free nations on this continent, March 5, 1936:

The Lions International of Mexico City, the largest club of your organization in the world, emphasizes its cardinal principle of promoting peace by this luncheon given in honor of President Roosevelt. You meet today in recognition of his epoch-making action looking toward the undergirding of lasting understanding between the 21 democratic countries on this continent. This appreciation of the President of my country by the Lions International of Mexico City emphasizes the importance of the proposed extraordinary inter-American conference as well as the spirit and purpose of your organization, which is quick to further all agencies to cement Pan American devotion to unity of action.

It is gratifying that in this latest step of solidarity on this hemisphere the President of the United States and the President of Mexico see eye to eye. In honoring the Chief Executive of my country you likewise pay tribute to the head of the Mexican Government. Congratulating President Roosevelt on what he characterizes "the nobility of outlook which your suggestion carries", President Cárdenas pledges enthusiastic cooperation, confirming Mexico's "traditional attitude regarding instruments of peace", and expresses faith in the principle of settling differences "without having to take recourse to force as an argument in the place of law."

This approval of the conference by the President of Mexico and the heads of other Pan American governments, to quote Dr. Saavedra Lamas, the Foreign Minister of Argentina, is proof that "for the first time a current of community of ideas and sentiments without suspicions and without ill will" pervades the American republics.

All progress is evolutionary. The proposal of this extraordinary conference is the fruition of the hopes and labors of patriotic men of all Pan America from the battles for freedom through many steps toward continental solidarity. It evidences the growth of the passion for peace and justice which dominates the heart and mind of President Roosevelt. His first utterance as he took the oath of office foreshadowed this latest piece of statesmanship.

Rarely before in history did the people of the world, and particularly on this hemisphere, await an utterance of a new President with such deep interest as on March 4, 1933, when Franklin D. Roosevelt took the oath of office of President of the United States of America. They had not long to wait. In his inaugural address Mr. Roosevelt showed that the New Deal was not confined to feeding the starving or lifting his own country out of the economic morass into which it had fallen. It is well to recall the very words that heartened all who have yearned for the completest understanding and brotherhood of Pan Americans. In a brief statement the new President enunciated a policy which had in it light and cheer. A new-born Pan American unity was ushered into existence by this declaration:

"In the field of world policy I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who respects himself and, because he does so, respects the rights of others; the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors."

A short time thereafter, in an illuminating address before the governing board at a Pan American celebration, President Roosevelt made clear that the Monroe Doctrine was for the protection of the Western Hemisphere against outside aggression, not as a weapon to be employed by one American government against another. He also declared that all unnecessary and artificial barriers and restrictions which hampered the healthy flow of trade between the peoples of the American republics should be abolished.

In his address to the Woodrow Wilson Foundation on December 28, 1933, President Roosevelt quoted with approval the definite statement of President Wilson at Mobile that "the United States would never again seek one additional foot of territory by conquest", adding this declaration of his policy: "The time has come to supplement the declaration of President Wilson by the further declaration that the definite policy of the United States from now on is one opposed to armed intervention." And he added this statement, which may now be said to be a Roosevelt doctrine:

"The maintenance of constitutional government in other nations is not, after all, a sacred obligation devolving upon the United States alone. The maintenance of law and the orderly processes of government in this hemisphere is the concern of each individual nation within its borders first of all. It is only if and when the failure of orderly processes affects the other nations of the continent that it becomes their concern; and the point to stress is that in such an event it becomes the joint concern of the whole continent in which we are all neighbors."

If President Roosevelt had proclaimed the new doctrine and stopped there, its effect would have been salutary, but would have fallen far short of the desired goal. No one knew better than he that "fair words butter no parsnips." He promptly let his works prove the sincerity of his words. Since March 1933, what acts have shown that the good-neighbor policy is a modern application of the spirit of the Golden Rule? Let us examine the record of the new foreign policy in these 3 years:

1. Only this week an agreement has been reached with Panama to settle long-standing differences in ways mutually satisfactory to the two countries. In addition, Uncle Sam withdraws his big-brother attitude that Panama regarded as treading upon its sovereign rights.

2. Within a year treaties have been negotiated with six Pan American countries which have brought reciprocal and increased trade to those countries, and like reciprocal arrangements will increase the markets and prosperity of all America.

3. The Platt amendment no longer gives the right to the United States to intervene in Cuban affairs. The provision permitting American intervention in Cuba when the restoration of order was deemed necessary by the United States had long rankled among Spanish Americans as an indication of a desire to overlord the smaller countries.

4. Marines, first sent to Haiti, in the days of the World War, have been withdrawn, and the good-neighbor policy practiced in a way that proves genuine friendship and respect for the independence of that country.

5. Cooperation with all Pan American states for the pacific solution of questions which might provoke war.

6. The declaration subscribed to at Montevideo for the United States by the Honorable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, containing a provision that no State has the right to intervene in the internal or external affairs of another.

7. A recent statement by the Honorable Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, that "dollar diplomacy, I am glad to say, is now a thing of the past."

These seven concrete steps already taken foreshadow the even more gratifying and far-reaching agreements which will give lasting distinction to the coming extraordinary Inter-American Conference.

Freed from fear of European nations, it is to the glory of this continent that nearly all disputes have been settled by arbitration. The example of Chile and Argentina in thus settling their boundary dispute in 1902 affords an example for world emulation. When that agreement was reached, the people erected a memorial following the example of the men of old, to keep in constant remembrance their high determination. That memorial, erected on the crest of the Andes, took the form of a statue of Christ the Prince of Peace, and it bears this inscription:

"Sooner shall these mountains become dust than that the peoples of Argentina and Chile break the peace which they have pledged at the feet of their Redeemer."

Shortly the extraordinary Inter-American Conference will be held. It will guarantee in our day the long-delayed perfect unity of Pan America for the safeguarding of peace, territorial integrity, and mutual covenants of brotherhood.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Mr. PAREDES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PAREDES. Mr. Speaker, a former Member of this House has stated, part seriously and part humorously, that if, upon the arrival of the American soldiers, after your admiral had sunk the Spanish fleet, there had been good interpreters in the islands there would have been no Philippine-American war. There may be an element of truth rather than humor in that statement.

When I was a boy of 16 I was one of the very few in a Spanish-controlled country who attempted to speak English. One day a squad of American soldiers called at our home and I was taken to headquarters. The family thought I was about to be shot or imprisoned. Instead I found I was to be used as an interpreter, and was assigned to an American officer then holding a not very high rank. Last week it was my pleasure to dine with this American officer, who is now a general in the United States Army, Maj. Gen. Thomas Q. Ashburn.

I was one of the few interpreters to whom your colleague, former Congressman Hawes, referred.

I make reference to this because I sometimes think what would have happened had there been no Philippine-American war and we had been permitted to work out our destinies in our own way with Spanish sovereignty removed.

It is all a matter of conjecture, but one thing you must admit would have happened. We would at least have had some world trade in markets throughout the world. They might have been small and unsatisfactory, but we would have had them, and in 37 years they might have been developed to large economic importance.

But your Congress decided otherwise. It established reciprocal free trade to secure for your American manufacturers, farmers, and livestock raisers a practical monopoly of the Philippine market until, as you know, it has grown to enormous proportions. It is probably your best market in the world, certainly, for many of your products. In some of your States manufacturers provide economic life for your people. In other States farming is the chief occupation; in other States mining; in other States cattle raising; and prosperity in these States depends not only upon the successful product of these various articles of commerce but upon their sale.

In my country, where we now have some 14,000,000 people, our chief product is sugar, constituting 63 percent of our exports, and contributing through taxation to the support of our government a great proportion of our national revenue. The fate of our sugar industry will affect our future to a material extent.

The Philippines did not write their own sugar legislation; it was written by your Congress. We had nothing to say about the matter. Its development is your development, not ours.

Fair treatment for our Philippine sugar industry will not injure a single beet-sugar or cane-sugar producer in the United States. The reason is quite apparent. The American people each year consume approximately 6,500,000 tons of sugar, and, because of the limited American production, you are required to purchase at least 4,500,000 tons of sugar from what are called offshore areas, under the American flag, and Cuba, a foreign nation.

We are not seeking and never have sought to take anything away from the beet growers or the cane growers of the United States. All we ask is that, while under the American flag, we be treated fairly and equitably with other Territories and possessions of the United States.

The production of sugar, therefore, is not a controversy between Philippine producers and American producers; it is merely a demand to have our fair share of the business with two American offshore areas. We have no conflict with the domestic continental sugar producer, and we believe he now understands this.

With this in mind, I ask the privilege of extending this discussion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, giving such figures and facts as may be helpful to an understanding of our vital problems.

I make this request because I do not believe the situation is well understood, because I have heard arguments advanced which are not based upon facts and are due, I am sure, to an honest misunderstanding.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS—THE BACKGROUND

The sugar industry in the Philippine Islands dates back many centuries prior to the American occupation in 1898. Historical records show that the native Filipinos were already producing sugarcane when Magellan discovered the islands in 1521. Exports of sugar from the Philippines increased from 53,000 short tons in 1855 to more than 200,000 short tons 25 years later. The highest export peak during the Spanish regime was reached in 1895, when the Philippines exported 376,401 short tons of sugar.

As a matter of fact, the sugar industry was developed on a competitive level during the Spanish regime and Philippine sugar then was able to compete in the world's markets.

It is interesting and significant to note that for the 10-year period from 1880 to 1889, before the enforcement of the restrictive Spanish commercial laws in the Philippines, of the 200,000 short tons of sugar exported annually, more than 50 percent found its way into the United States, as the following figures indicate:

Year	Total quantity exported (short tons)	Percentage of total value of all exports	Exports to the United States (short tons)	Percentage of total sugar exported
1880	199,728	48.63	112,751	56.45
1881	230,167	50.47	87,149	37.86
1882	165,811	43.22	87,063	52.51
1883	216,970	45.83	140,484	64.75
1884	134,622	30.33	93,886	69.74
1885	225,114	42.18	148,869	66.13
1886	203,859	34.90	129,134	63.35
1887	189,324	31.66	122,841	64.88
1888	177,457	32.32	92,283	52.00
1889	251,841	35.45	138,629	55.05
Annual average	199,489		115,310	57.60

These figures demonstrate the fact that the United States was, as it is today, the principal market for Philippine sugar. As a result, however, of the restrictive Spanish commercial laws, the sugar exports from the Philippines to the United States, following the year 1890, decreased to 13 percent, as the following data show:

Year	Total quantity exported (short tons)	Percentage of total value of all exports	Exports to the United States (short tons)	Percentage of total sugar exported
1890	169,658	33.72	37,616	23.56
1891	152,358	27.29	51,730	33.95
1892	278,659	40.54	50,685	18.19
1893	288,276	46.74	11,124	3.86
1894	232,195	33.11	12,633	5.44
1895	376,402	31.34
Annual average	247,924		32,757	13.21

The 6 years of revolution which started in 1896—first, the revolt against Spanish domination from 1896 to 1898; and second, the Philippine insurrection against American occupation, which lasted until 1901—completely paralyzed the basic industries of the islands, including the sugar industry, and not until 10 years thereafter, or until the establishment of the free-trade relations between the United States and the Philippines, did the industry begin to revive.

PHILIPPINES INCREASED ITS SUGAR PRODUCTION LESS THAN OTHER AREAS

It has been erroneously claimed that the Philippines increased its sugar production tremendously and out of proportion in comparison with other sugar-producing areas. The facts are that the Philippine increase in sugar production was relatively much less than that of other sugar-producing countries.

The Philippines reached its pre-war peak production in 1895, prior to American occupation, when it had a production of 431,000 short tons. Its recent peak of production was in the crop year 1933–34, when approximately 1,580,000 short tons was produced. In other words, for a period of 40 years the Philippines increased sugar production 367 percent.

For about the same period Cuba increased its production 489 percent; Puerto Rico, 662 percent; Hawaii, 412 percent; United States (beet), 1,988 percent; Java, 546 percent, as shown by the following record:

	Record production prior to American occupation of Philippines in 1898		Record production in recent years		Percent increase
	Short tons	Year	Short tons	Year
Cuba	1,180,000	1893–94	5,775,000	1928–29	489
Puerto Rico	168,000	1879	1,112,000	1933–34	662
Hawaii	251,000	1897	1,035,000	1932–33	412
United States (beet)	87,000	1895	1,730,000	1933–34	1,988
Philippines	431,000	1895	1,580,000	1933–34	367
Java	602,000	1895	3,292,000	1927–28	546

The recent increase in sugar production in the Philippine Islands was the result of two factors:

First. Replacement of thousands of primitive mills by modern factories, which resulted in the increase in the sugar recovery from the cane from 60 to 95 percent, this improvement having been similarly accomplished in Cuba, Puerto Rico, and other sugar-producing areas when those areas changed their methods of manufacture from the inefficient, antiquated methods to modern practice and equipment; and Second. Increase in the unit yield per acre as a result of the planting of the same higher yielding varieties that have been utilized in Louisiana, Java, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and other sugar-producing areas, and the use of fertilizers.

Unlike in Cuba, where there was a tremendous expansion of the sugar industry as a result of the American-Cuban Convention of 1902 and the World War, there has been no extensive expansion of the sugar industry in the Philippine Islands.

Practically the same area of lands devoted to sugarcane during the Spanish regime or prior to American occupation is now utilized for the cultivation of sugarcane, due to the restriction in the land laws enacted by Congress in 1902 limiting the land holdings to not more than 2,500 acres.

Unlike the case in Cuba and other tropical countries, where ownership of sugar-producing lands is confined to a few large proprietors, in the Philippines sugar lands are owned by thousands of farmers, with small holdings of a few acres.

John E. Dalton, formerly chief of the Sugar Section of the A. A. A., commenting upon the increase in production of sugar in Puerto Rico and the Philippines, made the following pertinent remarks: "It should be noted that the increase in the production of sugar in Puerto Rico and the Philippine Islands did not result primarily from an expansion in the acreage under cultivation, but resulted from (a) larger cane tonnage per acre grown (through the substitution of new cane varieties); (b) increase sucrose content in such cane; and (c) improvement in milling which brought an increase in the amount of recoverable sugar from the cane. For example, in the Philippine Islands, between 1923 and 1931, the increase in the amount of sugar available for the United States was 243 percent; however, during that interval the area planted to sugarcane increased by about 13 percent."

FREE TRADE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE PHILIPPINES ESTABLISHED BY YOUR CONGRESS

In carrying out its policy of helping the Filipino people in their economic development, Congress enacted on August 1, 1909, 27 years ago, the Payne-Aldrich bill, which established free trade between the United States and the Philippines, under which all articles exported to the Philippines from the United States were admitted free of duty, and conversely all products from the Philippine Islands coming into the United States, except in any 1 year sugar in excess of 300,000 tons, and other limitations on rice and tobacco.

The limitations on sugar and tobacco were later removed in the Underwood-Simmons Tariff Act of 1913.

The Filipino people opposed the establishment of this free trade on the ground that it "would in the future become highly prejudicial to the economic interests of the Philippine people and would bring about a situation which might hinder the attainment of the independence of said people." But Congress saw fit to establish this relationship, and the Filipino people had to accept their status and planned and worked accordingly their economic development.

It is pertinent to record herein the lofty ideals and sentiments which actuated Congress in establishing this trade relationship with the Philippines.

The then distinguished Republican Senator, Elihu Root, speaking before the Senate of the United States in 1909, when this matter was being debated, said:

> The die is cast, Mr. President, upon which we have the responsibility for the Philippine Islands. No action of ours can reverse it. The good faith, the good name, the honor of the American people are all pledged to lead the people of the islands on by paths of growing prosperity and capacity for government to the point where they will be capable of supporting and governing themselves.
> We cannot fulfill that high duty by giving them money. * * * Gifts of money tend to reduce the independence of individual character. We cannot fulfill that duty by making the islands unsuccessful in business, by retarding and confining their industry. We can fulfill it only by giving to them the opportunities to national power, to grow in the accumulation of property and the diffusion of wealth, lying at the foundation of civilization. We can fulfill that duty only by making the people of the Philippines at once prosperous and intelligent.

In 1913, when the Democratic Party came into power, the eminent statesman, Oscar Underwood, referring to the removal of the restriction in the act of 1909, spoke as follows on the floor of the House, May 7, 1913: "The change in this paragraph of the bill is largely striking out the limitation on the importation of sugar, filler, and cigar tobacco and wrapper tobacco. * * * We may leave the limit where it is * * * but we would leave it where it is to the shame of every American citizen. We could not honestly face those dependent people who give us free trade in their markets if we close our doors here. * * * Because we do not want to stand and face that world in such a position as that and say (to the Filipinos) that under our law we command you to open the door, so that American goods can flow to your country, because we have the power to do it, and then turn around and say to them that, on the only thing they can import, practically, into our country and make a market for we will close our doors and prevent them developing their trade. I say that no true-born American citizen who faces the question fairly and squarely and understands the situation will consent to that.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE PHILIPPINE SUGAR INDUSTRY

By virtue of the free trade thus established, sugar from the Philippines received a preferential-tariff position in the American market against Cuban and foreign-grown sugar, thereby placing the sugar industry of the Philippines within the highly American protective tariff walls.

The immediate effect was the investment of American capital in the islands for the development of the sugar industry.

In 1910 a group of American investors established the first modern sugar factory in the island of Mindoro, and 2 years later two other American companies erected sugar centrals at Calamba, on the island of Luzon, and at San Carlos, on the island of Negros.

Thus the modern development of the sugar industry was initiated by pioneering American businessmen and American capital, for it took a decade to convince the Philippine farmers of the advantages of improving their sugar production and manufacture and take advantage of the protection of the American tariff, and not until 1918–21 did the Filipino sugar producers go into the modernization of their methods of manufacture and establish six cooperative sugar centrals with the financial aid of the government Philippine National Bank.

This development of the sugar industry has elevated the living standards of my people and helped them to carry out improvements in education, sanitation, and public works.

The investment in the Philippine Islands in the sugar industry runs over $250,000,000, largely in the control of Americans and Filipinos.

Like other industries, this business has an association. The president of the association is the Honorable Rafael R. Alunan, known throughout the Philippine Islands and in the United States to be a man of wide experience, given to accuracy of expression and conservative statements.

May I be permitted to quote him regarding investments and other matters relating to the growth of our sugar industry. He states:

> The total aggregate investments in the Philippine sugar industry amount to $251,512,535, as follows:

Investment in centrals	$84,012,535
Investment in lands	140,000,000
Crop loans	22,500,000
Miscellaneous investments	5,000,000
Total	251,512,535

> Of the total of $84,012,535 invested in centrals, 40 percent is American investment, 37 percent Filipino, 22 percent Spanish, and 1 percent cosmopolitan, as shown in the following table:

Nationality	Number of centrals	Total investments	Percentage of total investments
American	12	$33,815,650	40
Filipino	22	31,127,894	37
Spanish	9	18,276,574	22
Others	2	792,417	1
Total	45	84,012,535	100

> Of the 45 centrals in the Philippine Islands, approximately 24, or more than one-half of them, are small mills, with capacities ranging from 150 to 750 tons of cane per day. Most of these mills are financed by a group of Filipinos, while a few others were established by cosmopolitan investors, including Filipinos, Americans, and others. No Chinese are financially interested in the mills.
> Practically all the lands devoted to the cultivation of sugarcane in the Philippines are tilled by Filipinos. Filipinos engaged in sugar cultivation in the Philippines, including their families, number 2,000,000.
> Unlike other sugar-producing countries, which must rely on foreign labor to grow sugar, the Philippines depends solely upon native labor for its production of sugar.

Of the 48 Provinces, 17, with a population of over 7,000,000 people, or more than half of the total population of the islands, are directly or indirectly dependent upon the sugar industry.

At least 2,000,000 farmers, laborers, and their families depend for their livelihood upon the growing of sugarcane.

The sugar industry, more than any other industry in the islands, has been responsible for uplifting the standard of living of the Filipino people.

Recognized authorities place the standard of living of the Filipino people 300 percent above that of the peoples of their neighboring countries.

The money spent by the centrals and the planters for the purchase of supplies and materials required by the sugar industry amounts annually to approximately $30,000,000, or over 60 percent of the total money in circulation in the islands.

The sugar industry is the main support of the Philippine government. For every dollar of value of sugar produced in the Philippines the Philippine government derives in sales tax and other taxes approximately 20 cents.

In 1932 the value of sugar exported from the Philippine Islands constituted 63 percent of the total value of all their exports, as may be seen from the following table:

Value of principal exports from the Philippines for the calendar year 1932

	To all countries		To United States
	Value	Percent	Value	Percent
1. Sugar and byproducts	$60,359,000	63.31	$60,145,000	99.64
2. Coconuts and manufactures of	15,455,000	16.21	12,063,000	78.05
3. Tobacco and manufactures of	6,399,000	6.71	3,243,000	50.68
4. Manila hemp and manufactures of	5,675,000	5.95	1,893,000	33.35
5. Embroideries	3,267,000	3.42	3,252,000	99.53
6. Lumber and timber	835,000	.87	173,000	20.74
7. Hats	591,000	.62	435,000	73.71
8. Pearl buttons	244,000	.26	244,000	100.00
9. Other exports	2,514,000	2.64	1,200,000	47.73
Total	95,339,000	100.00	82,648,000	86.69

The success of the cooperative system which has characterized the production of sugar in the Philippines has made the people realize the advantages of cooperative efforts among small producers and farmers.

In other words, the sugar industry of the Philippines has become a model for a modern scientific development of their other agricultural industries.

AMERICAN INTERESTS IN THE PHILIPPINES

It is obvious from an examination of the records that the free-trade relationship not only has been beneficial to the Philippine Islands but has also been advantageous to the United States.

To the Philippines it meant development of their economic resources, particularly their sugar industry, improvement in their standards of living, successful financing of their government in carrying out its manifold activities; in other words, it meant prosperity for the Filipino people.

It opened to the United States a great Philippine market for American agricultural and industrial products, American shipping, banking, insurance, mining, and other financial enterprises.

During Spanish sovereignty Philippine commerce was diversified throughout the world. The United States sold little to the Philippines—only approximately $3,000,000, or 3 percent of the Philippine purchases abroad, amounting to $111,000,000, for the 10-year period 1885–94, prior to American occupation.

With the establishment of free trade the United States has obtained a monopoly of the Philippine market, where it has enjoyed tariff preferences for 97 percent of its products going into the Philippine Islands.

For the last decade, 1924–33, the Philippines purchased from the United States over $680,000,000 worth of goods, or 61 percent of its total imports from abroad.

The Philippines today is the best market for American cotton cloths, galvanized steel sheets, dairy products, cigarettes, and truck and bus tire casings.

Moreover, the Philippine market is the best in the far-eastern markets for American steel-mill products and iron and steel advanced manufactures.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in its bulletin entitled "Our World Trade" in 1935, reported that the value of purchases of American merchandise by the Philippines for the calendar year 1935 increased 11.6 percent, while imports of the United States from the islands increased 11.5 percent. For the same period purchases of American merchandise by Cuba increased 32.7 percent, while American imports from Cuba increased 41.9 percent. In this connection the chamber of commerce also reported that while the value of purchases of American merchandise by Japan decreased 3.4 percent, the value of American imports from Japan increased 26.3 percent.

These figures show that the United States, despite the dumping of Japanese goods into the Philippines, has maintained its monopoly of the Philippine market and indicate the stability and potentiality of the Philippine market for American products.

It is to be borne in mind, however, that the continuation of the American monopoly of the Philippine market and control of the economic development of the country depend upon the ability of the Filipino people to market in the United States their basic exportable products, and the continuation, in an equitable and reciprocal manner, of the mutually advantageous economic relationship between the two countries.

WE APPEAL TO AMERICAN FAIRNESS

As already pointed out, our sugar industry has been developed on the basis of free trade with the United States, imposed upon us in the face of our protest.

Being the backbone of our economic life, its ruin and destruction would mean chaos and poverty to our people.

We cannot conceive nor believe that this great Republic would want to destroy the very foundation of our economic existence after it has fostered its development and encouraged us to take advantage of the free-trade relationship it saw fit to give us.

Under the Independence Act the duty-free sugar from the Philippine Islands allowed to come into the United States during the 10-year transition period was limited to 850,000 long tons, equivalent to approximately 973,000 short tons, raw value.

The injustice of this provision of the Independence Act has already been recognized in five instances since its enactment by Congress.

First. The President, in his message to Congress recommending the enactment of the independence bill, suggested changes in this legislation, and stated that "where imperfections or inequalities exist, I am confident that they can be corrected after proper hearing and in fairness to both peoples."

Second. The sugar producers of continental United States, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, after 3 months of conferences and hearings, signed a voluntary marketing agreement in September 1933, under which they conceded to the Philippines an annual quota of export to the United States of 1,100,000 short tons and a reserve of 100,000 short tons, or a total of 1,200,000 short tons available for export to the United States.

Third. In his message to Congress on February 8, 1934, recommending the enactment of legislation stabilizing the sugar industry, the President proposed that the Philippines be given a quota of 1,037,000 short tons.

Fourth. In response to the request of the President, Congress enacted the so-called Jones-Costigan Act under which the Secretary of Agriculture fixed the basic quota for the Philippine Islands at 1,049,000 short tons.

Fifth. Recently, the Secretary of Agriculture, in revising the quotas for 1936, allotted the Philippines a quota this year of 1,068,057 short tons.

It will thus be seen that in every proposal for a sugar stabilization program, the Philippine Islands has been conceded a basic quota of from 1,037,000 to 1,200,000 short tons, and it is undoubtedly the intention in granting this concession to give the Philippines fair and equitable treatment with other areas.

But this intention will be defeated unless the Philippines will be permitted to bring duty-free into the United States its quota under the Jones-Costigan Act, for while the Philippines received this year an increase in its quota by 69,947 tons, it will have to pay the full duty of 1.875 cents per pound on 63,000 tons of this increase by reason of the operation of the duty-free limitation in the Independence Act, effective upon the establishment of the Philippine Commonwealth, November 15, 1935.

Prior to the coming into effect of the duty-free limitation of the independence act, on November 15, 1935, the Philippines was entitled to send to the United States all the sugar it could have available for export during the years 1934 and 1935, but because of the enactment of the Jones-Costigan Act, after the Philippines had accepted the Independence Act, the Philippines was compelled to reduce its annual exports to the United States for 1934 and 1935 by 500,000 tons, or a total reduction of 1,000,000 tons for the 2 years, since its normal exports for these years, had there been no quota system, would have averaged 1,500,000 tons annually.

Thus the Jones-Costigan Act, in effect, caused the Philippine producers a loss of $70,000,000, which loss was reflected in revenues to the Philippine government and the curtailment of the purchases by the Philippines of American products.

This loss, however, was partly compensated by the payment of benefits of thousands of small growers in the islands from the processing tax, but these benefits did not apply to the Philippine sugar factories, as in other Territories and possessions of the United States, and did not compensate the Filipino laborers for the loss they incurred in the reduced sugar production.

Despite the fact that the Philippine sugar producers have shouldered the main burden of the sugar-stabilization program of the administration under the Jones-Costigan Act, they have fully cooperated and assisted in accomplishing its objectives. No serious opposition was encountered, considering the complicated cooperative system of sugar production, involving many thousands of small growers, and no disorders of any kind occurred. On the contrary, the Philippine Legislature, in response to the recommendation of the Governor General, enacted a limitation law restricting the production of sugar in conformity with the quotas established by the Jones-Costigan Act.

In view of the foregoing considerations, it seems, therefore, only fair that the Philippines should be permitted to benefit in the same proportionate degree as the other areas from any increase in quotas consequent to any improvement in consumption by allowing it to bring into the United States, all duty-free, whatever quota it is allotted under the Jones-Costigan Act or substitute bill as long as this quota system is in effect.

The Philippines cannot derive the full benefit of increased quotas because of the operation of the Independence Act, and the equity to us can be given without prejudicing the interests of the producers of continental United States or any of the offshore areas.

The Filipino people will do their utmost to follow the course which Congress charted for them toward their eventual freedom. It is our sincere desire and hope to be able not only to maintain but to improve the peaceful, prosperous, and happy condition in which this great Republic has placed us during the past 35 years.

Looking back to those years, the record will stand out unique in history for the unselfish work and devotion given on behalf of a dependent people, for the complete harmony and friendship between the conqueror and the conquered, and for the early fulfillment of our ideals for freedom without disturbance or bloodshed.

It is a source of pride and satisfaction to the Filipino people to look back to these years and behold that with your guidance we have been able to prosper and go forward on the path of civilization, ourselves paying every dollar required in the administration of our government, keeping absolute peace and public order, and meeting even the havoc of the recent serious depression without appealing for relief.

This achievement is the result of your enlightened guidance, which has given us, to quote the words of the eminent American statesman, "The opportunity to national power, to grow in the accumulation of wealth, lying at the foundation of civilization."

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and fifty-four Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

THE TOWNSEND OLD-AGE-PENSION PLAN

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Select Committee Investigating Old Age Pensions, I present a privileged report (Rept. No. 2857) and send it to the Clerk's desk, and ask that the Clerk read it.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

REPORT AND CERTIFICATION OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE OLD AGE PENSION PLANS

The Select Committee to Investigate Old Age Pension Plans, proceeding as directed by House Resolution 443 to inquire into old-age-pension plans, with respect to which legislation has been submitted to the House of Representatives, and particularly that embodied in H. R. 7154 in the United States Congress, caused to be issued a subpena directing one Francis E. Townsend to appear before said select committee and to testify concerning matters then and there under investigation by said committee, the subpena being set forth in words and figures as follows:

"By authority of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America

"TO THE SERGEANT AT ARMS OR HIS SPECIAL MESSENGER:

"You are hereby commanded to summon Dr. Francis E. Townsend to be and appear before the Special Investigation of Old Age Pension Organizations Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Hon. C. JASPER BELL is chairman, pursuant to House Resolution 443, in their chamber, more specifically described as the caucus room, old House Office Building, in the city of Washington, on May 5, 1936, at the hour of 10 o'clock, then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee; and he is not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Herein fail not and make return of this summons.

"Witness my hand and seal of the House of Representatives of the United States, at the city of Washington, this 20th day of April 1936.

"(Signed) JOSEPH W. BYRNS, Speaker.

"Attest:

"(Signed) SOUTH TRIMBLE, Clerk.

Said subpena was on April 22, 1936, served upon said Francis E. Townsend by a deputy sergeant at arms, empowered by said House of Representatives to perform such act. The return of service of said deputy sergeant at arms being endorsed thereon which is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"Subpena for Dr. Francis E. Townsend, before the Committee on the Special Investigation of Old Age Pension Organizations. Served Lafayette Hotel, Sixteenth and I Streets NW., Washington, D. C., April 22, 1936, 9 a. m. William A. Weber, Deputy Sergeant at Arms, House of Representatives."

Said Francis E. Townsend, pursuant to said subpena and in compliance therewith, appeared before the said committee to give such testimony as might be requested or required under and by virtue of House Resolution 443.

Said Francis E. Townsend after being duly sworn by the chairman, testified before said committee on May 19, 20, and 21, 1936. On May 21, 1936, as the examination of said Francis E. Townsend was proceeding shortly before the regular noon adjournment the following colloquy occurred:

"Dr. TOWNSEND. Mr. Chairman, this is all rather soporific. May I be excused 5 minutes?

"(Thereupon a short recess was taken.)

"The CHAIRMAN. Adjourn until 2:30.

"(Accordingly at 11:35 o'clock a. m. the select committee stood in recess until 2:30 o'clock p. m.")

At the afternoon session, convening at 2:30 o'clock p. m., a quorum of said committee being present, composed of the following members: C. Jasper Bell (chairman), Joseph A. Gavagan, Sam L. Collins, Scott W. Lucas, John H. Tolan, John B. Hollister, and Clare E. Hoffman, the following colloquy occurred:

"The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order.

"Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Bell, Dr. Townsend asked me to tell the committee that he could not be here until 3:30, but will be here at that time.

"The CHAIRMAN. I think we have another witness whom we can put on for a short time, have we not?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, sir.

"The CHAIRMAN. Until 3:30?

"Mr. DOWNEY. Yes, sir.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Is Dr. Townsend ill, Mr. Downey?

"Mr. DOWNEY. No; the doctor is not ill."

When Francis E. Townsend resumed the stand later in the afternoon, a quorum of the committee being present, C. Jasper Bell (chairman), Joseph A. Gavagan, Sam L. Collins, Scott W. Lucas, John H. Tolan, John E. Hollister, the following transpired:

"The CHAIRMAN. Will you take the stand, Dr. Townsend?

"Dr. TOWNSEND. Mr. Chairman, before the quiz starts, I have a brief statement which I wish you would allow me to present. It will take but a minute.

"The CHAIRMAN. Is it a written statement, Doctor?

"Dr. TOWNSEND. Yes.

"The CHAIRMAN. Let me see it, Doctor.

"Dr. TOWNSEND (reading). 'Gentlemen, in view of the fact'——

"The CHAIRMAN. Just a minute. You will have to abide by the ordinary rules. Do you want to submit the statement to the committee?

"Dr. TOWNSEND. I want to read it, and then I will submit it to you.

"The CHAIRMAN. You cannot do that, Doctor. You will have to conform to the usual rules in matters of this sort. If you want to submit it, the committee will be glad to consider it.

"Dr. TOWNSEND. Will you listen a moment to a statement which I have to make, then?

"The CHAIRMAN. Yes, Doctor.

"Dr. TOWNSEND. In view of the apparent unfriendly attitude of this committee and the unfair attitude it has shown to me and the members of my organization, I deem it my duty to say that I shall no longer attend these committee hearings. I am retiring from this sort of an inquisition, and I do not propose to come back again except under arrest. And I do refuse absolutely to make any further statement pertaining to this movement to this committee.

"Thank you and goodbye."

Because of the foregoing the said committee has been deprived of the testimony of said Francis E. Townsend relative to the subject matter which, under House Resolution 443, said committee was instructed to investigate, and the willful and deliberate refusal of the witness to testify further is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared and testified, and his willful refusal to testify further without having been first excused as a witness deprives the said committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States. The Select Committee to Investigate Old Age Pension Plans, proceeding as directed by House Resolution 443 to inquire into old-age-pension plans, with respect to which legislation has been submitted to the House of Representatives, and particularly that embodied in H. R. 7154 in the United States Congress, caused to be issued a subpena directed to one Clinton Wunder to appear before said select committee and to testify concerning matters then and there under investigation by said committee. The subpena being set forth in words and figures as follows:

"BY AUTHORITY OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

"TO THE SERGEANT AT ARMS OR HIS SPECIAL MESSENGER:

"You are hereby commanded to summon Clinton Wunder, 383 Fourth Avenue, New York City, N. Y., to be and appear before the Special Investigation of Old Age Pension Organizations Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Honorable C. JASPER BELL is chairman, pursuant to House Resolution 443 in their chamber, more specifically described as the caucus room, old House Office Building, in the city of Washington on May 21, 1936, at the hour of 10 o'clock then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee; and he is not to depart without leave of said committee. Herein fail not and make return of this summons. Witness my hand and the seal of the House of Representatives of the United States, at the city of Washington, this 15th day of May 1936.

"JOSEPH W. BYRNS, Speaker.

"Attest:

"SOUTH TRIMBLE, Clerk."

Said subpena was on the 18th day of May 1936 served upon said Clinton Wunder by the United States marshal, through his deputy for the United States southern district of California, a person empowered by the chairman of the said committee pursuant to House Resolution 443 to perform such act. Arriving Washington late Monday, May 25.

Dr. CLINTON WUNDER.

According to the arrangements made by interchange of the above set forth telegrams between the chairman of said committee and the said Clinton Wunder it was understood and agreed that the said Clinton Wunder would appear before the said Select Committee to Investigate Old Age Pension Plans on May 26, 1936, at 10 o'clock a. m., but that in violation of the mandate provided by the subpena and in further violation of the agreement to appear at a later date made at the request of Clinton Wunder the said Clinton Wunder failed to appear and be sworn as witness at the meeting of said committee on May 26, 1936, though his name was called as a witness by said committee at that time.

On May 26, 1936, the said committee, because of the willful failure of the said Clinton Wunder to appear and be sworn as a witness, did issue a second subpena to be served upon Clinton Wunder commanding him to appear at 10 o'clock May 27, 1936, before said committee and to testify concerning matters then and there under investigation by said committee, the subpena being set forth in words and figures as follows:

"BY AUTHORITY OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

"To the SERGEANT AT ARMS OR HIS SPECIAL MESSENGER:

"JOSEPH W. BYRNS, Speaker.

"Attest:

"SOUTH TRIMBLE, Clerk."

Said subpena was, on May 26, 1936, served upon said Clinton Wunder by a person authorized by the chairman of the said committee pursuant to House Resolution 443 to perform such act, the return of service of said deputy being endorsed thereon, which is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"Subpena for Dr. Clinton Wunder before the special investigating committee served 4:15 p. m. on May 26, 1936, at room 1235, Ambassador Hotel, in Washington, D. C.

"VERNON E. MOORE."

On May 27, 1936, the chairman of the said committee did receive the following letter by registered mail, set forth in words and figures as follows:

DEAR SIR: I received transportation from the United States Government from Los Angeles to Washington under the assumption that I would testify in Washington before your committee. Respectfully yours,

CLINTON WUNDER.

Which letter did enclose a remittance by check of $106.89 on the account of the Townsend Visual Education Co., no. 303, dated Baltimore, Md., May 26, 1936.

At the session of the committee on May 27, 1936, a quorum being present, said witness, Clinton Wunder, was called by the chairman and failed to appear.

Because of the foregoing the said committee has been deprived of the testimony of said Clinton Wunder relative to the subject matter under House Resolution 443 said committee was instructed to investigate, and the willful and deliberate refusal of Clinton Wunder to appear and to be sworn as a witness to testify concerning matters then and there under investigation is a violation of said subpena and deprives the said committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

The Select Committee to Investigate Old Age Pension Plans proceeding as directed by House Resolution 443 to inquire into old-age pension plans, with respect to which legislation has been submitted to the House of Representatives, and particularly that embodied in H. R. 7154 in the United States Congress, caused to be issued a subpena directed to one John B. Kiefer to appear before said select committee and to testify concerning matters then and there under investigation by said committee, the subpena being set forth in words and figures as follows:

"BY AUTHORITY OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

"To the SERGEANT AT ARMS OR HIS SPECIAL MESSENGER:

"You are hereby commanded to summon J. B. Kiefer to be and appear before the Special Investigation of Old Age Pension Organizations Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Honorable C. JASPER BELL is chairman, pursuant to House Resolution 443, in their chamber, more specifically described as the caucus room, old House Office Building, in the city of Washington, on May 22, 1936, at the hour of 10 o'clock, then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and he is not to depart without leave of said committee. Herein fail not, and make return of this summons.

"Witness my hand and the seal of the House of Representatives of the United States at the city of Washington this 15th day of May 1936.

"JOSEPH W. BYRNS, Speaker.

"Attest:

"SOUTH TRIMBLE, Clerk."

Said subpena was on the 15th day of May 1936 served on J. B. Kiefer by a person empowered by the chairman of the said committee pursuant to House Resolution 443 to perform such act. The return of service of said person is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"Subpena for J. B. Kiefer before the Committee on the Special Investigation of Old Age Pension Organizations served at 4:55 p. m. May 15, 1936, by handing original to him; he waived reading and accepted copy. J. O. Bowen, for Sergeant at Arms, House of Representatives."

At the session of the committee on May 27, 1936, a quorum being present, said witness John B. Kiefer was called by the chairman and failed to appear.

Because of the foregoing the said committee has been deprived of the testimony of said John B. Kiefer relative to the subject matter which, under House Resolution 443, said committee was instructed to investigate, and the willful and deliberate refusal of John B. Kiefer to appear and to be sworn as a witness to testify concerning matters then and there under investigation is a violation of said subpena and deprives the said committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

C. JASPER BELL, Chairman.

The SPEAKER. The report is ordered printed.

Mr. BELL rose.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is recognized to make the point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. But, Mr. Speaker, I rose before the gentleman from Texas made his point of order. I make the point of order that the report is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] to make a point of order. The Chair cannot recognize both gentleman at the same time for the same purpose. The gentleman from Texas will state his point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that under the Constitution of the United States the House of Representatives of the legislative branch is a separate and distinct department of government from the judiciary, or the courts, that this is undoubtedly a contempt of the House of Representatives, the legislative branch, and is a contempt that should be tried and punished, not by the courts, but by the House of Representatives itself. We ought not to pass the buck to the courts. We ought to assume the responsibility ourselves.

I admit that all three witnesses clearly are in contempt, and deserve punishment and that the House ought to try these three witnesses, convict them of contempt, and punish all three of them with a heavy fine and send them all to jail, until they can have some respect for the institutions of their country. I therefore make the point of order that the House of Representatives should try its own contempt proceedings and fix its own punishment.

The SPEAKER. That matter is not under discussion now. This is simply a report from a select committee which has been read and which has been ordered printed. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. MONAGHAN. But, Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, my point of order goes to the fact that this report is completely out of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. My point of order is briefly this: The committee that was investigating the Townsend old-age pension plan clearly exceeded its bounds. It went beyond the matter of exercising a legislative function. It tried to make criminals out of the witnesses.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his point of order and not undertake to argue.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I am coming to it. I have to have a little time to state my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it and the Chair will rule upon it.

Mr. MONAGHAN. The Chair should be as courteous to me as he would be to a Member of the opposition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair intends to be courteous and is courteous to the gentleman, but the Chair has a right to ask the gentleman to state his point of order. Then it will be determined whether or not the Chair will hear argument upon it.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I may say that if I am not permitted to explain my point of order I shall appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. Any argument or explanation is for the benefit of the Chair, and if the Chair is already satisfied, of course, the Chair will not take up the time of the House in ruling upon it. Therefore, the gentleman will first state his point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. The point of order I make is that the committee has exceeded its function in the process of the inquiry that the House authorized it to proceed under.

The SPEAKER. Let the Chair make this statement. That is not under consideration now. This is simply a report of the select committee, and the question as to whether or not the committee has exceeded its authority cannot arise at this time.

Mr. MONAGHAN. But the question that the committee has exceeded its authority is involved in the question of whether or not it shall be permitted to make a report of this sort.

The SPEAKER. The committee is within its right in submitting its report; it is its duty to report what it has done in order that the House may take such action as it determines to take. Therefore, the Chair overrules that point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] to lay the appeal of the gentleman from Montana on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONAGHAN) there were—ayes 230, noes 8.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. Those favoring taking this vote by the yeas and nays will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Five Members have risen, not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

So the appeal by the gentleman from Montana from the decision of the Chair was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BELL].

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the select committee, I now present a privileged resolution and send it to the Clerk's desk and ask that it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 532

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Select Committee to Investigate Old Age Pension Plans as to the willful and deliberate refusal of Francis E. Townsend, Clinton Wunder, and John B. Kiefer to testify before said committee, together with all the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, to the end that the said Francis E. Townsend, Clinton Wunder, and John B. Kiefer may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that the resolution is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONAGHAN) there were ayes 265 and noes 8.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. Those who favor taking this vote by the yeas and nays will stand and remain standing until counted. [After counting.] Five Members have arisen, not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is the resolution divisible as to the three gentlemen named?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Missouri is out of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri has been recognized and has the floor.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I make the point of order that the gentleman is proceeding out of order.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, is not that dilatory?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that that appeal be laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is inclined to think it is dilatory, but he will allow it this time.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas to lay the appeal on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONAGHAN) there were—ayes 275 and noes 4.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BELL] is recognized.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Missouri has his secretary on the floor, and is violating the rules of the House in so doing.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the point of order. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not recognize the appeal because it is clearly dilatory. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BELL].

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman cannot take the gentleman from Missouri off his feet by a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SWEENEY. That is what I wanted to know.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri has the floor.

Mr. MONAGHAN. I rise to a point of personal privilege and the privilege of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman cannot take the gentleman from Missouri off his feet by a question of that kind. The question now pending is one involving the privileges of the House.

Mr. MONAGHAN. A question of personal privilege plus the privilege of the House is superior to the privilege of the House alone, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana will take his seat. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, the report and resolution speak for themselves. They make prefectly clear the purpose of the resolution.

Therefore, I move the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of personal privilege and privilege of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri moves the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, may the Clerk read the last part of the resolution? We could not hear it on account of so much confusion.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER. The question now pending is a question of the privilege of the House, and that takes precedence over the question of privilege of the gentleman from Montana. There can be only one question of privilege before the House at a time, and one is now pending.

The Clerk will again read the resolution.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SWEENEY. Is any time allowed for debate on this resolution?

The SPEAKER. If the previous question is ordered, there will be no time allowed for debate.

Mr. SWEENEY. And if it is voted down, there will be time?

The SPEAKER. That is a question for the House.

The Clerk will again read the resolution.

(The Clerk again read the pending resolution.)

The SPEAKER. The question is, Shall the previous question be ordered on the resolution?

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONAGHAN) there were—ayes 243 and noes 30.

Mr. SWEENEY and Mr. MONAGHAN asked for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Eighteen Members have arisen, not a sufficient number. The yeas and nays are refused.

So the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CONNERY. During the reading of the resolution there was some confusion and we could not hear part of it. Do I understand that if this resolution is passed, this question will be taken up by the courts and not by the House?

The SPEAKER. That is the object of the resolution, as the Chair understands it.

The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MONAGHAN) there were—ayes 271 and noes 41.

Mr. MONAGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of taking this vote by the yeas and nays will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Thirty-six Members have arisen; not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

So the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on next Tuesday, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, I may address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PREVENTION OF SALES DISCRIMINATION

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 8442) making it unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to discriminate in price or terms of sale between purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, to prohibit the payment of brokerage or commission under certain conditions, to suppress pseudo advertising allowances, to provide a presumptive measure of damages in certain cases, and to protect the independent merchant, the public whom he serves, and the manufacturer from whom he buys, from exploitation by unfair competitors.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 8442, with Mr. MEAD in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SNELL. How is this bill being read and when will amendments be in order? As I understand it, the bill now consists of one section, the Senate amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; the bill comprises one section, and by agreement yesterday the first section of the bill was considered as read, and the second section, the committee amendment, has been read. Amendments will be offered to that section.

Mr. SNELL. Then we will read each section of the Senate bill and consider it as the original bill?

The CHAIRMAN. There is just one section to the House bill, and we have read that section. Amendments to that section are in order.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER: On page 6, lines 4 to 17, strike out all of subsection 1.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to take any time to discuss this amendment. This is the committee amendment which strikes out the classification subsection of the bill. We discussed it yesterday. Unless there is some opposition to the amendment, I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER: On page 7, lines 20 to 23, strike out all of subsection 5.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, this is a committee amendment and is one of the amendments that was discussed yesterday. It merely takes from the bill the basing-point provision. Unless there is some opposition to the amendment I ask for a vote.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. I will ask the gentleman from Arkansas if it is not a fact that when a request was made for a rule for the consideration of this bill that two gentlemen on the Rules Committee, especially the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. LEWIS], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARLAN] objected to that provision and we felt that our chances for getting a rule would be jeopardized unless we agreed to take it out. That is one reason we agreed to take it out in addition to others.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I would not want it to appear that only these two gentlemen were opposed to that section, for I know many Members had voiced their opposition to the basing-point section in this bill because it is a substantive matter of law which has no place in the bill.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. PATMAN. I stated in addition that a large number of members of the committee were opposed to it. Then I stated that that was in addition to other reasons.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. The gentleman from Texas is absolutely correct in saying that I voiced my objection to the basing-point provision, as did many other Members of the House; but I want it distinctly understood that I made it as an individual Member of the House and not as a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. PATMAN. We understood that.

Mr. MILLER. We understand that.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I want to congratulate the committee for eliminating this provision from the bill at the request of many of us. If the section had remained in, it would be ruinous to small-town industry located some distance from the market.

Mr. CITRON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. CITRON. Mr. Chairman, if this provision remains in the bill, it would result in forcing f. o. b. shipping prices on manufacturers; but with this provision eliminated they will not be forced to charge f. o. b. shipping point prices. Otherwise, many would not be able to compete with foreign manufacturers, for instance, from Canada, who would not be subject to this provision if it remained in the bill.

As a member of the Judiciary Committee I voted to eliminate this paragraph, no. 5. I advocated the elimination of this paragraph in the committee, because I considered it would result in a hardship to the manufacturing industry of this country and of my own State.

LET'S BE FAIR TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT—HE IS PROTECTING INDUSTRY AND LABOR AGAINST ANY UNFAIR FOREIGN COMPETITION

Permit me to state at this time that I am opposed to any action upon the part of Congress that would place a burden upon industry and result in an advantage to foreign manufacturers. Ever since I came here I have endeavored to prevent unfair competition from foreign imports, and in that connection I protested the dumping of Japanese imports into our country. I am pleased to note that only the other day, upon a thorough study and recommendation of the Tariff Commission, the President has ordered that duties upon textile imports be raised. This was done fairly and equitably to help particularly the textile industry of my region and without malice toward any nation.

I ADVOCATE A FAIR DEAL TO OUR DECENT MANUFACTURERS

I might add that I have advocated that the Government refuse contracts of supplies to any manufacturers who utilized child or convict labor or sweatshop methods, because I want a square deal in Government contracts for our decent manufacturers who are finding it increasingly difficult to bid in competition with chiselers—those who exploit labor, their stockholders, or their creditors.

Now, in some of these matters I have conscientiously differed with some members of the industry. Measures to improve their labor relations have brought opposition, even from some in my own State. Nevertheless, when they are right, I will agree with them, and when they are wrong, I shall not fear to express myself accordingly.

The paragraph in this bill that we are eliminating is as follows:

(5) That the word "price" as used in section 2 shall be construed to mean the amount received by the vendor after deducting freight or other transportation, if any, allowed or defrayed by the vendor.

REASONS AGAINST LIMITING MANUFACTURES TO F. O. B. SHIPPING POINT PRICE IN AMENDING OUR ANTITRUST LAWS

I believe that there are very important reasons why this paragraph should be eliminated entirely, not only for the reason that there is already under consideration a bill which has separately and wholly to do with the basing-point price method, and on which committee hearings have been held, but also for the reason that the basing-point price method has some economically sound merits, and to prohibit the legitimate carrying on of this pricing system by industries will have serious consequences in many industries doing business within the confines of the United States. There is still a further most important reason why this particular definition of price should be eliminated from the instant bill, which is that it would compel all manufacturers and wholesalers under the jurisdiction of the United States Government to ship all their merchandise on an f. o. b. point of origin basis and the consequences of such a statute would be to place many of our manufacturers and wholesalers at a serious disadvantage when competing with foreign manufacturers and exporters who do business in the United States.

But this paragraph involves more than the so-called basing-point system. All this system does is to equalize the freight which the customers of a given manufacturer or wholesaler pay, thereby giving an opportunity to all customers to operate on the same equal basis. There is an economic justification of this system, because it provides an open and aboveboard method for manufacturers and wholesalers to meet competition outside of their own local freight area. Second, whatever the cost of equalizing freight may be, it is more than offset by the economies of volume production and volume distribution which the greater trading area provides. In other words, the volume production thus obtained lowers the manufacturers' and wholesalers' per-unit cost and enables them to make lower prices to their customers in their own local trading areas.

But a more serious consequence of the inclusion of this definition of price, as previously stated, would be to compel all manufacturers to ship f. o. b. shipping point, and therefore compel the very definite localization of operations of all manufacturers and wholesalers, which would have the immediate effect of increasing costs as the result of seriously limited volume production.

VOLUME PRODUCTION

Volume production is the very lifeblood of many types of industries. If the products they manufacture cannot be made in large volume, upon which the low cost is dependent, the cost of the finished product would be so high that it would seriously curtail, if not entirely prohibit, their consumption.

This paragraph would seriously affect the publishers of national magazines, because it may mean that the national publishers cannot sell their magazines not only for the reason that the freight charges on the magazines to distant points will be so great as to prohibit the sale of the magazines at those points, but also for the reason that the magazines are dependent upon advertising revenues derived from national distributors whose operations will be seriously curtailed by this definition of price.

If this paragraph remains in this bill, it will mean the increased centralization of manufacturing in the more thickly populated industrial centers.

Some people say these consequences can easily be offset by manufacturers and wholesalers establishing wholesale-distributing points all over the United States. However, this would mean increasing the number of operations and the amount of handling, all of which entails increased cost which the consumer must pay, and only the larger manufacturers in the country could finance the cost, and it would mean the further submergence of the small industry and the small-business man, which would actually tend to enhance monopoly in all branches of industry.

I ADVOCATE PROTECTION FOR CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY AGAINST ANY UNFAIR FOREIGN COMPETITION

Another very serious objection to this paragraph is that in many instances our manufacturers and wholesalers would be placed at a serious disadvantage in meeting competition of manufacturers in other countries. Take an instance from my own State—the Scoville Manufacturing Co., a large and old established concern which manufactures thousands of different kinds of metal products, from articles for personal use—such as buttons—to parts to be used in the manufacture of other merchandise. Under the terms of this definition of price in the instant bill, they would be compelled to charge freight from Connecticut to New York City, to Baltimore, to New Orleans, to San Francisco, to Detroit, or to Chicago, just to mention a few major manufacturing centers. A manufacturer in the same kind of business, located in Canada or in Europe, or any other industrial country, and who is not subject to the jurisdiction of our Federal statutes, would be able to deliver his products f. o. b. to every one of these industrial cities which I have mentioned for the reason that they are all direct ports of entry into the United States. By the wording of this definition of price in this paragraph, the Scoville Manufacturing Co. could not meet the foreign competition, nor could any other manufacturer in the United States, under like conditions, meet that competition. The only way open to them would be to set up manufacturing branches in Canada, which would have the effect of further increasing unemployment in the United States.

Because of the reasons that I have given, I also favor the exclusion of this paragraph.

Mr. MILLER. I think the amendment ought to be adopted. I doubt whether that provision ought ever to be in this kind of bill anyway.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it the committee's opinion that with this provision eliminated, the bill, if enacted into law, will be as strong and effective in eliminating underhanded concessions and trade practices as it would be with that provision in the bill?

Mr. MILLER. I do not know what the opinion of the committee is on that question.

Mr. CRAWFORD. What is the opinion of the chairman of the committee?

Mr. MILLER. If the gentleman is addressing me, I am very much in favor of leaving the section; but I am offering the amendment at the request of the Committee on the Judiciary. I think the basing-point practice is indefensible and we should deal with it soon in a separate bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McLAUGHLIN: On page 9, paragraph (e), after the word "price", in line 9, insert "or services or facilities furnished"; in line 16, after the word "price", insert "or the furnishing of services or facilities"; in line 18, after the word "competitor", strike out the period and insert "or the services or facilities furnished by a competitor."

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, this is a committee amendment agreed to unanimously by the committee, and was explained yesterday. It simply allows a seller to meet not only competition in price of other competitors but also competition in services and facilities furnished.

Unless there is some objection, I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MILLER: On page 9, at the end of the committee amendment, add an additional section, as follows:

"SEC. 2. That nothing herein contained shall affect rights of action arising, or litigation pending, or orders of the Federal Trade Commission issued and in effect or pending on review, based on section 2 of said act of October 15, 1914, prior to the effective date of this amendatory act: Provided, That where, prior to the effective date of this amendatory act the Federal Trade Commission has issued an order requiring any person to cease and desist from a violation of section 2 of said act of October 15, 1914, and such order is pending on review or is in effect either as issued or as affirmed or modified by a court of competent jurisdiction, and the Commission shall have reason to believe that such person has committed, used, or carried on, since the effective date of this amendatory act, or is committing, using, or carrying on, any act, practice, or method in violation of any of the provisions of said section 2 as amended by this act, it may reopen such original proceeding and may issue and serve upon such person its complaint, supplementary to the original complaint, stating its charges in that respect. Thereupon the same proceedings shall be had upon such supplementary complaint as provided in section 11 of said act of October 15, 1914. If upon such hearing the Commission shall be of the opinion that any act, practice, or method charged in said supplementary complaint has been committed, used, or carried on since the effective date of this amendatory act, or is being committed, used, or carried on, in violation of said section 2 as amended by this act, it shall make a report in writing in which it shall state its findings as to the facts and shall issue and serve upon such person its order modifying or amending its original order to include any additional violations of law so found. Thereafter the provisions of section 11 of said act of October 15, 1914, as to review and enforcement of orders of the Commission shall in all things apply to such modified or amended order. If upon review as provided in said section 11 the court shall set aside such modified or amended order, the original order shall not be affected thereby, but it shall be and remain in force and effect as fully and to the same extent as if such supplementary proceedings had not been taken."

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment that the Clerk has just read proposes to add a new section to the bill at the request of the Federal Trade Commission. It is not offered as a committee amendment. I do not know why the matter was not presented to the committee, but I have a letter addressed to the Chairman of the Commission, signed by Mr. Ayres, Acting Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

This amendment accomplishes only one thing. In the Goodyear Tire & Rubber case, recently completed by the Federal Trade Commission, thousands and thousands of pages of testimony were taken and months were spent in trying the case. A cease-and-desist order was entered by the Federal Trade Commission. This record is now on appeal to the circuit court of appeals as provided by law. The amendment which I have just offered provides, in the event this particular bill is passed and should the respondent, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., refuse to comply with the orders of the Commission, made by virtue of this amendment, the matter could be heard on that record and additional orders made. That is all that the amendment seeks to accomplish.

The request comes, as I say, in the form of a letter from the Acting Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and is offered for the purpose of holding in statu quo the proceedings already had in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. case.

Mr. CELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. Is there any danger that these provisions could be made retroactive in reference to that particular case?

Mr. MILLER. No; the amendment specifically provides that cannot be done.

Mr. CELLER. If I understand correctly, the trial of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. case has occupied considerable time?

Mr. MILLER. Yes. The case has taken years.

Mr. CELLER. I may be wrong or I may be right in what I am about to say, but I am asking for information because I only saw the amendment a short time ago. The amendment might have the effect of permitting the Federal Trade Commission to consolidate the action that is now pending with a future action that might arise out of the acts and doings of this defendant after the effective date of the bill we are now considering, if passed?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. CELLER. So that in the interest of saving time they might be permitted to unite the actions?

Mr. MILLER. I may say there are several parties that have intervened in this particular case. It would save all of those parties the trouble and cost of taking anew that testimony and going over those proceedings again.

Mr. CELLER. Would it deprive the defendants of any rights?

Mr. MILLER. None whatsoever.

Mr. CELLER. The committee has not been able to consider the amendment at all?

Mr. MILLER. No. I will say very frankly the committee has not been able to consider it prior to this morning.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit as a part of my remarks the letter of the Acting Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission in which he requests that the amendment be adopted, and I therefore ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include this letter.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

The letter follows:

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,
Washington, May 1, 1936.

Hon. HATTON W. SUMNERS,
Chairman of the Judiciary Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CHAIRMAN: I am handing you herewith suggested amendments to H. R. 8442, but which the Commission deems important amendments to whatever bill passes amending section 2 of the Clayton Act.

The principal suggested amendment is to make sure that any amendment of section 2 will not impair orders heretofore issued by the Commission under that section, notable among which is the recent order against the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. We deem it important not only that these existent orders be not affected by amendments to section 2, but also that provision be made whereby full competitive conditions may be restored or brought about by virtue of the amendments to section 2 by reopening the old case and thus avoid re-proof of facts that may be common to both the original and supplementary proceedings. Hence the proviso.

The other amendment is the usual provision covering possible partial invalidity of the provisions of the bill.

Sincerely yours,

W. A. AYRES, Acting Chairman.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am not necessarily opposed to this amendment; however, it is offered at the eleventh hour. Certainly it is unfortunate that the members of the committee were not able to give it due reflection. It is a rather long amendment, having taken about 5 minutes to read. It certainly is ill advised at this stage to ask the Members of the House to pass upon an amendment of this character. To be frank, I do not know anything about it. I do not know whether it should be opposed or agreed to. I have great faith and confidence in what the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas has stated with reference to the amendment, but even he has had very little time for reflection on the amendment, and it seems rather ill-advised to act on it at this juncture.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. In just a moment.

However, inasmuch as the bills will have to be considered in conference, the Senate bill being different from the House bill, I hope the conferees who will be appointed will give sufficient time and reflection to this matter so that they can come to a proper conclusion thereon.

I now yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. I wanted to suggest what the gentleman has already brought out after I asked him to yield. The bill will go to conference and all the differences will be ironed out. If it is discovered that this is a bad amendment, I am sure the conferees will agree to strike it out, although I do not think it is a bad amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have always supported legislation for the benefit of the little man. I supported the Kelly-Capper fair-trade bill, which bill had for its purpose to correct the evils complained of by the small merchants. I intend to vote for this bill, but, however, I am fearful that this bill will not accomplish the results claimed by its proponents, as I am satisfied the little merchants cannot compete with the chain stores in purchasing in bulk, and for another reason the chain store will organize its forces to deal within State lines, in which case the law will not apply.

I have always maintained the proper way to compete with the chain store is for the various States to pass laws defining each and every business and have a license for each business and not permit anyone to have more than three licenses for any one place of business, and to provide a double license fee for the second license and a triple fee for the third license. In that way you will not have department stores and chain drug stores selling everything from a toothpick to an automobile. If the men who are interested in this legislation will consider legislation as I propose, I feel that they will accomplish the purpose they are seeking, but I am afraid that they will not accomplish it under this present bill.

I may say further, considering the amendments which the committee has offered on the floor of the House, this brings back to my mind the time when we considered the Kelly-Capper bill in the House. The Kelly-Capper bill consisted of about three pages, and when it was considered in the House there were about a thousand amendments offered. It seems to me the committee itself is uncertain about its ground after considering it for hours and days and months, and now they come on the floor of the House and offer committee amendments that have never been considered in the committee. While I have gone along with the committee, I feel that this legislation will not accomplish the purpose they are seeking to bring about.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. CELLER. I presume the gentleman refers to the Kelly-Capper bill when he speaks of the Kelly bill?

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. CELLER. And the gentleman would be in favor of the principle underlying the Kelly-Capper bill?

Mr. PALMISANO. I am in favor of the principle of the Kelly-Capper bill and I am in sympathy with the purpose of this bill, but I say that under this bill and under the provisions of the amendment you will not accomplish the purpose you are seeking.

Mr. CELLER. I agree with the gentleman, and I am going to ask the gentleman this question. The gentleman from Massachusetts is going to offer an amendment embodying the Borah-Van Nuys provisions or the provisions of the Kelly-Capper bill, and I hope the gentleman will vote for that amendment.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro-forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, there has been very considerable lobbying going on for and against this proposed legislation. I presume every Member has had terrible pressure from back home, just as I have had, to commit himself to this legislation. I have declined to do this and have stated, frankly, to my constituents that my vote on the matter would depend upon the final form of the legislation and that is the way I feel about it now.

I am in sympathy, however, with the problems which are sought to be met by this legislation. I think, unquestionably, there has been grave discrimination against individual merchants and business establishments on the part of manufacturers who have been coerced in many cases into doing this because of the buying power of large financial organizations.

I want to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] to tell me whether or not in the investigation of this matter it developed or information was furnished with respect to what became of these secret rebates and dummy brokerages that his committee found were being paid. Did they go to the consumer or were they put in the pockets of the person or firm who got them?

Mr. PATMAN. The money was put in the pockets of the special few who were getting these rebates, and I will state to the gentleman that a "coop" has a wonderful opportunity for its manager not to pass all these benefits on to their members, and some of them I think are opposed to this bill because it will bring it all out in the open and they will not be able to get by with that.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Then if we take away these dummy brokerages and these advertising allowances, which are pure fictions, instead of increasing the cost to the consumer, it will simply reduce the profit being wrongfully taken by these special-privileged people.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman is exactly right. They will be passed on to the public.

Mr. RAMSPECK. That is what I had gathered, and I may also say that I am very pleased the committee has taken out subparagraph 5. I certainly could not have supported the legislation with that provision in it. While I may be wrong in my construction of it, my viewpoint is if that had been left in the bill it would have been ruinous to many manufacturers throughout the country.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAMSPECK. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. I understand the gentleman from Texas, in his inquiry, investigated what is known as the Retail Federation, and it may be that some of the members of that organization may have pocketed these rebates, but this bill refers to all manufacturers, all manner and kind of dealers, all cooperatives and all chain stores, department stores, and mail-order houses, and it does not follow that the rebates that they may have received went into the pockets of all the owners of all of these enterprises. They passed them on to the consumer. All the economists I have come in contact with indicate that this bill indubitably will have the effect of raising prices to the consumer, because these entities could not buy more cheaply because of this bill's restrictions.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I cannot yield further to the gentleman.

I do not agree with the gentleman's construction as to what happened. I think most of the secret rebates and dummy brokerages that have been paid went into the treasury of the corporation that got them and at least the greater part of them were never passed on to the consumer.

I hope this bill will be so perfected by amendments that we can all support it. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arkansas.

The question was taken and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute amendment to the committee amendment offered by Mr. HEALEY: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1924, is amended to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 2. It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, to be a party to, or assist in, any transaction of sale, or contract to sell, which discriminates to his knowledge against competitors of the purchaser, in that any discount, rebate, allowance, or advertising service charge is granted to the purchaser over and above any discount, rebate, allowance, or advertising service charge available at the time of such transaction to said competitors in respect of a sale of goods of like grade, quality, and quantity; to sell, or contract to sell, goods in any part of the United States at prices lower than those exacted by said person elsewhere in the United States for the purpose of destroying competition, or eliminating a competitor in such part of the United States; or to sell, or contract to sell, goods at unreasonably low prices for the purpose of destroying competition or eliminating a competitor.

" 'Nothing in this section shall prevent a cooperative association from returning to producers or consumers, or a cooperative wholesale association from returning to its constituent retail members, the whole, or any part of, the net surplus resulting from its trading operations in proportion to purchases from, or sales to, the association.

" 'Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both.' "

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. CELLER. Is this amendment offered as an amendment to the committee amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. It is offered as a substitute for the committee amendment.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, this amendment which I have offered as a substitute for the committee amendment is the so-called Borah-Van Nuys bill. The purpose of any legislation along the lines of the bill we are discussing, as I understand it, is to eliminate certain discriminatory practices which are being utilized by certain large chain organizations to the detriment of the small independent retailers.

In the hearings before the committee it developed that the chain stores were resorting to certain practices which gave them a decided advantage over the ordinary buyers, and it was shown that the principal practices they are relying on to obtain that advantage are so-called fictitious brokerage allowances, advertising discounts, and certain other unfair and unwarranted rebates, discounts, and allowances.

Some of these chain organizations maintain their own brokerage agencies. Through that medium they obtain a discriminatory advantage on their purchases denied to other buyers, large or small. Mr. Chairman, I am in full accord with legislation which seeks to eliminate these unequal and unfair advantages.

In my judgment, the Borah-Van Nuys bill in specific terms and direct and effective language prohibits price discriminations through these methods. It states specifically the acts and practices which are prohibited and provides a heavy penalty for violation. Its language is clear, concise, and understandable.

The Borah-Van Nuys bill is the only bill that has been offered on this subject, in my judgment, that does not directly or indirectly fix prices. It therefore more nearly conforms to the spirit of the Clayton Antitrust Act than many of the provisions of the bill under discussion. Because of its nonprice-fixing features it is, in my opinion, a bill which will best safeguard the interests of the consumer, and we men who represent the large consuming districts must have regard for the consumer and be watchful of his interests. If as a result of more efficient methods in merchandizing savings can be made in the price of commodities to the ultimate consumer, we cannot penalize that efficiency to such an extent that it will affect him adversely.

The language in this bill, which I am offering as a substitute amendment, eliminates all of the advantages that the chain stores have been getting in the past. It effectually destroys these unfair practices and methods and defeats attempts to stifle or destroy competition.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEALEY. Briefly.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I wish the gentleman would point out the difference between his substitute and the bill we have before us.

Mr. HEALEY. I am sorry, but the time remaining to me will not permit me to adequately discuss the difference.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask recognition in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us first dispose of the point of order reserved by the gentleman from Wisconsin. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin desire to be heard upon the point of order?

Mr. BOILEAU. I do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the amendment pending before the House at the present time for the reason that the bill itself and the committee amendment deal only with the regulation of the activities of the seller. It is confined entirely to the operations of the seller in commerce. The amendment to the amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts attempts to regulate both the seller and the buyer. For that reason I am of opinion that the amendment which regulates both the buyer and the seller is not germane to a bill that deals only with the seller; and for the further reason that the amendment to the amendment contains a penalty, provides a penalty for violation of its provisions, while the bill under consideration and the committee amendment carry no penalty in the form of fines and imprisonment. The amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts attempts to regulate both the buyer and the seller and provides penalties. For that reason I maintain that the amendment is not germane to the committee amendment.

Mr. CELLER. Does the Chair wish to hear further argument on the germaneness of the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule; but the Chair will hear the gentleman from New York briefly.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, the provision in the Borah-Van Nuys bill, the present amendment, does not seek to regulate the buyer; it seeks to regulate the seller, just exactly as is the case with the pending bill. To illustrate, the pending bill does not operate against the buyer in the way of penalties; it does not place restrictions on the buyer. It places restrictions only on the seller, just as the Borah-Van Nuys bill does in that sense. Both the pending amendment and the bill refer to price discrimination.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts involves, in the judgment of the Chair, the subject of price discrimination. In line 9 of page 5 of the pending bill we read in section 2:

where such commodities are sold for use, consumption, or resale within the United States—

And so forth. It is therefore a problem of price discrimination. The amendment, in the judgment of the Chair, effectuates the same purpose as the purpose contained in the bill, attempts to modify the same legislation. It deals with the same general subject, and, in the judgment of the Chair, the amendment is in order. Therefore the Chair overrules the point of order.

BORAH-VAN NUYS AMENDMENT

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. If this amendment is adopted, the bill is dead. In order to get the bill through, the Senate permitted this amendment to go in. If you adopt it now and the bill becomes a law, the bill will be unworkable; it will not mean anything in the world. Let me tell you about this Borah-Van Nuys amendment. Evidently it was very hastily drawn.

It applies only where the quantities are equal. It will not prohibit pseudo-brokerage or pseudo-advertising allowances or anything else, except where the quantities are exactly the same. They could change it by just taking one case out of a carload or putting one case more in the carload, and this would not apply.

Furthermore, it is worded in a way that the independents would have to show that this large corporate chain was doing it for the purpose of destroying him as a competitor. That means that the little independent would have to employ a staff of snoopers or clairvoyants or somebody to go out and get this evidence for him. He would have to go all over the Nation in order to do it. It would be absolutely impossible. You may just as well have no bill at all if you adopt this amendment. Furthermore, it provides that the competitors shall not sell at an unreasonably low price. Not only is that very indefinite as to what is an unreasonably low price but, in addition to that, it will also have to be shown that it was sold at an unreasonably low price for the purpose of destroying a competitor. If you really want a bill, if you want the Clayton Act amended so as to take out the weasel phrases that caused its destruction in 1914, if you want to really put teeth into the act in such a way that independent merchants will be protected and the consumers, the farmers, the wage earners would have a square deal, do not vote for this amendment. That would mean absolutely destroying the bill. If there is any doubt in your mind about that, I ask you to at least vote against it, and then when the bill goes to conference the question will be before the conferees, and if they still want to put it in, or any part of it, they can do it; but if you adopt this amendment, that question will not be in conference; it will be ended so far as the House and the Senate are concerned. So I plead with you, do not destroy this bill with all kinds of amendments, some of which sound very good, until you analyze them. This is one of them that sounds really good, but when you analyze the amendment you find that it is so artfully worded and contains such clever phrases that when you get through with such an amendment as this you have not got any law at all. What is the use of a penalty if there is no law? They make the argument that there is a penalty to it. If you have no law to enforce, why have a penalty? You certainly would have no law under this amendment. I would rather have the present Clayton Act. As ineffective and unenforcible as it is, I would rather have it than to have this provision written into the law.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. CHRISTIANSON. Do we understand that the bill as passed by the Senate embodies this same Borah-Van Nuys amendment?

Mr. PATMAN. It does. Senator ROBINSON agreed to it, stating that he was opposed to it, but he was willing to have it go to conference. But if we agree to it here, it will not go to conference. I therefore ask you to vote down this amendment.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of the amendment.

I must again differ with our colleague from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]. The Senate did not ill consider this so-called Borah-Van Nuys provision. They conducted lengthy and careful hearings thereupon. As a matter of fact, they held no hearings on the Robinson bill itself. I took the trouble to analyze the witnesses who appeared in these hearings in favor of the Borah-Van Nuys amendment. There were 21 witnesses coming from all over the country. Of those 21, every one of them approved of the principles underlying the Borah-Van Nuys bill, and condemned unanimously the so-called Robinson bill, which is very similar to the Patman bill. There was one marketing specialist; there were two economists, three representing huge housewives' and consumers' organizations; four retailers; five representing large farmer organizations, six representing manufacturers, and seven representing wholesalers.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. Briefly.

Mr. CONNERY. Will the gentleman explain to us in a few words the difference between the Borah-Van Nuys amendment and this amendment?

Mr. CELLER. I will be very happy to come to it. This Borah-Van Nuys proposition is heartily in accord with the wishes of the Manufacturers' Association, with the farmer cooperatives, the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation, and all the other great farm organizations.

All the dairy interests are in favor of this Borah-Van Nuys proposition. Why? Because it very justly and properly, in simple language rather than language involved and difficult to comprehend as in the instant bill, provides this: If you set a price you must make that price available to all customers under like conditions. You cannot discriminate, under the Borah-Van Nuys proposition, in the matter of discounts, in the matter of advertising, in the matter of rebates. You must treat everybody alike. Offer to treat them all alike and there is no difficulty. You would not be compelled to go down to the Federal Trade Commission and defend yourself and prove, step by step, by exhibition of your books your differences, if any, in cost, and show all this at great difficulty and expense. The Borah-Van Nuys bill contains no severe and dangerous limitation upon quantity discounts.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. In just a minute. However, when you have to meet competition in a given locality, and the selling price is lower than yours, you have a right to go into that locality and meet that proposition—lower your price. Now, let us see how it would affect the dairy interests. Let us take, for instance, the vicinity of Chicago or New York. There are dairymen doing an intrastate business. In sections of Indiana and Illinois you have dairymen doing an intrastate business within the State. They give a price for milk. If the large dairy interests in and around those States have a price which is greater than the local price, they are out of business unless they can meet the lower price. If, for example, the Dairymen's League in New York cannot meet competition in New York City from local dealers, they might as well fold up and go out of business. The Borah-Van Nuys bill says you can meet the price of a competitor, but this bill says you cannot do so. It is unlawful and involves severe penalties if you do it. You cannot so lower your price or affect your conditions as to put a man out of business, so as to crush a competitor or to reduce or lessen competition. That you cannot do and should not do. It is illegal for you to do so and severe penalties are proscribed. But everybody is treated alike under the Borah-Van Nuys proposition. For that reason I commend it heartily to you.

The very last provision of the Borah-Van Nuys proposition offered by our distinguished colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY] provides it shall be unlawful to sell or contract to sell goods at unreasonably low prices for the purpose of destroying competition or of eliminating a competitor.

It must be remembered that the Borah-Van Nuys provision does not run afoul of the desires of the farmers, the consumers, the mining interests, the manufacturers, the dairy interests, the labor interests, and the cooperatives. It does not subsidize the middleman, and any economies that could be saved in purchasing would be saved to the purchaser and inevitably passed on to the consumer.

Its language is judicial in its nature and does not put business into a legislative strait jacket. Under it one could sell at different prices in different sections of the country to meet competition.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. The testimony was to the effect that that would have the exact effect as though we had passed the Kelly-Capper bill with reference to loss leaders. The bane of existence of the retail druggists and the retail grocers in their competition with the large chains, is the extravagant and unwarranted use of so-called loss leaders—selling below cost, advertised, trade-marked, or copyrighted articles that are the subject of great advertisement and radio programs. Many witnesses testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee to the effect that this provision would do away, to an appreciable degree, with this wide-spread extravagant use of loss leaders. I believe one of the reasons that actuated the original sponsor of this bill was the practice of loss leaders. Here is an opportunity to do something against, to strike at these loss leaders. Let us avail ourselves of this opportunity. I am opposed to these loss leaders.

Here is an instrumentality to enable a retail grocer and retail druggist to get on all the better in their competition against these large mass buyers about whose iniquities we have heard so much—much, however, of which was fiction and little of which was fact.

The Borah-Van Nuys provision upholds the principle that competition should be free, provided it be just. It is a short and easily understood provision. It states specifically the acts prohibited, the actions interdicted. It not only provides a definite and powerful element of restraint but it also wisely leaves an alleged violation open to be decided entirely on its merits. Any law which goes further than that must actually operate in restraint of trade. The instant bill actually does operate in restraint of trade unless it be very drastically amended.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. CONNERY. Does the gentleman mean by loss leader some popularly advertised article, advertised over the radio and through the magazines, which the chain stores will sell below cost?

Mr. CELLER. Yes; or the department stores, like Macy's in my section or Filene's in the gentleman's section. They undersell these advertised brands in the hope of inducing customers into their establishments, losing on those articles, but making up the difference on staple articles.

If you want to do something for those who are supposed to be benefited by the Robinson-Patman bill, vote to sustain the Borah-Van Nuys amendment.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro-forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, my good friend the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY], who served with me as a member of the subcommittee which considered this bill, and for whom I have the highest regard, and who, I am sure, is sincere in what he says on the floor regarding the amendment that he has proposed, has stated, I call to the attention of the Members of the House, that the purpose he desires to accomplish by the amendment is the doing away with and the striking out of the three discounts which now cause the inequality between large and small purchasers in the price they pay for their goods. In other words, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY] states that the purpose of the amendment he proposes is identical with the purpose of the amendment the committee has proposed in this bill. Without going into detail as to the proposed amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts, I may say that I am a member of the Committee on the Judiciary and of the subcommittee which considered this measure. We held lengthy hearings, and we held conferences following the hearings and discussed this legislation at great length. We considered the wording of this bill in order that we might accomplish the very things the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY] states he desires to accomplish—namely, the elimination of fake brokerage discounts, dishonest discounts under the guise of advertising discounts, which are in fact fake advertising discounts, and quantity discounts which enable the large purchaser to secure an unconscionable advantage over the small purchaser. In working out the provisions of this bill in the form in which it is submitted to the House the members of the Committee on the Judiciary feel, after long consideration and determination, that the bill they presented accomplishes these purposes. Another bill now comes before us in the form of an amendment which, in the opinion of those members of the committee who worked on the bill, will not accomplish the purpose which the committee bill will accomplish. In the Senate bill the word "quantity" is used; so the discrimination must be a discrimination in the exact quantity. In other words, if a seller should take one case out of a shipment he would be excluded from the provisions of this bill. This does not obtain in the bill proposed by the House committee and as it comes to the House.

I have the highest regard for my very good friend, the gentleman from New York, and although he is from New York I think he speaks for the farmers in the language they use in New York in speaking for farmers, but when he states this will do away with the right to meet competition, that is not so.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. With all due respect to my good friend from New York, the fact is that the bill before us, on page 9, lines 14 to 18, makes specific provision for the meeting of competition by a seller in the event he is confronted with the situation in which a competitor offers his goods at a lower price. I read the portion to which I refer:

> That nothing herein contained shall prevent a seller rebutting the prima-facie case thus made by showing that his lower price to any purchaser or purchasers was made in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor.

If we amend this bill to allow a wholesaler not only to meet the low price of a competitor but to go below that price and discriminate below that price, I submit to this body that the whole purpose of this legislation has been destroyed. Such a provision would render this bill completely and totally ineffective. I sincerely trust, therefore, those who are in favor of this measure will vote down this amendment and support the committee in the work it has done.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to have the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], who in the absence of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary but on his behalf and under the direction of the committee is handling the bill.

All Members of the House a day or two ago received a lengthy communication signed by leaders of various farm organizations. They made five objections to the bill. The first objection was directed against the provision of the bill relating to the basing point. The second objection related to classification of wholesalers, and so forth. Today the Committee of the Whole has accepted two committee amendments which struck out these two particular paragraphs; so these first two objections of the farm leaders have been met by the action of the Committee of the Whole in adopting these amendments.

Two of the other objections made by them are not, in my opinion, valid.

In my judgment, these two objections are not sound, because the language of the bill is very clear and does not justify their interpretation. However, in the opinion of these gentlemen with whom we have conferred, the language is not clear.

Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of clarifying the congressional intent, I have taken this time to get the opinion of the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas as to his understanding of the meaning of the language at the beginning of section 2 (a), page 5, of the bill. The section starts out as follows:

SEC. 2. (a) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality—

And so forth. My understanding of that language is that the sellers may not discriminate, but they may, nevertheless, charge different prices in different communities to persons who are not competitors. In other words, as I understand it—and I ask the gentleman whether or not this is his opinion—a seller may sell a commodity in one community at one price and sell it in another community at a different price, because those two purchasers, even though they are purchasers for resale, are not competitors, and therefore there is no discrimination in price. Is that the understanding of the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER]?

Mr. MILLER. They are operating in different markets. I do not think there is any doubt about the language.

Mr. BOILEAU. I am asking these questions at the request of certain farm organizations, and I want to show the congressional intent.

Mr. MILLER. As indicated by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN], the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. UTTERBACK], the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER], and some others were appointed as a special subcommittee to work on this bill. That was our understanding. We undertook to draft a bill that would deal with the three principal things with which we are all familiar. It was not our intention to injure the organizations about which the gentleman is speaking. The gentleman has the right interpretation of the bill.

Mr. BOILEAU. In this particular letter, which refers to this particular section, I quote as follows:

We are fearful that this section, viewed in the light of the committee report, might be construed to mean that different prices could not be charged by the same seller in different markets.

Is it the gentleman's opinion that their fears in this respect are without foundation?

Mr. MILLER. They are entirely unfounded.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, the farm organizations have one further objection that needs clarification along the same line, and that is with reference to advertising allowances. They refer to sections 5 (c) and (d) insofar as these particular paragraphs affect advertising allowances.

In their communication they state as follows:

We are unwilling to have our operations put in a strait jacket under legislation which might require that if an advertising campaign is put on in Washington, D. C., a similar program must be followed in each market in the United States in which our cooperatives operate.

In other words, it is my understanding that under the language of the bill having to do with advertising allowances, paragraphs 5 (c) and (d), particularly (d), a manufacturer or other seller may give advertising allowances to stimulate trade in one community, but because he gives such advertising allowances in one community he is not required to give an identical, a similar, or a proportional advertising allowance to a customer in another community who is not in competition with the persons in the community in which the advertising allowances are granted.

Mr. MILLER. The gentleman is correct, and I call attention to the specific provision of the act, which appears in lines 3 to 6, inclusive, page 9, reading as follows:

(d) By such person, unless such payment or consideration is available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers competing in the distribution of such products or commodities.

Competing in the distribution on that market, in that community, and in that place.

Mr. BOILEAU. May I apologize to the House for having taken this time, but because of the fact a large group of people had what I considered an erroneous impression as to the provisions of this bill I wanted to use this time in order to clarify the congressional intent. With the permission of the gentleman from Arkansas, and without in any way reflecting upon his leadership in this matter, may I ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], author of the bill, whether that is also his understanding of the provisions of the pending bill?

Mr. PATMAN. That is my understanding and I am thoroughly familiar with what the gentleman is talking about. I conferred with farm leaders, and I understand the situation just as the gentleman from Wisconsin has explained it.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, the matter has been clarified to my satisfaction, and I therefore yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JONES: On page 9, line 24, after the word "association", add a new paragraph, as follows:

"(g) Nothing in this section shall apply to any farmer or livestock producer in reference to agricultural or livestock products sold by such farmer or producer prior to the first processing thereof."

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment in a helpful spirit only. I appreciate very much the fine work which these gentlemen have done, and I do not want to interfere in any way with the orderly working out of the bill as they have fashioned it. I expect to support the bill. However, it is their understanding that the individual farmer and livestock producer of raw products are not included; therefore this cannot in any way injure the measure.

I rarely offer amendments, and I regret exceedingly that I must do so in this instance. If you will look at certain features in the first part of the bill, it will be found it is unlawful for any person engaged in commerce or in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of like grade and quality where it may substantially lessen competition, and this applies to either sellers or buyers.

I submit to the thinking Members of the House that the individual farmer and livestock man stands on a little different basis from other businesses. Up to this time he has had very little to say about the price of his products. We are trying to work it around more and more so that we may approach the time when he will have the same voice as others have, and to illustrate the dangers that may arise, I live in what is known as the panhandle of Texas. The livestock, cattle, sheep, and hogs are practically all shipped in interstate commerce. We sell a great many of them at Kansas City. They are shipped to Kansas City. They are sometimes sold in competition in the yards. They are sometimes sold to buyers who come there and look at the cattle and purchase them before they go to the yards. They are sometimes purchased even before they are unloaded. They are in interstate commerce. For instance, a producer ships two cars of white-faced Hereford cattle to market. A feeder from Iowa bids 10.20 for one car. He can only get 9.50 bid on the car. What is he to do? Must he refuse to sell them and feed them stockyards hay at $1 per bale? The same thing applies to apples, as I understand from those who live in apple sections.

I cannot see how it would hurt the operations of this bill to say that on these unprocessed raw commodities there shall be no application of the terms of this bill.

There is involved this danger. If you will turn to subdivision (e) you will find that where a different price is charged, the burden of proof falls upon the person who charges a different price to establish the fact that he has not violated the law. A great many farmers and livestock men live near the borders of the different States and a great many of these commodities go into interstate commerce. Commerce as used here, and as used in the definitions given by the leading authorities, is a very broad term.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I wish to call the gentleman's attention not only to the fact that the burden of proof will be on the farmer, but under this bill, if his sale is, in effect, a discrimination, whether he realizes it or not, he becomes subject to a penalty, and if judgment is had in the Federal court, triple damages apply.

Mr. JONES. I have not had an opportunity to study the bill fully, and I thank the gentleman for his comment.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it was just such amendments as this that led to the entire destruction of the Clayton Act in 1914. They commenced to put this plausible amendment in and that plausible amendment in, and by the time the Clayton Act was passed all the teeth were taken out and it was not enforcible.

We are trying to make the act enforcible. This sounds like a plausible amendment, but do you think the farmers are going to discriminate against anybody? Do you think there is a farmer in this country who is big enough so that he is going to take advantage of somebody through advertising allowances and dummy brokerages and quantity discounts? There is not one in this Nation who is large enough for that, and although there are some large and important livestock producers in the gentleman's district, there is not one so large that he can take advantage of Swift and Armour and the big packers in the markets of Kansas City.

The argument of the gentleman from Texas sounds plausible, but this bill is not to affect cases like that. It only applies to discriminations. It is enforcing honesty, and honesty should apply to the farmers and stock raisers, I will say to my dear friend from Texas, just the same as it applies to the businessman. I am not willing to exempt the farmers from a provision requiring common honesty, and that is all we are doing here, and if they are violating the rule of common honesty, they should suffer the penalty just the same as anyone else.

Now, with regard to the matter of burden of proof, that is an argument that sounds very plausible. Just such arguments as that have destroyed every antitrust law that has ever been presented to the American Congress.

Let me analyze that for you. What does that mean? It means exactly the rule of law today. It is a restatement of existing law. So far as I am concerned you can strike it out. It makes no difference. It is the law of this land exactly as it is written there. If the gentleman were to have a farmer or a livestock grower so large that he would discriminate, become dishonest, treat his customers unfairly, and there should be a charge or complaint filed against him before the Federal Trade Commission, what would he have to do? They would write him a letter and send him a copy of the charges, and under this bill he would rebut that by a statement of the actual facts, and that is all there is to it. If he is not dishonest, if he has not treated his customers unfairly, there will be nothing else in the world to it.

I hope you will not start amending this bill. The Judiciary Committee has worked on the bill for months and months. The subcommittee spent nights and days and Sundays and all the time in the world that a committee could give to legislation the committee gave to this bill. Now, if you start here with amendments that are hastily drawn and quickly considered, you are just as likely to have a law that will not be worth the paper it is written on like the present Clayton Act. Therefore I plead with you not to amend this bill; leave it like it is. It is a good bill.

We have considered what the gentleman from Texas has said. The committee has considered that matter. We are just as much interested in the welfare of the farmer and the stock grower and the others involved as is the gentleman. We yield to no man on questions of that kind and I hope the gentleman will withdraw the amendment. I think the gentleman should withdraw it in order that not one stone may be thrown in the way of passing this legislation that is very much needed, and needed now. For what? To save the business of the independent merchants of this country who are rapidly becoming victims no. 1, and to save the wage earners who will be forced to pauper wages if something is not done.

The farmers are forced to sell at a price that causes them to do without the comforts and necessities of life. The farmers and the wage earners are victim no. 2. Whenever a monopoly is created there will be another victim, and that will be the consumer. He will be victim no. 3. He will be a victim because the monopoly will pay the producer whatever they want to pay and they will charge the consumer the price they want to charge in order to make up the high bonuses they pay their officers. So I ask you to defeat this amendment.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This is not the first plea we have heard at this session or past sessions to the effect, "Do not adopt this amendment. Let it go to the Senate, and if we are wrong the Senate or the conferees will take care of us." I think it is high time for the House to do its own thinking and its own legislating and to put its own bills in proper shape before they leave us.

My distinguished friend from Texas on more than one occasion in discussing the bill says that it is a question of common honesty. Nobody wants to take issue with him on a question of common honesty, because we all want to be honest. Our constituents want to be honest, but you cannot dispose of a proposition like this on the ground that it provides for common honesty.

Take the question of hazards that the farmer has to contend with, not only in selling but in producing. First is the hazard of the elements, next is the hazard of depreciation, especially with reference to fruits and vegetables. There is the hazard of the fluctuating and changing market. I have known the market for apples to fluctuate as much as 100 percent in 60 days.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Does the gentleman know that there is nothing in the bill that will hinder a man changing his price every day and every hour if his purpose is not to discriminate against a competitor?

Mr. ROBERTSON. On page 5 of the bill you provide that if he makes a different price the effect of which is a discrimination—and he may not intend any discrimination—it comes under the terms of the bill.

I know of a producer who can produce one-half million bushels of apples and who could flood the market in any city in the country. That man has had the hazard of the drought, the hazard of the wind and the frost; he has produced perishable fruit, and he faces a fluctuating market. He sells 10,000 bushels one day at, say, $1 a bushel. He gets from his agent in Liverpool a cable that the British market is flooded, or that the British Government is contemplating a new tariff, He faces a declining market. He must cut his crop loose. He has sold, say, to one Cincinnati dealer 10,000 bushels of apples, and that is all that dealer can handle. He knows of another dealer in Cincinnati who can handle 100,000 bushels of apples. He quotes him a price at 25 cents less a bushel on the same day he has sold the other, because he has had this word of a falling market. Under the terms of this bill the other dealer could take him into the Federal court at Cincinnati, and the first man would charge that he had discriminated against him, that the man to whom he sold the second consignment of apples was putting his apples on the market at 25 cents a bushel less. The first man would claim that he had been hurt financially and that he would sue the apple grower, and in the event of a recovery, the court then, as has been brought out, would grant triple damages. I have prepared an amendment, taken from the fruit and fresh vegetable code, which reads "To avoid the hazards of depreciation of value of the product through decline of markets." This bill, as my friend knows, started as a wholesaler's code.

Mr. PATMAN. Oh, the gentleman is mistaken about that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman is mistaken about that. This has no reference to the N. R. A. code. It is an amendment to an existing law to take out the weasel phrases that have made the law unenforceable.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. CELLER. The bill was written by Mr. Teegarden originally, and he is the attorney for the United States Wholesale Grocers Association, and was their attorney at the time that the N. R. A. was declared unconstitutional.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Anyway, I prepared this amendment, taken from the fresh fruit and vegetable code. They recognized in making their code that they were dealing with a perishable article in a fluctuating market, and they put in there that they could change the code prices to avoid the hazard of depreciation of value of a product through a declining market. If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES] is adopted, he has taken care of that situation, and I think that is the proper thing to do. I say to my distinguished friend from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] that we are stepping out on dangerous ground when we tell the farmers who produce from the soil that they cannot make a difference in price to protect themselves in a falling market. You are stepping on dangerous ground when you say to them, "You will be subject to prosecution; you will be subject to being haled clear across the country, where your product went, into a Federal court." Oh, gentlemen say that reputable lawyers would not accuse one of discrimination in such cases, but that is not the question. Someone may claim discrimination and he could mulct you for the nuisance damages. I am in sympathy with the retail merchants. I want to help them in every way we can, but certainly in trying to help one group we should not risk an unnecessary and unfair burden being placed on another. [Applause.]

Mr. DARDEN. Are not the gentleman's remarks equally applicable to potatoes, vegetables, and so forth?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Certainly; vegetables, potatoes, any perishable crop of that kind which you have to handle in a falling market. The farmer should have an inalienable right to adjust his prices in his own judgment, not in the judgment of the Federal Trade Commission or in the judgment of any other Federal agency, but in his own judgment, if his market is going to fall and he is handling a perishable product.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Going directly to a practical illustration of what the gentleman has just brought out, in view of the fact that there is a tremendous amount of fruit raised in my State, suppose your apple grower in your district gets a cable from Liverpool that something has happened over there to his distributing machine, and that is what it is.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. And he then comes along and offers to the A. & P. Co., doing business in my State, 100,000 bushels of apples at 25 cents, or 50 cents a bushel under the market, what happens to the farmer in my State who is trying to get something out of his fruit crop? Is not that just as damaging?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Absolutely not; because the gentleman's farmer has the same right to figure markets as mine. It is a free competitive marketing system. We should not ever completely abandon it.

Mr. CRAWFORD. But mine is a little grower with 5 or 10 or 15 acres.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Whenever you tell the farmer that the Government is to regulate the price of his product, you have left our fundamental principles, and even in this emergency we must stick to the free competitive system of doing business.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate upon this amendment close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. I do not think there is any reason for the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES]. I want to call your attention to the theory of this bill. What are we trying to do in this bill? I call your attention to the first section on page 5. I want to say further to you that the farmer selling livestock, or corn, or cotton, or anything else cannot possibly come under this act unless he is creating a monopoly, and if he is creating a monopoly, a monopoly created by a farmer is just as bad as a monopoly created by a manufacturer.

Let me call your attention to this language:

> It shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, where either or any of the purchases involved in such discrimination are in commerce, where such commodities are sold for use—> and where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce, or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition with any person who either grants or receives the benefit of such discrimination.

Under certain conditions—

Then I call your attention to something else. This bill does this, and this only: It prevents quantity discounts, it prevents advertising allowances, it does away with fraudulent brokerage allowances, and that is all it does do. That is the theory of this bill. Of course, you can go out and dig up all kinds of scarecrows. You can set up all kinds of straw men and knock them down if you want to. You can bring in the farmer, you can bring in every class, but, after all, the question is this, whether or not we are going to let the monopolistic tendencies of the last 20 years continue.

I have no pride of authorship in this bill, although we worked very hard on it. They talk about apples and perishable goods. Let me call your attention to page 7, paragraph 3. It says:

> That nothing herein contained shall prevent price changes from time to time where in response to changing conditions affecting the market for or the marketability of the goods concerned—

That takes care of the livestock people. It takes care of the things that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES] is attempting to cure.

Then it says further—> such as but not limited to actual or imminent deterioration of perishable goods, obsolescence of seasonal goods, distress sales under court process.

Now, that is the situation that is confronting us here. I come from a rural district. If I ever return to the House it will be by the votes of the farmers. The largest town in my district is 6,000. Farmers are opposed to monopolies, and you cannot prevent monopolies if you pass an act like the old Clayton Act and shoot it full of provisos and amendments and loopholes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] has expired.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, the interpretation of any member of this committee is just as important as the interpretation of the language given by a member of the Judiciary Committee. The interpretation placed upon the language of section 2 (a) on page 5 with reference to the granting of a different price to a different customer in a different locality by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] I say is erroneous. The interpretation placed upon that language by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU] and by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] is erroneous. They all agree.

This language reads:

That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, in the course of such commerce, either directly or indirectly, to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality.

If that means anything, it means that you cannot discriminate——

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. The gentleman is not discussing the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will please proceed in order.

Mr. CELLER. The gentleman from Wisconsin is not in order. I am. I say that you cannot make, under the bill, a different price for the same goods of the same quality in a different locality. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] says there is a provision further down in the clause "where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly"; but whenever I charge a lower price to a different customer I have the effect of lowering competition, so I run afoul of the statute immediately. You cannot make a different price among your customers. That is the fly in the ointment.

Let us see what Mr. PATMAN said in the RECORD on yesterday, page 8111. He spoke of "the right of the manufacturer to have a different price for a different quantity, where there is a difference in the cost of manufacture. There is nothing in this bill to prohibit it, but the bill expressly provides that he may have a different price where there is a difference in the cost of manufacture." What will happen if there is no difference in the cost of manufacture, and the goods cost the same that I am selling to my customer. If what Mr. PATMAN says now is true, why did he not say so yesterday? Why did he not say so in all his speeches throughout the country? He has said at all times that the same goods of the same quantity must be always the same in all parts of the country; there can be no variation. As quoted from his speech of yesterday, there can be no difference if there is no difference in manufacturing cost. If there is no cost difference, then no difference in selling price under any conditions.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman does not overlook the fact that in future sales, that is, if you have offered a certain commodity at a certain price, you have to offer it to my competitor, but that does not apply——

Mr. CELLER. I am very sorry, but that is not the language you used yesterday. Why do you not accept the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES], because he wants to do that very same thing?

Mr. PATMAN. Because I am not going to let the gentleman from Texas help destroy this bill. I am not going to allow the conferees to either.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CELLER. I yield.

Mr. JONES. I have no desire to injure and no thought of injuring the bill in any way. I expect to support the bill. I think we would help the bill by putting this provision in it. It is in the alternative. The wrong is committed if there is a difference in price that either lessens competition or tends to create monopoly or to destroy competition. It is not simply a question of creating a monopoly. It was found necessary in the old law to exempt cooperative organizations of farmers. We are simply following the same philosophy in offering this amendment to exempt them from the operations of the law. I know the sponsors of this bill are friendly to the farmers, and I wish they would agree to this amendment and let it go in to carry out the philosophy that has been practiced for 29 years.

Mr. CELLER. Let me draw your attention to the objections of the Dairymen's League of New York. There are 40,000 dairy farmers in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. It says the present law prevents price discrimination where, first, discrimination substantially lessens competition, or, second, creates monopoly. This bill provides the same price for the same goods of like grade and quality regardless of the location of the buyers.

The Dairymen's League operates in 170 markets. It says the price of milk can never be uniform in 170 markets because of, first, local competition; second, different retail prices in each market; third, different purchasing power of each community; and fourth, because milk-control boards control retail and wholesale prices in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. They sometimes make different prices in the same State. Twenty-two States fix milk prices. They must have the right to change prices to meet the prices fixed by the State boards.

The Pure Milk Association has 16,000 dairy farmers in Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana. It sells milk to dealers in Chicago at 12 cents a quart. It sells milk to dealers in Hammond, Ind., at 10 cents a quart. It is obvious that if the dealers in Chicago are selling milk to consumers at 12 cents a quart, and the dealers in Hammond, Ind., are selling milk to consumers at 10 cents a quart, the Chicago dealers should be required to pay a higher price to the farmers than is paid by the Hammond dealers. Since it would obviously be impossible to charge the Hammond dealers any higher price for their milk if they are selling on a 10-cent basis, the net effect of the bill would be to require the association to sell its milk to Chicago dealers at the lower prices being charged to the Hammond dealers. The resultant loss to the farmers supplying milk to Chicago is obvious.

As another example, let us consider the case of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., a farmer-owned and farmer-controlled cooperative association, engaged in marketing butter, cheese, and other dairy products for approximately 400 local cooperative creameries and cheese factories east of Minneapolis. Under the terms of this bill they would be required to sell at the same price in every market in which they operate, although economic conditions, such as employment, might easily require a difference in price, let us say, for example, between the city of Washington and the city of Scranton, Pa.

It should be further noted that during the whole life of the N. R. A., manufacturers, wholesalers, and jobbers attempted to obtain a definition of wholesaler and retailer in order to cripple the operations of farmers' cooperative associations which purchase from manufacturers and sell direct to their farmer members, farm equipment and supplies, including fertilizer, creamery machinery, and so forth. The Federal Trade Commission is at the present time investigating the activities of the manufacturers of butter tubs in refusing to grant Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., a wholesaler's discount upon butter tubs, although Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., performs all of the functions of a wholesaler with the single exception that it sells direct to its member creameries rather than through a jobber.

This attempt to salvage economic waste by legislation promoting or protecting intermediaries between the producer and consumer of goods is in direct conflict with the whole theory of cooperative marketing and cooperative purchasing.

It has been specifically pointed out that a provision was inserted in the bill to permit certain discounts to be given to wholesalers without according such discounts to other persons who purchased in similar quantities. Thus, this bill which is designed to eliminate discrimination contains a violently discriminatory provision against the cooperative purchasing of farm equipment and supplies by farm organizations in favor of the private wholesaler and jobber of farm equipment and supplies. And this discrimination is to be paid for out of the pockets of our farmers.

As pointed out above, the wholesalers and jobbers attempted to obtain this special discrimination in their favor during the whole life of the N. R. A. The situation became so bad that President Roosevelt was forced to issue two Executive orders on the subject, in which the President stated clearly and unequivocally that no code of fair competition should be construed or interpreted so as to prevent any cooperative organization from being entitled to receive and to distribute to its members discounts (a) ordinarily paid or allowed to other purchasers for purchases in wholesale or middleman quantities, or (b) paid or allowed pursuant to the requirements or provisions of any code of fair competition to other purchasers for purchases in wholesale or middleman quantities.

In addition, a similar provision was written in the so-called Guffey Coal Act of a similar nature so as to insure that cooperatives would be entitled to wholesale or jobbers discounts in connection with the operation of the Guffey Coal Act.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CELLER) there were—ayes 74, noes 86.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. JONES and Mr. MILLER.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 81, noes 89.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEYSER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PEYSER: Page 5, line 8, after the word "quality", insert "and design"; and on page 5, in line 22, after the word "quality", insert "and design."

Mr. PEYSER. Mr. Chairman, in response to the statement made a few moments ago by the gentleman from Texas that he wants to try to set up an honest and a workable bill, I am offering this very simple amendment to add the words "and design" after the word "quality" where it appears in two places on page 5; and I hope the committee will not combat this particular amendment.

I call attention to the fact that there is no differential of design in the foods and drugs, so that would have no effect against the chain stores the bill is hoping to reach; but let us assume that two articles are made from the same quality of merchandise, but one is made under one design for a certain type of trade and the other is made under another design for another type of trade. The design itself may entitle the purchaser in either case to a differential in price, even though the basic quality of the merchandise involved is similar. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that there is nothing in this amendment that should in any way affect the bill in itself at all. Quality of food is not involved. There is no design in the quality of food or drugs. There may be, however, a design differential in furniture or in ladies' shoes. Through the elimination of certain material here or there an opportunity may be given for a lowering of price, whereas the quality involved is the same. Under this bill the manufacturer would be penalized severely.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PEYSER. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Would not that permit the processor of a food commodity to change from a round-shaped package to a square-shaped package and call it a difference in design?

Mr. PEYSER. Absolutely not, because that would be a change in the design of the container, whereas the amendment refers to a design in the merchandise offered for sale. There is no style in baking powder, there is no style in paregoric, there is no style in castor oil. It will apply principally to textiles, probably to furniture, probably to shoes, but not to the commodities we are endeavoring to reach; and I think if the committee wants to carry out what the gentleman from Texas has suggested, a good, honest, workable bill that is fair to everybody, this is the way they can be fair.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a further question?

Mr. PEYSER. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Is it the gentleman's understanding that this bill as now submitted will force a shoe manufacturer, for illustration, to sell all styles of shoes for the same price?

Mr. PEYSER. If the quality is the same. My amendment adds to the word "quality" only the two words "and design." I think it is a simple amendment, and I do not see any reason why, if they want to present a fair bill, it should not be accepted.

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PEYSER. I yield.

Mr. RABAUT. How does this affect the tire business about which we have been hearing so much, the same tire sold with a different name on it, for instance?

Mr. PEYSER. If the quality were the same and the design were the same, it would be, in all component parts, the identical article. They are not going to have different designs for tires; they make them all the same.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RABAUT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York may proceed for 3 additional minutes in order that I may ask him a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. RABAUT. Suppose the design of the tread of the tire were different, what would be the case?

Mr. PEYSER. That, in my judgment, would not be considered a different design.

Mr. RABAUT. That is one of the big questions we are trying to eliminate.

Mr. PEYSER. It would be done, principally, for deceit and for evasion. The design of all tires is the same; they are round. Because the design of the tread is different does not mean there is any difference in the fabric. In the matter of a suit of clothes, a stripe could be added without changing the basic quality of the garment. That design may be put in there because it is more saleable in a certain section, still there could be no deviation in the price of the basic articles, because the quality is the same in each; and I think, where they endeavor to discriminate purely on the design of the tread of a tire, it could be set up immediately that it was done merely for the purpose of evasion.

Mr. RABAUT. That is what has been done recently.

Mr. PEYSER. That would cover the design. In my judgment you are not evading a design by putting on a different tread.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, speaking on behalf of the committee, I may say that this matter has had the consideration of the committee and it feels that if the word "design" is inserted in the qualifying phrases, as suggested by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PEYSER], the door will be open to a situation in which this bill may be flouted and the purposes of the bill destroyed.

As an example, it is felt by the committee that the same identical goods might be sold to a small-quantity purchaser for a certain price and level which would be higher than the same quality goods could be sold to the large-quantity purchaser by simply putting another label on the goods sold to the large-quantity purchaser. In other words, the design would be changed to comply with this act.

I may say that the committee feels this amendment should not be agreed to, and I call attention to the fact that the part of the Clayton Act which is now under consideration is the same in form in the present bill as in the original Clayton Act, which has been on the statute books for 24 years. After 24 years a suggestion is made that that part of the act be amended at this time. Incidentally, I may say, with all respect and deference to my good friend from New York, the suggested amendment was proposed by one of our colleagues who appeared before the Rules Committee in opposition to the entire bill.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be defeated.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]. A great many of the industries in Ohio were very much in favor of the proviso in the Senate bill, appearing on page 4, and reading as follows:

And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent discrimination in price in the same or different commodities made in good faith to meet competition.

I find that on page 9 of the Patman bill, beginning in line 14, there appear these words:

Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall prevent a seller rebutting the prima facie case thus made by showing that his lower price to any purchaser or purchasers was made in good faith to meet an equally low price of a competitor.

Will the gentleman explain the difference between these two proposals?

Mr. PATMAN. If the Senate amendment should be adopted it would really destroy the bill. It would permit the corporate chains to go into a local market, cut the price down so low that it would destroy local competitors and make up for their losses in other places where they had already destroyed their competitors. One of the objects of the bill is to get around that phrase and prevent the large corporate chains from selling below cost in certain localities, thus destroying the independent merchants, and making it up at other places where their competitors have already been destroyed. I hope the gentleman will not insist on the Senate amendment, because it would be very destructive of the bill. The phrase "equally low price" means the corporate chain will have the right to compete with the local merchants. They may meet competition, which is all right, but they cannot cut down the price below cost for the purpose of destroying the local man.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. What does the gentleman's proviso mean?

Mr. PATMAN. It means they may meet competition, but not cut down the price below cost. It means an equally low price but not below that. It permits competition, but it does not permit them to cut the price below cost in order to destroy their competitors. I hope the gentleman will not insist on the Senate amendment.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. I do not think the Senate provision permits them to do that.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, I want to refer back to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York which pertained to the inclusion of the word "design" in this bill.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is not Holy Writ and it is not a perfect document. It seems to be in the shape that the gentleman from Texas wants it, and he appeals to you not to change a single solitary word or sentence in the whole thing. This is not fair. I realize he has a steering committee here to see that the bill goes through exactly as he wants it to pass, but let me give you a little bit of the history of the bill.

The very first day it came before the Judiciary Committee the attorney who drew it realized there were imperfections in it and suggested certain amendments. It very soon became apparent to the Judiciary Committee that it was defective in many respects, and a subcommittee was appointed to rewrite it. The subcommittee spent many months in doing so. When they reported it to the full committee dozens of amendments were adopted in executive session. After it was reported here on the floor the Judiciary Committee agreed to still further amendments, which the putative author of the bill, and its chief sponsor, consented to accept.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York offered an amendment to add the word "design", so that there shall be no discrimination in price between purchasers of goods of the same grade, quality, and "design." Obviously the backers of this bill are interested in groceries. They are not interested in clothing, wallpaper, jewelry, or any of the other innumerable things that move in interstate commerce, the prices of which are influenced by attractive and popular designs and patterns.

Permit me to give you a single example. In my city there is a manufacturer of women's shoes, and every year he offers the market 50 or 60 different designs. Some of them are popular, and he can sell them at good prices. Others do not catch the fickle fancy of our feminine friends, and they are therefore a drug on the market. They are exactly the same grade and quality, but in order to move the unpopular shoes this manufacturer has to sell them for what he can get. He can command a good price for his popular shoes. The same thing is true with china, wallpaper, furniture, fixtures, and innumerable other commodities. Why do you want to penalize that class of business? Do not be carried away just because the gentleman from Texas would have you think this is a perfect piece of work. This bill has to go to the Senate, and it will be a far different one when you see it in final form. There is a lot of perfecting yet to be done.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PEYSER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PEYSER) there were—ayes 19, nays 79.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 5, line 8, after the word "quality", insert "purchased under like conditions"; also on page 5, line 22, after the word "quality", insert "purchased under like conditions."

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, for days I have been trying to get exactly what is in the mind of the gentleman from Texas about so-called discriminations in prices. I maintain, and will maintain to the end of the discussion of this bill, that from what we have heard there is no question but that there can be no right to anyone selling goods to make any different prices to different customers where the goods are of like grade and quality and quantity, the gentleman from Texas notwithstanding.

The distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] put in the RECORD yesterday the following language:

Now, with regard to the statement made by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER], here is what I said. I said that manufacturers would have to treat their customers alike and give them the same price, and I still say that. For what? For the same quantity under the same conditions. This is the part that the gentleman did not bring out. He simply failed to tell it all.

Now, I simply put his exact language in this amendment, and I say that where the goods are purchased thus under like conditions there can be no discrimination. When they are purchased under unlike conditions, the inference is there can be discrimination and change in price. That is logical and reasonable.

Now, if what the gentleman said this afternoon is so, he should not object to the amendment, as I have put his exact language in my amendment.

We know that goods may be of the same quantity, of the same quality, but may be purchased under unlike conditions. There may be different items of credit. One man may be entitled to a 60-day dating, while another man may be entitled only to cash on delivery. There may be questions of delivery datings. One man may want his deliveries within 10 days; another may want his deliveries in 60 days or 6 months or may want them daily. Certainly, where there are these different conditions, there ought to be the right given to effect a different price. He may want his goods with samples or he may want them without samples. There may be accorded the right to furnish demonstrators for toilet articles or similar goods or there may be no demonstrators. A man may have a strike on his hands or there may be a lock-out, or there may be no labor difficulties.

Certainly, if there are like conditions, there should be no discrimination, but if there are unlike conditions, which is the inference of my amendment, a man should have the right to contract under our Constitution as he sees fit and allow for these different conditions by a difference in price.

The bill, as now drafted, will not allow these differences and I urge upon you sincerely that you allow such differences, because of differing or unlike conditions. Put in the words to which the gentleman from Texas always adverts, namely "like conditions." He reiterates, "Under the same or like conditions." Put them in now. He questioned me yesterday and took me to task because I did not include these words. I include them now in the amendment and I offer them for your judicial and earnest consideration.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York is conscientiously opposed to this bill, and, naturally, he is going to do what he can to weaken it. If you were to adopt this amendment he would not vote for the bill. Therefore, he is trying to perfect it for us. So if it is already satisfactory to those of us who have been working on it in the committee and with the other sponsors of the legislation, why should he not let us have the bill we want.

If you put these words in the place where he proposes to insert them, without a sufficient explanation, you will just confuse the bill. You will have confusing language by placing them where he has proposed to put them.

What are the conditions? Delivery by truck, delivery over the railroad, delivery on a barge, delivery at a certain point that is a few miles removed from the other competitor. Any condition like this would remove the case from a question of discrimination if you were to adopt the gentleman's amendment.

The committee worked on this bill for months and a subcommittee worked on it for months. It is true they agreed to some amendments, but they have got a bill they think is all right, and I hope you do not amend it by putting in the weasel phrases and these statements that sound all right, but upon second thought or upon reflection or upon analysis, you find some of them are destructive of the purposes of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to cut off anyone from debating amendments on the bill, but I wonder if we cannot reach an agreement under which all debate on amendments may close.

Mr. ROBERTSON. I wish to offer an amendment.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I have an amendment that I desire to offer.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on all amendments to this section close in 30 minutes.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, this is a highly controversial bill, and a great many Members are interested and desire to offer amendments. To cut off debate in 30 minutes would be harmful.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman says "on this section." That would end debate.

Mr. MILLER. That would end debate.

Mr. MICHENER. It would end debate in 30 minutes. I am going to vote for the bill, but there are many far-reaching provisions in the bill, and I think the gentleman ought not to close debate. I hope he will withdraw his request.

Mr. MILLER. I will withdraw the request, Mr. Chairman, for the time being.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLOOM: Page 9, line 6, after the word "commodities", change the period to a colon and insert "Provided, That nothing herein contained shall apply to payments for window or counter displays actually made or signs actually used in advertising or displaying a vendor's products on the premises of a vendee."

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call the attention of Members to paragraph (d). At no place in the bill is the word "advertising" used. It might refer to advertising, but it does not specifically say so. Now, clause (d) reads, as follows:

(d) That it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce to pay or contract for the payment of anything of value to or for the benefit of a customer of such person in the course of such commerce as compensation or in consideration for any services or facilities furnished by or through such customer in connection with the processing, handling, sale, or offering for sale of any products or commodities manufactured, sold, or offered for sale by such person, unless such payment or consideration is available on proportionally equal terms to all other customers competing in the distribution of such products or commodities.

Now, Mr. Chairman, that means just this: Remember it says "proportionally." In other words, this will prevent any manufacturer that is starting new in a business from having an opportunity of putting his goods on the market in the manner merchants have been doing for the last 50 years.

I am particularly interested in this one section for this reason: Forty years ago, in 1896, I started a music publishing business, and my success in the business at that time in Chicago was brought about by displaying in the window wax figures of a song I had at that time.

Under this provision, it could not be done. "Proportionally", it says. In other words, if the Coca Cola Co. should make a contract with a store, whether a drug store or grocery store or whatever it may be, and should say, if you buy $100 worth of goods we will give you a sign, then the fellow in the next street, or on the next corner, if he purchased only $50 worth of goods, according to this proposed bill, could have only half a sign. That is what it says. You cannot get away from the fact that this is not workable.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Is there anything to keep the Coca Cola Co., or any other company, from going to drug stores and saying they want a certain amount of space?

Mr. BLOOM. No; you cannot do that under this section. You prevent it from being done.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman says that it cannot be done. The Coca Cola Co. under this bill could give anybody all the space they saw fit, but they could not give a discount or a lower price to someone for space which is not used.

Mr. BLOOM. That has nothing to do with this section. This is for services or facilities furnished. It has nothing to do with price.

Mr. MICHENER. But that is where these phony discriminations come in. They claim they render a service which they do not render.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICHENER. To finish this up, that is one of the troubles and discriminations here—that one of these manufacturers will sell to one store, say, a million units, provided they do so much advertising, and then, in turn, will exchange checks and pay the purchaser for doing the advertising, and the advertising consists in hanging up a two by four sign.

Mr. BLOOM. I did not yield for a speech. My amendment just takes care of that and provides for an emergency of that kind. It provides that nothing herein contained shall apply to payments for windows or counter display actually made or signs actually used in advertising or displaying the vendor's products on the premises of a vendee. It must be actually done, and if it is not a bona-fide contract, of course, then this would not apply; but if you have a window at Fourteenth and F Streets and the manufacturer wants to make a contract with that store at Fourteenth and F Streets where thousands of people pass by every day, are you going to pay the same price for one down at Fourth and B Streets where only 50 people pass in the course of a day? My amendment would provide a fair way of advertising in that window or counter display.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Under the gentleman's amendment, at Fourteenth and F Streets, suppose I purchased 10,000 units with an agreement with the gentleman that I will sell through that distributing store, provided he gives me certain advertising allowances. If a man at Seventh and F Streets purchases the same number of units and makes the same distribution, is he entitled to the same advertising benefits?

Mr. BLOOM. That does not affect it here at all. I leave the word "proportionately" in. I am mentioning advertising specifically. I am saying to you this can be done, leaving this the way it is. You give every one the same kind of a deal all the way through. There is no discrimination here, but you have not advertising in here. There is no way that you can read advertising into it, notwithstanding the fact that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU] say there is. The word "advertising" is not in this bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I would read it in the words of line 22, page 8, where it says anything of value.

Mr. BLOOM. You can read it in, but it is not mentioned. You can read anything into it, and that is the trouble with the bill all the way through. You are reading a lot of things into the bill, but my amendment allows fair play to the manufacturer, and does not allow the destruction of the little manufacturer who wants to introduce his goods, but he cannot do it under this section of the bill.

Mr. CRAWFORD. As I understand it, he could give the same benefit to all of the customers in the bill.

Mr. BLOOM. He could not do it; it would be impossible. There are no two windows alike, no two counters alike. One side of the street is different from the other side.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has again expired.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. With all due deference to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM], I may say that the committee, in considering the measure, gave a great deal of time to a discussion of the very things suggested by the gentleman from New York. It is the opinion of the committee that the bill in the form in which it is presented to the House fully protects all purchasers in the matter of advertising discounts, but it is also the opinion of the committee, after due deliberation, that if the bill were amended in the manner suggested by the gentleman from New York, it would be destructive of the purposes intended by the bill itself.

In other words, if you eliminate from consideration in this bill, in the matter of advertising discounts, window display, a situation might exist in which a company which does window-display advertising might put one of its display outfits in a window and then grant to a purchaser a substantial discount on account of that very fact. The bill as it is now drawn takes care of the situation amply.

Mr. CURLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I yield.

Mr. CURLEY. This bill, as I understand it, is fair; but how does it provide for these so-called loss leaders that we have so much talk about in the city of New York?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The gentleman's question is not germane to the point I am discussing. The gentleman can ask to strike out the last word and address himself to that point.

Mr. CURLEY. That is the question I asked the gentleman from New York.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. As a matter of fact, it will be taken care of, in the opinion of this committee, if this bill is passed, but I do not have time to go into that now.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. My amendment protects that; this being advertising, show-window and display advertising, that is actually made and delivered.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I understand that.

Mr. BLOOM. There is no fictitious advertising that can enter into it.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I understand that.

Mr. BLOOM. The gentleman said advertising discounts. It is not advertising discounts at all. These people merely make a contract for a window display or a counter display, and that contract is a matter of public record, and the price they pay for it is a matter of record. There is nothing fictitious about it. It is actually made and paid for.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That contract contemplates that the manufacturer will pay the seller a certain amount for the use of his window.

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is a discount under another name.

Mr. BLOOM. Is it the gentleman's thought that you cannot make any more window-display contracts?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Certainly not, but you can make them only on proportionately equal terms to all customers competing in the distribution of such product or commodity.

Mr. BLOOM. How can you do it on proportionately equal terms when there are no two places alike? Suppose one store is 25 feet and the other store is only 10 feet; what are you going to do with the 10-foot fellow? Give him a half a sign?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. You can give him a smaller sign. You do not have to cut the sign in two.

Mr. BLOOM. Then you will have all different kinds of signs; is that the idea?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. They have all different kinds of signs now. What do you do today?

Mr. BLOOM. We do not do that. We would go broke if we did.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. At any rate, I may say that the amendment proposed has the effect, in the opinion of the committee, of destroying the very purpose of the bill so far as it affects the protection of the small purchaser on advertising discounts.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I want to ask the gentleman from Nebraska or some other member of the committee the same question I asked the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM]. I do not read anything in this bill which would prevent the Coca Cola Co., for instance, from going to a druggist and making an agreement with him to put a sign across the top of his window. They can either pay him for it or they could do it for nothing. Am I correct?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That is correct. But there must be no discrimination. He has to do it under such terms and conditions that there is no discrimination between competitors.

Mr. RAMSPECK. The gentleman does not understand my question. I say if he goes there, not in connection with the sale of Coca Cola, but goes to the merchant and says, "I want to put a Coca-Cola sign across the top of your window", but it has no connection with a sale, there is nothing to prevent that, is there?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. They would no doubt take into consideration whether or not that was a subterfuge in a sale or an independent transaction.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CULKIN: On page 9, strike out the proviso at the end of subsection (e), beginning in line 14 and ending in line 18, and insert the following: "Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall prevent a seller rebutting the prima-facie case thus made by showing that the discrimination in price or furnishing of service or other facilities to any purchaser or purchasers was made in good faith to meet competition."

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, may I say at the outset, for the purpose of meeting the probable suggestion that I am opposed to this bill, that I am not opposed to this bill. I am going to vote for it whether or not this amendment is adopted.

I have offered this amendment at the request of the farm organizations of America. The Members of the House received a letter from the various farm organizations, including the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, Northwestern Farmers' Union Legislative Committee, American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Association, in which it set forth a number of reasons why they were opposed to this bill. The amendment which I am now offering embodies one of those objections.

May I say that the farm cooperatives are, to my mind, the truly rational developments of American farming. Artificial aid of Government has never really functioned, but where the farmers have gone into cooperatives and have stood together shoulder to shoulder they have, as a rule, solved their problems. Through these organization they have eliminated one and sometimes two middlemen, and both the farmer and consumer are benefited.

Here is the way this bill, as it now stands, affects the Land O'Lakes cooperative, a great Minnesota dairy outfit:

This cooperative is selling butter in an eastern city. It goes to a local merchant, a grocer, we will say, and offers him some butter. He has been a regular customer. The grocer tells this Land O'Lakes representative: "I cannot buy your product; Swift, or Armour, is underselling you."

"All right; we will meet the competition. What are they offering?"

"Well, I cannot tell you what the packers are selling me for."

"Well, I will offer so-and-so."

"It is not a sufficient reduction."

"Then I will offer such a reduction."

Finally a price is agreed on. The grocer under that scheme of things does not disclose the price the packer is selling him the goods for; so this legislation is not copperplate, as the gentleman from Texas suggested, but it imposes an impossible duty upon this farm cooperative in selling its products under those circumstances.

I ask you gentlemen to consider the status of the farm cooperatives. They are carrying their own, they are ably officered. They are officered by intelligent, honest men, many of whom have come from the soil. Today they are marketing in America approximately $2,000,000,000 of farm products. One-quarter of the farm income is derived through the operation of these farm cooperatives. They speak vigorously and in thunder tones against this provision of the bill.

The zealous attitude, the zeal of the gentleman from Texas, is to be commended in this connection. He is a vigorous personality and has won his spurs in the House. I hope he will not take on the status of a killer and in fact destroy his own excellent work in this field by writing this impossible provision into this bill.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. WOODRUM). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. I yield briefly.

Mr. FLETCHER. How differently does the gentleman's amendment affect the situation?

Mr. CULKIN. It does not require this cooperative to show at what price the other fellow is selling. That is what the bill as it is written requires. It imposes an impossible condition on the selling cooperative.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. Briefly.

Mr. CELLER. In our State we have a milk-control board. They fix the price of milk. Certainly those outside the State selling in New York State should be able to meet that competition.

Mr. CULKIN. What the gentleman says is true. I want to call the attention of the House to this further fact. We have at the other end of this building a body known as the Senate which sometimes develops original traits; but they have already passed this bill and written into it the language:

Nothing herein contained shall prevent discrimination in prices made in good faith to meet competition.

That is what my amendment says, and I ask the members of the committee in all fairness to accept this really constructive amendment.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate what the gentleman says, but this amendment, while offered under the guise of protecting farm cooperative associations, if adopted will open wide the gates not only to farm cooperatives but to every other kind of organization.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 7, line 7, after the word "established", insert a new section, to be known as subsection 2 (a) and to read as follows:

"That nothing herein contained shall be construed or applied in such a way as to increase the cost of goods, wares, or merchandise to the consumer."

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, all this amendment does is to effect exactly what the proponents of the bill say it will do, namely, not increase the price of any goods, wares, or merchandise to the consumer.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 6, strike out lines 23, 24, and 25, and strike out also, on page 7, lines 1 to 7, inclusive.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MEAD). The gentleman from New York is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CELLER. What I seek to do by this amendment is to strike out what is known as the obnoxious restrictions concerning quantity discounts. The Borah-Van Nuys amendment provides that any discount may be given provided it is given equally to everyone under like conditions. The pending bill, however, states that you cannot treat everybody alike but that the Federal Trade Commission shall have something to say about it, shall have the right to fix a limitation beyond which you cannot go, regardless of the fact the buyer may purchase a million units and that millions of dollars may be involved in the order. The Federal Trade Commission can say: "Thus far you may go and no farther." It could under the bill—but not under the Constitution—interfere with your right of contract.

I have been criticized and twitted considerably because I have sought in a way to advance the opinions of the farm organizations in this Chamber. These farm organizations have seen fit to write to me. I do not know a single solitary representative of a farm organization; I would not know them if I were to fall over them; yet they have written to me because they look upon me as one who is seeking to advance their cause. I cannot help that. [Laughter.] I want to read to you this letter, whether you like it or not, whether you take me humorously or seriously. I asked them whether they were satisfied with the wording of the bill with reference to quantity discounts, because these are huge cooperative organizations buying and selling in trainload lots; they indicated to me they were dissatisfied. This is the response I received from Mr. Chester Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation. I I herewith give you his letter and my communication to him.

MAY 26, 1936.

Mr. CHESTER GRAY,
Washington representative,
American Farm Bureau Federation,
Munsey Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. GRAY: I note the various objections to the pending Patman bill, H. R. 8442, as set forth in the letter of May 25 signed by yourself and four other leading farm organizations.

Your letter is not clear, however, as to your attitude toward the section dealing with allowable quantity discounts—section 2 (a), subsection (2), on page 6, beginning with line 18.

You indicate in your letter that you favor elimination of "false allowances, false advertising allowances, and unreasonable quantity discounts." The inference is, of course, that you would insist on provisions in the bill to allow quantity discounts to cooperatives and all other large buyers, which would make it possible to pass on to such buyers the full savings of such quantity purchases; that is, savings in costs to the manufacturer due to elimination of selling expenses, advertising, warehousing, and similar overhead items.

Are you satisfied that the language of subsection (2) on page 6 permits of the full realization of these savings to cooperatives and other large buyers?

The language as it appears in the bill would seem to provide for such price differentials, but the special interpretation given this language by both the House committee and the Senate committee materially changes the apparent meaning of that language, in my opinion.

I should be glad to have your views on this point.

Very truly yours,

EMANUEL CELLER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 26, 1936.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN CELLER: Replying to your letter of May 26, relative to the position of the farm organizations on the quantity-discount paragraph of the Patman bill (H. R. 8442), will say that this farm organization—and I believe all others—would insist on provisions which allow the full savings and economies of quantity purchases to be passed on by the manufacturer to such purchasers. It is only the unreasonable quantity discount which should be eliminated.

We have been somewhat puzzled by the special interpretation of the language of subsection (2) of section 2 (a), as given in the committee reports. These interpretations do seem to go far beyond the apparent meaning and intent of the language of the bill, which says that price discriminations between purchasers may be made "which make only due allowance for differences in the cost of manufacture, sale, or delivery resulting from the differing methods or quantities in which such commodities are to such purchasers sold or delivered." The language of the bill seems so clear at this point that we have been inclined to take it at face value, rather than to accept the explanation in the committee report.

If you think there is any possibility that the narrow interpretation of the committee might in later court action be adopted as the meaning of the language of the bill, we would be glad to join with you in endeavoring to get this language changed.

We would like to have you ask those in charge of this bill to state whether this language would permit the full economies of mass buying to be passed on to the buyer or whether such a buyer would be required to pay for facilities which he does not utilize, such as a pro-rata share of salesmen's expenses, advertising, warehousing, etc.?

If you do not get a satisfactory answer, we would urge you to insist upon changes in the language so as to allow all of the economies of mass cooperative buying to be passed on to the buyers.

Very respectfully,

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION,
CHESTER H. GRAY,
Washington Representative.

What does that mean? Suppose one of these cooperative farm organizations wants to buy some fertilizer. They go to a manufacturer and say, "We want to buy $50,000 worth of your products. We do not want to use your salesmen. We do not want to use your wholesalers or your jobbers. We do not want to avail ourselves of the benefit of any of your advertising, radio broadcasts, or any of that type of overhead. Now, what does it cost to conduct these radio programs?" The manufacturer says, "5 percent." "What is your advertising budget?" Another 5 percent. "What do you pay your salesmen?" Another 5 percent. The statement is made, "We are not going to use those facilities; therefore we want you to allow us the 15 percent.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, they say, "We are not using the 15 percent that you have to lay out in these various directions. We want that difference allowed us. We do not use those facilities, so why should we not receive that difference which you otherwise pay for your advertising, for your radio, and for your wholesalers and salesmen?"

The farm organizations say that the quantity discount provisions as contained in this bill would not permit them to make these savings. It would not permit the manufacturers to give these allowances. The farm organizations and other large mass buyers feel they therefore would be prejudiced greatly by this bill. These savings they would be enabled to pass on to the farm cooperatives just as the other mass buyers would be precluded from passing on those savings to the consumers.

May I ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] whether or not he is willing to abide by what these farm organizations say in this regard?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, no real farm organization or no real farmer will oppose what this bill proposes to do in this regard. This bill seeks to prevent monopoly, the very thing that the farmer wants to prevent, and no friend of the farmer would want that provision stricken from the bill.

Mr. CELLER. I submit that is not an answer. I ask the gentleman what he thought of this letter from the farm organization with reference to a specific objection, and he speaks of monopolies. There is no monopoly anywhere. The Federal Trade Commission spent over a year and $1,000,000 to find out whether there was a monopoly in any trade or industry, and reported back there was no monopoly. So all this talk about monopolies and the great chain stores controlling everything in sight is just pure bunk and balderdash.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for the favorable consideration of this amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I believe we have debated these various amendments sufficiently. I think the membership understands them clearly. Therefore I ask for a vote upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MANSFIELD: Page 7, line 7, after the word "established", insert: "And provided further, That the Federal Trade Commission is hereby empowered and directed, after due investigation and after hearings afforded to all interested parties, to determine, fix, and establish, and after like investigation and hearings, to modify and revise from time to time the maximum amounts (based on the percentage of the value of the merchandise affected, or otherwise) of the freight charges to be assumed, absorbed, or paid by a seller upon the sale of such merchandise; and the assumption, absorption, or payment of such freight charges in excess of the maximum amounts determined, fixed, and established as above provided shall be deemed to constitute unlawful price discrimination, and is hereby forbidden."

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I was in hopes that the amendment which I have just offered would meet with the approval of the gentlemen in charge of the bill, as I consider it in thorough accord with the purposes of the bill. We now have a law which prohibits railroads from indulging in discrimination, a law which prevents them from giving rebates so far as freight charges are concerned. We have, however, no law affecting the freight charges paid by shippers. I have in mind a manufacturing concern in my district that informed me they are very much interested in this question. If they make a certain price to retailers and then a larger manufacturing concern or importer by selling much larger quantities can afford to pay the freight, or a large proportion of the freight charges to the point of destination, it would be contrary to the purposes of this bill.

In this bill we give the Federal Trade Commission power to investigate and fix quantity discounts. This amendment would give them the same power to prevent similar discriminations with reference to the payment of freight charges to destination.

Mr. Chairman, I do not care to discuss the question further, but I hope the gentlemen in charge of the bill will see their way clear to accept the amendment. I consider it in thorough accord with the purposes of the bill, and I may say that I am for the bill with or without this amendment.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, some of us have gone into this question rather fully with the gentleman from Texas and others who are in favor of the amendment, and we do not think it is in accord with the purposes of this bill. It is what some call the basing point in reverse. This is a question that might well be considered in a separate bill, and I hope the gentleman from Texas will present the matter in a separate bill and urge consideration of it in that way and not attach it to this bill which is for a definite purpose that is not in accord with the amendment in our judgment. Therefore I ask that the amendment be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MANSFIELD].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROBERTSON: Page 7, line 9, after the word "where", insert "to avoid the hazards of depreciation of value of the product through decline of markets, or."

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that I can offer an amendment that is in accord with the purposes of the bill. As a matter of fact, I have been assured by the committee members that the provisions contained in my amendment are already in subsection 3 on page 7 of the bill. At this point I want to repeat what I have previously said. No one is more interested than I in seeing eliminated and cured the abuses that have developed in the field of merchandising, much to the detriment of the independent merchants, but I do think we should make a serious effort to get as good a bill as we can.

The committee members contend that under subsection 3 the language, which authorizes price changes in response to changing conditions affecting the markets is sufficient to permit a man who has a perishable product to be marketed to cut his price in anticipation of a declining market in the future. My contention is that the committee bill takes into consideration only a condition that now exists, and in substantiation of that I point to the fact that they give these instances in that connection: "Such as imminent deterioration of perishable goods, obsolescence of seasonal goods, distress sales under court processes." These are conditions of a bad market that already exists.

Now, should not a man with apples or potatoes or vegetables, or any other kind of fruit, be permitted to exercise his sound judgment and discretion and anticipating the hazards of his market, cut the price when he thinks the market may decline, although the decline has not actually hit him. There is no use of giving a man the privilege of cutting his price when the market has already declined. He will have to then take what he can get.

We should be willing to put in this bill in haec verbis what the chairman of the committee assures me is in here, namely, that a man can cut his prices under circumstances of this kind in anticipation of the hazards of a decline of the market. If it is in here, why object to putting in language that we can all agree upon?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Could not the seller do that under the bill if he offer the reduced price to everybody alike without any discrimination?

Mr. ROBERTSON. Yes; I think possibly he could, but this may happen. In the morning of one day he sells to one man at one price and he learns of conditions that may affect his market—they have not happened, but in his judgment they are going to happen—and he wants to unload, and in the same town he sells at a lower price, which I say, as this section is now worded, he could not do with safety.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I ask that I may have 2 minutes.

Mr. MILLER. That is all right.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Arkansas one question which has not been satisfactorily discussed. My understanding is that the proviso, which, I believe, is in section 2 of the Clayton Act, is only referred to in this bill by implication, and there is no express repeal of it. Is this the fact?

Mr. MILLER. No; in this bill we amend section 2 of the Clayton Act "so as to read as follows", and this does away with the provisos in it. It is a reproduction of the same language.

Mr. MASSINGALE. It is a reproduction of the same language?

Mr. PATMAN. Except that all the weasel phrases are cut out.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to delay the House in the consideration of this bill. A short time ago I called attention to the desires of the steel industries in Ohio to have the proviso in the Senate bill put into the House bill. And in support of their contention I want to read a few lines. They say:

If this amendment is not retained, then we are out of business for long-distance shipments. This is a very vital amendment and must remain in the bill, if monopolies due to geographical locations are not to be created. In other words, unless we have this amendment, the local seller can reduce his price so that the distant manufacturer cannot possibly compete, and competition is ruined. You know the result, of course, when the distant manufacturer has dried up and torn down his mills to save taxes; then the local manufacturer increases prices because his competition has been removed.

I wanted to make that statement so that it can go into the RECORD, and I trust the proviso in the Senate bill will be accepted by the House.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, with all due deference to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia, I may say that the committee gave due consideration to his proposed amendment, and feels that if the amendment is adopted it will open the door to a situation in which the manufacturer or anyone engaged in a selling activity could discriminate and excuse the discrimination on the ground of a future drop in the market.

The committee feels that section 3 is drawn to take care of that situation, and I hope the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to the Sugar Institute case relied upon by the distinguished attorney from New York [Mr. CELLER], who stated, on page 8342 of the RECORD, that any lawyer worth his salt would have to say that this bill is unconstitutional. He gave us an excerpt from that case which in itself, if properly applied, shows the contrary and that this bill is really constitutional.

But I want to call attention to another thing that the Supreme Court said in that case:

The restrictions imposed by the Sherman Act are not mechanical or artificial. We have repeatedly said that they set up the essential standard of reasonableness. (Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1; United States v. American Tobacco Co., 221 U. S. 106.) They are aimed at contracts and combinations which "by reason of intent or the inherent nature of the contemplated acts, prejudice the public interests by unduly restraining competition or unduly obstructing the course of trade" (Nash v. United States, 229 U. S. 373, 376; United States v. American Linseed Oil Co., 262 U. S.

371, 388, 389). Designed to frustrate unreasonable restraints, they do not prevent the adoption of reasonable means to protect interstate commerce from destructive or injurious practices and to promote competition upon a sound basis.

This bill is exactly in line with that decision. It is an attempt to adopt reasonable means to protect interstate commerce from destructive and injurious practices and to promote competition on a sound basis. It is designed to do away with fraudulent practices and secret rebates. It prevents unfair and destructive discriminations which work against the small country storekeeper and in favor of the big and powerful merchant. It prevents unfair discriminations only. It allows and upholds fair and open practices. For example, it allows proper and reasonable discounts and allowances for quantity purchasing. But such discounts and allowances must not be tricky and fraudulent ones. They must not be allowances which are discriminatory. The jobber, under the bill, will have a perfect right to give discounts resulting from quantity purchases provided that these discounts have a reasonable relation to the transaction itself and are based on the difference in the cost of manufacture or of sale or of delivery. What else ought they to be based upon? The manufacturer can give a discount to quantity purchasers if it is based upon a difference in the cost of manufacturing a large quantity instead of the small amount; or if it is based upon the difference in selling a large quantity instead of a small amount; or if it is based upon the difference in cost of delivering a quantity instead of a small amount. The bill has been misrepresented in this respect. And these are the very kind or character of things that were upheld in the Sugar Institute case. In that case the lower court enjoined the suger-refining companies from engaging in some 45 activities. About 2 months ago the Supreme Court of the United States passed upon it and upheld about 42 or 43 of these injunctions, and thereby appellants were prevented from doing many things that were in restraint of interstate and foreign commerce in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. Instead of being an authority against the legality of the present proposal, the Sugar Institute case undoubtedly warrants us in saying that the present bill is constitutional. Just why the distinguished jurist and gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER] cited it and quoted from it is very strange. And when he said in his speech that any lawyer worth his salt would have to agree that the present bill is unconstitutional, he was undoubtedly indulging in hyperbole, which in rhetoric is defined to be a figure of speech in which the expression is exaggerated fancifully through excitement or for effect.

Along the same line, something has been said in argument about the burden of proof, and it has been asserted that the bill is not constitutional because those who have specific and certain knowledge of their own good faith are permitted to prove it. We should distinguish between the duty of going forward with the evidence and the burden of proof. It is often wise to place the burden of producing evidence on the party best able to sustain it. It is very often held that where the party who does not have the original burden of proof, but who does possess positive and complete knowledge concerning the existence of facts which his opponent is called upon to negative; or, where, for any reason, the evidence to prove a fact is chiefly, if not entirely, within the control of the party who does not have the general or original burden of proof, then the burden of going forward with and producing this evidence rests upon him who does have the facts primarily and chiefly within his possession.

Paragraph (e) of section 2 of the bill does not provide that the burden of proof shall shift at any stage of the proceedings. On the other hand, it provides that, after it has been shown that a discrimination in price has really occurred, then the duty of going forward with the evidence to show justification and good faith rests upon the party who has almost exclusive possession of such evidence of good faith, and who has easy means of proving it. We should pass the bill and send it to conference.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes.

Mr. BIERMANN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] early this afternoon stated a case where an apple grower sells 10,000 bushels of apples for a dollar a bushel and then receives a cable from Liverpool saying that the market in Europe is going to pieces, and, on account of that and in anticipation of the bad market here, sells in the same city of Cincinnati 100,000 bushels of apples at 75 cents a bushel to another customer, and the gentleman stated that under this act the apple farmer would be liable to the penalty clauses of the bill. Is that correct or not?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Of course, there is no penalty clause in the bill, in the first place. But if there were, I would say, in the opinion of the committee, he would not be liable.

Mr. BIERMANN. What excuse would he have for doing that?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. He would have the excuse provided in the bill in its present form in paragraph 3—that nothing therein contained shall prevent price changes from time to time in response to changing conditions affecting the market.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Then the gentleman admits that he cannot anticipate a change, but that it must exist.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ROBERTSON) there were—ayes 23, noes 72.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CITRON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to insert them in the place where the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] earlier in the day yielded to me.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 9, line 24, after the word "association", insert a new subsection as subsection (g), as follows:

"Nothing herein shall prevent price discriminations to meet competition resulting from the importation of goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured, grown, or produced outside of continental United States."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CELLER: Page 9, line 19, strike out all in lines 19 to 24, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Nothing in this section contained shall prevent the payment or acceptance of commissions, brokerage, or other compensation to or by cooperative organizations, corporate or otherwise, for actual services rendered or performed in the purchase or sale of merchandise where such cooperative organizations return to their constituent members or stockholders the whole or any part of the net surplus derived from their operations, in the form of dividends or otherwise."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the committee amendment, as amended.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MEAD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 8442, and that, pursuant to Resolution 523, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and sixty-eight Members present, not a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 111]

Adair	Duffey, Ohio	Lanham	Rayburn
Andresen	Dunn, Miss.	Larrabee	Sanders, La.
Andrew, Mass.	Englebright	Lea, Calif.	Schaefer

Carter	Hoeppel	O'Day	Wood
Cary	Hope	Oliver	Zioncheck
Casey	Huddleston	O'Malley
Culkin	Jenckes, Ind.	Peterson, Fla.
Disney	Kee	Powers

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and sixty-four Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DIES) there were—ayes 290 and noes 16.

So the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "A bill to amend section 2 of the act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes', approved October 15, 1914, as amended (U. S. C., title 15, sec. 13), and for other purposes."

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to prefer a unanimous-consent request.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 3154, which is a bill passed by the Senate dealing with the same subject matter as the bill H. R. 8442, be taken from the Speaker's table and amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the provisions of the House bill which has just been passed, and then I shall move to vacate the proceedings by which the House bill was passed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 3154, strike out all after the enacting clause, and substitute the provisions of the House bill which has just been passed. Is there objection?

Mr. PEYSER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

TRANSPORTATION OF MERCHANDISE BY OTHER THAN COMMON CARRIERS IN THE PORT OF NEW YORK

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 589, to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to permit the transportation of bonded merchandise by other than common carriers under certain conditions.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, this bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to permit the transportation of bonded merchandise by other than common carriers in the port of New York district. That is a privilege that is accorded every port in the United States. However, the situation in New York is different. The port of New York district, under executive order of the President, embraces three ports, the ports of New York, Perth Amboy, and Newark. They are all in one district, created by Executive order of the President. It is the custom in other ports to move this merchandise in bond by the importers or private carriers. Under the situation which existed in New York until recently, we had that privilege. However, a late ruling of the Secretary has held, under section 551 of the Tariff Act of 1930 and 873–A of the Customs Regulations of 1931, that on account of the peculiar conditions at New York, this merchandise would have to move by common carrier, and not as in other port districts.

There are no facilities for the movement of these goods between ports in that district by common carrier. The oil and the lumber industries are particularly affected. They have specially designed trucks and lighters to transport this oil and lumber. There are no facilities furnished by common carriers whatever. It is in order to give the privilege to these industries to move their bonded merchandise as in other ports that this resolution is offered.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is this a unanimous report from the Committee on Ways and Means?

Mr. KENNEY. It is a unanimous report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, does this in any way affect the obligation of the bond?

Mr. KENNEY. None whatever.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Regardless of whether it is carried by contract carrier or by common carrier, the bond still is in force and effect?

Mr. KENNEY. Absolutely. The merchandise will be bonded in any event.

Mr. RICH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, was this ruling made by Executive order?

Mr. KENNEY. The ruling was made by the Secretary of the Treasury recently, that the cartage would have to be by common carrier, although for years, up until recently, the port of New York had the same privilege as other ports. However, by reason of the fact that the Executive order creating the port of New York district reserved to the ports of Perth Amboy and New York the rights and privileges of separate ports of entry, this amendment now is necessary in order to cure the inequitable situation existing in the port of New York.

Mr. RICH. It is to perfect the inequalities in the Executive order.

Mr. KENNEY. No; it is not that. The Executive order was issued following an act of Congress which approved a treaty between the States of New York and New Jersey.

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEY. I yield.

Mr. CROWTHER. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the other Members present that this bill was given careful consideration by the subcommittee and also by the full committee and was reported unanimously. It does not in any way endanger the revenue. It is made necessary by the inclusion of these three ports as one—Newark, Perth Amboy, and New York City.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does this in any way affect the present lottery laws?

Mr. KENNEY. Not at all, but I may say to the gentleman from Texas that yesterday up in Pennsylvania Senator NYE made a statement in which he said that within the next 10 years there would be a legal lottery law. My every effort is to bring this law into effect within 1 year. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to permit the transportation of bonded merchandise by other than common carriers under certain conditions

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, when it appears to him to be in the interest of commerce, and notwithstanding any provision of law or regulation requiring that the transportation of imported merchandise be by a bonded common carrier, to permit such merchandise which has been entered and examined for customs purposes to be transported by bonded cartmen or bonded lightermen between the ports of New York, Newark, and Perth Amboy, which are all included in customs collection district no. 10 (New York): Provided, That this resolution shall not be construed to deprive any of the ports affected of its rights and privileges as a port of entry.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRANSFER OF LAND TO KENTUCKY

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 11916) to authorize the transfer of a certain piece of land in Muhlenberg County, Ky., to the State of Kentucky, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. SPENCE. This is a piece of land that was ceded to the National Government by the State of Kentucky in 1886 for lock and dam purposes. A highway has been built upon the land and now they want to make the highway a permanent structure, but the Highway Commission of the State of Kentucky will not proceed with it unless title to this land is vested in the State of Kentucky.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why should we take the bill up tonight instead of waiting until the Consent Calendar is called on Monday?

Mr. SPENCE. This is the bill of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARY], who is sick in the hospital.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. It will not make any difference in the status of the matter whether it is considered today or Monday, will it?

Mr. SPENCE. I do not think there is any possible objection to this particular bill. It is only a small piece of land, sixty-five one-hundredths of an acre, which the War Department values at $5.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. If we are going to pass all these bills by unanimous consent there will be nothing to do on Monday.

Mr. SPENCE. That will not be any great calamity, will it?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think they ought to be taken up in the regular way.

Mr. SPENCE. I ask the gentleman to be a little indulgent about this bill. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CARY] has had no opportunity to be here to take care of it.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is the bill accompanied by a report from any committee?

Mr. SPENCE. Yes; the Committee on Rivers and Harbors reported the bill favorably. The War Department values the land at $5.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized to convey to the Commonwealth of Kentucky for State road purposes, without expense to the United States, all the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a certain piece of land in Muhlenberg County, Ky., described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the property line between the United States and R. V. Hammers and wife, the said point of beginning being 30 feet left and opposite station 905+40 in the center line of survey made by the Kentucky State Highway Commission; thence running with the said property line south 31° E. 295 feet, more or less, to a point in the property line between the United States and J. S. Bowles and wife, the said point being 23 feet left and opposite station 908+23 in the center line of survey; thence running with the last-named property line south 60° E. 21 feet, more or less, to a point 30 feet left and opposite station 908+40 in the center line of survey; thence running 30 feet from and parallel with the center line of 2°41' curve in a northwesterly direction 182 feet, more or less, to a point 30 feet left and opposite station 906+58.7 in the center line of survey; thence continuing 30 feet from and parallel with the center line of 16° curve 182 feet, more or less, to the point of beginning, as shown by plans on file at the office of the State highway department, Frankfort, Ky.

Such conveyance shall contain the express condition that if the State of Kentucky shall at any time cease to use said land for road or highway purposes, or shall alienate or attempt to alienate such land, title thereto shall revert to the United States.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS PASCAGOULA RIVER, WILKERSON'S FERRY, MISS.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 4533) granting the consent of Congress to the Mississippi State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Pascagoula River at or near Wilkerson's Ferry, Miss.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, will not the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. COLMER. The bill provides for the erection of a free bridge across this river, which is in Jackson County, Miss., at a place where a small hand ferry is now being operated. It merely gives the State highway department the authority to construct a free bridge across the river at that point.

Mr. HOLMES. The gentleman is merely taking the precaution of getting the consent of Congress so that in the future should the question of the navigability of the stream at that point be raised, the gentleman will not be faced with the fact that he has not the sanction of Congress.

Mr. COLMER. That is so.

Mr. HOLMES. Otherwise it is an intrastate bridge and Congress would have no jurisdiction over it.

Mr. COLMER. Quite so.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, do I understand that this bridge will be paid for wholly by the State and that there will be no bonds which will have to be retired from revenues?

Mr. COLMER. I may say in answer to the question that there have been no definite provisions made for the construction of a bridge at this point. This merely authorizes the State highway department to construct a free bridge.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I infer from the fact this is a free bridge that there will be no tolls charged for the use of it, and it will be constructed at the expense of the State of Mississippi?

Mr. COLMER. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I want to congratulate the gentleman on offering such a bill. It is rather unusual.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Mississippi State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Pascagoula River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Wilkerson's Ferry, Miss., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DR. F. U. PAINTER, ET AL.

Mr. KLEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 9125) for the relief of Dr. F. U. Painter, Dr. H. A. White, Dr. C. P. Yeager, Dr. W. C. Barnard, Mrs. G. C. Oliphant, Amelia A. Daimwood, the Sun Pharmacy, Bruno's Pharmacy, Viola Doyle Maguire, Louise Harmon, Mrs. J. B. Wilkinson, Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word, Grace Hinnant, and Dr. E. O. Arnold.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "An act for the relief of Dr. F. U. Painter, Dr. H. A. White, Dr. C. P. Yeager, Dr. W. C. Barnard, Mrs. G. C. Oliphant, Amelia A. Dalmwood, the Sun Pharmacy, Bruno's Pharmacy, Viola Doyle Maguire, Louise Harmon, Mrs. J. B. Wilkinson, Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word, Grace Hinnant, Dr. E. O. Arnold, and Jennie Chapman."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this bill?

Mr. KLEBERG. The amendment consists of adding another doctor's name, who was the subject of relief in this bill. One of the doctors died after an acute attack of appendicitis while on leave of absence from the S. S. Brazos.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Has the committee approved this change?

Mr. KLEBERG. Yes. The House passed the bill sometime ago, and this doctor's name was inadvertently omitted. There was no increase in the amount.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table I may be permitted to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the RECORD a short statement with reference to the Black Legion and to include therein two short letters and a telegram.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this ought to go in the Appendix of the daily RECORD.

THE BLACK LEGION AND THE NEW DEAL

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute, and to read two short letters and a telegram.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to speak for one-half minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the disclosures showing the activities of the Black Legion in Michigan are startling, but, analyzed, it will be discovered that the horror with which those activities are viewed may be traced, in part at least, to the extremes to which they have been carried; that is, to personal violence, to floggings, to murder.

The objectives of the organization are old; that is, the collection of revenue from those to whom regalia is sold and the grasping and exercise of an arbitrary power. Nor is there anything new in the method of obtaining these objectives; that is, by threat, intimidation, and the creation of fear.

May 5 I received from Benton Harbor, in my district, from someone who was displeased because of my refusal to back the Townsend plan, which its claimed author said would give to everyone, with certain qualifications, whether he needed it or not, who was upward of 60 years of age, a pension of $200 per month, a letter, which, referring to the Townsend committee, made, among others, the following statements:

You saps better look in glass and see if you see some green grass sprouting, as you are all going to have a green place two by six before many months unless you get doing something for the people.

You better start soon or the K. K. K. boy will give you a ride, as we are not all monkeys, as you think the most people are in your one-track mind. The big B has been looking after both old parties and they are rotten as hell and lots of us are in shape to take it in our hands to take all ——— for a ride.

I would like to punch that dirty mug of yours. * * * Seven spoke at meeting other night, and you are condemned a traitor and not fit to represent a dog house.

Yours for a fight mighty sooner than you expect.

K. K. K. MEMBER.

Don't get too many feathers in your hat, as all can be clipped or taken in a short time.

K. K. K.

Look out for the hood.

You need the limit, and I cannot say just what that will be; you are going to get a plenty of trouble brought on yourself.

In the same mail came another letter from a Townsendite, who, among other things, said:

You dirty, lazy boondoggling son of a —— have nothing to do but go around the country trying to discredit American citizens.

* * * * * * *

You Wall Street sons of —— are fighting for your life.

You lousy sons of a ——, I would like to meet you face to face and tell you what I think of you dirty thieves.

And there were only 163 words in this letter.

These are only samples. There are many others. The favorite sport—outdoor, indoor, summer, and winter—of some people, including a few reporters and editorial writers, seems to be jumping on Congressmen. Perhaps Congressmen should not criticize these efforts. Their authors are following what seems to be becoming a common practice—that is, the making of threats, the creating of fear, the withholding of benefits, unless certain political action is taken.

Not long ago I placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD copies of forms given to those seeking relief work, which required the applicant to disclose how he had voted, whether he had contributed to the Democratic organization, and the amount, if any, which he had contributed since a certain date. This was the Democratic practice followed in my home district, the Fourth Michigan.

However, apparently is it not local, and for evidence let me quote the following telegram and letter:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 18, 1936.

Personal.

CHARLES NELSON,

Mac Sim Bar Paper Co., Otsego, Mich.:

Our Mr. J. F. Gormeley will call on you Tuesday. Will appreciate your seeing him.

W. FORBES MORGAN,
Secretary, Democratic Committee.

MAC SIM BAR PAPER CO.,
Otsego, Mich., May 25, 1936.

Hon. CLARE HOFFMAN,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. HOFFMAN: We are sending you the enclosed information which you may use as you see fit. Further explaining this matter, will say that the enclosed telegram was received on the morning of May 19, and 30 minutes later Mr. Gormeley called me on the telephone and wanted an appointment, from Kalamazoo.

Upon this request we asked him what the appointment was for, and he said he wanted us to subscribe to the Democratic campaign fund. We advised him that we didn't believe we would be interested today in making a subscription and he asked me, in a very insolent manner, what I meant by "today." I repeated the answer and he asked me if we would be interested in subscribing at a later date and we told him we did not think so.

Then he asked me, in a very nasty manner, if we wanted him to report this to Washington, that we refused to contribute to this fund. My answer was "Yes." The telephone was immediately slammed up and this ended the conversation.

If you do not care to use this information just forget about it.

Yours truly,

MAC SIM BAR PAPER CO.,
C. E. NELSON, President.

The Mac Sim Bar Paper Co. is a large, legitimate business organization, conducting its business in a legal manner and in accordance with recognized trade practices. No fault of any kind is found by anyone with the way in which it does business, so far as its management is aware.

Yet here is a telegram from W. Forbes Morgan—and, by the way, what is his relationship, if any, to the Roosevelts?—secretary of the Democratic National Committee, telling the president of that company that Mr. Morgan's Mr. Gormeley will call upon him, and Mr. Gormeley in effect telling this paper company that it had better come across with a campaign contribution, and threatens that if it does not its action will be reported to Washington.

Is the Mac Sim Bar Paper Co. to be harassed by Federal agents investigating trumped-up charges?

And, after all, what is the difference between the objectives of the Black Legion and the New Deal administration?

The Black Legion wants its way at all costs. Apparently it wants money. It enforces its will by intimidation.

The New Deal is always grasping for power. It is continually taking the funds of one class of citizens and giving them to another. Common knowledge, as well as the decisions of the Supreme Court, establishes this.

Here we are in a campaign year. Those seeking their share of public funds appropriated for relief, and to which they are entitled, are required to give allegiance to the Democratic Party before they can get it.

Here is a telegram from the secretary of the Democratic National Committee arranging for an appointment for his agent to meet the head of a business concern, and that agent informs the president of the business concern that if he does not, in common parlance, "come across" he will be reported to Washington—a threat, an attempt to intimidate, to create fear.

The secretary of the Democratic National Committee cannot, like the hooded legion, beat up on the Mac Sim Bar Paper Co., but he can issue threats, vague and uncertain, as to what will happen if his wishes are not followed.

If my conclusions seem farfetched, read Macfadden in Liberty. Read Senator DICKINSON in the same magazine. Read George N. Peek, former Triple A Administrator, in the Saturday Evening Post. Read almost any national newspaper or magazine.

By all means, let the authorities clean up the Black Legion. And, while it is being done, let the New Deal set its own house in order.

INVESTIGATION OF CHARGES AFFECTING THE MERCHANT MARINE

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter received by me from the Secretary of Commerce and a copy of my letter to him.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following correspondence with the Secretary of Commerce:

THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE,
Washington, May 27, 1936.

Hon. VITO MARCANTONIO,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I desire to refer to the matter of the statements of the seamen which you transmitted to me with your letter of April 29. At that time we had in mind the appointment of a special committee for the purpose of making a careful and thorough investigation of the allegations contained in the statements. It was thought that the committee to be seleced should be along the lines of the proposed Marine Casualty Investigating Committee, provided for in H. R. 8599, then in the final stages of passage in Congress. However, prior to the enactment of that legislation, Senator COPELAND, chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce, appointed a special subcommittee for the purpose of making investigations into various charges affecting the merchant marine, and inasmuch as such an investigation by the Senate committee would necessarily duplicate and overlap any investigation which might be made by the special committee that we had in mind, it was believed that in the interest of economy and expedition of these matters, that they should be handled by the same committee.

Furthermore, Chairman COPELAND'S committee will look into certain claims presented by ship operators and it would appear quite desirable that in order that his committee may develop the entire picture as a whole, the committee should also examine into the allegations made by the seamen.

This arrangement having met with the approval of Chairman COPELAND and officials of the Department of Commerce, we are turning over the statements of the seamen to Chairman COPELAND, by whom I am confident a thorough and comprehensive investigation will be conducted.

Very sincerely,

DANIEL C. ROPER,
Secretary of Commerce.

Copy of letter sent by Congressman MARCANTONIO to Hon. Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, in answer to Mr. Roper's letter sent to the Congressman, May 27, 1936:

MAY 27, 1936.

Hon. DANIEL C. ROPER,
Secretary of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have before me your letter of the 27th instant in which you advise me that the memorandum containing serious charges of lack of safety at sea submitted by the striking seamen of New York City has been turned over to the committee appointed by Senator ROYAL S. COPELAND for a "thorough and comprehensive investigation."

It is most unfortunate that these charges have been turned over to this committee. The striking seamen have no faith in the committee appointed by Senator ROYAL S. COPELAND. The so-called representatives of labor on that committee are Mr. David Grange, Mr. John Bley, and Mr. Paul Sharenberg. These gentlemen are not truly representative of labor. Furthermore, their records of opposition to the striking seamen who have presented these charges to you and at your request disqualify them to sit as impartial judges of these charges.

Mr. Bley's strong-armed tactics against seamen are well known. He is completely out of harmony with the principles for which these men are striking. Mr. Sharenberg was expelled from his own local by an overwhelming vote. His expulsion disqualifies him from sitting as a representative of labor. Mr. David Grange has been repeatedly repudiated by the rank and file of his own union. He was one of the officials who signed an agreement with shipowners after a similar agreement had been rejected by an overwhelming vote of five to one by the seamen at a referendum. Despite this decision on the part of the seamen, Mr. Grange and his colleagues arbitrarily signed a similar agreement with the shipowners. Only several weeks ago Mr. Grange sought to enjoin these seamen who have presented these charges to you from striking. The character of the testimony presented by Mr. Grange was so repulsive that even Mr. Grange's attorneys were compelled to withdraw the application in the midst of the trial. How can Mr. Grange sit as an impartial judge and pass with fairness on the charges made by these same seamen whom he has fought for the past 3 months?

In view of the character of the so-called labor personnel of this committee, it is obvious that the charges presented to you cannot receive a thorough and comprehensive investigation at their hands.

Furthermore, on April 2 you informed me as follows:

"With reference to the conference held yesterday with you and a group of seamen, headed by Mr. Curran of New York, I am anxious to immediately take proper action on any and all matters affecting safety of life at sea. I hope, therefore, you may be able to furnish me the memorandum promised."

On April 28 I submitted this memorandum, composed of 110 statements signed by the seamen. On the same day you acknowledged receipt of this memorandum. You will also recall that at the meeting held before you on April 21 you promised to conduct a thorough investigation of this matter. In view of the so-called labor personnel of the committee appointed by Senator ROYAL S. COPELAND, in view of the seriousness of the charges made by the seamen, in view of your promise to investigate these charges, I submit that turning these charges over to this committee is tantamount to ordinary "buck passing." The responsibility "to immediately take proper action on any and all matters affecting safety at sea", and these words are your own, rests with you and your department. In my opinion, the transferral of these charges to this committee evades this responsibility. I must, therefore, strongly urge that you carry out the promise made by you to these seamen and that you conduct a fair and impartial investigation of these charges.

Very truly yours,

VITO MARCANTONIO.

MILITARY EXPENDITURES AROUND SAN ANTONIO, TEX., AND WHAT IT MEANS

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter I received from the Secretary of War together with a few complimentary remarks which I may make about the Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

SAN ANTONIO'S GREAT MILITARY CENTER

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, I have frequently mentioned the fact that I represent the county of Bexar, State of Texas, in which is located San Antonio, Tex.; and in my district is the greatest military center in America.

We have numerous air fields and depots, quartermaster depots, old Fort Sam Houston, a great arsenal, and tactical grounds.

In the upkeep of these posts and the continuation of efficient service to the Nation, I have constantly cooperated with the Secretary of War, who tells me that the War Department appreciates "your deep interest in the Army and your efforts in its behalf." He says that the results obtained are best evidenced by the sums of money expended by and for the Army in and near San Antonio to the lasting good not only of national defense but of the community as well.

AMOUNT ANNUALLY SPENT IN SAN ANTONIO

The amount annually spent by the Government through the War Department agencies at San Antonio covers such items as pay, subsistence, fuel, repairs, upkeep, etc. The total of all such expenditures for an average normal year is approximately $19,500,000. This amount includes expenditures at all of the stations listed above. During the past year, however, the expenditures were approximately $17,000,000 more than the above figure, or a total of $36,500,000, due to C. C. C. and relief expenditures. These figures are as close and reasonably accurate estimates as can be made within a short period of time.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR SAYS

The War Department appreciates your deep interest in the Army and your efforts in its behalf. The results obtained are best evidenced by the sums of money expended by and for the Army in and near San Antonio, to the lasting good not only of the national defense but of the community as well.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) GEO. H. DERN,
Secretary of War.

Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of War, is a level-headed civilian and not a noisy militarist. He was Governor of Utah, where he delivered the goods in the most capable manner and was selected by Mr. Roosevelt as a western Democrat of great executive ability to be Secretary of War.

Mr. Dern has constantly refused to connect himself with any move to restrict civil liberties; he did not encourage the military disaffection bill, which would have taken freedom away from the American people, and finally gave a public statement to the effect that he did not favor that character of legislation and thereby effectively killed it.

It has been a custom in this country not to get a militarist or military man to be Secretary of War, but to appoint an outstanding civilian of administrative and executive experience.

I appreciate the good will of the Secretary of War personally, and on behalf of my people.

By unanimous consent, I place in the RECORD in tabular form, precisely as issued by Military Affairs Committee, a list of the membership indicating also rank and seniority, with States:

THE ROBINSON-PATMAN BILL

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter written by me to the Federal Trade Commission and their reply thereto.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, the legislation under consideration—the Robinson-Patman bill—to outlaw price discrimination and unfair trade practices, is vitally necessary to stability of business throughout the country and the maintenance of fair prices to the consumer everywhere.

For the information of the Members of the House, I include in these remarks a copy of a bill which was introduced by myself to prohibit manufacturers' special rebates, and so forth, a copy of my letter to the Federal Trade Commission and the Commission's reply thereto.

[H. R. 6246, 74th Cong., 1st sess.]

A bill to prohibit manufacturers' special rebates or discounts to chain- or branch-store organizations competing with independent retail establishments, and for other purposes

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any manufacturer, directly or indirectly, by any special price, rebate, discount, or other device, to charge, demand, collect, or receive from any chain store or mail-order organization, or any similar or other retail sales organization, or any unit or branch thereof, which competes with independent or individual retail establishments, a lesser price for goods, wares, or merchandise than it charges, demands, collects, or receives from any other individual, partnership, association, or corporation for like goods, wares, or merchandise. Any individual, partnership, association, or corporation violating this act shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $2,000, or by imprisonment for not less than 6 months nor more than 2 years, or both.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., February 12, 1935.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: This office is in receipt of a number of petitions asking for certain relief, signed by a majority of representative businessmen of the important cities and towns of the First Congressional District of Idaho which I have the duty to represent.

The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, citizens of this congressional district, earnestly and respectfully petition, urge, and request you, as our Representative in the Congress, to use your best efforts in securing national legislation necessary to abolish and prohibit the nefarious discriminatory practice of manufacturers granting special secret rebates and discounts to the so-called chain stores, mail-order houses, and other syndicates operating in opposition to the independent business interests of the country, regardless of the pretext or subterfuge under which such discounts, rebates, or other special privileges and benefits may be granted."

Doubtless your Commission has information concerning trade practices which are unfair and constitute unfair competition, which the petitioners seek to have checked and eliminated. It is apparent that the practice referred to is designed to destroy and eliminate competition, with the ultimate objective of permitting profiteering by price-fixing methods, which is, to my mind, a large contributing factor in creating the present business instability and the resulting depression the country is now experiencing.

I should appreciate a report from your Commission on this matter, with any recommendations you may care to make to correct the abuses complained of.

Sincerely yours,

COMPTON I. WHITE.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION,
Washington, February 15, 1935.

Hon. COMPTON I. WHITE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I am writing in reply to your letter of February 12, setting forth petition received from citizens of your district, with respect to alleged practice of manufacturers granting rebates to chain stores, etc.

You may recall that in response to Senate Resolution 224, Seventieth Congress, first session, the Federal Trade Commission made an exhaustive investigation of the chain-store industry, and as a result of such inquiry submitted to the Senate some 33 factual reports covering various phases of the industry. A list of these reports is enclosed. The reports have been printed as Senate documents. Copies of any of these reports if available, and which may be of especial interest to you or to your constituents, will be furnished upon request.

At the conclusion of the inquiry the Commission submitted to the Senate on December 14, 1934, its final report, including conclusions and recommendations based upon the factual material theretofore reported to the Senate. This final report is now in the hands of the Public Printer and copies are expected to be available for distribution within a very short while. I have listed your name to receive a copy as soon as available.

In the meantime there is transmitted for your information an uncorrected page proof of the final report, together with separate copy in mimeographed form, of the conclusions and recommendations of the Commission. Additional copies may be had upon request. It is believed that the subject matter of the petition to which you refer in your letter of February 12 is covered by the final report and conclusions and recommendations of the Commission.

In pursuance of the Federal Trade Commission Act, the Commission is charged with the duty of preventing unfair methods of competition in commerce; by the provisions of the Clayton Anti-trust Act it is charged with the duty of preventing certain other practices, such as unlawful price discriminations, tying contracts, stock acquisitions, and interlocking directorates. The Commission is, of course, ready at all times to receive and investigate complaints of practices in alleged violation of the laws which it administers, and if your constituents desire to lay before the Commission evidence of such alleged unlawful practices, the Commission will give as prompt attention to the matter as possible.

If you care to submit the names and addresses of a limited number of your constituents who are especially interested in the subject matter, I am sure the Commission will be pleased to forward a copy of its final chain-store report when available, which report will include its conclusions and recommendations.

If additional information on the subject is desired, I shall be glad to attempt a prompt reply to your further inquiry.

Respectfully,

OTIS B. JOHNSON, Secretary.

The unfair trade practices that will be curbed by the Robinson-Patman bill go far beyond the grocery trade and extend into the merchandising of most of the necessities used on the farms and in basic industries—implements, tools, and supplies of all kinds. In a word, trade practices that have operated to destroy competition, to be followed by price fixing after competitors have been driven out of business, creating a condition that permits a monopoly and the exaction of exorbitant and unfair prices, will upset price parity and undermine the business structure throughout the country. It is apparent that business must be rescued from this perilous situation, and I am unqualifiedly in favor of passing this bill.

ADDRESS AT THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION OF ILLINOIS

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech which I recently delivered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following address delivered by me before the Republican State convention, Peoria, Ill., May 22, 1936:

We are met today in the heart of one of the great Commonwealths of the Nation to ponder the past, to take inventory of the present, and to find hope and inspiration for the future. We meet within a short distance of the very place where Abraham Lincoln, patron saint of our party, 82 years ago, defined the issues of his day, forecast the crisis that was then impending, and reaffirmed his devotion to sound moral, economic, and political principles as the only remedy to cure the malady which then afflicted our people. We meet to hear the standard bearers of our party, to dedicate ourselves to an earnest and forthright Republicanism, to pledge ourselves to harmony of spirit, purpose, and action, and to engender a crusading zeal that will insure victory to our cause in November.

In approaching this solemn task there are some fundamentals which must not be obscured. This is a crucial period. On every hand we see the strivings and hear the yearnings of a people, punch drunk from the repeated blows of a depression, who clung so fondly to the promises that were made by this administration to lead them into the Promised Land. They are beset with bewilderment and confusion. They are beset with doubts and uncertainties. They seek enlightenment and truth. Like Lincoln, they share the sentiment that if they but knew where the Nation is, and whither it is tending, they would know the better what to do.

There devolves upon the Republican Party, therefore, an educational mission such as it has scarcely ever been called upon to perform. This is an hour for dispassionate truth and common sense. This is an hour in which we must solemnly pledge ourselves to refrain from emotionalism and stick to the facts. This is an hour for careful abstinence from name calling, personalities, and invective, principles must not be sacrificed to sound and fury. Instead of emphasizing nonessentials, as in the case of the small boy who importuned the captain to stop the ship in the middle of a dangerous whirlpool because his apple had fallen overboard, we must place the emphasis on important things and think in terms of national destiny.

I am not insensible to the political philosophy that would bid us win at any price and that would have us match the promises of the administration with even greater and more glorious promises, but let us not forget that in the past we builded this Nation on the rock of enduring policies and that we can justify our high place in the history of this Nation only by thinking of the years to come as well as of the fleeting present.

As we ponder the past in order to throw light on the present, we find that but 20 years ago the Nation was plunged into a war for democracy. From that war we emerged with thousands of lives of our young soldiers sacrificed, with billions of our national wealth destroyed or loaned to foreign nations, with artificially high prices and high wages, with the industrial and agricultural structure of the Nation expanded far beyond normal needs, and a foreign trade the highest in the history of this Republic. The headache was to come afterward. No thinking person who knows how inevitable the law of compensation is could escape the conviction that someday there must be a reckoning, and that every drop of blood shed in a man-made war must one day be expiated by the living who dwell in the earth. So long as we continued to loan European nations the money with which to buy our products, so long would prosperity last. So long as our goods continued to go abroad to be paid for with our money, so long would jobs be plentiful, prices high, and the exhilaration of prosperity endure.

The crash came in 1929, and the wonder is that it did not come sooner. Our President and our party had as much to do with that collapse as did one of the sacrificial pigs with the pig-slaughter policy of the administration. But it was laid on our doorstep, together with all the ghastly distress and despair that sprang from the ensuing unemployment, price deflation, and complete collapse of morale. What a ten-strike it would be if our opponents could capitalize that despair. What a splendid political accomplishment and what a ghastly moral achievement if by clever propaganda, adequately financed, the collapse could be fastened upon the Republican Party.

What a grim and frightful deception! What matter that there was a depression in every other major nation in the world? What matter that the economic disturbances in other nations were far more aggravated than our own? What matter that the groundwork for gradual but certain recovery had already been laid by the Republican Party? Now was the time to smear the President, enthrone hate, and enshrine bitterness and sow the seed of unrest and greater despair. Thus it was that in 1932 the Democratic national executive committee moved from its seldom-used, one-room office in Washington to a palatial suite in the National Press Building under the management of a Kansas lawyer and a Washington newspaperman, fortified with $250,000 advanced by John J. Raskob and a drawing account of $10,000 per month. This was the instrument with which the incumbent President was to be smeared. This was the machine which with Machiavellian cleverness was to develop the psychology that we "need a change", and how well it worked in converting despair into hate and distress into bitterness is best evidenced by the results in 1932.

In its efforts it was amplified by the usual recriminations and promises that attend a national campaign. What high and grim humor there was about those lambastings of 1932. Turn the Republicans out! They have destroyed the credit of the Nation and unbalanced its Budget. They have set up commission after commission to eat out the taxpayers' substance. They have placed 15,000,000 citizens in the ranks of unemployment. They have destroyed foreign trade. They have been extravagant and wasteful. They have failed to reduce the national debt. They place property rights above human rights. They are reactionaries and Tories. They have brought the Nation to ruin and disaster. How strange! Yes; how strange that the Republican Party, after 70 years of almost uninterrupted constructive service to the country, should suddenly have completely altered its principles and policies. How strange that this same party, which saved this Nation from disunion, provided pensions for the Civil War soldiers, provided homesteads, gave the Nation its first civil-service law, and a Federal income tax, should have suddenly become so vicious, so reactionary, and so destructive. How strange that the Republican Party, which, under Theodore Roosevelt, stopped public-land frauds and saved this domain for the people, enlarged the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission to protect both the public and the railroad employees, which for the first time enforced the antitrust laws, provided compensation for injured railroad employees, and gave the Nation its first Pure Food and Drug Act, should suddenly have become so unmindful of its obligations to the Nation and to the people.

How strange that this Republican Party, which under Taft gave the Nation a postal-savings system, a parcel-post system, and withdrew power sites from public entry so they might be conserved for the people, should have suddenly become so inimical to human rights.

How strange that the Republican Party, with its leaders and its members, having brought this Nation to a high state of human freedom and prosperity, should suddenly become a party of witch doctors and Tories, a party of corporals of disaster and sergeants of despair! Such is the power of propaganda and promises hurled against a background of economic distress.

Now we have a change! Faced with a host of promises and the stern demand of the distressed to make good, the promises of the present administration began to unfold in terms of action, and, whatever might be said, let it be set down to the everlasting credit of Republicans that, unlike a Democratic Congress in 1932, which stalemated every effort of a Republican President to deal with the situation at hand, we have placed national welfare above politics and citizenship above partisanship by cooperating to the utmost to lift the Nation out of its difficulties. We have made no effort to hamstring the President. We have sought by voice and vote to help him.

And now for a peek at the record. In 1932 we were charged with having destroyed farm prices, having destroyed the farmers' foreign market, and with having maintained an extravagant Farm Board which lost millions of dollars. What has been done? A combination of Nature, agricultural adjustment, and an expenditure of one and one-half billions has raised farm prices. Nature's drought is over. The A. A. A. has been invalidated by the Supreme Court. Farm prices have been materially improved, but we expect to spend four hundred and eighty millions annually through soil-conversation work to maintain them. Meanwhile by reciprocal-trade agreements we are handing the farmers' home market over to foreign competition. Argentine corn, Canadian pork, Argentine beef, Polish rye, Canadian wheat, Australian and Danish butter, and Chinese soybeans are threatening his market and his prices. We expended the taxpayers' money to retire some of the finest Illinois land in existence from cultivation, and at the same time expend the taxpayers' funds to make additional millions of acres of western desert to bloom like the rose, and over it all we scattered the sacrificial blood of 6,000,000 little pigs and 250,000 brood sows. Where we were charged with maintaining an extravagant Farm Board, we have today a Commodity Credit Corporation, whose losses on cotton already aggregate more than $50,000,000.

We were charged in 1932 with having brought about widespread unemployment and distress. What was done to cure it? We have spent eight hundred and sixteen millions on a glorified leaf-raking program known as the C. W. A., one and one-fourth billion on the C. C. C., two and two-thirds billions to build 24,000 P. W. A. projects, and more than a billion on W. P. A., not to speak of the funds devoted to direct relief. In 3 years we have spent $8,500,000,000 for employment and employment relief, and, according to the American Federation of Labor's report for March 16, 1936, we still have in excess of 12,000,000 people out of work and more than 16,000,000 on relief. Worse than all else perhaps in connection with unemployment and relief is the unrest and hysteria that spring from this condition. Long ago Isaiah wrote: "And it shall come to pass that when man is hungry, he shall fret himself, and when he frets himself he shall curse his God and his king."

We were charged with having set up unnecessary bureaus and commissions and that these must be, and would be, curtailed. Yet the record will show that, in addition to all agencies which existed when the Government was taken over in 1933, 60 new agencies have been created and 250,000 civilian employees have been added to the Government rolls, with a monthly pay roll in excess of $125,000,000.

We were charged with running this Nation into debt. When President Wilson left office the national debt was, roughly, $26,000,000,000. In 10 years the Republican Party had reduced it by $10,000,000,000. On April 30, 1936, the national debt had risen to $31,500,000,000, and the end is not yet. What more need be said to establish that today we are doing a land-office business on borrowed money and daily swelling a debt that some day must be paid off with taxes garnered from all classes of people?

We have been charged with failure to reduce governmental expenditures and heard the siren promise to reduce them by at least 25 percent. The deficit for the last 3 years approximates $11,000,000,000. When outgo exceeds income by eleven billions, what more need be added to show that the Government's fiscal house is not only not in order today but sadly disordered?

A solemn promise was made in 1932 that a sound currency must be maintained at all hazards, yet today we have a 59-cent dollar, with no assurances that it will not be revalued up or devalued down; we have embarked on a program to purchase silver until it should be in the ratio of 1 to 3 to the gold in our monetary system. The result of that program is that we have almost ruined the monetary systems of all nations on a silver basis and driven them to a managed-currency system when we were being beguiled with the argument that the silver-purchase program would re-create foreign trade. Having purchased 900,000,000 ounces or more of silver, we find that the price is about back where it was when the program started. All this has served to create uncertainty in the minds of businessmen who must purchase stocks of raw materials in advance to keep the wheels of industry moving in order to maintain men in their jobs.

We were informed that a housing program would create jobs for craftsmen who are out of work and at the same time stimulate the durable-goods industry. After 3 years of sketchy effort and several unsuccessful starts we have no housing program on the statute books, and in most localities carpenters, bricklayers, and artisans are still unemployed. Our closest approach to housing is a few so-called low-cost housing units that look like Harvard dormitories and the noble experiment at Reedsville, W. Va., where we built 190 houses, on which we shall lose at least $3,000 per house.

We have embarked upon a program of reform, much of which turned out to be destructive rather than constructive in purpose, with the result that business, from whence must come the jobs to absorb the unemployed, has been stricken with bewilderment and fear. What a paradox it is in the richest nation in the world that we have twenty-five billion idle dollars in the national banks, 12,000,000 pairs of idle hands, and unlimited home market, each separated from the other by a wall of fear and uncertainty, so that the Nation cannot go forward with a great surge of joyous confidence.

As we ponder this paradoxical situation, what shall we say of it, and what shall we as Republicans offer? Must we deny that any good has been accomplished in order to secure a favorable hearing from the people for our cause? I think not. Must we go farther along the road toward paternalism than the present administration and meet erratic and inconsistent policies with promises and policies that are still more erratic and inconsistent? I think not. Must we be stumped by the oft-repeated and rather beguiling question, "Are you not better off than you were in 1933?" I think not. Must we commit our party to promises that we know full well to be unsound and unworkable in order to make an effective bid for popular support? I think not.

We as a party are not only not opposed to reform but submit to the people that most of the constructive reforms that have been inscribed on the books have emanated with the Republican Party. We can, however, and must stand definitely against alleged reforms that are wholly destructive in character and which seek to tear down rather than build up.

We are not opposed to relief, realizing that self-preservation is the most impelling impulse in humankind. We are, however, opposed to the remote control of relief from Washington. We are opposed to relief which develops a bureaucracy. We are opposed to relief which in innumerable instances has been shot through with waste, extravagance, corruption, and political control. Moreover, we can be definitely committed to the administration of relief by States and localities because they can do so more sympathetically, more efficiently, and with less of the sting of charity in its administration. I submit to you as earnestly as I know how that the men and women of this Nation want work rather than relief. They want the security of jobs rather than the insecurity of made work. To the man who earns a livelihood with a paintbrush or a carpenter's saw, with a mason's trowel or on a drill press, with a plow or with a plumber's wrench, there is a future. To any man or woman who works and envisions advancement there is a future. But there is no future in relief. We would be unfair and unjust to American labor and to the future of labor if we did not place all emphasis upon the re-creating of those conditions in American industry that will bring about reemployment and the security that goes with the job.

The social reforms which came from the Republican Party in the past are the best evidence that we have not lost our zealous interest in raising wages, eliminating child labor, and in shortening hours; but, in marching toward that objective, we need not put the Nation in a straitjacket of regimentation.

Year in and year out we have steadily affirmed to labor our support of the principle of collective bargaining. To labor we can go further than that. Today huge imports of cheap products from Japan are taking bread from the mouths of American workers. Standards of living in Japan and other nations are so low that American industry cannot compete except that our own living standards be lowered. We must set ourselves resolutely against any effort to impair that living standard, and instead give to American labor adequate guaranties of protection of his home market.

We do not decry or protest against a policy of public works to take up the slack in employment, but we do protest most vigorously against building a $160,000,000 canal at the taxpayers' expense in the north end of Florida when such a canal is not wanted except by a few professional real-estate promoters; we protest against using the taxpayers' money to build dog pounds in Memphis and monkey cages in Mississippi; we protest against spending the taxpayers' money on a project like the Passamaquoddy in Maine, where after the expenditure of millions of dollars it now appears that the project is anything but feasible and practical. We protest against the folly of boondoggling projects that have no enduring values. We believe that there are enough useful projects in the land where the taxpayer gets a dollar in value for every dollar which is expended.

We do not and have not opposed the principle of parity for agriculture. The farmer is entitled to a square deal, to adequate prices, and to protection, but must we destroy 6,000,000 little pigs in order to achieve that parity?

We do not oppose the exercise of emergency powers when emergencies exist, but must the power of Congress be destroyed and must the civil service and merit system be destroyed in order to cope with such an emergency? In March 1933, 80 percent of all Government employees were under civil service. Today less than 60 percent have this protection, the lowest percentage in the last 30 years. It is an eloquent commentary on the ruthlessness of spoils politics. To the taxpayers it is a costly philosophy which maintains thousands in the Government service without a single regard for merit.

Nor are we insensible to the new needs which arise and must be met. Lincoln himself phrased it well when he said, "The occasion is piled high with difficulty. As our case is new, so we must think anew and act anew." He did not, however, say that in order to meet new needs we should destroy our whole system of government or undermine the balance of functions that has carefully preserved the rights and liberties of the citizens since the founding of the Nation.

He did not say that in meeting those needs we should ignore the Constitution or destroy the Supreme Court, or divest it of its functions. I venture the prediction that those persons who would impair the power of the Supreme Court because it rendered a decision in which they do not concur would be the first to restore its powers if their lives and their rights were in jeopardy. It is the only instrument which stands between and safeguards the rights of the citizens against abuses of executive and legislative power.

With these considerations in mind, let us then be about our business of fabricating a program that by its common sense, its soundness, and its directness will appeal to labor, to agriculture, and to business; let us express a philosophy that will appeal to the young and old, rich and poor; let us give guaranties to the voters of this great State that are not only forward-looking and humane but which will be founded on the rock of good government and be within the Constitution.

The best platform ever penned by the hand of man would be a dull and lifeless thing unless it is interpreted and supported by a virile and living organism which we call a political party. It can be translated with conviction into the consciousness of the people only by a part that is aggressive, militant, and harmonious.

With a contrite spirit, and mindful of the gravity of our task, let us stand shoulder to shoulder in the ranks of Republicanism and carry our gospel into every corner of this Commonwealth.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS

Mr. HARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address I made under the auspices of the Jewish war veterans last Sunday in this city.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this an address by the gentleman?

Mr. HARTER. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARTER. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following Memorial Day address delivered by me at Adas Israel Cemetery, Sunday, May 24, 1936, 2 p. m., under the auspices of Jewish War Veterans, Washington Post No. 58:

We meet here today to honor those who in times of our country's need were ready to make any sacrifice so that America and its democratic ideals might be perpetuated. It is a sacred privilege for me to address you at your memorial services to the soldier dead who lie in this and neighboring Jewish cemeteries.

To keep faith with those who are buried here, Memorial Day should inspire in us all a devotion to duty when danger threatens the Nation. This day has a far deeper meaning and a more solemn purpose than the celebration of military victory. The show of flags and the sound of marching feet of living comrades are not for the purpose of inspiring the coming generation toward military pomp or to create a desire for war. Those of you who endured the horrors and privations of the World War are among the last to want future wars, subjecting your children and future generations to the fearful experience through which you passed in 1917 and 1918.

Many misguided persons would have us discontinue all measures of national defense. These people rightfully believe in a lasting and enduring world peace, but the methods which they pursue to accomplish this are different from those followed by we who believe that peace can only be secured and maintained through an adequate system of defense, which has been the fundamental military policy of this country since its inception. A strong and adequate Navy, a small and efficient standing Army, with these two branches supplemented in modern times by an adequate air force—the ultimate result to be obtained—peace—is the desire of every true American.

We do want to preserve for all time those institutions which are so peculiarly ours and which have been built with the genius of many races and of many people. The World War was won by the cooperation of all—Catholic, Protestant, and Jew—who worked side by side, shoulder to shoulder, to achieve victory.

To you, sprung from the loins of that people which for ages has suffered persecution and risen above it, which has preserved its integrity and its intellectual and moral greatness through hardship and cruelty unparalleled in the world's history, it is unnecessary to expatiate upon the horrors of war, its brutality, its innate inhumanity.

You have splendid traditions to preserve. The Jewish people are peace loving, but they have not hesitated nor been backward in taking up arms whenever the need arose. In every war in which our country has been engaged, the Jew, I am happy to say, enlisted cheerfully, fought gallantly, and died bravely.

In no spirit of boastful exploitation of Jewish patriotism let me mention the honor records of special heroism during the World War. More than 1,100 citations for valor were awarded to men of Jewish faith. Of these, some 700 were conferred by the American command, about 300 by the French, and 33 by the British. The Congressional Medal of Honor, which is the most highly prized of all citations issued by this Government, has been awarded to only 68 persons, 3 of these being Jewish soldiers. Our Distinguished Service Cross is worn by 150 American Jews and the French Croix de Guerre was bestowed on 174 Jews of the American Expeditionary Forces.

No account of the famous "Lost Battalion" in the Argonne Forest fails to set forth the daring and endurance of the Jewish soldiers in this gallant outfit. Recorded figures show that more than 200,000 men of Jewish faith served during the World War. Thousands made the supreme sacrifice, while many other thousands were wounded. Six hundred American Jews still lie buried in the cemeteries of France, Belgium, and England.

The Star of David is found with the cross in beautiful, everlasting marble. As they lived together, fought together, so they lie buried side by side. They gave their best, their all, to their country.

In the American Army the Jewish soldier was dependable. Those qualities which enabled his race to survive through the centuries in spite of intolerance and persecution, made him a worthy fighter in the American cause. Thank God, we live in an enlightened land, where one's right to worship as his conscience dictates is rigidly upheld.

May we always, as citizens of this great Republic, be foremost in the protection of those liberties for which our forefathers fought and which are so fully guaranteed to us under the Constitution. Let us forever banish prejudice and intolerance or any unfair or unkind practice which might arise through religious or racial differences.

The United States owes to the Jews, as it does to many groups, deep appreciation for the Jewish contributions to our arts, sciences, and material progress in nearly every line of human endeavor. May no spirit of intolerance ever blind our eyes to the debt of gratitude owing our Jewish citizens for their help in making America what it is.

So today let us honor those Jewish heroes, both living and dead, who offered themselves to this, their country. We best pay tribute to their sacrifices and their memories by loyalty to the principles for which they fought and died. These precepts are set forth with clarity and in forceful language in the preamble of the Jewish War Veterans' constitution:

"For God and country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To maintain true allegiance to our country, to spread the doctrine of loyalty to the Government, to combat whatever tends to impair the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions, and to encourage the doctrine of universal liberty, equal rights, and full justice to all men."

In closing, may we offer a prayer that peace on earth may soon come, bringing with it a sympathy for each other, and a tolerant spirit; an earnest desire to love our neighbor. So let us turn our eyes upon our own beloved United States and determine to build up and preserve here the freedom, the rights, the democracy which war destroys and which peace nourishes. In this spirit, we observe Memorial Day, a fitting tribute to those who have served our country.

THOMAS MARINE RAILWAY CO., INC.

Mr. DARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 4148) for the relief of the Thomas Marine Railway Co., Inc., with a Senate amendment thereto and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, lines 10 and 11, strike out "Lighthouse Service" and insert "Quartermaster Corps."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is this bill about?

Mr. DARDEN. This is a bill that passed the House sometime ago in which there was an error in connection with the name of one of the Government departments. The error was corrected when the bill passed the Senate, and it is my request to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. This merely changes the title?

Mr. DARDEN. It is not in the title of the bill. It concerns the name of a Government department in the body of the act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

INVESTIGATION OF THE CALIFORNIA SARDINE (PILCHARD) FISHING INDUSTRY

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 597) authorizing an investigation by the Bureau of Fisheries of the California sardine (pilchard) fishing industry.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I am going to object to that request.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection a moment?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. LEHLBACH. This resolution is necessary as an emergency in order that a start may be made intelligently to conserve a great fishing industry which may be in danger of depletion. Action must be taken now in order to pass it in the Senate and have the Bureau of Fisheries commence the investigation. There is nothing controversial about it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why cannot the joint resolution be passed Monday just as well as now?

Mr. LEHLBACH. For the same reason, and no different reason, that it should be passed now.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Massachusetts yield so that I may ask the gentleman from Virginia a question?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Why cannot the Bureau of Fisheries make us a report on this matter without spending $10,000 and without such a resolution?

Mr. BLAND. Because it will require a very detailed investigation and search. There has been a considerable fight before the committee as to the possible depletion of the sardine or pilchard industry in the Pacific Ocean. The fight is between shore plants and floating plants. There have been some researches by Stanford University and the California Fish and Game Commission, and we have come to the conclusion that there ought to be an investigation by the Bureau of Fisheries. There is authorized an initial appropriation of $10,000, and unless we can get this joint resolution passed they cannot get the initial appropriation to conduct the investigation.

Mr. BLANTON. Can they not do this without getting this appropriation?

Mr. BLAND. I doubt that they can, because it covers a very broad subject.

Mr. BLANTON. On the statement of the gentleman from Virginia I shall not object, but I am going to object to every other investigation requested in this session of the Congress, and I am going to fight against making any more appropriations for investigations.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman if the bill that he asks to have considered now by unanimous consent is satisfactory to the people from California who are interested in this pilchard-fishing legislation?

Mr. BLAND. I do not think it is satisfactory to them. There were two sides and you could not satisfy both sides. There was nothing that could be brought out that would be satisfactory to both of them. The committee felt it needed further information on the matter and that there ought to be a scientific investigation by the Bureau of Fisheries as to whether this important resource is being depleted or not.

Mr. MOTT. Then may I ask if there is anything controversial about the bill which you now ask to have considered and which will be considered without debate, of course?

Mr. BLAND. It has the endorsement of the members of the committee from California, Mr. WELCH and Mr. COLDEN, and also has the approval of Mr. WALLGREN, of Washington.

Mr. MOTT. I am from Oregon.

Mr. BLAND. This not alone affects California, but it is an investigation of an important resource having for its purpose to see that this resource is not depleted. There was the thought expressed that there were other floating plants coming in, and we felt that the investigation should proceed as soon as possible by an independent agency, and that this agency should be the Federal Government.

Mr. MOTT. I may say to the gentleman that Oregon is only indirectly interested in this particular matter.

Mr. BLAND. We understand that.

Mr. MOTT. And if the people from California are satisfied to have the bill considered in this way, it is all right with me, and I withdraw my objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. RICH. It seems to me that if you are trying to benefit the people of the West in regard to the fishing industry, and they are not satisfied as a unit out there, they should come to an agreement while the matter is in committee and before the gentleman brings the bill before the House and asks us to spend several thousand dollars to make an investigation, and, in my opinion, there is no reason why the Bureau of Fisheries could not make this investigation now without spending $10,000.

Mr. BLAND. There is a great deal of information to be obtained and the bill is not in the interest of California alone.

Mr. RICH. I think the matter should go over until Monday, and I therefore object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

GEORGE HUDDLESTON

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, The business of sending men to this body and keeping them here is rightfully that of the people of the several districts of the country, but we are all interested in protecting the reputation of one another when wrongfully assaulted.

Yesterday's papers carried a statement credited to one of our colleagues by his opponent to the effect that money would reelect him here.

This Member is an old-timer, one with whom we may often differ but whose sincerity we never question. He is a man of highest character, great ability, and courage, and those of us who have served here with him for many years know that it is impossible for him to have made any such statement, for it is foreign to his nature and his life. The gentleman that I refer to is a statesman in the highest sense of the word, an ornament to the Congress and the great State from which he comes.

Mr. Speaker, there is no Member of this House whom people who toil should be prouder to honor and call their own than GEORGE HUDDLESTON, of the State of Alabama. [Applause.]

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 582, granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into an agreement amending the agreement between such States consented to by Congress in Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Joint resolution granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into an agreement amending the agreement between such States consented to by Congress in Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into the amendatory agreement executed on April 1, 1936, by the commissioners duly appointed on the part of such States, amending the original agreement entered into by such States for the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission, which original agreement was consented to by Congress by Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, approved February 16, 1928, and every part and article of such amendatory agreement is hereby ratified, approved, and confirmed: Provided, That nothing therein contained shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the United States in and over the region which forms the subject of such amendatory agreement; which amendatory agreement is as follows:

Whereas the States of New York and Vermont heretofore and on the 11th day of May 1927 entered into an agreement or compact, duly authorized by law, creating the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission; and

Whereas the legislatures of said States have authorized their respective commissioners to enter into an agreement or compact amending said existing agreement or compact: Now, therefore,

The said States of New York and Vermont do hereby enter into the following agreement, to wit:

The agreement heretofore made between the State of New York and the State of Vermont pursuant to chapter 321 of the laws of 1927 of the State of New York, entitled "An act authorizing designated authorities in behalf of the State of New York to enter into an agreement or compact with designated authorities of the State of Vermont for the creation of the Lake Champlain bridge commission, the establishment of the Lake Champlain bridge commission, and the defining of the powers and duties of such commission and making an appropriation for such purposes", and no. 139 of the acts of 1927 of the State of Vermont, entitled "An act ratifying a proposed agreement or compact between the State of Vermont and the State of New York relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain bridge commission and providing for carrying out the provisions of said agreement or compact", as the same was amended by the agreement or compact entered into the 30th day of March 1935 by and under the authority of chapter 201 of the laws of 1933, as amended by chapter 355 of the laws of 1935 of the State of New York, and by and under the authority of no. 209 of the acts of the General Assembly of the State of Vermont of 1935, entitled "An act authorizing an agreement or compact between the State of Vermont and the State of New York to amend the existing agreement or compact between said States creating the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission, in relation to the construction of a new bridge across Lake Champlain, the issuance of bonds by said commission, and providing for the payment of said bonds", approved by the Governor February 27, 1935, as amended by no. 210 of the acts of 1935 of the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, approved by the Governor March 21, 1935, is hereby amended by adding thereto the following articles:

ARTICLE XXXVI

The Lake Champlain bridge commission shall have power and is hereby authorized to issue its negotiable bonds in addition to those issued prior to March 1, 1933, for the purpose of refunding its bonds issued before said date: Provided, however, That the aggregate principal amount of such bonds so issued to pay off and refund its bonds issued before said date shall not exceed the aggregate principal amount of the bonds so retired.

ARTICLE XXXVII

Such commission shall have power and is hereby authorized to call for payment and to pay its bonds issued before March 1, 1933, in accordance with the terms under which said bonds were issued and for such purposes to use any funds which it has or shall have in reserves and sinking fund and in investments at the time said bonds are called for payment, notwithstanding any provision heretofore set forth in this or any previous compact or agreement.

ARTICLE XXXVIII

1. The bonds issued under authority of article XXXVI shall be authorized by resolution of such commission and shall bear such date or dates, mature at such time or times, not exceeding 50 years from their respective dates, bear interest at such rate or rates, not exceeding 5 percent per annum payable semiannually, be in such denominations, be in such form, either coupon or registered, carry such registration privileges, be executed in such manner, be payable in such medium of payments, at such place or places, and be subject to such terms of redemption as such resolution or resolutions may provide. Said bonds may be sold at public or private sale for such price or prices as such commission shall determine, provided that the interest cost to maturity of the money received for any issue of said bonds shall not exceed 5 percent per annum.

2. Neither the members of such commission nor any person executing said bonds shall be liable personally on said bonds or be subject to any personal liability or accountability by reason of the issuance thereof.

3. The bonds issued under the authority of article XXXVI shall constitute a first lien upon the property, tolls, and revenues pledged to secure the bonds issued by such commission prior to March 1, 1933, and subject to the terms of any agreement made or to be made with holders of bonds issued by such commission under article XXVI of the amendments to this compact shall be a lien upon the tolls and revenues of the bridge referred to as the Rouses Point Bridge, and in accordance with subdivision 4 of article XXVI of the amendments to this compact any of such tolls and revenues which would otherwise have been payable into the State treasuries of the two States may be pledged to the payment of said bonds.

4. Said bonds shall not be a debt of the State of New York or of the State of Vermont, and neither State shall be liable thereon, nor shall they be payable out of any funds other than those of such commission.

5. Said bonds shall be exempt from taxation and are hereby made securities in which all public officers and bodies of each State and of its municipal subdivisions, all insurance companies and associations, all savings banks and savings institutions, including savings and loan associations, executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, and all other fiduciaries in each State may properly and legally invest the funds within their control.

6. Such commission shall have power, out of any funds available therefor, to purchase any bonds issued by it at a price not more than the redemption price thereof at the time of such purchase with accrued interest.

ARTICLE XXXIX

Such commission shall have the power to apply to the Congress of the United States or any department of the United States for consent or approval of this compact as amended, but in the absence of such consent by Congress and until the same shall have been secured, this compact, as amended, shall be binding upon the State of New York when ratified by it and the State of Vermont when ratified by it without the consent of Congress to cooperate for the purposes enumerated in this agreement and in the manner herein provided and for all purposes that it legally may be.

In witness whereof, by and under the authority of chapters 73 and 219 of the Laws of 1936 of the State of New York, and by and under the authority of Public Act No. 79 of the acts and resolves passed by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont at the special session 1935–36, approved by the Governor December 14, 1935, we have signed this compact or agreement, in duplicate, this 1st day of April 1936.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this joint resolution is hereby expressly reserved.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BEQUEST OF DR. MALCOLM STORER

Mr. HIGGINS of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, May 26, Mr. VINSON of Georgia, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, presented a concurrent resolution expressing the appreciation of Congress for a bequest of a collection of naval and other medals from the late Dr. Malcolm Storer, of Boston, Mass.

I respectfully request unanimous consent that I may extend my remarks in the RECORD, together with a brief sketch of the life and activities of Dr. Storer which I have prepared.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE LIFE AND ACTIVITIES OF THE LATE DR. MALCOLM STORER, OF BOSTON, MASS.

Mr. HIGGINS of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, at the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress an act was passed which was signed by the President July 12, 1935, authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States a bequest of certain personal property of the late Dr. Malcolm Storer, of Boston, Mass.

The bequest consisted of a valuable collection of naval and other medals, together with the sum of $500 to be used to cover the expense of the installation of the collection as an exhibit at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

The collection of medals has been received at the Naval Academy and recently I made an inspection of the same, although as yet they are not fully installed. The curator, Lt. Wade DeWeese, made this interesting statement in reference to it—

> This collection is unique and the arrangements I am making for its permanent exhibition may be something of an innovation in the display of medals and coins. Briefly, they will be mounted in swinging leaf stands so that both obverse and reverse sides of every medal can be seen at a glance. The manner of insertion and securing in the stands, however, as well as the medals themselves, will be of interest to all numismatists.

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that in connection with the acceptance of this collection we might well express not only our appreciation of the gift, but include therewith a brief sketch of the life and activities of Dr. Storer.

He was born at Milton, Mass., April 26, 1862, son of Horatio Robinson Storer and Emily Elvira (Gilmore) Storer. He died at his home in Boston, January 3, 1935. His widow and a daughter, Mrs. Edgerton B. Sawtelle of Augusta, Me., survive him.

He came from a long line of distinguished and sturdy New England ancestry, including such men as Dudley, Winthrop, Langdon, and Boyd. On the Storer branch were several distinguished physicians, mostly Harvard graduates.

Dr. Storer graduated from Harvard in 1885 and took his M. D. from the medical department in 1889. After graduation he had 15 months of medical study in Vienna and Dublin. For a time he was surgical house officer in the Massachusetts General Hospital. He began his private practice of medicine in Boston in 1891. He was an assistant and later an instructor in gynecology at the Harvard Medical School until 1923. Also he was a member of the staff at the Carney Hospital, St. Elizabeths Hospital, and at the Boston Dispensary. He was active for 30 years in many administrative positions as well as societies. He was chief of staff of the Boston Dispensary; secretary and then president of the Boston Obstetrical Society; president of the North End Diet Kitchen, which supports the food clinics for regulatory diet of the Massachusetts General Hospital. He was also on the executive committee of the Boston Medical Library and a counselor of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association. In the latter connection he made a report to the association for raising money for the medical school from the medical alumni. He was also a member of the Society for Medical Improvement of Boston, the Massachusetts Medical Society, and the American Medical Association. In medicine he was known as the author of numerous papers in the field of gynecology.

His avocation lay in the numismatic field. His search for rare medals and coins was as keen as that of the hunter for his quarry. He pursued it with success, even to distinction, alongside his medical duties, without undue interferences with the latter; so that at his death he was the most prominent member of the Boston Numismatic Society, with a very wide and thorough knowledge of his subject.

In this field he was author of a paper on Admiral Vernon Medals (1919) and of a volume entitled "Numismatics of Massachusetts" (1923) and editor of his father's Medicina in Nummis (1931). His most important book, the History of Massachusetts Medals, was published as volume 76 of the transactions of the Massachusetts Historical Society, 328 pages, with index and 38 plates. It mentions 2,300 medals. This publication promises to establish a standard for like publications. He also wrote an article on Pine Tree Shillings and Other Colonial Money, October 1929, in Old Time New England. He was, besides, entrusted with the care of important numismatic collections in the Boston region. He had made for himself a considerable collection of naval medals; this collection has come, very properly, to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He was curator of the collection of medical medals presented by his father to the Boston Medical Library, of the coins and medals at the Massachusetts Historical Society, and was honorary keeper of coins at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. In addition, he belonged to the American Numismatic Society and to the American Numismatic Association.

He was also a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society and of its council from 1925; and a vice president of the Bunker Hill Monument Association and the Naval History Society.

His clubs were the old Puritan, the St. Botolph, the Odd Volumes, and the Harvard Club, all of Boston; also the Harvard Club of Rhode Island.

He was well read, had a retentive memory, and a command of French, German, Spanish, and Italian. His command of English was excellent. All this qualified him as a reader to pass upon books for the Boston Public Library.

During the World War he was signed up in the Volunteer Medical Reserve, but was not called for active service. He felt the needs of the situation, however, and, long before the United States declared war and later, he worked very steadily for over 3 years in charge of the supplies for the American Fund for French Wounded and Italian Relief. A few years before he died, he write, What a Fine Thing Life Is.

THE INDEPENDENT MERCHANT, THE INDIVIDUAL MAN, AND THE COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one-half minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRAY of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, there is a moral, a lesson to be read from the history of the growth and development of the organized communities of the country, how all grew up and clustered around the independent pioneer merchant in the spirit of individual enterprise, and flowered into the village, town, and county seat. First came the merchant in the early days, with his store of supplies for the people, his store building crude, but a nucleus around which clustered homes, mills, shops, and dwellings. Then came the school for the children, then the church for religious worship, then the cemetery for the sacred dead, until organized community life was complete.

THE MERCHANT-LED COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION

In all of these public or community steps taken, the merchant was the prime mover, whether to build a schoolhouse or a church or plan a diagram for a cemetery, the merchant led the movement. He made his storeroom the town hall. He took part in the affairs of all the people.

The merchant grew up with his customers, with their full knowledge and confidence in him. His business developed with their business. His interest was identical with their welfare. He prospered as they prospered. He suffered with their misfortunes, and he rejoiced with their bounty and abundance. The people came to the merchant to exchange, trade, and buy their supplies, to cash checks, orders, or to borrow money, or to ask and be assured of credit until their first crops were made, or the goods in the making were sold. This confidence and good will were equal and assuring.

Wherever the pioneer merchant opened his store enterprise and industry sprang to life, like the touch of a magic hand, and the spirit of cooperation and good will cemented the ties between neighbors and made the community growth and development permanent, continuing, and enduring.

THE COMMUNITY FAMILY

There is something beautiful, inspiring, in the organized country community, with its stores, shops, and business affairs; with its high schools and auditoriums; with its church spires and well-kept cemeteries, all standing out in the atmosphere of neighborhood friendship and good will.

There is something hopeful, looking forward, in the peals of the school bells blending with the voices of many children, and the church spires pointing heavenward, their chimes ringing out on the clear Sabbath morning calling the community family to worship in grateful recognition of bountiful nature.

There is something beautiful and sacred in the doors of stores and shops closing on the death of a neighbor in the community, the saw and hammer laid aside and businesses suspended, the reapers silent, standing idle in the field, as the people gather in the churchyard for the funeral, as the bell tolls the hour.

There is something touching to the human heart to witness the concourse of friends and neighbors silently and solemnly wending their way from the church or the community chapel to the cemetery for the rites of burial, in recognition of the solemnity of death, and standing at the grave with bowed heads in solemn, impressive respect for the departed.

PASSING WITH THE INDEPENDENT MERCHANT

But this is all passing or due to pass with the going of the independent merchant and the community retail store, around which the community grew up and clustered like a flowering plant or vine upon and around the trunk and branches of a sturdy tree and then falling, perishing and dying with the death, decay, and fall of the tree.

To say nothing of other individual men who have been driven from their independent business to become dependent clerks or employees, 300,000 independent merchants have been driven from their counters and stores and 500,000 more are due to follow to live in dependency and a precarious existence.

Under the tyranny of a few brokers and manipulators compelling certain discounts and rebates, manufacturers and wholesale houses are being coerced to make sale and price discriminations favoring chain-store corporations and against the independent merchants. Under the withering blight of unfair discrimination, the independent merchants are driven out to become wavering, dependent clerks assured of a place only from day to day, with little to work or hope for and with less to defend and fight for.

LIKE A BANQUET HALL DESERTED

The independent merchants' homes are being closed and are ultimately to be deserted. Their seats in the church are empty. Their children are not in the schools. The cash proceeds from retail sales are no longer left in the local bank, but are in drafts fleeing in the mails to an unknown owner in some far-away city.

As the community grew up and developed, clustering around the local retail store, so the glory of the community is to fade with the passing of the independent merchant, and in time will be left as sad and silent as a banquet hall deserted.

It is a damning charge and indictment against Congress and many administrations that the Government has been left standing by while the vandals of industry have been tearing down and destroying the organization of community life for sordid profit and gain.

THE INDIVIDUAL MAN

But there is something more vital, something more basic, substantial, fundamental, involved in this bill to safeguard economic justice, to safeguard the independent merchant, and assure him of equal industrial opportunity. Something more than secret prices, secret rebates, and secret discriminations to monopolize the retail trade of the people. It is the problem of maintaining and upholding the independent character and stability of the individual man. The cause for this legislation reaches back farther than the individual and the community. It goes back to the stability of the Nation, to the preservation and security of our free institutions.

It is the individual man who makes up and gives character to the organized communities of the country. It is the character of the organized communities that makes up and gives strength to the State, and in turn the strength and character of the State that gives stability to the Nation.

THE STABILITY OF THE NATION

Our whole political or fundamental structure is based upon and founded upon the independent character and stability of the individual man, reaching up from the community through the powers and processes of the State and giving stability to the Nation. Without such independence of the individual, our institutions of peace and civil life would be as wavering and unstable as the house built upon the sand, when the winds blow and the rains descend, in the storms of disorder and revolution.

THE GIBRALTAR OF THE STATE

In granting the general right of suffrage and placing the ballot in the hands of the people, and in laying the foundations of our political or governmental house, our forefathers recognized this basic, fundamental principle and rested all upon the individual man and made him the strength of the State, the bulwark, the Gibraltar of the Nation.

And the Constitution was framed and declared to uphold, maintain, and safeguard the independent character and stability of the individual man, holding and exercising the power of the ballot, all to guarantee, maintain, and vindicate the endurance, strength, and stability of our systems of free institutions.

WHAT OUR FOREFATHERS FAILED TO REALIZE

But our forefathers in that early day could not realize, foretell, foresee, the new and changed economic conditions coming, the growth of great corporations, the superpower, coercion, and tyranny of the artificial man created by law and the concentration of great wealth in the hands of a certain, special few.

Our forefathers did not and could not realize that the equal rights and opportunities, the independent character and stability of the individual man of the population included more than his political and religious rights, more than his personal and civil rights to maintain which the Constitution was written and declared.

Our forefathers overlooked and failed to safeguard the economic rights of the people, the business and industrial rights of the people, the equal right and opportunity of men to labor upon the earth to live, their right to pursue their trade and calling, free without discrimination against them.

And by reason of such oversight and failure, the individual man was left subjected to economic and industrial slavery and under which new and changed conditions, the superpower of great corporations, he has been driven from his trade and avocation, denied the right to labor, and reduced to dependency.

ANTITRUST LAWS TO SUPPLEMENT THE CONSTITUTION

And it was left to this day and generation, in the face of stern realities and the bitter experience of time, to safeguard the individual rights of man, his equal economic and industrial rights, by the enactment of antitrust laws against monopolies in restraint of trade.

It was because of this oversight and failure to safeguard economic and business rights, the equal industrial opportunities of the masses, under the provisions of the Constitution adopted, that the Sherman antitrust law was enacted. And it was because of the failure of the administration and enforcement of the Sherman antitrust law, to remedy economic evils and safeguard the people, that the Clayton amendments were passed to supplement and strengthen its provisions.

And now we have considered another law to further amend and strengthen the antitrust laws, as the third attempt to restrain monopoly, and if enacted will mark an epoch in the long struggle of the masses for economic and industrial freedom.

ALL DEPENDENT UPON ECONOMIC SECURITY

Time and experience have proven that until men are safeguarded in their economic rights, in their business and industrial rights, they cannot claim, assert, or enjoy their political and religious rights, their personal and civil rights, guaranteed to them under the Constitution.

Man, by nature born free, awoke to consciousness of his being only to find himself in slavery and shackled with the chains of bondage, in slavery under slave drivers and taskmasters, in slavery under kings and despotic rulers. Man, awakening to consciousness of his being, found himself confined and held like in a prison surrounded by inner and outer walls, all of which he must scale and overcome before he could win and enjoy his freedom.

Men fought for thousands of years to scale the first wall of their imprisonment—the wall of physical slavery under slave drivers and taskmasters—but which he overcame and scaled only to find himself still within the prison walls.

THE PRISON WALLS OF SLAVERY

Men battled their way for thousands of years to scale the second wall of their prison, political slavery under kings and despotic rulers, but only to find themselves still in prison without the enjoyment of their physical freedom which they had scaled the wall to overcome.

Now men are battling their way to scale the last wall of their imprisonment, the wall of economic and industrial slavery, and when they have won this last struggle and when they have scaled this last prison wall overcoming economic slavery and the tyrants of monopoly, they can then, and only then, enjoy their political freedom; they can then, and only then, enjoy their physical freedom; they can then, and only then, enjoy their religious freedom and the fruits of the other victories won. They will have at last won the freedom into which by nature they were born, and from which they have been held in slavery, shackled in bondage dating back beyond the pyramids.

A CRUEL AND RELENTLESS MONOPOLY

None of the combinations in restraint of trade which up to this time have challenged and defied the power and processes of State and Nation has ever rivaled in magnitude nor operated with more far-reaching power than these secret chain-store corporations. Other combinations defying competition have directly affected only certain classes of people or certain lines of commodities or services upon which they levied tribute and profiteered and took from a part of the people only or burdened only a part of the necessities.

But this secret trade pact or industrial conspiracy is organized to reach out and touch with its withering, blighting hand every man, woman, and child dependent for food and clothing and the absolute necessaries of life used in their everyday life.

HOW INDEPENDENT MERCHANTS ARE DRIVEN OUT

Under these gross, unfair, and criminal discriminations the chain-store corporations are enabled to sell to the people and consumers at a price lower than the price which the independent retail merchants under the unfair discrimination against them are allowed to buy in bulk at wholesale. It is in this secret and cruel way that these conspiring bankers and brokers behind and supporting the chain-store corporations are driving the independent merchants from the field of the retail trade and enthroning monopoly complete over the people.

A MERE HANDFUL OF MEN ENSLAVING THE MULTITUDE

The hearings held on this bill to outlaw sale discriminations shows that a mere handful of speculative bankers and brokers in three congressional districts in New York City are deliberately operating under a conspiracy to drive out the independent merchants and monopolize the retail trade of the country.

The hearings and inquiries held on this bill to prevent unfair wholesale practices reveals a remarkable secret trade pact of manipulating bankers and brokers operating only within a few blocks in a single city, but reaching out to every community in the land to paralyze competition in the retail trade.

By their system of secret trade operations, manufacturers and commodity sellers at wholesale have been and are being coerced, intimidated, bribed, and terrorized to make different prices to different buyers, low prices to chain-store corporations, and higher prices to independent merchants.

THE OBJECT OF THE LAW

This bill is to prevent discrimination in prices between chain-store corporations and the independent merchants and to relieve manufacturers and wholesalers from coercion and compel sales to independent merchants at the same wholesale price as sales to the chain-store corporations.

But we are told that this will operate to prevent chain stores from making low prices to consumers. It will not prevent such low prices, but it will make possible and compel the same wholesale price to independent merchants and enable the independent merchants to make the same low prices to their consumers, and this will make lower prices to all.

The secret rebates and unlawful discriminations in favor of chain-store corporations and against the independent merchants assuming consideration and concern for the consumers are always upheld and defended upon the ground of giving low prices to the people. But it is the history of all monopolies gained under pretense of serving the consumers that as soon as a monopoly is complete and assured and all independent competition is eliminated and out of the way prices will be raised back and kept higher.

THE LOBBY STRATEGY

In the execution of the plan and strategy to gain the object of the conspiracy organized, no means, methods, or course of dealing is too unscrupulous, dishonest, or unfair to be resorted to for the purpose. They include bribery and coercion and the corruption of public officials. This is not a mere suspicion or surmise, or a groundless charge of accusation. It is frankly and brazenly admitted and is pointed to with indifference and in defiance of the efforts made to curb and restrict their unlawful monopoly operations. This admission was made and appears in the evidence before the chain-store lobby hearings conducted by the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, August 9, 1935, in Washington, D. C., and at the time generally shown and made public in the press reporting the hearings of that date.

HOW LAWS ARE MADE UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Robert W. Lyons was a chain-store lobbyist and was questioned regarding amendments offered to make legislation unconstitutional. Lyons frankly and brazenly told the committee that he would not hesitate for a moment to amend a measure to make it unconstitutional, and that he considered that practice before committees perfectly fair in opposing legislation.

This bill we are passing here today following the experience and enforcement of the Sherman antitrust law, and the Clayton amendatory act, may contain such invalid amendments and provisions which will only be known and disclosed when the attempt is made for its administration. This is not the last word in legislation to safeguard the independent merchant. It is only a step in that direction. It must be followed up with further hearings and further laws providing for penalties for the violation and disregard for antitrust laws.

THE OPPORTUNE TIME FOR MONOPOLY OPERATIONS

Of all time this is the most opportune time for monopolies to gain a foothold. It is now when the people are thrown off their guard suffering from low and insufficient incomes and straining to make their scanty means go as far as they will to provide the necessaries of life; it is now when they will be misled to sell their birthright of free competition in industry and leave their children and posterity in bondage and economic slavery under monopoly of the retail trade.

Under the economic strain and scarcity of income the people will not be in mind to realize that their own interests and welfare and the welfare of their children will be more assured and better safeguarded under the free competition of independent merchants than under a relentless mercantile monopoly.

THE GOAL AND WHAT IS AT STAKE

If these secret rebates and discriminations are allowed to continue on into the future as they have been carried on in the past, no independent merchant can stand the strain upon him and it will be only a question of time, brief time, when he must close his store and give away to the chain-store corporations.

Monopoly has come out into the open. The struggle, the contest is on. The goal to be lost or won is free competition in the retail trade. The independent store is at stake. The organized community is at stake. The individual man is at stake. The stability of the State and Nation is at stake. We have come to the parting of the ways. There can be no compromise or hesitation. Monopoly is everywhere destroying competition. The independent retail store is passing. The independent merchants are following. The tide must be stopped and turned back or monopoly will be entrenched complete.

It is time, far overtime, that Congress resent the delusive plea of "hands off of private business", and that we arise to the emergencies of the hour to safeguard the equal rights and opportunities of the independent business man. It is time, far overtime, that we safeguard the individual man from economic tyranny and unfair discrimination, driving the independent merchant from his place in the retail trade and restore him to his former position in the community life of the people.

MINNESOTA PUBLIC WORKS—FEDERAL AND STATE FUNDS FOR THIRD CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT—1933–36

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the record of the Government in State work in Minnesota.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. Speaker, after the adjournment of Congress I will remain in Washington for several weeks in order that I may give personal attention to Minnesota and Third Congressional District projects. For the past 3 years one of the major duties of myself and my office has been to obtain approval at Washington of numerous important and beneficial projects.

The citizens of Minnesota and the Third Congressional District are greatly interested in and vitally concerned with public works and projects. Therefore, under leave to extend my remarks to include data and information on the record of State and Federal Governments in the matter of Minnesota projects, I am presenting my report on projects of all kinds for which Federal funds were obtained for Minnesota, and especially for each county of the Third Congressional District, which I represent. These counties are Anoka, Chisago, Hennepin, Isanti, and Washington.

Data included here were furnished on short notice by various Government agencies. Minor errors may have crept into some tables, and some statistics are more up to date than others.

While this information does not include all the Federal funds obtained for the Third District, it is as complete and accurate as we have been able to make it with limited time and office force.

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION

In 1933 I voted for the act to create the Public Works Administration (p. 4373, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, May 26, 1933). I have supported appropriations for public works. Since that time and up to April 30, 1936, non-Federal public-works projects in the amount of $42,949,373 had been approved for Minnesota. Of this cost the Federal Government paid $20,867,569. Minnesota also received $24,605,748 for Federal projects, of which no part was contributed by State or local funds. Non-Federal projects are those toward which the communities contribute a certain amount. The communities would have been unable to finance these projects without the aid of Federal funds.

Following are funds allotted for the Third Congressional District through the Public Works Administration:

SOME HENNEPIN COUNTY P. W. A. PROJECTS

NORTH MINNEAPOLIS HIGH SCHOOL

North Minneapolis needs a new high school. The Minneapolis Board of Education is sponsoring the construction of a new high school for North Minneapolis. Federal funds are needed. In cooperation with North Minneapolis civic organizations and school officials, we are endeavoring to make this hope of North Minneapolis a reality. We must put an end to the overcrowded condition at North High.

ENLARGEMENT OF NORTH HIGH ATHLETIC FIELD

A project for the enlargement of the North High Athletic Field is being considered by the W. P. A. An allotment of $6,903 has already been approved, and we are now endeavoring to secure an additional, more adequate grant. I hope the W. P. A. will approve this request.

LAKE MINNETONKA AND MINNEHAHA CREEK RESTORATION APPROVED BY P. W. A. EXAMINING DIVISIONS

The most important rural Hennepin County P. W. A. project is the restoration of Lake Minnetonka and Minnehaha Creek; Minnesota Docket No. 1263. This project has been on the firing line for the past 3 years and more. I am convinced that the Minnetonka project is now at last on the road to final approval. It has been approved by the examining divisions of P. W. A.

For a long time the Lake Minnetonka project was delayed because local officials and citizens could not agree on the method of raising the lakes. Several methods were proposed, and in my speech of January 18, 1934 (p. 894, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD), I dealt with some of these proposals.

SIX METHODS OF RAISING LAKE MINNETONKA

One method is to divert the South Fork of the Crow River (the "Little" Crow) so that the water would run by gravity flow from the Little Crow to Lake Minnetonka. Some engineers claim that sufficient water could not be obtained from this source.

A second method is to divert the Big Crow River, formed by the junction of the North Fork and the South Fork near Rockford, Minn. The water from the Big Crow would then run into Lake Sarah and Lake Independence, and finally into Lake Minnetonka, Minnehaha Creek and Falls. All three lakes would be raised by this method. It is this plan which has now been submitted to the Public Works Administration.

A third method, favored by many, is the diversion of flood waters from the Mississippi River, where there is an inexhaustible, never-failing supply of water. There is disagreement as to the point of the diversion of the necessary waters of the Mississippi River.

A fourth method is the diversion of the Minnesota River. Some experts claim that this, like the Little Crow, is not a sufficient source of water.

The fifth method is the construction of artesian wells, from which water would be pumped into the lake.

A sixth method has been suggested, whereby a large Minneapolis water main would be tapped during seasons when water usage in Minneapolis is at its minimum. This water would flow above a control dam through a large pipe line into Lake Minnetonka, and the sponsors of the project would pay the city of Minneapolis a minimum rate for a large volume of water.

BIG CROW RIVER DIVERSION APPROVED

This spring a united effort was made to secure approval of the Big Crow River diversion method, and we have made very definite progress. The Examining Divisions of P. W. A. have now approved the Crow River diversion project at Rockford and recommended a Federal grant of $259,200. The total cost is estimated at $576,000. The State of Minnesota is sponsoring the project. With the $300,000,000 of public-works funds soon to be made available we hope to obtain final approval of the Lake Minnetonka project.

Lake Minnetonka is now about 4 feet below the top of Grays Bay Dam, over which it should flow. The lake has been lifted about 10½ inches by rains since last September. But we cannot depend upon rainfall. Drought will come again, and the lake must be restored by giving it a steady source of inflow. Before the drought of recent years the lake had not been as low as 3 feet below the top of Grays Bay Dam since 1890. The levels began to fall rapidly in 1928 and continued to do so through 1934, reaching a 50-year low mark of almost 6 feet 6 inches below the top of the dam during the drought of 1934. Nearly a fourth of all the water had gone from the lake at that time.

COOPERATION OF HENNEPIN COUNTY CITIZENS

We appreciate the cooperation received from citizens of Hennepin County on the Lake Minnetonka project. Palmer Holman, editor of the Wayzata Herald, A. S. Brazeman, of the Mound Pilot, and Willard Dillman of the Excelsior Record have conducted a persistent campaign in their newspapers week after week for the restoration of Minnetonka. The Minnetonka Preservation Association, the Grays Bay Improvement Association, the Rural Hennepin Civic Association, the Hennepin County Commissioners, Ben B. Moore, Edina Village Recorder, the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association, the Minnetonka Improvement Association, and many other citizens of Hennepin County have contributed to the progress that has so far been made on this project. They have finally brought about a united effort for one method of accomplishing the work that needs to be done, and final approval is in sight.

Personally I appreciate the confidence the good people of Hennepin County have expressed in my own efforts on the Minnetonka project. Mr. C. J. Skreen, president of the Minnetonka Preservation Association, Mound, Minn., has been kind enough to write me:

DEAR CONGRESSMAN LUNDEEN: Once again I want to thank you on behalf of our association and myself for the good work that you are doing in Washington, not only in behalf of our water level but other constructive legislation. We are entirely satisfied that the people at large are truly being represented by you and appreciate the honest efforts made in our behalf.

Sincerely yours,

C. J. SKREEN,
President, Minnetonka Preservation Association.

FOURTEEN-THOUSAND-DOLLAR MINNETONKA MILLS DAM PROJECT APPROVED

Last October—1935—the Public Works Administration approved project no. 5101 for a $14,570 dam at Minnetonka Mills to control the outflow of Lake Minnetonka. We hope that the lake-raising project will also be approved and funds allotted from the $300,000,000 soon to be made available to the Public Works Administration.

MINNEAPOLIS PRODUCERS' AND CONSUMERS' MARKET

P. W. A. project no. 1247, the Minneapolis market project, was approved after many months of hard work. For many years I have been interested in a new municipal market.

Recognizing that proper distribution facilities are necessary for farm products, the Public Works Administration approved an application for a market in Minneapolis, November 18, 1935. This project, popularly known as the Farmers and Gardeners' Market, received a Federal grant amounting to $139,050. In addition, the applicant is furnishing, from local sources, $169,950, a total of $309,000.

The original market, occupying two-thirds of a city block in the downtown district of Minneapolis, is not easily accessible, and so crowded at all times during business hours that it is a menace to traffic in that portion of the city.

Most of the present facilities are occupied by commission merchants, and more than 500 farmers who come to market their products have no—or only temporary—facilities.

The new project is located at an advantageous central point near Sixth Avenue North and Lyndale on the north side, in the fourth ward, in the Third Congressional District easily accessible from every section of the city, and with little probability of traffic congestion. The new site is approximately two blocks long and a block wide. It will contain nine market sheds each more than 300 feet long and constructed of fireproof material.

In this project P. W. A. has responded to the demand for an open market where the producers of foodstuffs may sell more than $5,000,000 worth of produce to consumers and grocers annually. For more than a generation farmers, gardeners, and consumers have urged this fine development. I am happy to know that citizens of the third and fourth wards will have a fine, convenient market shopping center within walking distance of their homes.

SUMNER FIELD HOUSING PROJECT

Project H-4201 is the famous Sumner Field housing project which is now under way. This is one of the largest housing projects in the country, located in the center of the Third Congressional District. The project was to cost $6,000,000, but the original plans were curtailed by the Public Works Administration, and present plans are for a $3,500,000 project. We are endeavoring to enlarge the project to its original size. Eventually more than $6,000,000 will be expended on housing in this Third District area.

The Sumner Field housing project is bounded by Eleventh Avenue, Seventh Street, Aldrich Avenue, Eighth Avenue, Bassett Place, Sixth Avenue, and Emerson Avenue North. It will provide 2,247 rooms in 618 family units, in three-story fireproof apartments, and two-story houses and flats. There will be 112 garages and 16 stores as auxiliary buildings. Ample open space, landscaping, and playgrounds for young children will be provided. It is expected to employ 1,180 men during 1936.

EDINA-MORNINGSIDE PUBLIC-SCHOOL PROJECT

The Edina public-school project, listed as W–1045 and costing $104,219, was approved last fall. Superintendent O. S. Glover notified me on September 16, 1935, that the project had been approved by the State P. W. A. office at St. Paul, and forwarded to Washington for final approval. We immediately contacted the Public Works Administration, and were able to notify Mr. Glover by air mail on October 1, 1935, that the project had been approved, and an allocation of $46,899 made by the P. W. A. Approval was made public the same day. Work was provided for 52 people.

Upon receipt of our notification Superintendent Glover wrote me a letter stating:

DEAR MR. LUNDEEN: Thank you very kindly for your letter of October 1 informing us that P. W. A. project W–1045 for the construction of our addition to the Edina school had been approved on the 45-percent basis. We very much appreciate your assistance in this matter. The addition will make a very substantial school plant at Edina and take care of a badly overcrowded school.

Again thanking you, we are,

Very truly yours,

O. S. GLOVER, Superintendent.

I am glad to have been of some service to the good people of Edina, where our own children go to school—a real home community; and the center of every such neighborhood is the school. We are now well provided for some years ahead.

ROBBINSDALE JUNIOR-SENIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Mr. Edwin J. Cooper, superintendent of independent school district no. 24, Robbinsdale, Minn., notified me on August 20, 1935, that the application for a 45-percent P. W. A. grant for the Robbinsdale junior-senior high school had been transmitted to Washington by air mail on August 15, 1935. The estimated cost was $300,000, of which $135,000 was asked from the Federal Government through the Public Works Administration. In his letter Superintendent Cooper stated:

DEAR CONGRESSMAN LUNDEEN: Will you please do what you can to see that the hope and aspirations of the people of Robbinsdale are fulfilled as early as possible? We have never had a senior high school at Robbinsdale, being handicapped by the necessity of sending our pupils to Minneapolis schools, and everyone is now looking forward to having all 12 grades of school at Robbinsdale. * * * We now await a favorable reply and a maximum grant from Washington. You know best our ability, our loyalty, and your many friendships in this district. Will you do what you can to let us hear from you at an early date?

Most earnestly yours,

BOARD OF EDUCATION, INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 24,
Robbinsdale, Minn.
Per EDWIN J. COOPER, Superintendent.

Mr. Cooper's letter was placed before the officials of the National Emergency Council, then handling the matter, and we urged prompt approval.

We had some difficulty in securing approval of the Robbinsdale school project, for the reason that P. W. A. funds were exhausted in November 1935, leaving many valuable projects not included in the program. However, we were assured by Assistant Administrator Horatio B. Hackett on November 11 that delay in approval did not indicate rejection of the project, and that it would be given further consideration as soon as additional funds were made available. The project has now been approved and a full 45-percent grant made by the Federal Government. The Robbinsdale High School is now being built, giving employment to 170 people. We are glad to cooperate in all matters pertaining to improvement of Robbinsdale—a splendid home city, one of the very best in the Third Congressional District.

ST. LOUIS PARK HIGH SCHOOL

The St. Louis Park two-story high school building has recently been approved by the P. W. A. Final allocation of funds was made possible by the appropriation of public-works funds by Congress. I supported this appropriation.

We have been endeavoring to secure approval of this project for several months. The Examining Division of the P. W. A. approved the project this spring, and appropriation of funds by Congress now makes the construction possible without further delay. The new school building will include an auditorium, gymnasium, and other features of a modern up-to-date high school, for St. Louis Park. St. Louis Park has for some time been badly in need of a new school, and we are happy to know that construction of a new school has now been made possible. Federal funds amounting to $122,400 have been allocated, and 150 people are given employment by this project.

CAMBRIDGE EPILEPTIC COLONY

A great humanitarian purpose is being accomplished by the construction of two splendid buildings at the Cambridge Colony for Epileptics. These two additional buildings will take care of crowded conditions at the colony, one of the finest institutions in the entire United States. I was happy to have played a part in bringing about approval of this $252,500 project which employs 150 persons. Dr. D. E. McBroom, superintendent of the Minnesota Colony for Epileptics was kind enough to write me on January 7, 1936, as follows:

DEAR CONGRESSMAN LUNDEEN: Several days ago I was informed that this institution had received a Federal grant amounting to a little over $113,000. This, of course, will mean an additional cottage, housing about 100 patients, which will help a great deal in taking care of our long waiting list.

I also understand that it is largely through your efforts that we received this grant. I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the kind interest you have taken in us and let you know we appreciate this to the utmost.

With kind personal regards, I am,

Yours very truly,

D. E. MCBROOM, M. D., Superintendent.

P. W. A. PROJECTS NOT YET APPROVED

There are many valuable Third Congressional District P. W. A. projects now under consideration which have not yet been approved. We are making every effort to secure approval of these projects. Sometimes it takes months, and even years, to obtain approval. We need the cooperation of State and local government officials, organizations, and individuals in bringing pressure to bear upon the proper officials in order that these worthy projects may be started.

I will be in Washington for several weeks after the adjournment of Congress for this purpose.

In order to bring about favorable action on a public-works project, it is necessary to secure the cooperation of Senators, Representatives, and Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes and his staff. We have had numerous conferences with Mr. Ickes and other Public Works officials. But even more important is the interest, the letters, the wires, and the personal calls of the folks back home. The united, persistent effort of citizens directly affected by the project is the determining factor. The same is true of W. P. A. projects, under the direction of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, at Washington, and Victor Christgau, at St. Paul.

EDINA VILLAGE COMMUNITY HALL

One project for which we are trying to secure approval is the Edina Village Community Hall, project no. 1174.

The village of Edina, a rapidly growing suburb of Minneapolis, has submitted to the Public Works Administration an application for Federal funds to construct a community building and village hall. A requested amount of $43,636, consisting of a loan of $24,000 and a grant of $19,636, has not yet been approved.

There is no adequate community building of any kind and no place for village business. Records are kept in the homes of the village officers.

The new building for which funds are sought will provide an auditorium and meeting place for several village organizations, facilities for Boy Scout activities, administrative offices for village councils, and storage rooms for permanent village records.

We will continue our efforts on this project, and I am certain a real Edina community hall will be constructed.

CAMBRIDGE HIGH SCHOOL ADDITION

The Public Works Administration approved the Cambridge school addition, project W–1090, at a cost of $113,000, of which $50,850 is furnished by the Federal Government. Henry L. Soderquist, attorney at law, Cambridge, Minn., wrote me in Washington on March 24, 1936, concerning additional funds for this project. We have taken up the matter with Mr. Soderquist in person, and we are now bringing pressure to bear upon the Public Works Administration in an endeavor to secure an additional allotment.

EMANUEL COHEN CENTER

The enlarging and rebuilding of Emanuel Cohen Center, located at 909 Elwood Avenue North, Minneapolis, is another worthy project which ought to be considered by P. W. A. This center is now doing most valuable social-service work among people of all nationalities. Plans are being made for this project, and we have discussed the matter with P. W. A. and Federal Housing Administration officials. We will continue our efforts on behalf of Emanuel Cohen Center and cooperate with those who are backing the project.

MOOSE LAKE ASYLUM

A Federal grant of $981,675 has been approved by the examining divisions of P. W. A. for the $2,181,500 Moose Lake Insane Asylum, a great humanitarian project sponsored by the State of Minnesota. We believe funds will be made available in the near future.

OTHER P. W. A. PROJECTS OF WHICH APPROVAL IS EXPECTED

There are other Third District projects which have now been approved by the Examining Division of the Public Works Administration. Following is a list of these projects:

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION

This is a picture of the Public Works Administration projects in Minnesota's Third Congressional District. The P. W. A. is under the direction of Harold L. Ickes at Washington and Capt. R. A. Radford at St. Paul. We have several other Federal agencies disbursing funds to Minnesota. One of the most important is the Works Progress Administration under the direction of Harry L. Hopkins at Washington and Victor Christgau at St. Paul. The W. P. A. is successor to the Civil Works Administration. This agency handles large numbers of projects. Its primary purpose is to give employment. It therefore approves projects which can be started quickly, will employ a large number of people, and will not take a large percentage of the funds for construction materials. Up to March 10, 1936, a total of $26,606,501.39 Federal funds had been allocated by the Works Progress Administration for Minnesota projects.

This includes some old C. W. A. and E. R. A. projects taken over by the Works Progress Administration. There were also many C. W. A. and E. R. A. projects completed before the W. P. A. was created. We do not have a list of these completed projects. Total Federal funds received by Minnesota for both W. P. A. and P. W. A. projects are approximately as follows:

W. P. A.	$26,606,501.39
P. W. A. (Federal projects)	24,605,748.00
P. W. A. (non-Federal projects)	20,867,569.00
Total	72,079,818.39

(Not including completed C. W. A. and E. R. A. projects.)

After projects are approved at Washington, it is the duty of the Works Progress Administration office in St. Paul to get the projects under way. Sometimes Federal funds are not available to complete all projects approved at Washington. However, our task at Washington is to secure approval of Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, then the approval of the President, and finally allocation of funds by the Comptroller General. After that, constant pressure of State, county, city, and village officials, and interested citizens of the district is necessary to put the projects into action through the State administrator's office.

Up to February 29, 1936, good teamwork secured the approval of the Washington Works Progress Administration office, the President, and the Comptroller General for hundreds of Third District projects, including the following:

W. P. A. EDUCATIONAL, CULTURAL, AND RECREATION PROJECTS

Some fine service has been rendered by the Federal W. P. A. cultural projects, such as the Federal music project, recreation projects, adult and workers' education.

FEDERAL MUSIC PROJECT

The Federal music project was created to employ, retrain, and rehabilitate those musicians who because of the depression faced loss of employment and resulting deterioration of skill. By March 21, 1936, 15,639 of such people were on W. P. A. pay rolls in the United States.

This is truly a cultural reclamation project. It includes instrumentalists, vocalists, composers, teachers, librarians, copyists and arrangers, tuners, and music binders. There have been 163 approved symphony and concert W. P. A. orchestras, 51 bands, a composers' project, 15 chamber music ensembles, 22 choruses and quartets, 69 popular orchestras, 146 teachers' projects; opera and operetta projects, and 1 folk-song project to preserve early Kentucky hills music. State universities and local boards of education cooperate with the W. P. A. in this work.

MINNESOTA W. P. A. MUSIC PROJECT

As of May 28, 1936, there were 269 people working on the Minnesota W. P. A. music project, 244 of these from relief rolls. There were 52 teachers giving 307 classes weekly, with an enrollment of 3,439 pupils. There were 33 performances during 1 week, at which an attendance of 13,875 was reported. A series of concerts was being planned at the University of Minnesota sponsored by the Federal music project. A composers' forum laboratory was to be organized. We must not permit the depression to demobilize American culture.

I was happy to aid in securing approval of the Federal music project. For some time the project was held up in Washington. I received a wire from the St. Paul Musicians' Association asking assistance. We kept in constant touch with the W. P. A. at Washington until the project was approved. The St. Paul Musicians' Association, Mr. Edward P. Ringius, secretary-treasurer, wrote me a letter with reference to this project, in which he stated:

DEAR MR. LUNDEEN: I read your circular letter to our local at their monthly meeting held Saturday, June 9, and I was instructed to acknowledge receipt of same and to let you know that our organization appreciated this information and commends you very highly for your work. With best wishes for your future success, we are,

Sincerely and fraternally yours,

ST. PAUL MUSICIANS' ASSOCIATION,
By EDW. P. RINGIUS, Secretary-Treasurer.

STILLWATER MUSIC PROJECT

During February there were W. P. A. piano classes at Stillwater and Mahtomedi. An address on music, at Stillwater High School, regarding the value of rural music education, was given; 300 persons were present. A chorus was formed at Stillwater, Welander, and Marine. A community music meeting was held at Stillwater with 200 people present.

DOWLING SCHOOL SWIMMING POOL

One W. P. A. project of which we were very pleased to receive approval is the swimming pool at the Michael Dowling School for Crippled Children, in Minneapolis (project 5735).

We had difficulty in obtaining approval of this project. The W. P. A. at first considered the cost per man-year too high. On September 30, 1935, I received a letter from Mrs. George B. Palmer stating: "It looks as though you will have to be our savior if anything is done about getting a swimming pool for these poor little fellows who really need a helping hand."

Original plans called for a total cost of $51,351 for the swimming pool. As finally approved, we will have a $69,875 project. Construction was begun on February 27, 1936. There was a celebration at Dowling School when the work got under way. I received an invitation on February 25, 1936, stating:

The culmination of the individual and collective efforts of the large number of friends of the crippled children in Minneapolis, in the procuring of a swimming pool and therapeutic center at the Dowling School for Crippled Children, Thirty-ninth Street South, and River Road West, will be realized by the breaking of ground for the construction of this center on Friday morning, February 28, 1936, at 10 o'clock.

You have taken such a personal interest in this project that it gives us great pleasure to extend to you a most cordial invitation to be present at this momentous ceremony.

Very sincerely yours,

CHARLES R. DRAKE,
President, the Board of Education,
Minneapolis, Minn.

WORKERS' EDUCATION

Minnesota educators and labor organizations are tremendously interested in having the workers' education project continue. This year there was a long delay in getting the project started. This was true in every State with the exception of Wisconsin. We protested against the delay and assisted in bringing about approval of the Minnesota workers' education project. The project was finally started, giving employment to teachers and new educational opportunities for workers. The Minnesota State Department of Education, under the able direction of Dr. John G. Rockwell, has cooperated in every way to make the program a success.

We are assured by the W. P. A. officials at Washington in charge of this splendid program that it will be continued next year. Plans are being made to enlarge and improve the program, and there is every indication that next year's workers' education project will be even more beneficial than before.

THIRD DISTRICT W. P. A. PROJECTS APPROVED AT WASHINGTON BUT NOT YET STARTED

The W. P. A. projects listed above as approved at Washington is longer than the list of projects authorized for work by the W. P. A. administrator for Minnesota. This means that we have secured approval of a large number of projects at Washington which have not yet been started by the Minnesota W. P. A. office. In order to start these projects, the W. P. A. must be granted sufficient funds by Congress. We have now appropriated a large sum for the continuation of W. P. A. activities. In addition to funds, we need the cooperation of local, county, and State officials, and other interested citizens. Let them express an interest in these projects, and see that they are started. Local and county officials, and other citizens at home must cooperate with the Representatives and Senators at Washington in order that projects may be started. The Congressman's main service on projects is to secure approval at Washington.

CHISAGO CHAIN OF LAKES PROJECT

One of these projects approved at Washington, but not yet started, is the Chisago chain of lakes. Citizens of Chisago County are greatly interested in the raising of beautiful Chisago chain of lakes. In my speech on the floor of the House on January 18, 1934, I gave full information concerning this project. The lakes are less than half the size they were 15 years ago. The cost of raising them to their former level is estimated at about $320,000.

Last fall we secured approval of the W. P. A., President Roosevelt, and the Comptroller General at Washington of the Chisago chain of lakes project, and it appears on the list of approved projects furnished us by the W. P. A. at Washington. The Federal funds are available. The matter of funds for upkeep is still in debate. It is possible that an appropriation might be obtained from the State legislature to cover this cost.

This is again a case where the cooperation of local, county, and State government officials is badly needed. Federal funds have been set aside for the Chisago chain of lakes project, and we hope that the difficulties preventing work on this project will be removed in the near future.

On March 10, 1936, we received a letter from Walter S. Olson, director of the Division of Drainage and Waters of the Minnesota State Department of Conservation, to whom the Minnesota W. P. A. office has referred the Chisago chain of lakes project for recommendation. Mr. Olson stated:

Some 2 months ago a delegation of 10 or 15 men from this district called on Mr. Willard with regard to this project, and at which conference I was present. The project as presented stipulated that the control, operation, and maintenance of the project after its completion by W. P. A. was to be taken over by some local governmental agency. This is in accordance with the procedure of W. P. A.

When it was called to the attention of these people at the conference that the pumping costs alone on this project would run to approximately $10,000 for every foot of water placed from the proposed diversion, no one indicated a willingness or authority to assume this responsibility. It was suggested at that time by them that the State take over the operation of the project. However, we know of no means whereby the State could do so unless the legislature appropriated sufficient funds.

Since that time there has been no evidence of local interest in the project. There will be many things to clear up before it can be in such shape as W. P. A. could start construction, such as obtaining commitments, and also field works and design, and possibly some legal phases such as satisfying the power interests on the Sunrise River below the point of diversion.

The matters to be "cleared up" in order that construction on the Chisago chain of lakes project could begin are matters handled successfully in connection with numerous other water projects.

CHISAGO CHAIN OF LAKES WILL BE RESTORED

Personally, I see no difficulties which cannot be overcome. Right now the local officials, organizations, and other citizens of Chisago and neighboring counties would do much to advance this project by calling on the State division of drainage and waters, and the officials of the State department of conservation, proving that Chisago County is interested in this project. Federal funds have already been approved. Our work in Washington on this project has been done, and we are going to continue working with State and county government officials so that this project may be started. There is no good reason why the Chisago chain of lakes cannot be restored to their original state.

FEDERAL RELIEF IN MINNESOTA

Federal funds have also been disbursed to Minnesota through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. We do not have the amounts provided by the Federal Relief Administration to the Third District counties, but we do have the total amounts for the State during the years 1933, 1934, and 1935.

The above figures include obligations incurred for relief extended under the general relief program under all special programs, and for administration. Beginning April 1934 these figures also include purchases of materials, supplies, and equipment, rental of equipment (such as team and truck hire), earnings of nonrelief persons employed, and other expenses incident to the emergency work relief program.

HOUSING

There are many Federal Government agencies concerned with homes and housing. I have already mentioned the work of the P. W. A. in connection with the Sumner Field housing project in North Minneapolis. Other agencies dealing with homes and housing are the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration.

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Following are the amounts of Federal funds obtained for Minnesota and the Third Congressional District through the Federal Housing Administration:

Volume of Federal Housing Administration business in the State of Minnesota

FOR THE ENTIRE STATE OF MINNESOTA

Modernization notes insured through Apr. 30, 1936		Mortgages accepted for insurance through Mar. 31, 1936

	Modernization notes insured through Apr. 30, 1936		Mortgages accepted for insurance through Mar. 31, 1936
	Number	Amount	Number	Amount
Anoka	68	$17,127.86	9	$24,285

Washington	105	40,977.48	3	12,225
Total	5,113	2,109,837.36	384	1,410,181

The funds advanced were made available entirely through private banking and lending institutions. The release of such a large volume of credit has directly stimulated modernization, repair, and construction activity, thereby giving employment to thousands of workers in Minnesota. In addition, through the instrumentality of the Federal Housing Administration, substantial progress has been made in building a sounder and more economical structure of mortgage loans, enabling an increasing number of individuals to own homes of their own.

WORKERS' HOUSING PROJECT

Another project now under consideration by the Federal Housing Administration is the so-called workers' housing project for 500 low-cost dwellings, sponsored by several Minneapolis cooperative and labor organizations, including the Minneapolis Central Labor Union, the City Planning Commission, the Northern States Cooperative League, the Junior Association of Commerce, the Building Trades Council, the Mayor's Housing Committee, and other citizens of Minneapolis interested in constructing a low-cost non-profit housing project for the city of Minneapolis.

We have discussed this project with Mr. Miles L. Colean, Director of the Low Cost Housing Division of the Federal Housing Administration, and many other Government officials and have been given encouragement for the project. At the present time the sponsors of the project are having difficulty in procuring the site and furnishing the sponsor's share of funds. We hope these difficulties can be worked out and that north Minneapolis and the Third Congressional District will have another large housing project in the not distant future.

EMPLOYMENT IN CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY

Often there were times when pressure was needed at Washington to release Federal Housing Administration funds for Minnesota. Mr. Albert O. Larson, president of the Minnesota Association of Architects, who also had charge of the Housing Corporation office in Minnesota, has written me:

As president of the Minnesota Association of Architects I wish to express appreciation for your stand in behalf of the building trades in the support of legislation designed to help the building industry. So far the New Deal has helped this industry but little, and it is our hope that the work of the Housing Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration may proceed effectively and immediately.

Your realization that the construction of better housing, hospitals, and schools not only provides much needed employment but adds to the capital wealth of the country should bring you satisfaction when this program is actually under way.

Your part in this program should bring you loyal support from those who appreciate the importance of building activity to business recovery.

Sincerely,

ALBERT O. LARSON,
President, Minnesota Association of Architects.

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

I voted to create the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and provide it with funds to help save the American home—CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 2584, April 28, 1933.

During the past 2 years we have handled hundreds of Home Owners' Loan cases, and sometimes we were able to save the homes of people who were about to lose them. Following are the number of home loans to citizens of the Third Congressional District:

Refinancing operations completed by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation as of Jan. 2, 1936

TOTAL LOANS CLOSED FOR THE ENTIRE STATE OF MINNESOTA

Number	Amount
20,163	$46,042,849

	Number	Amount
Anoka	280	$483,677

Isanti	57	93,662
Washington	249	420,325
Total	7,743	1,991,847

These loans, representing long-term obligations, were granted at low rates of interest to those who were in urgent need of funds for the protection and preservation of their homes, and who were unable to procure the needed credit through the normal channels. A great majority of the distressed individuals, taking advantage of the assistance offered by this Federal agency, were helped to refinance defaulting mortgages and save their homes from foreclosure.

RESETTLEMENT ADMINISTRATION

Another Government agency through which Federal funds have been obtained for Minnesota and the Third Congressional District is the Resettlement Administration. Following are the amounts received from this source:

Loans and grants made by Rural Rehabilitation Division of the Resettlement Administration as of Apr. 30, 1936

FOR THE STATE OF MINNESOTA

Total	275	124,677.50	2,139	115,226.82	484	34,694.97	274,599.29

This Federal money was distributed throughout the State in an effort to restore farm families, in the destitute and low-income groups, to a self-supporting basis; to reestablish their credit so that loans could be secured from commercial banks and the Farm Credit Administration; to improve their standards of living; and generally to increase their value to the communities as self-respecting citizens. Guidance in carrying on approved farm practices, provided for in the farm-management plans, also helped considerably toward improving the status of rehabilitation clients.

The distress of the recipients of these loans and grants was caused by circumstances beyond their control, such as war, drought, crop failure, and generally depressed agricultural conditions.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

Many Third District farmers have applied for loans from the Farm Credit Administration. Following are the total amounts received from this source:

PRODUCTION CREDIT CORPORATION

Another Farm Credit Administration agency is the Production Credit Corporation. This Corporation made loans totaling $8,497,001 to Minnesota from May 1, 1933, through December 31, 1935. We do not have the separate figures for the Third Congressional District.

A. A. A. PAYMENTS

As a result of participation in A. A. A. contracts, Minnesota and Third District farmers received the following amounts:

GRASSHOPPER-CONTROL APPROPRIATION

These are the Federal agencies which have disbursed funds to Third District and Minnesota farmers. In order for these payments to be made it was necessary for Congress to appropriate funds. Special appropriations have been made by Congress from time to time for farmers. For instance, there were the grasshopper-control funds which had to be appropriated in an emergency. Congress passed a special grasshopper-control bill, appropriating funds for eradication of grasshoppers menacing the crops of Minnesota and other States. This bill had to be rushed through without delay, and cooperation of many Congressmen and Senators was needed. I supported the grasshopper-control appropriation. After the bill was passed I was pleased to receive a letter from Mr. A. G. Ruggles, State entomologist, and Minnesota's representative on the Northwest Grasshopper Control Committee, stating:

DEAR MR. LUNDEEN: I am writing this letter to express the appreciation of myself and all of us here with your efforts to secure the Federal grasshopper appropriation. Although you had so many other matters of importance on hand that at times must have seemed of greater significance, I can assure you that your efforts in behalf of this particular appropriation are very deeply appreciated.

We already have the organization under way in Minnesota, and the passing of the grasshopper bill has given the workers in Montana and the Dakotas heart to carry on the control campaign * * *.

Very truly yours,

NORTHWEST GRASSHOPPER CONTROL COMMITTEE,
By A. G. RUGGLES.

In connection with this and other farm measures, Mr. M. W. Thatcher, legislative representative of the Farmers National Grain Corporation, wrote me:

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I am very grateful for your kind letter of March 27 in which you renew your assurance of support to the Farmers Union and our cooperative grain corporation.

We have always received militant and intelligent support from you, and it is profoundly appreciated. I only wish your constituents understood your high degree of service and the great energy which you consistently devote to the interests of the masses.

Sincerely yours,

M. W. THATCHER,
Farmers National Grain Corporation.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION LOANS

Another Federal agency making loans to Minnesota is the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Following are the amounts loaned to Minnesota and the Third Congressional District by this agency:

C. C. C. CAMPS

As of June 10, 1936, it is estimated that the Emergency Conservation Work will have spent $43,554,000 on C. C. C. camps in Minnesota. Up to April 30, 1936, it is estimated that Minnesota boys had sent home to their dependent relatives approximately $8,877,000.

From the beginning of Emergency Conservation Work through June 30, 1936, it is estimated that 43,297 Minnesota men have been enrolled in the C. C. C., and that approximately 4,993 additional men have held jobs for varying periods of time as camp commanders, camp superintendents, technical men, educational advisers, skilled and unskilled laborers, and so forth. During the month of May 1936 an average of 10,047 enrolled men were working in C. C. C. camps in Minnesota.

HENNEPIN COUNTY C. C. C.

We have C. C. C. Camp SP-8 in Hennepin County. This camp started operations during the summer of 1935 and is still operating. Camp Army-1, Fort Snelling, Minn., started operations in the summer of 1934 and ceased operating about October 1, 1935.

RIVER AND HARBOR PROJECTS

The two most important river and harbor projects affecting the Third Congressional District of Minnesota are the North Minneapolis Harbor and the Red Wing Dam, which will give a 9-foot channel on the St. Croix River to the city of Stillwater. These are both connected with the Mississippi River 9-foot channel project now under construction.

RED WING DAM UNDER CONSTRUCTION

The lock at Red Wing, Minn., is already under construction. It is expected to be completed by about the end of this year, 1936. A sum of $2,496,000 was allotted for the lock in 1935, and recently an additional $3,000,000 has been allotted to complete the dam. On July 31, 1936, the War Department will advertise for bids for construction of the dam.

In my speech of January 18, 1934, on the floor of the House of Representatives I stated:

Dam no. 3 on the Mississippi River, above Red Wing, will give the beautiful city of Stillwater a 9-foot channel to the center of that industrial city. This dam must be constructed, and we mean to see that it is constructed. There is plenty of money available for this and other Minnesota projects, and we demand our full share for the North Star State. We want shipping up the St. Croix River with a 9-foot channel, there being no locks necessary between the third dam mentioned above Red Wing until shipping reaches the city of Stillwater. What a splendid thing this will be for Washington County and Stillwater, the county seat.

Well, we won our fight for Stillwater, Washington and Chisago Counties, in the great, friendly valley of the beautiful St. Croix. Six million dollars was expended among our citizens, and in a few months barges and shipping will move into Bayport, Stillwater, and other Washington and Chisago County points, and harbor facilities will be improved. We aim to have a perfect channel; commerce and prosperity will bring happiness and health to our people.

The St. Croix River Improvement Association, under the leadership of Ira C. King, Edward Thelen, and other citizens of Washington County, have cooperated with us in every way in bringing pressure to bear upon Congress and the War Department at Washington, to the end that the Red Wing Dam is now being constructed.

NORTH MINNEAPOLIS HARBOR

For many years public-spirited organizations of Minneapolis have worked for the construction of a harbor on the Mississippi River at North Minneapolis. This fine harbor will serve Minnesota and the Northwest. On more than one occasion we have had the pleasure of arranging appointments with the War Department engineers for delegations of Minneapolis officials. I will continue my fight for this great Northwest project.

In the recent hearing on the North Minneapolis Harbor before the Board of Engineers at Washington every objection of the engineers was answered by capable representatives of the Minneapolis city government and Minneapolis industry. The War Department engineers are at the present time giving serious consideration to this project. They have requested further data and are making a restudy of the proposal. We are expecting to have their report in the near future. There are no objections from an engineering standpoint. By persistent, organized effort we will obtain a great harbor for Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS NEEDS A HARBOR

The completion of the 9-foot channel to the door of St. Paul will not benefit Minneapolis unless we have a 9-foot channel and adequate harbor facilities in Minneapolis. The present Minneapolis terminal does not provide adequate space even for existing industries. Minneapolis is the metropolis of the Northwest and the greatest railroad center in the Northwest. It is the largest center for storing grain in the United States. It is the greatest milling center in the country. Minneapolis has diversified industries of many kinds. Savings of water transportation are of vital importance to the entire city. The cost of constructing the North Minneapolis Harbor is estimated at around $5,000,000.

STANDARD OHIO LOCKS NEEDED

When the North Minneapolis Harbor is constructed we must demand that standard Ohio locks, 110 by 600 feet, be constructed at St. Anthony Falls. Engineers have stated that the pool above St. Anthony Falls has possibilities of being the finest inland harbor in the United States. We must have adequate shipping facilities to the north limits of Minneapolis, and in time the harbor can be extended to Coon River Dam, north of Minneapolis. A 9-foot channel to Minneapolis means to the north limit of Minneapolis, and we cannot permit any other construction.

SUPERIOR-ST. CROIX CANAL

Twenty-five years ago, when a member of the Minnesota State Legislature, I voted for a resolution authorizing a survey of the proposed Superior-St. Croix Canal, to extend from Lake Superior down the St. Croix River. After the Red Wing Dam is completed, there will be a 9-foot channel to Stillwater, and the Superior-St. Croix Canal will continue this 9-foot channel from Stillwater to Lake Superior. This project deserves the consideration of Washington County residents and the War Department at Washington. All of Minnesota and the Northwest will be made prosperous by the flow of commerce through this trade artery of the future. We need intelligent national planning, and the Superior-St. Croix Canal must hold a prominent place in any great Northwest plan.

LAC QUI PARLE PROJECT

There are many projects outside the Third Congressional District which benefit the entire State of Minnesota. My speech of January 18, 1934—CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, page 894—mentions many of these projects.

The Lac Qui Parle Reservoir project, which is now under construction in southwestern Minnesota, is one that took years to put in operation. Even citizens who would directly benefit by the project at times became discouraged to the extent that they ceased to make an effort for it. In November 1933 supporters of the project were greatly discouraged. On November 19, 1933, I wrote a letter to Mr. Elwood Mills, editor of the Montevideo American, and many other Minnesota editors, as follows:

DEAR MR. MILLS: The Flood Control Committee of Congress is very much interested in the Lac Qui Parle project, and I wish to assure your community, as a member of the Flood Control Committee, that I am entirely at your service and will aid in every possible way the promotion of this great project which means so much to your community and Minnesota.

I have already discussed the matter with the Public Works Administration, and will do so again in the future. Should you send individuals or committees to Washington to present this matter, these gentlemen are welcome to use my office, 1022 New House Office Building, and I will join any group that comes to Washington to put over this very important and commendable enterprise.

Will be pleased to hear from you as to developments in your neighborhood, and any resolutions and message you wish communicated to the Public Works Administration or any other department I will be glad to communicate, and will appreciate a duplicate for my files.

Sincerely yours,

ERNEST LUNDEEN.

I wrote letters to the press in the vicinity of this project, and I appealed to the officials of the various counties to go forward in spite of all, to the end that Minnesota might profit from the construction of the great Lac Qui Parle Reservoir.

In my speech of January 18, 1934, I devoted considerable attention to the Lac Qui Parle project. Through the combined cooperation of Minnesota citizens and public officials at Washington, the Lac Qui Parle project is now under way. It will prevent floods and maintain water levels in Minnesota, where this work is badly needed.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY

The St. Lawrence waterway is a major project of utmost importance to the North Star State. It will bring ocean-going vessels to Superior and Duluth, and connect Minnesota with the great Atlantic. It will furnish an ocean of light and power, which power will be thrown into the superpower system that some day will interlace the entire country.

From the very beginning I have supported and fought for the St. Lawrence waterway. I have joined with any and all organizations supporting the project, and will continue my efforts until we accomplish the digging of this great canal and make possible hydroelectric energy for millions of people. Minnesota produces an abundance of raw materials and finished goods which must be shipped great distances. The St. Lawrence waterway will be one great outlet for the energy and goods of our people.

VETERANS' PROJECTS

During the present session of Congress we passed a bill which will create a national cemetery for the State of Minnesota. Veterans' organizations have for years been working on this project. They secured the cooperation of Senators and Representatives at Washington. Hearings were held by congressional committees, and, as a result of recent legislation, Minnesota will have a national cemetery to be located near the Twin Cities.

Upon sending a copy of the national cemetery bill to National Commander Samuel R. Van Sant, of the Grand Army of the Republic and twice Governor of Minnesota, I received a post card stating:

DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for copy of bill on more cemeteries for ex-soldiers. More are needed. You have always favored legislation for the ex-soldiers. With best wishes,

Cordially yours,

S. R. VAN SANT.

Dr. John E. Soper, chairman of the Minnesota National Cemetery Committee, wrote me on May 26, 1936:

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I wish to take this opportunity of thanking you for your wonderful help in appearing before both committees of Senate and House and making a splendid talk for our bill. It is only by a united action that we can hope to attain its final passage. You have always stood by my buddies when called upon for help, and I trust we can always have your valuable help.

Yours most sincerely,

JOHN E. SOPER,
Chairman, Minnesota National Cemetery Committee.

There are other veterans' projects pending in the Veterans' Administration and the W. P. A. We are endeavoring to obtain additional construction and improvement of facilities at the Veterans' Administration hospital at Fort Snelling.

VETERANS' BONUS

The greatest sum of Federal money going to Minnesota and the Third Congressional District is in the form of adjusted-service certificate payments. The Veterans' Administration informs me that the face value of certificates held by 83,619 World War veterans of Minnesota as of March 31, 1936, is $81,230,321. The amount due on these certificates, as estimated by Congressman WRIGHT PATMAN, is approximately $52,789,520.36. Amounts for the Third Congressional District counties are divided as follows:

Anoka	$381,374.65
Chisago	273,144.19
Hennepin	10,723,327.35
Isanti	250,197.51
Washington	512,634.63
Total	12,140,678.33

FIRST BONUS BILL IN 1919

It was on the Lundeen motion that the bonus bill passed the House on March 12, 1934. The first bonus bill ever presented to Congress was brought to my congressional office in 1919 by representatives of the Private Soldiers and Sailors Legion. I placed the first bonus bill before the Speaker of the House and the Vice President of the United States, who presided over the House and Senate, in 1919.

In this connection I wish to insert a short editorial appearing in a recent issue of the Minneapolis Labor Review:

VETERANS WON'T FORGET LUNDEEN

One man the veterans who are now receiving the bonus will not and should not forget is Farmer-Labor Congressman ERNEST LUNDEEN.

When the enemies of the Patman bill and even the author himself thought it was buried forever in committee, it was LUNDEEN who resurrected it through a petition for action, and who kept hammering until names enough were obtained to compel Congress to act.

So, through the determination of this Farmer-Laborite, himself a veteran of the Spanish-American War, the bonus bill was kept alive and finally passed.

The bonus bill was not a grandstand measure with Congressman LUNDEEN. It was something to be worked for in silence of oblivion as well as when the bands were playing.

Just as he worked and worked until the bonus became a reality, so LUNDEEN will work until his measure for social security for all is enacted into law.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS GIVE COOPERATION

Federal emergency agencies have done a great deal to alleviate distress in Minnesota, and in the Third Congressional District we have been able to secure the cooperation of Government officials in Washington as well as the folks back home. We have been extended every courtesy by Works Progress Administrator Hon. Harold L. Ickes and his staff of workers. They have cooperated with us in the matter of arranging appointments for Minnesota delegations who have come to Washington in the interest of some project. We have also been able to secure from them prompt information and reports on a score of projects. They have given courteous and prompt attention to our requests, whether by letter, telephone, or personal call. They have furnished us with complete, up-to-date information on our Third District projects, and that information has been included in my remarks here.

Captain Radford, in charge of Minnesota's P. W. A. office, has given us like cooperation at all times.

Hon. Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, in spite of his multitude of heavy responsibilities, has always given myself and my office his prompt cooperation and careful attention to Third District projects. He has furnished information and reports whenever requested. Mr. D. W. Beman and other officials under Mr. Hopkins have given us much of their time to prepare the information needed for this report, keeping us informed at all times on Minnesota projects.

I have always found both Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes willing to open their offices for appointments with only a few hours' notice. On numerous occasions we have received personal attention to our more urgent requests for action or information. We also appreciate the complete information recently received on short notice from Minnesota Works Progress Administrator, Hon. Victor Christgau. We wired Mr. Christgau for this information, telling him we must have it by a certain date. He immediately put his office force to work on a Third Congressional District report, and we received it by air mail on the date set.

The same prompt, courteous service was received from Mrs. Anna Dickie Olesen, Minnesota's director for the National Emergency Council, who furnished us by air mail much information concerning funds disbursed through Federal agencies to Minnesota and the Third Congressional District.

TEAMWORK NEEDED

At all times local government bodies, organizations, and other individuals should keep their representatives at Washington informed of projects being started locally, so that these projects can be followed up by the Congressmen and Senators from the very first. No one official and no one organization can accomplish what has been accomplished and what will be accomplished in Minnesota and the Third Congressional District in the way of utilizing the funds made available by Congress to alleviate unemployment, build useful public projects, and carry on educational and cultural activity. Experience and teamwork count.

EXPERIENCE COUNTS

Government at Washington is complicated. There is much red tape to unwind and much to learn about Federal agencies before the proper method of securing action can be learned. An individual who comes to Washington endeavoring to secure action on some project unaided finds himself in a maze of offices. He is passed from one clerk to another and often leaves the city with practically nothing accomplished. Congressmen and Senators and their office forces are here to serve, to advise, and to guide citizens in these matters; to make appointments for them; to secure the information needed.

Congressmen and Senators must study and learn the best ways of securing information and action. This knowledge comes after years of intensive application to the job. I have learned much along this line in dealing with these numerous projects. The more we learn the more effective we become in dealing with these matters. This applies to legislative matters as well as public projects. With this added experience, my office at Washington is now able to serve more effectively than ever before. We welcome inquiries and requests for assistance. I will remain in Washington for several weeks, so that I may give personal attention to these matters.

ORGANIZATION AND PRESSURE NEEDED AT HOME

Whenever we have been able to secure approval of some large Government project or grant, we have had the cooperation not only of Government officials at Washington but of public-spirited, active citizens of Minnesota and the Third District. I cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of cooperation of city, county, and State officials on these matters. The Hennepin County commissioners and the Minneapolis aldermen have held conference after conference with Congressmen, Senators, and other Federal Government officials during the past 3 years.

Congressmen and Senators at Washington act as a continuous moving force behind these projects. Interested citizens at home must make their pressure felt through their local and county officials, and their own letters, wires, committees, and personal calls. Local organizations and local institutions play a great part in bringing to the North Star State her just share of these Federal funds.

PATMAN-ROBINSON ANTI-CHAIN-STORE BILL—PROTECT INDEPENDENT MERCHANTS AND INDEPENDENT BANKERS

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting the Patman-Robinson anti-chain-store bill. The independent merchant and the independent banker must be protected against the growing menace of chains. Chain stores and chain banks transfer local funds to great financial centers. We pour billions of dollars of relief into local communities, and through chain stores these funds are poured back again into financial centers of the East. Losses are suffered not only by the local banker and the local merchant, but also by the whole community.

The people of this country cannot be prosperous and happy if chains are permitted to drain local communities of their wealth. The independent merchant and the independent banker are only pawns in the game. They do not suffer alone from the effects of monopoly. The whole Nation becomes impoverished.

PREVENTS DISCRIMINATION

A few rich, powerful corporations have forced manufacturers to sell goods at a lower price than sold to independent merchants. The purpose of this bill is to prevent price discrimination in favor of these monopolistic corporations. It prohibits, under certain conditions, the payment of brokerage fees to dummy brokers. It prohibits pseudo-advertising allowances. It gives the Federal Trade Commission additional powers in order that discrimination against independent dealers may be prevented. There is nothing in the measure to penalize, shackle, or discourage efficiency or to reward inefficiency. There is nothing in it to fix prices or limit the freedom of price movements in response to changing market conditions. It strengthens existing antitrust laws and preserves competition in interstate commerce. No business institution conducting its business honestly and without the use of unfair trade practices has any reason to fear the anti-chain-store bill.

HUGE SALARIES OF CHAIN-STORE OFFICERS

A few powerful organizations, by reason of their size, have forced manufacturers to give them special prices for the same quantities of goods. With the profit made by unfair trade practices these huge corporations are able to pay their executive officers million-dollar salaries and bonuses. Underpaid employees of these great corporations do not profit from price discriminations. The chains are the worst exploiters of labor that we have. Labor unions know that.

Evidence has been brought out in the committee and on the floor of the House to show that one large corporate chain paid a comparatively few of its officers and directors $1,996,000 a year, paid several of them over $100,000 a year, one of them $180,000, another $140,000, another $52,000, and another $25,000. The same concern received $8,000,000 during the same year in secret rebates and in special discounts that the independent merchants of this country did not receive. They must keep their rebates secret in order that these huge salaries can be paid.

Chain stores undersell independent merchants in order to drive them out of business; then boost their prices again when the independent merchant is destroyed. To make up for losses incurred by underselling, higher prices are charged in areas where the chains already have a monopoly.

GROWING MONOPOLY

In the District of Columbia in 1933 the chains did 96.1 percent of the variety store business, 60.6 percent of the shoe store business, 79.9 percent of the grocery store business, 56.1 percent of the filling station business, and 62.7 percent of the drug store business. In every line of business, there was an increase from 1929 in the percentage done by chain stores, according to the figures of the United States Census Bureau.

At first, variety stores were the principal line of chains. Then came groceries, shoes, drugs, and others. When a chain is successful in one line, it expands into others. The continued growth of chains means absentee ownership of business throughout America. Some of our prominent economists estimate that the present rate of concentration by 1970 all business in this country will be controlled by 200 giant corporations. Already 200 corporations control the financial life of this Nation. These 200 corporations are controlled by a few superfinanciers.

CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH INCREASING

When the United States was first organized as a nation 2 percent of the people owned only 5 percent of the wealth and the other 98 percent owned 95 percent of the wealth. (Farmers' Union Herald, July 1935, quoting Hon. Charles A. Lindbergh, Sr.) Today it is estimated that 2 percent of the people own 80 percent of the wealth, instead of 5 percent at the beginning. We, the people, are beginning to lose the ownership of our country. We must prevent the spread of absentee ownership. Government is instituted among men to protect the weak and restrain the strong. Chain stores have been made strong by price discriminations and other unfair practices. Underpaid clerks receive no advantages from the huge profits of chains.

INDEPENDENT MERCHANTS AND INDEPENDENT BANKERS MUST BE SAVED

I am glad to serve on the steering committee of the Patman-Robinson anti-chain-store bill. I have always maintained that the independent merchant and the independent banker must be protected against the menace of chains.

Chain banks threaten to make character loans to merchants a thing of the past. The independent merchant today must deal with the agent of some huge banking chain. Chain banks have no personal interest in the needs of the local merchant. There is no bond of sympathy there. The independent merchant and the independent banker are facing the same enemy, monopolistic control. Chain monopolies are fast reducing them to the rank of clerk. Labor knows that the chains are notorious exploiters of labor. Labor unions are joining with independent merchants and independent bankers in their fight against monopoly.

I will support any organized effort to curb the chains, and I am glad to see some action taken in Congress to help the corner grocery, the drug store, the small merchant in general, and the independent banker. These men have helped build our communities. They have extended a helping financial hand to deserving debtors. To eliminate them from American life would end a mighty chapter of community building and strike down a sturdy, independent American character.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN BRIDGE COMMISSION

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 262, granting the consent of Congress to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into an agreement amending the agreement between such States consented to by Congress in Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission. A similar House joint resolution was passed a moment ago, and I shall ask that the proceedings by which it was passed be vacated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the States of New York and Vermont to enter into the amendatory agreement executed on April 1, 1936, by the commissioners duly appointed on the part of such States, amending the original agreement entered into by such States for the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission, which original agreement was consented to by Congress by Public Resolution No. 9, Seventieth Congress, approved February 16, 1928, and every part and article of such amendatory agreement is hereby ratified, approved, and confirmed: Provided, That nothing therein contained shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the United States in and over the region which forms the subject of such amendatory agreement; which amendatory agreement is as follows:

Whereas the States of New York and Vermont heretofore and on the 11th day of May 1927, entered into an agreement or compact, duly authorized by law, creating the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission; and

Whereas the legislatures of said States have authorized their respective commissioners to enter into an agreement of compact amending said existing agreement or compact: Now, therefore,

The said States of New York and Vermont do hereby enter into the following agreement, to wit:

The agreement heretofore made between the State of New York and the State of Vermont, pursuant to chapter 321 of the Laws of 1927 of the State of New York, entitled "An act authorizing designated authorities in behalf of the State of New York to enter into an agreement or compact with designated authorities of the State of Vermont for the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission, the establishment of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission, and the defining of the powers and duties of such commission and making an appropriation for such purposes", and no. 139 of the acts of 1927 of the State of Vermont entitled "An act ratifying a proposed agreement or compact between the State of Vermont and the State of New York relating to the creation of the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission and providing for carrying out the provisions of said agreement or compact", as the same was amended by the agreement or compact entered into the 30th day of March 1935, by and under the authority of chapter 201 of the Laws of 1933, as amended by chapter 355, of the Laws of 1935 of the State of New York, and by and under the authority of no. 209 of the acts of the General Assembly of the State of Vermont of 1935, entitled "An act authorizing an agreement or compact between the State of Vermont and the State of New York to amend the existing agreement or compact between said States creating the Lake Champlain Bridge Commission, in relation to the construction of a new bridge across Lake Champlain, the issuance of bonds by said Commission, and providing for the payment of said bonds", approved by the Governor February 27, 1935, as amended by no. 210 of the acts of 1935 of the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, approved by the Governor March 21, 1935, is hereby amended by adding thereto the following articles:

ARTICLE XXXVI

The Lake Champlain Bridge Commission shall have power and is hereby authorized to issue its negotiable bonds in addition to those issued prior to March 1, 1933, for the purpose of refunding its bonds issued before said date: Provided, however, That the aggregate principal amount of such bonds so issued to pay off and refund its bonds issued before said date shall not exceed the aggregate principal amount of the bonds so retired.

ARTICLE XXXVII

Such commission shall have power and is hereby authorized to call for payment and to pay its bonds issued before March 1, 1933, in accordance with the terms under which said bonds were issued and for such purposes to use any funds which it has or shall have in reserves and sinking fund and investments at the time said bonds are called for payment, notwithstanding any provision heretofore set forth in this or any previous compact or agreement.

ARTICLE XXXVIII

The bonds issued under authority of article XXXVI shall be authorized by resolution of such commission and shall bear such date or dates, mature at such time or times, not exceeding 50 years from their respective dates, bear interest at such rate or rates, not exceeding 5 percent per annum payable semiannually, be in such denominations, be in such form, either coupon or registered, carry such registration privileges, be executed in such manner, be payable in such medium of payment, at such place or places, and be subject to such terms of redemption as such resolution or resolutions may provide. Said bonds may be sold at public or private sale for such price or prices as such commission shall determine, provided that the interest cost to maturity of the money received for any issue of said bonds shall not exceed 5 percent per annum.

2. Neither the members of such commission nor any person executing said bonds shall be liable personally on said bonds or be subject to any personal liability or accountability by reason of the issuance thereof.

3. 6. Such commission shall have power out of any funds available therefor to purchase any bonds issued by it at a price not more than the redemption price thereof at the time of such purchase with accrued interest.

ARTICLE XXXIX

Such commission shall have the power to apply to the Congress of the United States or any department of the United States for consent or approval of this compact as amended, but in the absence of such consent by Congress and until the same shall have been secured, this compact, as amended, shall be binding upon the State of New York when ratified by it and the State of Vermont when ratified by it without the consent of Congress to cooperate for the purposes enumerated in this agreement and in the manner herein provided and for all purposes that it legally may be.

In witness whereof, by and under the authority of chapters 73 and 219 of the Laws of 1936, of the State of New York, and by and under the authority of Public Act No. 19 of the acts and resolves passed by the General Assembly of the State of Vermont at the special session 1935-36, approved by the Governor December 14, 1935, we have signed this compact or agreement, in duplicate, this 1st day of April 1936.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this joint recolution is hereby expressly reserved.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the proceedings by which House Joint Resolution 582 was agreed to will be vacated.

There was no objection.

House Joint Resolution 582 was ordered to lie on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE TO PRINT

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, at the request of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the so-called chain-store bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONTEMPT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST DR. TOWNSEND—MY VIEWS—REASON FOR VOTE AGAINST ADOPTION OF RESOLUTION

Mr. WOLVERTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLVERTON. Mr. Speaker, frequently important matters are voted upon in the House without a record vote. In such cases, where the question is decided by voting without a roll call, there is no record that will indicate the manner in which any particular Member of the House has voted.

Realizing that there are a great many interested in the matter of how Members of Congress voted with respect to the resolution holding Dr. Townsend to be in contempt of the House of Representatives for having allegedly refused to testify before a special committee of the House investigating the so-called Townsend plan for old-age pensions, I have deemed it proper to make known my vote upon that occasion and the reason therefor, as no record vote was had.

I voted "no." My reason for having done so was based upon the thought that Dr. Townsend had not been treated fairly nor as considerately as he should have been by the committee when he appeared before them.

I am well aware that the dignity and the orderly procedure of the House requires that individuals, when properly summoned, must submit themselves before the House or any committee authorized and appointed by the House for the investigation of any particular matter. In the case of Dr. Townsend there was no refusal upon his part to appear before the duly authorized committee of the House that had been charged with the duty of investigating the so-called Townsend plan. In fact, he testified before the committee for 2 or more days. During this time he answered questions in a frank and straightforward manner. There was no attempt to hide, conceal, or evade anything that had a direct or indirect bearing upon the subject. The same was equally true of other witnesses who testified before the committee.

After Dr. Townsend had submitted himself for a long time before the committee and had answered innumerable questions addressed to him by committee members and the attorney representing the committee, he asked the privilege of reading into the record a prepared statement that would present in full his views and opinions, the aims and objects sought by the movement of which he is the head, and also information of a general character that would enable the committee to have full, complete, and comprehensive information on the subject. Dr. Townsend was of the opinion that such a plan of presentation would provide a more intelligent view of the entire matter than could be obtained by answering every conceivable question propounded by different members and which often had no relationship to one another. This method of examination produced a disjointed, disconnected, and necessarily incomplete and certainly unsatisfactory presentation.

I am of the opinion that the plan of procedure suggested by Dr. Townsend would have proved much more helpful in gaining accurate and complete knowledge than the course pursued by the committee. The adoption of the suggestion made by Dr. Townsend would not have prevented the committee from conducting a cross-examination after he had completed his prepared statement. Furthermore, the request that was made by Dr. Townsend was no different from that frequently made by witnesses appearing before congressional committees who desire to present a complete statement before interruption. I have never known such a request to be refused by any committee of which I have been a member. Dr. Townsend did not refuse to testify. He had already done so for a long time extending, if I remember correctly, into and possibly beyond a period of 2 days. It was only after having done so and having seen how unsatisfactory the procedure was in obtaining the real information sought that he made his request. It was reasonable from every standpoint. It should have been granted. If the committee had done so, there would have been no such issue as was presented to the House.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that even though there may have been, technically speaking, no legal right for Dr. Townsend to leave the presence of the committee without its consent; yet I am convinced that there was no wrongful intent upon his part in doing so. I can readily understand that he was exasperated at what he considered the unfriendly attitude of the committee and a procedure that prevented a full and intelligent expression of his views, and that he took the course which he did only as a last resort. Again, I repeat that if the committee had granted his request it would not have curtailed its right to question Dr. Townsend after he had completed his statement; and if the committee had done so, the dignity of the committee and of this House would not have been detrimentally affected but, in fact, greatly enhanced.

It was for these reasons, which to me seemed fair and just, when the resolution to hold Dr. Townsend in contempt and authorizing and directing the United States District Attorney for the District of Columbia to institute legal proceedings therefor was brought before the House I voted "no."

PETITION TO DISCHARGE COMMITTEE

Furthermore, I wish to take this means of making known the fact that I signed the petition on the Clerk's desk of the House to discharge the committee of the McGroarty bill (Townsend plan) in order that the same might be brought before the House for consideration and vote.

As a Member of the House I have always been strongly of the opinion that any legislation that has a considerable number of citizens interested in its enactment should be brought upon the floor of the House for decision. To me, it seems fundamentally wrong that a few members of a committee should have the power to withhold action upon important matters of legislation and thereby preclude the membership of the House from the right to record its vote in favor of or against the proposed legislation.

This shall continue to be my course of action. It is based upon a principle of representative government that should find expression in all matters of legislation.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. DRISCOLL, for 2 days, on account of important business.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Department of Commerce, fiscal year 1937, amounting to $50,000 (salaries and expenses, General Committee of the Accident Prevention Conference), which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE, BUREAU OF PLANT INDUSTRY (S. DOC. NO. 256)

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of South Carolina, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Concurrent resolution memorializing Congress, the President of the United States, and the Secretary of Agriculture to liberalize the terms of the National Soil Conservation Act so as to permit farmers in areas wherein drought has prevented germination or growth of their principal money crop until it is too late to produce such crops, even if rain should come, to withdraw a greater percentage of such soil depleting crops from cultivation and to plant same to soil building or soil improving crops as outlined in the terms of said act

Whereas there is now and has been for well-nigh 2 months a serious drought affecting certain States of the Nation, particularly South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia, and portions of Alabama, Florida, and other States so vitally and adversely as to make the growing of certain crops, such as cotton, tobacco, corn, and so forth, almost impossible for the year 1936, due to the lateness of the season; and

Whereas these crops are largely the money crops of the affected areas and vitally influence the business life of the said States and the individuals dependent upon them for sustenance, as well as the economic life of the Nation as a whole; and

Whereas, if some measure of relief is not devised for the farmers of the affected areas, the likelihood is that the relief rolls in these areas will be greatly augmented this fall as a result of money crop failures: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the General Assembly of South Carolina hereby strongly petitions, urges, and recommends to the national Congress, the President of the United States, and the Secretary of Agriculture that the National Soil Conservation Act be so liberalized or amended as to allow a greater percentage of soil depleting crops to be withdrawn from cultivation and planted to soil building and soil improving crops than is now allowable under the said act, such increased percentage of soil depleting crops to be allowed only to farmers in the aforementioned drought areas as may, because of such drought, desire to withdraw a greater acreage of their principal crops than they may now by law retire; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent the President of the United States, the Houses of the National Congress, and the Secretary of Agriculture, as well as to the chairman of the Agriculture Committee of the Senate and of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by the Council of the City of Los Angeles, Calif.; the Board of Aldermen of the City of Louisville, Ky.; and the Council of the City of Schenectady, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Ellenbogen low-cost housing bill, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. CAPPER presented a resolution adopted by the Sheep Creek (Nebr.) union of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, favoring the enactment of the bill (S. 541) to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of advertisements of intoxicating liquors, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

REPRESENTATION IN CONGRESS AND ELECTORAL COLLEGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I present a petition on behalf of residents and organizations of the District of Columbia urging the passage of Senate Joint Resolution 12.

Early in the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress it was my privilege to introduce in the Senate a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 12) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States. This proposed amendment would empower the Congress to grant unto the residents of the District of Columbia voting representation in the Senate and House of Representatives, the vote for President and Vice President, and the same rights to sue and be sued in the courts of the United States as possessed by the citizens of a State.

It was my expectation at that time to press for action this matter of plain American justice, but because of the urgent national issues engaging the attention of Congress the opportunity has been lacking.

These voteless and unrepresented fellow Americans are politically in a most difficult position, completely lacking any participation in the councils of their Nation. Their situation has been particularly distressing during the present Congress. They are absolutely dependent upon Congress for all legislation and for the appropriation of the funds, which are raised in greater part from their own taxation, for the support of the District. This is particularly true at the present time, when there is serious disagreement between the two Houses and there is no adequate remedy which these voteless and unrepresented ones can apply.

It must be remembered that the Congress is both the local and the National Legislature of the District of Columbia, with the very peculiar condition that the District residents are not represented in their own legislature.

These, our fellow Americans of the National Capital, in numbers exceed the population of each of eight States, and during the last fiscal year paid in Federal internal-revenue taxes an amount greater than that paid by each of 23 States, and more than the combined payment of 9 States. In such Federal taxes the per-capita payments of the District exceeded those of 38 States.

Here at the very heart of the Nation are half a million as good Americans as are to be found any place under the Stars and Stripes. They are intelligent, public spirited, loyal, and patriotic, and are always to be found meeting all of the obligations of American citizenship, both in war and in peace. In measuring up to these obligations of citizenship they are excelled by no other American citizens, but when it comes to their possession and enjoyment of vital and fundamental rights they are rated in the same class as the criminal, the idiot, and the lunatic.

These people, being subject to all laws enacted by Congress, are as vitally affected by and interested in all national legislation as are the citizens of the States, yet they are deprived of the right to participate in the enactment of those laws.

Mr. President, the plight of these fellow Americans of the Capital community is, indeed, a sad one, which is clearly violative of the principals expounded in the Declaration of Independence. Were these people satisfied to rest content in this deprivation of their natural-born rights, they would be unworthy of the name American. They realize fully that they suffer a grave injustice through the inaction of their fellow Americans in the States. They know that in fact and in truth they are really the subjects rather than the recognized equals of the other citizens of their country. They know full well that the only possible relief from their anomalous situation is to be found through the constitutional amendment proposed in Senate Joint Resolution 12.

I have the honor to present to the Senate, with a request that it be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, this petition of the citizen organizations of the District of Columbia for the passage of Senate Joint Resolution 12.

This proposal in no way lessens the power of exclusive legislation exercised by Congress over the seat of the Federal Government. It does not, in the least particular, change the present form of the government of the District. It does, however, propose to give to the legal residents of the District of Columbia the right to participate, through their duly elected representatives, in the councils of their National Government. The Senate joint resolution is a just measure deserving favorable action by Congress and ratification by the States.

This petition is truly representative of the people of the District through their principal organized bodies. They thus speak to the Congress through their chief officers with the official authority of the organizations in question. No matter of legislation affecting the District has ever been presented to Congress with a more united front. These organizations represent the plain citizen, the businessman, working people, the veterans, the women, trade, labor, and welfare, and other groups. These local bodies have the support of a growing number of influential national, regional, and State organizations.

I appeal to my colleagues to give this question their attention and study, with a view to granting this boon to our fellow but voteless and unrepresented Americans of the District of Columbia, in the Seventy-fifth Congress.

I ask unanimous consent that the petition be appropriately referred and printed in the RECORD, including the signatures of the 38 officers of the 38 organizations that have signed the petition, together with the accompanying argument.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, with the signatures attached, and the accompanying argument, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Your petitioners, the Citizens' Joint Committee on National Representation for the District of Columbia, and the presidents of its constituent and cooperating organizations, whose names are subscribed below, hereby reaffirm the principles previously announced by the founders of our Republic that "taxation without representation is tyranny"; that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed"; and in order that "government of the people, by the people, and for the people" may become an accomplished fact for all the people of the United States, respectfully represent:

That the one-half million totally disfranchised people of the District of Columbia, who obey national laws, pay more national taxes than many of the States; who oversubscribed every wartime fund—including the Red Cross and all Liberty bond issues; who supplied to the Army and Navy of the United States nearly 18,000 men in the World War—a larger number than any one of seven of the States—and who are now living under an anomalous condition in which they have no voice in the National Government, are entitled to representation in Congress and in the electoral college, with access to the Federal courts upon the same terms as those enjoyed by other citizens of the Republic.

We, therefore, respectfully petition the adoption of Senate Joint Resolution 12 and House Joint Resolution 461, both proposing a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to grant to residents of the District of Columbia representation in House, Senate, and electoral college, with the same rights before the Federal courts as are enjoyed by the residents of the States; and in support of this petition we submit the appended argument:

AMERICANIZE THE WASHINGTONIAN BY GRANT OF VOTING REPRESENTATION IN HOUSE, SENATE, AND ELECTORAL COLLEGE

ARGUMENT

The 486,869 Americans of the District of Columbia (1930 census) constitute the only community in all the expanse of the continental United States—populous, intelligent, public spirited, of adequate resources—which is denied representation in the National Government.

National representation is a distinctive basic right of the American citizen—in a government of the people, by the people, for the people—in a government which roots its justice in consent of the governed—in a representative government which inseparably couples taxation and arms bearing as a soldier with representation.

Since the 486,869 Americans of the District pay national taxes, obey national laws, and go to war in the Nation's defense, they are entitled on American principles to be represented in the National Government, which taxes them, which makes all laws for them, and which sends them to war.

In recognition and reaffirmation of the above-stated American principle we urge most earnestly the approval by Congress of House Joint Resolution No. 461 and Senate Joint Resolution No. 12, both proposing a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to grant representation in House, Senate, and Electoral College to residents of the District of Columbia.

We propose amendment of the Constitution of the United States by inserting at the end of section 9, article IV, the followng words:

"The Congress shall have power to admit to the status of citizens of a State the residents of the District constituting the seat of the Government of the United States created by article I, section 8, for the purpose of representation in the Congress and among the electors of President and Vice President, and for the purpose of suing and being sued in the courts of the United States under the provisions of article III, section 2.

"When the Congress shall exercise this power, the residents of such District shall be entitled to elect one or two Senators, as determined by the Congress, or such other representative in the Senate as Congress may provide for; Representatives in the House according to their numbers as determined by the decennial enumeration; and Presidential electors equal in number to their aggregate representation in the House and Senate, or as Congress may provide.

"The Congress shall provide by law the qualification of voters and the time and manner of choosing the Senator or Senators, the Representative or Representatives, and the electors herein authorized.

"The Congress shall have power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing power."

We urge with confidence the approval by Congress of this amendment for these reasons:

First. Because we ask at this time merely that Congress shall be given a new constitutional power, without committing Congress as to when or how it shall exercise this power. We ask two-thirds of Congress to vote to give a majority of Congress a new power which harmonizes with and equitably rounds out the existing constitutional powers of Congress. No good reason can be assigned why Congress should not unanimously approve this proposal to enlarge on logical, wholesome lines its own powers.

Second. Because Congress, if and when in the future it shall exercise this power, will deservedly bestow upon the Americans of the District the highest privilege, right, and power of American national citizenship, and will relieve the Nation of the shame of un-American, totally nonrepresentative government in the Capital City, under the Nation's exclusive control, without disturbing in the least that exclusive control, without creating a new State, without altering the form of local municipal government, and without the surrender by Congress of a single power in respect to the Capital which it now possesses.

The Constitution as it stands either gives or empowers Congress to give national representation to the State and the Territory, or incipient States; in fact, to the whole area of the Republic except the seat of government, the National Capital. When the pending amendment is ratified the power of Congress to grant national representation will be rounded out and perfected and extended to every part of the Republic.

The District, with its 486,869 Americans, intelligent, public spirited, patriotic, is not merely the only area in the contiguous and continental United States which is without national representation and which does not participate in the National Government. It is also the only area in the whole expanse of the Republic to which Congress cannot extend the right of national representation.

This amendment corrects Congress' lack of power. It does not correct the District's lack of power. It empowers Congress to grant this national representation, and does not direct it or fix any time limitation within which the power must be exercised.

Why should any Congressman vote against giving Congress this new power? The power asked is not to commit a crime or a misdemeanor, or to do an injury, but to extend an equitable American right, and to harmonize and reconcile two great American principles—first, the principle that in our representative Republic, subject to limitations and conditions uniformly applied, all national Americans ought to have the opportunity to participate in the National Government which taxes them, makes laws for them, and sends them and their sons to war; and, second, the principle laid down by the forefathers as a national necessity that the Nation, through Congress, should have exclusive control of the Nation's Capital.

We think we can convince you that the District of today, with its 486,869 Americans, is in resources, population, intelligence, and patriotic Americanism, so well equipped that if Congress had now the power which we ask for it to grant District national representation, it could safely and wisely exercise that power at once.

But assuming that there are some Senators or some Representatives who are not yet convinced, who are not entirely satisfied that in resources and in population the District is today fully fit for national representation, they ought not on that account to vote against our amendment, for it is to be noted that they are not asked in voting for the amendment to declare that the District is now fit for such representation, but only that they empower themselves to grant such representation when in their judgment the District has become thus fitted.

And so we say that to deny or vote against our amendment is to declare not merely that the District is not now fit for representation, but that the defective and delinquent residents of the District will never become thus fitted, though the District multiply its resources and a population of a million or more be collected in it.

To vote for this amendment commits Congress to nothing. To vote against this amendment is a denial of the possibility of District representation, even though the District attain the resources and population and the other requisites of statehood which make it surpass a dozen of the States.

So even those who doubt whether the District will ever be fit for national representation should not vote against this amendment. Give the District a sporting, fighting, American chance at national representation. In our Republic majorities govern. Amend the Constitution so that a majority of Congress may, if it wishes, in the future, when it is convinced of the fitness of the District, give national representation to District residents. Give the people of the seat of government the same possibility of national representation that Hawaii and Alaska now possess.

Why should any Senator or Representative vote against an amendment which merely enlarges an existing power of Congress on equitable and wholesome lines, and which simply empowers Congress to remedy a political inequity whenever, if ever, it is disposed to do so? Why should Congress oppose the grant to itself of any new constitutional power with which those affected are ready to trust it? Surely Congress does not mistrust itself.

We seek national representation as a distinctive basic right of the American citizen—in a government of the people, by the people, for the people—in a government which roots its justice in consent of the governed—in a representative government which inseparably couples taxation and arms-bearing as a soldier with representation.

So far as we 486,869 residents of the District are concerned, the American Government is not a government of all the people by all the people. It is a government of all the people by a part of the people. The 486,869 District residents are among the people who are governed, but not among the people who govern.

The 486,869 Americans of the District do not give their consent to their National Government through elected representatives in accordance with American principles like all other Americans of the continental and contiguous United States.

In respect to the 486,869 Americans of the District, representation is divorced from taxation and soldier service. We bear all the national burdens of citizens of a State in national taxes, in subjection to national laws, and as national soldiers sent to war. In genuine representative government, rights and obligations are inseparably wedded. We meet fully the national obligation. We bear cheerfully our share of the national burden. We are entitled to all vital national rights and privileges.

We are meeting the same national obligation as Americans who are citizens of a State.

In the recent days of exalted Americanism Washingtonians were in the front rank of devoted Americans. They have ever been foremost when Americanism meant loss instead of benefit; when to be Americans meant to place both sacrifice of treasure and blood sacrifice upon the Nation's altar.

Washingtonians have paid their proportion of every national tax, direct or indirect, from the birth of the Nation. The only national taxes that fall directly and in ascertainable amounts upon the Americans are the internal-revenue taxes, including the excise and income taxes. In the fiscal year 1934–35 the District of Columbia contributed to these taxes $12,638,144, exceeding 23 of the States, though it exceeded in population only 8 of them. Its contribution was greater than those of 9 of the States combined.

Washingtonians have risked life and shed their blood in every national war. To preserve the Union the first volunteers came from the Capital, and Washingtonians supplied a greater percentage of troops in excess of their quota than nearly every State in the Union. In the War with Spain they sent to Cuba a fine regiment, exceeding their quota in numbers. The same response was made when the summons to the Mexican border came. At that time the percentage of men of military age enrolled in the Organized Militia was greater in the District than in any State of the Union. Washington sent more soldiers to the border than 22 of the States.

In the World War no other American community responded more enthusiastically and effectively to the call to arms and universal service. They were eager volunteers of money for war through the Red Cross and other agencies and of personal service through enlistment in Army, Navy, National Guard, or Home Defense League. They showed patriotic readiness to bear the burden of conscription, whether in the shape of taxes imposed on lines which caused the District of Columbia (1918–19) to contribute more than any one of 15 of the States and more than 5 of the States combined; or in the shape of universal personal service and the selective draft.

In the war with Germany the District of Columbia has made a record of which the Nation should be proud. The total voluntary enlistments in the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps for the District was 8,314, a number greater than that in 7 States, namely, Nevada, Delaware, Arizona, Wyoming, Vermont, New Mexico, and New Hampshire, and only a trifle less than 3 other States. The number of men inducted into the Army under the first and second registrations was 9,631, making a total of voluntary enlistments and inductions into the service of the Government of 17,945. In other words, the percentage of voluntary enlistments was 46.33 percent of the total inductions into the service.

The proportion which the voluntary enlistments bear to the total number of enlistments and inductions by way of registration was greater for the District of Columbia than for every State of the Union except Rhode Island, Oregon, Washington, California, and Maine, and more than one-third greater than the percentage for the country as a whole.

To every demand of devotion and self-sacrifice made upon Americans, Washington has rendered, is rendering, and will always render full, hearty, and unstinted response.

In notable particulars we are deprived of the rights and privileges of Americans who are citizens of a State.

As a suitor in the courts of the United States the District resident has, the Supreme Court says, a lower standing than an alien.

In relation to national laws the sole function of the District residents is to obey. They take no part in making the laws which they must obey.

In relation to national taxes their sole function is to pay. They have nothing to say, like other taxpayers, concerning the amount and kind of taxes they shall pay and how the tax money shall be spent.

In relation to national war their sole function is to fight in obedience to command. They have no voice, like other Americans, in the councils which determine war or peace. They have no representation in the Government which requires them to fight, bleed, and perhaps to die.

Since the 486,869 Americans of the District pay national taxes, obey national laws, and go to war in the Nation's defense, they are entitled on American principles to be represented in the National Government, which taxes them, which makes all laws for them, and which sends them to war.

The favorable report of the Senate District Committee in 1922 admirably summarizes the characteristics of our proposed amendment when it says:

"Summarizing, we find and report:

"The proposed constitutional amendment does not reduce the power of Congress in respect to the Capital, but adds a new power; it does not propose the admission of the District into the Union as a sovereign State; it does not propose the destruction of the 'ten miles square' provision of the Constitution; it does not lessen in the smallest degree the control by the Nation through Congress of what remains of the 'ten miles square'; it does not disturb in any way the financial relation of Nation and Capital; it is not based upon either the abolition or retention of the half-and-half law; it does not propose or involve changes in the municipal government of the District.

"It plans to bestow upon the 486,869 Americans of the District a distinctive basic right of the American citizen—in a government of the people, by the people, for the people—in a government which roots its justice in consent of the governed—in a representative government which inseparably couples taxation and arms-bearing as a soldier with representation.

"This distinctive American privilege decorates the American with a badge of honor and arms him with power. Its lack slurs the Washingtonian as unfit and defective, and slurs the Nation as in this respect un-American and impotent.

"What the amendment proposes is equitable in itself and compulsory in accordance with American principles and traditions.

"It gives to residents of the District rights and privileges which, under our scheme of government, belong to all who pay national taxes and fight as national soldiers.

"It gives to residents of the District a self-protecting power in the national councils which is denied to the resident of no other community in all of the mainland and contiguous United States from Maine to Texas and from New York to California.

"In the matter of access to the Federal courts it raises District residents from a lower plane than that of aliens to the status of citizens of a State.

"National representation of the District will remove from the Nation the shame of impotency.

"It will proclaim to the world that the great Republic is as devoted to the principles of representative government and as capable of enforcing them as other republics with capitals in nation-controlled districts, like Mexico, Brazil, and Argentina. These nations have not found themselves impotent to give full national representation to the people of their capitals.

"It will proclaim to the world that the people of Washington are as fit to participate in national representative government as the people of Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, and Mexico City. Washington will cease to be the only capital in all the world whose people, slurred as tainted or defective, are unworthy to enjoy the same national representation as that enjoyed by all other cities of the Nation.

"Washington will cease to be the only American community—numerous, intelligent, prosperous, public spirited, and patriotic—in all the expanse of continental and contiguous United States whose fitness to exercise national privileges as well as to bear national burdens is denied.

"National representation will clothe the Washingtonian with a vital American privilege to which he is undeniably in equity entitled, will cleanse him of the stigma and stain of un-Americanism, and, curing his political impotency, will arm him with a certain power.

"It will relieve the Nation of the shame of un-Americanism at its heart and of impotency to cure this evil.

"It will inflict no injury or hardship upon either Nation or Capital to counteract these benefits."

Mr. GLASS. POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC CONDITIONS—ADDRESS BY SENATOR BORAH

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, last evening the senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] delivered over the Columbia Broadcasting System an able, instructive, and statesmanlike address dealing with the current political situation in the country. I ask unanimous consent that his address may be inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen, no extensive contact with the voters of this country is necessary to convince one that the bitter experience through which the American electorate has passed in recent years has left its deep impress upon their hearts and minds. One reaches this conclusion even from a limited opportunity to see them and to hear them and from the deluge of mail coming to one's desk. I feel that this is one contest in which that which the voter thinks he will record by his ballot. There are always some who will be controlled by mere partisan feelings, some by the sinister influence of political machines, but when jobs and homes and farms and families are in the balance we may anticipate with what sincerity of purpose this high duty of the citizen will be discharged. The people are not always right, but it is a comforting fact to those who pin their faith to constitutional government, after debate and time for reflection, as American history amply proves, that, in their final judgment, they are seldom wrong. They have heard much debate. They will hear more. They have had many sad years in which to reflect on all matters pertaining to their interests—to them this election is something more than a mere party contest, and they constitute a tribunal from which there is no appeal. There are some whose conception of party loyalty will probably cause them to doubt my sincerity when I say I want to see the cause of the Republican Party placed before this tribunal in a way best calculated to win its approval. I may be in error as to the best way, but I hope to give ample proof that I believe in that way. No one familiar with the situation, as indicated by the poll books in the different States, can doubt that the party has reached a crisis in its history where "flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive and simplicity itself can no longer be misled."

In speaking of the position of the party with reference to public questions, as I do in the following remarks, it is not my view that its position can be determined, or even fully defined, by the platform alone. In this campaign, extraordinary as it undoubtedly will be in all its phases, the candidates of the respective parties will be the platforms. We shall find, in my opinion, the people will accept no other. It is undoubtedly right and proper and according to old custom to make platforms. But these platforms have no high standing at the present time in the minds of the American people. After all is said and done in this respect, the position of the party and the possibilities of success will be determined by the candidates. The old school of military leaders conceded that Napoleon was winning all the battles, but insisted he was violating all the established rules of military science in doing so. The tactics of the winner of victories were born of his own fertile and restless brain as he maneuvered in sight of the enemy. As seldom before, this campaign will be a campaign of candidates, and the attitude of the party on public questions can only be fully known when both platform and candidates are fully known and understood.

Owing to the situation in Europe, I feel justified in saying something about our foreign policy. This country needs peace; above all things, it needs peace. Without peace we cannot hope to adjust our domestic affairs. The nearest approach to a practical guaranty of peace for the people of this country is to remain wholly aloof from any and all foreign controversies or political commitments. No wiser words ever fell from human lips touching this subject than from those of Thomas Jefferson: "Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none." In spite of all the propaganda manufactured at home or abroad, in spite of all the sophistry of learned, or, rather, I should say, educated men, the policy enunciated in these words is as applicable to world conditions and as vital to the peace and happiness of the American people at the present hour as when the policy was announced. The Republican Party has trifled a long time with the question of surrendering our traditional foreign policy and all to its utter discredit. It has had neither the courage to wholly reject nor to wholly defend this policy—invaluable to the welfare of the American people and indispensable to the perpetuity of American institutions. It was the boast of Roman epicures that they could at one and the same time and in the same vessel roast half the pig and boil the other half. How palatable was the dish we do not know.

But the meal which our political epicures have dished up for the American people on this vital question of our foreign policy, half international and half American, is a mess. It is to be hoped that the position of the party will no longer be left in doubt, and that all schemes, with whatever plausible pretense presented, designed to draw us into foreign controversies and foreign wars, will be put at rest. We want no part in any foreign wars. We want to devote the energy and patriotism of our own people to our own problems at home. I am particular to stress this matter, since we are advised that the League is to be remodeled with a view of inducing the United States to become a member. No league, no legal department of the League, euphoniously called the Court, no subtle, shadowy deception under the name of peace, calculated to involve us in foreign matters, can be anything but detrimental, and even dangerous, to the American people.

Undoubtedly important questions relating to government and the integrity of our Constitution will be debated before the voters during the coming campaign. There are those who seem to feel that these questions will be a determining factor in the coming election. I hope that anything I may say upon this subject will not leave an impression with you that I do not fully appreciate the importance of all questions which relate to the preservation of constitutional government in all its integrity. That subject is one to which I all too readily recur when it is up for consideration. I have expressed myself so often upon this phase of current happenings that even my severest critics understand and sometimes concede the correctness of my view. But we ought not to forget—indeed, we will not be permitted to forget—in this campaign that to the destitute share-cropper of the South, to the jobless millions in the North, to all who still live by help of the Government, to the farmer wrestling with his debts and taxes in the shadow of a threatened diminishing market, to independent business everywhere, to men and women all over the land, in business or in the professions, anxious to know how long they can carry the ever-increasing burdens of government—city, State, and National—to all these, debates over constitutional government and the integrity of the courts may seem strangely remote from their personal problems. No intelligent and effective presentation of the problems of maintaining our free institutions can be presented in this campaign or, in my opinion, at any time unaccompanied by an effective proposal which will relieve the citizen of his personal problems.

In the modern world social and economic problems are inextricably intertwined with all questions of government. If it was ever true in the world, and it has always been true, that economic and political freedom go hand in hand, it is true now. If we are not prepared as a party to strike down monopoly and price fixing and all monopolistic practices, to take this action in order that men may enjoy economic freedom, that purchasing power may be restored to the masses, the answer to the farmer hunting for a market and labor hunting for a job, if we are not prepared to deal with this issue, which means bread and clothing and opportunity to millions, we will get nowhere with the discussion of political liberty or of constitutional government as a campaign issue. These social and economic problems are bound up not only in the open field of endeavor but also in the hearts and minds of the people with the questions of government. It is so elsewhere. It is no different under our own flag.

We have witnessed in our own generation the effect of social unrest and economic distress upon government to an extent that we ought not to be indifferent to the effect of these things at home. The swift, incredible change in Russia, culminating in the Soviet regime; the Fascist coup in Italy, establishing a plutocratic government; the successive revolutions in Germany, a most conservative people, leading at last to Nazi Hitlerism, full of unsolved political riddles; these things cannot be wholly ignored when we are discussing the relation of social questions to government. I am neither prophesying nor defending revolution. I am saying that in the modern world social and economic problems are associated in the popular mind with the wisdom and efficiency of any form of government, republican or autocratic.

If one-quarter of 1 percent of all the corporations in the United States, as they have and do, control one-half of all corporate wealth and fix prices on many of the most essential things in our daily living, then, as to the most vital things in life, the means and standard of living, concentration of economic power is already established, and, if continued, concentration of governmental power to meet the situation will inevitably follow. Will we long, as a people, be able to maintain a situation under a Constitution which declares you may not fix prices on the farm or in the home because of State lines, but private corporate interests may fix prices throughout the entire country regardless of State lines? I mention these things, not to carry forward a discussion which might be supported by a multitude of facts equally applicable but to indicate my belief that underlying any and all questions touching the preservation of constitutional democracy are the economic problems which are now undermining democracy.

When the National Recovery Act, now held unconstitutional, was proposed, it was supported almost by the entire Nation, by 90 percent of the press, by an overwhelming majority of Congress, by the Executive. It is believed now that had this law become permanent it would have wrought fundamental changes in our form of government. Only five men stood in the way of its permanent adoption. Behind this measure at the time—and which alone made it possible—was business chaos, hunger, and threatened starvation. Something had to be done. How near we were to a most fundamental change in our whole constitutional structure! And why were we so near—because of economic and financial conditions that had become intolerable? What brought about these conditions? It was an economic and financial set-up that reduced one-half of our people to the ragged edge of want.

Ten years had gone by since the war. Our national income was over eighty billion. Neither drought nor famine had visited our people. Yet something was basically wrong. Monopolistic greed had robbed millions of a decent living or even an opportunity to make a decent living. All of this reacted upon the most fundamental principles of constitutional government and with practical approval of the entire Nation. No government can indefinitely withstand the attrition or the eternal urge of hunger or economic distress. When we take our constitutional problems to the voters we must be prepared to tell them how we propose to deal with the conditions, and the only conditions, which really imperil constitutional government. With anything like economic justice in this country, this Government and the great principles upon which it rests are not in the slightest danger of fundamental change.

On my desk is a letter from an independent oil company which says: "The Standard Oil and four other companies are out to secure the monopoly of the world's oil production. They have it now in the United States. We who are known as independents are permitted now to follow the oil business with the grace of the Standard Oil Co. and its associates." These oil companies, or some of them, have been extremely active in this preconvention campaign. Their representatives will sit in the convention. Some of us shall be interested to know where they throw their influence. If the Republican Party can find no way to control the economic power which these companies exert upon every person in the land, regardless of State lines, shall we hope to make effective with the voters our argument that State rights under the Constitution must be maintained? These oil companies are now, as private corporations, exerting a power over the private citizen in the respective States which the Constitution has declared the Government does not possess.

The Supreme Court has declared the Federal Government has no power to control production nor any way to affect farm prices on the farm. That, it is declared, is a matter with which the States alone may deal. But five corporations, in no wise hindered by State lines, may, and do, control production and affect farm prices by fixing prices on the implements without which production cannot go forward. What the Government may not do affirmatively, or negatively, may not do for want of power, private corporations are permitted to do regardless of State lines or State rights.

There are no State lines and no State rights and no private rights apparently as against the practices and exploitation of combines and monopolies. As to them this is one vast consolidated empire, the richest prey that human greed ever seized upon. They sweep across State lines, defy State sovereignty, and undermine and destroy the prosperity of the citizen upon which the whole State rests. They shut the door of opportunity to millions and fix the prices that every housewife in the State must pay to maintain the family. The Federal Government cannot send an agent within the State to interfere, either for weal or woe, with the daily affairs of the people, and upon such principle alone can a Federal union endure. But we cannot long maintain a government with 48 States for purposes of government and an empire for purposes of exploitation. If we are to repossess the confidence of the people of this country, we must advise them in no uncertain terms what we are going to do about it, and do it. This Government was made for, and can be adapted only to, free men and free women, men and women with equal opportunities in life, with freedom to choose an avocation, or profession, and pursue it under general, just, and equal laws, and regimentation, private or public, means inevitably a change in the whole structure of government. Our Government will not work under either scheme.

This depression was something more than an economic breakdown. It was also a warning—a warning that an economic set-up which leaves one-half the Nation, in the midst of vast plenty, with the bare necessities of life is compatible neither with sound economics nor free government. What is the party going to do about it? Will it, under the malign influence of organization politics backed by corporate and monopolistic interests, disregard this question or seek to circumvent straight and effective action? Or will it meet it in the open?

The high place in the counsels of the party which corporate and monopolistic interests have long occupied is known to all the world. At one time these influences were challenged by a great Republican leader. They have again been able, however, to bring about a condition where the supreme party problem is this: Can and will the party drive these forces from its councils, disregard their satellites, and break their grip upon its policies and its deeds? If we are in this respect prepared to disregard the supreme interests of the people, it will be vain during the campaign to discuss constitutional questions and the validity of constitutional government or to offer direct insult to the people's understanding by telling them we are not able to protect them. The party has paid dearly for the demoralizing presence of these influences. At the beginning of this great campaign it is enjoying less power in national affairs than at any time in its history. In the name of the people and in the name of the party, the time is ripe for an accounting and a dissolution of the partnership.

Recently I received a letter from a distinguished person, in which he said: "Why keep up this fight against monopoly? You cannot win. Assuming you are right, you cannot succeed. The forces against you are stronger than you have any idea." Let us not be so sure we cannot win. Public opinion can do anything in this country. And public opinion, like the great Mississippi, may have its source among the pebbles.

In 1856, in a speech in Chicago, Abraham Lincoln declared: "Our Government rests in public opinion. Whoever can change public opinion on any subject can change the Government." We can all contribute our part, however small, to forming public opinion. At the time this declaration was made the slave power was in control of the Government, from the bootblack on the steps of the Capitol to the Supreme Court of the United States. Eight years later public opinion had changed the whole situation, and the same slave power was on the brink of ruin. There was a time when the Republican Party was the most aggressive, progressive political organization in the history of party politics. But the insidious, deadening coils of monopolistic and corporate interests drained away its energy, its courage, hindering and embarrassing every effort within the party to meet the pressing problems of social justice, until today it is fighting for its very life. Public opinion can and will right these wrongs. It may not be today or tomorrow, but it is as inevitable as truth and justice. It is my hope that we will within a few days take a decisive step to separate the party from this body of death and reinaugurate, as Lincoln said in the same speech, "the good old central ideas and ideals of the Republic." No one need tell me that this great wrong may not be made to bend to the public will. A great political party, united and determined, can direct the public will to consummate victory.

The preconvention Republican campaign may or may not have determined the strength of the respective candidates for the Presidency. So far as I am individually concerned, that is and has been at all times a secondary proposition. But it has revealed beyond doubt that millions of men and women who have heretofore believed in and supported the party have registered their votes elsewhere, and at this time propose to cast them elsewhere. The combined vote or showing of all the candidates discloses but a remnant of that strength which the party has in previous campaigns displayed. The voters will tell you, and they do tell you, wherever you go throughout the country, to an extent as depressing as it is alarming, that they no longer accept or believe in the political views or the economic theories of the dominating influences of the party. The registration books, even in hitherto Republican strongholds, confirm these private statements. The supreme question is, How to repossess their confidence and to secure their support?

Talk to the farmer, to the independent businessman, to labor, and to the people generally, and they will tell you: "We are not satisfied with this or that, but we are not going back to the old conditions." You may speak of a balanced Budget and they will approve. You may speak of waste, of taxes, and debts, and the manner in which relief is being administered, and to all these things they may seriously object. But they will tell you, "We are not going back."

An effort is being made to convince the people that to vote for the Republican Party does not mean we are going back. But that depends. If the men who have dominated the party in recent years and who are seeking to dominate it still continue to control the party, it is a challenge to the common sense of the voters of the country to tell them we are not going back in case we are given power. We will go back. They do not know anywhere else to go.

Why is this fight being made by Mr. Hilles, Mr. Roraback, Mr. Schorr, and Mr. Brown, and the powerful financial and corporate interests behind them, except for the very purpose of going back? That is their great objective. Has anyone a right to assume that they have changed their political views or policies? On the contrary, we know that they have not. And if they have not, is there a single principle or tenet to be found in their whole political creed to which the average man or woman can pin his or her faith or rest a single hope for the future? The Republican Party has met more than one crisis in its history. It has held more than one convention of tremendous moment. But it has never met a crisis nor held a convention of greater moment than the one which will convene in a few days at Cleveland.

So far as I am personally concerned, there is nothing the convention may do, no action it may take, which will leave its impress upon me 1 hour after it shall have finally closed its doors. I have sought to make this plain from the beginning. But believing as I do, that the suffering of millions of American people during recent years is to be attributed in major part to the remorseless exactions of monopoly, believing as I do it is this which is imperiling our whole vast fabric of free government, its Constitution, and its courts, and the liberty of the people, the attitude of the party on this question, as evidenced by its platform and its candidate, must transcend all matters of a personal nature. I have watched the growth of monopoly and called attention to its effect for many, many years. The evidence is now all about us. We cannot be uninformed as to the situation. What the party does under present conditions, therefore, I must regard as final.

My friends, in conclusion, I venture to say that there is a political creed lying about in the hearts and minds of the American people which some political party will yet gather up and adopt. And when it does it will sweep the country. It is the creed of simple, sincere, loyal Americanism—the Americanism which covets the friendship of all nations, eager for advancement and progress in all things, capable of grasping and applying the highest conceptions of the human mind, and gathering the richest fruits of civilization, but always acting upon and within true and sound American principles. Saddened and tormented by a war which was none of their own, disheartened and impoverished by years of economic distress through no fault of theirs, baffled and confused by the constant narrowing of their rights and privileges, resentful as they see the opportunities of life more and more controlled by great economic power, there is, in my opinion, a rekindling among the people of the old-fashioned faith in American principles and an increasing belief in the American way and in the whole scheme of American life. There lies our great hope.

ARRIVAL OF THE POLISH SHIP "BATORY"—ADDRESS BY SENATOR GUFFEY

Mr. DUFFY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered at Hoboken, N. J., last night by the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] in honor of the arrival of the Polish ship Batory.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

In Lafayette Park, in the center of Washington, stands a beautiful monument erected to the memory of that great Polish soldier, Kosciusko.

Another monument, erected to the memory of Count Pulaski, stands by the principal thoroughfare of this Nation's Capital.

These monuments commemorate the heroic sacrifices which were made by these great men for a nation yet unborn.

They also express the gratitude of that nation, grown great, for their aid in its hour of need.

The supreme sacrifice of Pulaski and the heroic conduct of Kosciusko cemented a friendship between two great peoples that has endured for more than a century and a half.

The end of the Great War saw the rebirth of Poland.

It was fitting, remembering the deeds of Kosciusko and Pulaski, that our wartime President should have contributed to the reunion of the Polish people.

It is equally fitting that this first maritime venture of the new Poland should join the shores of these ancient friends. We celebrate tonight the second step in the achievement of a worthy ambition of this new-old nation.

The arrival of the Pilsudski some months ago and now the Batory express the firm determination of the Polish people to resume an honor place among maritime nations.

This, therefore, is not a new venture on untried waters for our Polish friends.

We commemorate tonight a return to the sea by a people with a long and honored record of achievements in maritime affairs.

Indeed, this vessel, in which we dine tonight, bears the name of a Polish king who inaugurated three centuries of sea experience for his people.

He built a great port upon the Vistula and created a merchant fleet to carry abroad Polish products under the Polish flag.

That period of sea power is just as dear to the memory of the Polish people is as the period of the clipper ships to the memory of every American.

The ambition of the Polish Nation to have an outlet to the sea was therefore not a thing born overnight. It had its roots in memories that were centuries old. It was a part of the nation itself and was re-created with the nation.

When the peace treaty created the Polish Corridor, the will to build a great port and a new merchant fleet was already in existence.

It was an inheritance handed down from generation to generation.

As a result, the port of Gdynia and the Gdynia-American Line became realities with a rapidity that has astonished the world.

This beautiful ship, the Batory, came from a port that had no existence but yesterday.

Already it boasts of great docks and warehouses to handle its commerce, and spacious business buildings and beautiful homes to house its 50,000 inhabitants.

Thousands of ships visit its piers carrying annually over 7,000,000 tons of freight into and out of Poland and its neighbors to the southward.

Some of these vessels fly the American flag and carry thousands of tons of cargo to and from American shores.

We take pride, tonight, in having assisted in the upbuilding of this great new port, both with our ships and our products.

Ever since I was a boy I have had profound respect and admiration for the Polish people and have been in sympathy with their aspirations for their own beloved country.

This feeling on my part arose during my youth when I read my first great historical novel, Thaddeus of Warsaw. The impression I received from reading that story of Polish heroism and patriotism has always remained with me.

Moreover, in my own State of Pennsylvania we number thousands of Polish-American citizens, and I am proud to say that many of these fine people are my personal friends.

They are splendid citizens, and our State of Pennsylvania is proud to have them; and I am sure they join with me in wishing every success to this national venture which we commemorate tonight.

In welcoming the Batory to our shores, we renew old friendships and associations.

At the same time we give expression to new hopes and aspirations both for our friends and for ourselves.

Like the Polish people, we of America have sea traditions of which we are very proud, and we have ambitions for greater achievements in ocean transportation and commerce.

We welcome your Polish vessels as friendly rivals for our trade, and we feel assured our vessels will be welcomed in the same spirit when they seek cargoes in the ports of Poland.

May I wish the management of the Gdynia-American Line the success their great efforts merit, and the officers and crew of the Batory a happy stay in America and a pleasant voyage back to the homeland. May there be many prosperous voyages of this ship and other Polish ships to and from America.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

Mr. McNARY obtained the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 28, line 24, after the word "farmers", it is proposed to insert the words "and livestock growers."

REGULATION OF COMMODITY EXCHANGES

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have the floor, and was simply awaiting the attention of the Chair.

Yesterday on account of the unavoidable absence of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] the unfinished business was temporarily laid aside. In a colloquy with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] I consented to that order on account of the absence of the Senator from South Carolina. I observe he is present this morning. Therefore I think the Senate should dispose of the unfinished business, the commodities exchange bill, and I now ask for the regular order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6772) to amend the Grain Futures Act to prevent and remove obstructions and burdens upon interstate commerce in grains and other commodities by regulating transactions therein on commodity-futures exchanges, to limit or abolish short selling, to curb manipulation, and for other purposes.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, on account of a minor but unpleasant illness, which I had no power to avert, it was impossible for me to be here yesterday, and because of my physical condition I should not be here today; but for fear of the possible attitude of some generous and philanthropic people throughout the country, I was afraid the situation might be misunderstood, and hence I am here.

Mr. President, it was significant that the Senators, both Republican and Democratic, who attended the hearings were in favor of the amendments proposed. Those who were not present, of course, were more or less amenable to certain influences and gave the benefit of the doubt to the insistent and far-flung propaganda. But one's opinion of the truth does not change the truth, and one's opinion of a fact does not change the fact. The amendments which I have offered though have created a situation which menaces what many think is the salvation, in part at least, of the terrible condition in which agriculture finds itself. I do not care to enter upon the role of one endeavoring to defeat what others believe is a good thing, by insisting upon adequate relief for those whom I represent.

"A little knowledge is a dangerous thing." I never appreciated the full force of that old adage until we came to discuss this question. I think "a little knowledge" is the most dangerous thing, particularly in politics and in principle, that enters into the deliberations of this body. There seems to exist in some quarters just enough knowledge of the pending subject to become the element that turns the judgment of men in the most disastrous direction that can be imagined.

Mr. President, it seems to be the custom of this body that no measure shall be passed unless it has the baptism of approval of a department. Oh, no! If we have the "well done" of a department, then all is well.

I deplore the lack of knowledge on the part of those who come from States which produce cotton of the technical and involved manner in which it is marketed. They have no right, unless we abolish the exchanges and write different rules of sale and delivery, to question those of us who have spent a political lifetime in trying to understand the principle involved and to endeavor to secure the enactment of the just and adequate legislation which is needed. That is what I have endeavored to do, and so long as I am here I shall still fight to do it. I know that if my colleagues from the cotton-producing States were to take the same trouble as to cotton as those representing the grain States have taken in relation to grain, we would have had proper and adequate legislation without a word of protest.

Mr. President, I send to the desk a statement prepared by myself which I ask to have read by the clerk, and next a letter from the Department of Agriculture, signed by the Honorable Henry A. Wallace. With the reading of these I am through with this fight for this session, but Senators will take note that I am not through with it beyond this session, nor shall I, until my term of office expires, cease my efforts to secure the enactment of proper legislation on this subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

MAY 29, 1936.

I regret that owing to illness, I was unable to appear yesterday before the Senate to make this statement regarding my position on the cotton amendments, which have been before the Senate since Monday.

After consultation with my colleagues in the Department of Agriculture and the leadership of the Senate, I have after careful consideration decided for several reasons, among which are that the Senate and the Department of Agriculture apparently need additional opportunity to study further cotton legislation and the evidence obtained in the recent cotton investigation before the Senate Agriculture Committee, to withdraw the cotton amendments to H. R. 6772, beginning with section 12, line 14, on page 31. I, however, still maintain that so imperative is the need of this legislation in addition to that which will now be provided in the General Commodity Act, that not only these amendments but the more elaborate and enlarged legislation originally proposed by me to the Committee on Agriculture deserve enactment at this session of Congress. I want at this time to serve notice that at the next session of Congress I propose to introduce the legislation originally presented by me to the Committee on Agriculture.

I do this because I am fully convinced that our cotton exchanges need this legislation and that the General Commodity Act about to be passed does not give it to them. The purpose of this legislation will be to make it as certain as the law possibly can that the cotton futures exchanges of this country whose trading fixes the price received by our cotton farmers for every pound of cotton they grow, will function more freely in their interest than they have in recent years due to their domination by the large interests who have for years manipulated and controlled them to the great injury and detriment of the cotton farmers and the rest of the cotton trade.

E. D. SMITH.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, May 27, 1936.

Hon. E. D. SMITH,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR SMITH: My attention has just been called to the fact that you are considering the withdrawal of your cotton amendments to H. R. 6772, beginning with section 12, line 14, on page 31. The elimination of these controversial issues at this time will probably have the effect of assuring the passage of this important legislation, in which the Department has such a vital interest. We understand that cotton is now included as one of the commodities in section 3 of the bill and I am happy to learn that its inclusion, in the light of your contemplated action, now meets with your approval.

During the interval between this session of the Congress and the convening of the next, the Department will give thorough and sympathetic consideration to testimony developed before your committee as well as to our own experience in the administration of this act as it applies to cotton, should the bill become law.

Should a new bill be introduced at the next session of Congress dealing with any special problems relating to cotton, the Department feels that the study of these matters which it contemplates making in the meantime will place it in a position to be helpful to your committee should its judgment be desired on any such legislation.

Your contemplated action on this matter is deeply appreciated, and I feel that you will thereby render a distinct service to the farmers of the country.

Sincerely yours,

H. A. WALLACE, Secretary.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, just a few words more and I am through. A careful reading of the bill, which now doubtless will become a law, will disclose that there is a provision in it which allows the Secretary of Agriculture, at his discretion, to permit straddles and spreads. Everyone who is familiar with the business knows that if there ever was a joker in a bill that constitutes one.

Another one is the unlimited privilege of so-called legitimate hedging. I said the other day, and I now repeat, that whenever a hedge is made, the person buying the hedge buys the commodity, and the person who sells the hedge may be very often both a broker and a merchant. So there are left in the bill two things that leave it wide open for the monopolists to have their sweet will. Of course, when we come here again, we may be met with the same propaganda which I understand now is directed against leaving cotton in the bill at all.

That is all I have to say.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, am I to understand that the Senator from South Carolina has withdrawn the amendment?

Mr. SMITH. I have.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is unanimous consent required to do that, or may the Senator withdraw it without obtaining unanimous consent?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair inquires of the Senator from South Carolina whether he desires to withdraw others of the amendments which are printed in the bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. I understand it is all one amendment. It starts on page 31.

Mr. SMITH. It is all one amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments relate to the same subject, but they are in different sections of the bill.

Mr. SMITH. Starting on page 31, I withdraw all the remainder of it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, all the amendments on page 31 and following are withdrawn.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, the last section of the bill provides that the effective date of the measure shall be 90 days after its passage and approval. I submit an amendment which I ask to have read with reference to that particular section.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42 it is proposed to strike out lines 10 and 11 and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 18. All provisions of this act authorizing the registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers, the fixing of fees and charges therefor, the promulgation of rules, regulations, and orders, and the holding of hearings precedent to the promulgation of rules, regulations, and orders shall be effective immediately. All other provisions of this act shall take effect 90 days after the enactment of this act.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I think the numbering should be changed in the light of the withdrawal of the amendments by the Senator from South Carolina. I believe the amendment should be section 13.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will correct the numbers of the sections.

Mr. POPE. From the reading of the amendment, I think its purpose is clear. The bill will go into effect 90 days after its enactment. Certain things will have to be done before the 90 days elapse. For instance, forms should be prepared and distributed, certain regulations should be made, and hearings should be had. The amendment merely provides that, prior to the 90 days, those preliminary matters may be attended to, so that when the bill goes into effect the officials may enter upon its administration in a proper way. For instance, 91 days after the bill is enacted, commission merchants and floor brokers will be acting illegally if they transact business without registering. These preliminary matters should be disposed of, so that these persons may be registered and comply with the law immediately upon its going into effect. That is the only purpose of the amendment. I will say that the amendment is requested by the Department, and the reasons I have given are the reasons for offering it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, before the bill is disposed of, I wish briefly to insert in the RECORD some information which I think will be of general interest to the Congress and also to the public.

I have before me a list of traders having open accounts in wheat and corn futures on the Chicago Board of Trade at the close of business September 29, 1934. Neither I nor the Department can vouch in every respect for the accuracy of the list, although it does give a bird's-eye view of the vast amount of business that is done on the Chicago Board of Trade, and gives us a knowledge of the occupations of the different men and women who operate on the board of trade. The list has been taken from the books at the close of business September 29, 1934, for the purpose of giving this kind of a view. No attempt, of course, has been made to identify any trader, but the effort has been to give the nature of the business which the traders themselves give, and which is part of the records of the Chicago Board of Trade.

The date is taken at random. It is believed to be a fair sample. The total number of traders on that day was 18,783. The total number of occupations or professions was 593.

For instance, there were two abstractors. There were 119 accountants and auditors. There were 397 attorneys.

It is interesting to note the list of bankers. There was 1 bank appraiser; there were 9 bank cashiers, 1 bank director, 7 bank employees, 2 bank examiners, 1 bank executive, 2 bank managers, 6 bank officers, 10 bank presidents, 3 bank secretaries, 9 bank vice presidents, and 75 bankers.

There were 431 brokers, 17 butchers, 2 butlers, 1 buttermaker, 124 capitalists, 21 carpenters, 1 cartoonist, 16 chain-store operators and officials, 24 chemists, 1 cigar maker, 5 city employees, 1 clergyman—rabbi—5 clergymen—priests—18 clergymen—unclassified—56 coal dealers, 1,085 commission houses, 186 contractors, and so on.

There were 1,976 farmers, 100 retired farmers, 12 stock farmers, 5 farmers and bankers, 1 farmer who was a county officer, 1 farmer who operated a gin, 1 farmer-physician, 1 farmer-teacher, 1 farmer-undertaker, and 1 farmer in South Africa.

I shall not, of course, attempt to give the entire list.

There were 1,820 grain companies and elevators, 106 grain-elevator officials and employees; as I now remember the list, there were 3 Senators and 1 retired Senator; there were 523 physicians, 15 postal employees, 20 printers, 114 traders unclassified, 1,510 persons whose occupations were not given, 2 waiters, 1 watchman, 11 widows; but I believe there were no orphans. There were 6 writers, 1 employee of the Y. M. C. A., and 2 yardmasters.

Mr. President, I have given only a few of those included in the list. I ask unanimous consent that the entire list be printed as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, before the bill is voted on, I wish to ask a question or two. On page 26 is a provision giving the Secretary of Agriculture the right—

To make and promulgate such rules and regulations as, in the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture, are reasonably necessary to effectuate any of the provisions or to accomplish any of the purposes of this act.

I do not find anywhere in the bill any provision which would make a violation of the rules thus established by the Secretary of Agriculture punishable as a criminal act. Nor am I able to find in the original law any provision which would make the violation of such rules subject to criminal prosecution. Am I correct in assuming that there is no provision which would make the violation of the rules and regulations established by the Secretary a criminal act, or which would attempt to do so? If there is such a provision, I should want to be heard upon the question of whether such latitudinous power should be given to the Secretary. If there is no provision in the bill making a violation of the rules and regulations a crime, I have no objection to the provision; but if there is a provision making it a crime, I should have serious objection to it.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. POPE. In my study of the bill I have not found any penalty provision which to my mind was broad enough to cover those who might violate the rules and regulations promulgated under the section to which the Senator has referred. That is my judgment of the matter.

Mr. BORAH. That is my opinion.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Idaho yield to me?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I may be wrong about this, but I am satisfied that no punishment of fine or imprisonment is provided for violation of the rules and regulations to which the Senator refers, but there are other provisions in the bill which would give the Secretary the power to deprive operators, for instance, of certain privileges, and so forth, and so on. I do not think there is any provision making violation of the rules and regulations a crime.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, that being true, I have no objection to the provision. I would not want to see a penalty attached to the violation of rules and regulations.

Before I take my seat, I desire to ask what commodities are now incorporated in the bill. Does the bill cover wheat, cotton, rice, corn, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, grain sorghums, mill feeds, butter, eggs, and potatoes?

Mr. POPE. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further amendments to be offered, the question is, Shall the amendments be engrossed and the bill be read the third time?

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read the third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. NORRIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON], and in his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). "Here."

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH (when Mr. BONE's name was called). My colleague the senior Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] is necessarily detained from the Senate. On the pending bill he has a pair with the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea." I understand that if the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who is unavoidably absent. I am advised that if he were present he would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], and the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] are detained from the Senate by illness.

I also announce that the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] is detained in a meeting of the Committee on Finance.

I further announce that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE] are unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], who is unavoidably detained. I understand that if present he would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. FRAZIER. My colleague the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] is absent. He is paired on this question with junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "yea", and I understand that if the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE] were present he would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 62, nays 16, as follows:

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate resume consideration of the deficiency appropriation bill.

There being no objection, the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the next amendment.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 24, after the word "farmers", to insert "and livestock growers."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 29, line 4, after the word "appropriation", to strike out the colon and the following proviso:

Provided further, That the lists of employable persons for work in the continental United States under the Works Progress Administration shall not knowingly contain the name of any alien illegally within the limits of the continental United States. It shall be the duty of the Works Progress Administration to make every reasonable effort consistent with prompt employment of the destitute unemployed who are not of the class hereinbefore mentioned to ascertain whether such lists contain the names of any such aliens and where disclosed they shall not be employed, and if employed and their status as such alien is disclosed they shall thereupon be discharged.

And to insert the following:

The President shall cause to be made a survey of the lists of employable persons for work in continental United States provided for by the appropriations made available in this act and shall not knowingly permit to remain upon said lists any alien who is illegally within the limits of the United States or who has not filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, and wherever such a person has been employed he shall be dismissed.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I am opposed to the pending amendment. My opposition is not directed specifically to the amendment on page 29, but is directed against all of title II—Relief and Work Relief. I voted for the emergency relief act of 1935 after it had been recommitted to the committee and after changes had been made in it which I then considered transformed it from a measure attempting to appropriate money to a person into one appropriating money to certain uses to be carried out by an agency, which in this case was the President of the United States. Since that time, events have changed my position relating to that method of relief. As my former vote shows, I favor relief. At the time the former bill was enacted we were under the impression that approximately $2,000,000,000, would be adequate for the first year, and approximately $2,000,000,000 would be adequate for the present year.

Events have shown that that was a fairly good estimate. The Director of the Budget, however, now indicates, as shown by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] yesterday, that these funds are likely to be increased in the future. I refer to RECORD page 8401, quoting from the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], as follows:

The Budget Director says that for the current fiscal year we shall spend $9,915,709,874, less bonus, $2,237,000,000, net for ordinary expenses and for relief $7,678,709,874. For the current fiscal year our deficit will be approximately $6,000,000,000. For the appropriation year starting next July the Federal Government proposes to spend $8,272,554,370, an increase of nearly $600,000,000 over the present year. This means that we shall spend nearly $1,000,000,000 more than in 1935, and $3,000,000,000 more than in 1933; yet conditions today are greatly improved, and the need for relief and governmental expenditures much less than in these previous years.

In view of this experience, I feel that our policy must have been wrong, and that we should change it; and, as I have observed and studied it, I believe that probably the Vandenberg amendment will accomplish the type of change that should be made in the direction of economy and also in the direction of the efficient application of these funds to those for whom they are really appropriated.

Another reason why my position is different today than it was with reference to the emergency relief measure of last year is that there have been made applications of the authority which I think show that we were mistaken in believing that the law was specific in respect to the uses. We are in the position that either our legislation was bad because it was not specific and the uses were not designated, or the administration of the act by the President has been wrong, or the performance under the act has been unlawful.

We have one piece of evidence tending to prove, I think, very clearly that there has been an exercise of power which was not granted by the act of 1935. I believe that the Resettlement Administration is an instrument of power that was not granted by the act and not intended to be comprehended by implication or interpretation of the categories of that act. In order to consider whether the Congress would have granted that authority if it should have entertained the least notion that it was comprehended in the language of the act, I briefly refer to what ought to be as good evidence as can be offered to show what was done in the creation of this instrument of public power, namely, a statement issued by Mr. Tugwell on the birthday anniversary of the establishment of the Resettlement Administration. Mr. Tugwell made this statement as of the date of April 30, 1936, and in it he recounted some of the things that have been done under the Resettlement Administration. He said:

We have loaned this year nearly $100,000,000 to some 300,000 farm families in this way.

Again he said:

Incidentally we have been carrying on a program of debt adjustment for farmers all over the country who have come out of the depression with overwhelming debts contracted when prices were high.

Again he said:

Seventeen thousand farmers have taken advantage of this service and have secured a reduction of $16,000,000 in their debts.

Again he said:

So we made a start, while carrying on our urgent rescue work, in the retirement from farming of those poor lands upon which people are starving, land which is good for trees, for grass, for parks or wildlife, but not for arable agriculture.

We have accepted options on 10,000,000 acres and have finished the buying of 2,000,000. On these areas we are carrying on a reconstruction program. We are taking these lands on which people cannot make a living and making of them parks and playgrounds for city and country people alike. We have planted trees and grass; we have stocked them with game, and made refuges for the Nation's fast disappearing wildlife. We have created new forests, protected streams and set up camps by the wayside.

For the people on them we have provided new opportunities elsewhere. We have bought them out and enabled them to move to better land, or we have made them a loan, or we have placed them on a new farm from which some other farmer was ready to retire.

These are the things we have done during our first year. We have lent a helping hand, by loans or grants, to some 600,000 farmers and their families. We have bought 2,000,000 acres of poor land and optioned 8,000,000 more.

Again Mr. Tugwell said:

We have planned and are building 20,000 new home and work places for the people who were on the land we have purchased. This is the merest fraction of the numbers who would like to be relocated, but it is all we could do with our time and money.

Mr. President, this is the statement of the man who is in charge of this political power created by the President of the United States.

In order that there may be no doubt whatever that this is the responsibility of the President, I call attention to the order creating this public power. Executive Order No. 7027 provides, among other things:

By virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935 (Public Res. No. 11, 74th Cong.), I hereby establish an agency within the Government to be known as the Resettlement Administration, and appoint Rexford G. Tugwell, Under Secretary of Agriculture, as Administrator thereof, to serve without additional compensation.

In another order, no. 7200, the President prescribes the functions and duties of the Resettlement Administration to be performed by the Administrator, as follows:

To administer approved projects involving rural rehabilitation, relief in stricken agricultural areas, and resettlement of destitute or low-income families from rural and urban areas, including the establishment, maintenance, and operation in such connection, of communities in rural and suburban areas.

Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, if I had had any idea that there was to be set up such an instrument of public power as is described by the Executive order and as is illustrated by the birthday speech of Professor Tugwell, I will say that I would not have voted for that measure.

Another reason why the situation is different today than it was when we adopted the relief measure of 1935 is that the status of that emergency relief appropriation act has entirely changed. It has changed before the people of the United States and it has changed before the Congress of the United States. This particular instrument of power came under the consideration of one of our highest courts, a court that is entitled to great consideration, a court whose judgment is often final. Probably in this case the decision will be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, but, until it has been overturned by that greatest of all judicial tribunals, the decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia is the law of this land. A House of the Congress that is considering an appropriation bill so like the bill held to be unconstitutional by that court as to repeat the essential defects in it, should not take an incautious or intemperate position. So far as I am concerned I cannot in conscience take such position.

That court held not merely that the Resettlement Administration set up by the President under the terms of a law which I claim did not justify it, is unconstitutional and in violation of any right we have to grant, but it also held that all and every part of the act of 1935 was so vague, so lacking in specification of use, so lacking in the laying down of any rule to guide the discretion of the Executive, that the whole act is unconstitutional.

I invite attention to but two brief excerpts from the opinion which express those two ideas. On page 11 of Senate Document 242, which contains the opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the case to which I have just referred, appears this statement:

> Turning now to the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 and examining it in the light of the principles laid down in the decisions in the Panama and Schechter cases, it appears that, insofar as this case is concerned, there is a clearly unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.

Let us see what the Court said about the whole act. On page 12 of the same document appears the following, referring to the President:

> He is at liberty to set up agencies and to prescribe such rules of conduct and fix such standards as he may deem proper. There is no criterion to govern his course as to housing and the various other projects enumerated in the act.

That is, all of them.

> The only possible guide or policy laid down by Congress is in the words "in order to provide relief, work relief, and to increase employment by providing for useful projects", which appear at the beginning of the act. But this declaration of purpose is even more general and vague than the declaration of policy rejected in the Panama and Schechter cases. The act is silent as to any determination of facts by the President or by any administrative agency which he may create to carry out any of the projects set forth.

Mr. President, in view of that decision and the great amount and weight of authority cited in the decision, in view of the rationality of it, I feel that, so far as I am concerned, I could not do today, in the case of this particular proposed legislation, what I did with respect to the act of 1935. No matter how great the emergency, no matter how much a bill might appeal to our emotions and our desire to hold out a helping hand to an unfortunate citizen, we should not, and I could not, vote for a measure which has received a denunciation such as that uttered by one of the greatest courts of our land.

But, Mr. President, there is another reason why the bill should not pass; at any rate, title II of the bill. There are changes in it which, if not written in defiance of the judgment of this court, certainly are written without consideration of the reasonableness of the decision and of all the authorities cited in it and which support it.

Perhaps it will be remembered by Senators who are present that during the consideration of the act of 1935 I was interrogated with respect to the term "miscellaneous projects." I refer to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 11, 1935, at page 3342, where the following appears:

> We realize that in the decision of the Supreme Court in the Petroleum Code case the Court said this:
> "When the President is invested with legislative authority as the delegate of Congress in carrying out a declared policy, he necessarily acts under the constitutional restriction applicable to such a delegation."
> And if there are phrases contained in this amendment which leave to discretion the determination of what particular project within a category shall be adopted, we have the assurance so recently given by the Supreme Court that it is the duty of the President to save the people's rights and to make that allocation according to his constitutional obligation. So when we have such a phrase as that which has been inquired about heretofore, namely, "miscellaneous projects," to consider, I must say that, although I would prefer not to have the ambiguity raised by the inclusion of those words in this amendment, the danger of them is not sufficient to cause me to oppose the amendment, because I believe that, under the Constitution, the President must interpret those words according to the generic terms "work relief" and "relief"; and that he must also adhere to the specific terms that are the setting for the words, "miscellaneous projects." "Miscellaneous," according to the Standard Century Dictionary, means "consisting of a mixture, diversified, promiscuous." Those are the primary meanings of that word, and this phrase I interpret to mean—and I had some part in its drafting—miscellaneous projects within the classifications "sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, reforestation, forestation, flood control, and miscellaneous projects." For example, take "prevention of soil erosion." What projects could be comprehended under that term? There could be wind erosion, river erosion, coastal erosion, avulsion, accretion, and all the other phases and aspects of soil erosion, the prevention of which would be comprehended within the term "miscellaneous projects."

Mr. President, the text of the bill before us has been changed in a material particular. Undoubtedly, the statement which I have read from the RECORD of a year ago excited the change which I find in this bill today. Under the original act the language was this—and, by the way, it was covered by the same sublettered paragraph, "(h)":

> Sanitation, prevention of soil erosion, prevention of stream pollution, seacoast erosion, reforestation, forestation, flood control, river and harbor, and miscellaneous projects.

It is a well-known rule of interpretation that when such general terms as "miscellaneous projects" are thrown into a phrase, which specifies certain categories and certain uses without being separated from them by any punctuation, the interpretation of the words "miscellaneous projects" must be governed and absolutely controlled by the category in which the words are used.

What do we find the present bill saying? The same letter "h" is put before the words "miscellaneous projects." There is absolutely nothing to qualify or define or specify the use that is to be made of the amount of $71,250,000 under this grant of legislative authority. Somebody, somewhere along the line, must decide upon the policy of the Government with respect to the expenditure of those seventy-odd million dollars. Somebody, somewhere, must legislate and define the use, or we shall have done a futile thing, and that is, an attempt to appropriate money to a person without any use.

For that reason, and for many others relating to the text of the bill and the changes made in it from the original act, I find myself today in a position where I cannot again vote for the proposal. I desire to make clear to the Senate my position with respect to my vote. I shall oppose title II of the bill, and, if it is not taken from the bill, I shall oppose the entire bill.

Mr. FLETCHER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. POPE in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment which I think is agreeable to the Senator in charge of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 29, line 19, after the word "act", it is proposed to insert a comma and the following:

and a separate list of persons who, because of illness or advanced age, are unemployable.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, we are still considering the committee amendments, and I make the point of order that that is not a committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is an amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. BYRNES. Very well.

Mr. ADAMS. I have no objection to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I ask the chairman of the committee the meaning of the language on page 30, beginning at line 11? What is the significance of that language?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I suggest that if the junior Senator from Georgia is present, he can better explain the provision, because he is the author of that particular language.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, this section is not the pending business.

Mr. COPELAND. This is the matter before the Senate now, is it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the amendment on page 29, which is to strike out part of the original text.

Mr. COPELAND. Then the language to which I have referred is not before the Senate at the moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, as I understand the situation, the pending amendment is to strike out certain language and to insert.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that the Senator from Wisconsin is correct.

Mr. COPELAND. Then, if I may repeat my question, What is the meaning of the provision?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I understand an amendment is to be offered to perfect the language, and I think the question would come better at that time.

Mr. BYRNES. My only reason for making the suggestion was that this section has not been reached, and when it is reached there will be an attempt to amend it in two or three particulars, which may possibly meet the objection of the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. I am glad to hear that.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I was equally apprehensive about this section, and so, with others, I conferred with the author of the amendment, who, I understand, proposes to modify it so as to limit it merely to administrative employees.

Mr. COPELAND. I am glad of that, because otherwise it would mean there would be dumped on local communities thousands of persons, and perhaps with no possibility of taking care of them.

Mr. WAGNER. Exactly.

Mr. COPELAND. In view of the explanation which has been made, I shall not proceed further with the matter.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the War Department could not operate if this section remained in the bill. It would be thoroughly disorganized. But the Senator from Georgia proposes, I believe, to except the War Department from the provisions of the section.

Mr. WAGNER. It would affect transient workers, and if that language were permitted to remain in the bill as it is, Florida would be one of the worst-hit States.

Mr. FLETCHER. I think the entire provision ought to go out.

Mr. COPELAND. I can see that it would be the most inhumane amendment that could possibly be offered, and I am glad to hear that the machinery is operating with the prospect of turning out some better product than this particular amendment.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, I will say that in the meeting of the full committee the amendment was offered, and it was offered for the purpose of applying only to administrative employees. The Senator who offered it is not upon the floor at this time, but he has indicated his entire willingness to agree to a modification expressing clearly the intent, and removing any occasion for the fears the Senator from New York may have with reference to the amendment.

Mr. COPELAND. I am glad to hear that, because otherwise I should have to stand here as long as possible to protest against the language as written.

Mr. BYRNES. I should join with the Senator.

Mr. COPELAND. Very well.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, in my conference with the Senator who offered the original amendment he expressed very clearly the idea that he did not intend to do anything so inhumane as what my colleague has described, throwing transients off any relief roll. He intended merely to provide that the administrative officers in each State should be residents of the particular State.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 113, line 13, before the word "certified", to insert the words "and Private Act No. 192, approved February 14, 1933 (47 Stat., pt. 2, p. 1719),".

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, this amendment proposes to correct an error in the bill. The money has already been provided in the bill, but the reference was incorrect. I talked the matter over with the chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the bill, and I think he is agreeable to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, relief in America has heretofore been localized. The system was very simple. Those members of the community who had funds took care of those who did not, individually or through some central relief agency. Throughout the years these forms of relief have been coordinated, so that the municipal community chest has become an American institution.

There are three general classes of unemployed. There are the habitually unemployed. There are also those willing but unemployable persons who, by reason of physical or mental misfortune, are disbarred, perhaps permanently, from gainful employment. Finally, there are the willing and able who have been forced out of employment but who are anxious to return.

Of these three classes of unemployed, the first two cannot be accommodated in private employment under any system or any form of government. Charity cannot change their situation in the slightest. The one never does, the other cannot, work.

The third class—or the members of it at any particular time—are only temporarily unemployed. It is this class which offers the real relief problem. This group traditionally was taken care of by local means.

In the W. P. A. research monograph, The Transient Unemployed, this localized charity is given its historic background. The report states that it is—

The tradition in this country that each locality is responsible only for the care of its own needy citizens. The tradition is written into the statutes of most of the States, and has governed the poor-relief practices in all of them. The doctrine of local responsibility for relief has a long history reaching back to English poor-relief practices in the sixteenth century, when its avowed intent was to protect each parish from the inroads of "stalwart rogues" and "sturdy beggars."

The merit in a local system of relief is that each community is far better able to separate the wheat from the chaff among its own prospective relief recipients than is the State or Federal Government. To local officials, applicants for relief in a community are people, human beings. To the far-away administrators in Washington they are merely names on a card.

When local relief breaks down through a deficiency in brotherly love, or a nearly bankrupt treasury, something has to come from without. But so long as relief can be handled locally it will be in general applied more efficiently and economically than it ever can be from a distance.

I am only paraphrasing what President Roosevelt said on June 14, 1933, when the Governors and State emergency relief administrators came to Washington to learn how the new $500,000,000 relief money was to be distributed. He said then:

The Emergency Relief Act is an expression of the Federal Government's determination to cooperate with the States and local communities with regard to financing emergency relief work. It means just that. It is essential that the States and local units of government do their fair share. They must not expect the Federal Government to finance more than a reasonable proportion of the total.

The New Deal, therefore, began its relief policy by recognizing the importance of local responsibility and built its first structure on that foundation. In his report of July 1, 1933, Administrator Hopkins described the first relief act in these terms:

Under the terms of the Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, Congress made available $500,000,000 to be expended through the States as a means of cooperating with them in meeting the relief needs of the unemployed. This fund is divided into two parts. The first $250,000,000, under subsection (b) of section 4 of the act referred to, is made available to the States on a matching basis. One dollar from Federal relief funds is provided for each $3 of public moneys from all sources spent in the State during the preceding 3 months. The second $250,000,000, under subsection (c) of section 4, is a discretionary fund from which grants can be made to those States whose relief needs are so great and/or whose financial resources are so depleted that grants must be made without regard to the matching provisions of subsection (b).

Brave attempts may have been made to keep this policy a reality, but, with Federal money available, some States began to rest on their oars. At the end of December 1933, Mr. Hopkins was forced to report:

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has followed the clear intent of the act by financing different proportions of the unemployed relief load in different States. In some States it has supplied only the matching funds provided under section 4 (b). In other States grants have been made from the discretionary fund to meet a temporary failure to act on the part of the State, but it has been insisted that, after the lapse of a reasonable time for the passage of legislation, these States should supply their proper share. In still other States the Federal Government has supplied proportions varying up to the point at which it has paid practically the total cost of unemployment relief.

As soon as the Federal Government began making outright grants to the States, and local sources of relief concurrently began to dry up, policies and practices that had once been determined locally came to be dictated by the Federal administrators.

Any initiative which communities and States might have shown to provide relief for their own unemployed was thwarted by the Federal Government. The Relief Administration in Washington had the money, and where the money is there the power lies also. So far as relief is concerned, the States delivered themselves into the hands of the Federal Government.

All during the year 1933 the share that the States furnished dwindled, particularly that portion which was distinctly local, and the Federal Government was forced to increase its share in proportion.

While the general average for December 1933 showed that local relief sources furnished 18.6 percent of the total, the States 33.2 percent, and the Federal Government 48.2 per cent, a more startling picture is revealed when we look at the record of individual States.

Local relief accounted for only three-tenths percent in South Carolina, seven-tenths percent in Arkansas, and 1 percent in Mississippi, and in those Commonwealths, State relief had broken down entirely. Numbers of other States were unable to furnish any appreciable amount of relief through either local or State agencies. Those States in which the Federal Government furnished more than 90 percent of the relief funds were New Mexico, 92.6 percent; Florida, 92.9 percent; Texas, 94.2 percent; Kentucky, 94.4 percent; Georgia, 95.1 percent; West Virginia, 95.2 percent; Tennessee, 97.1 percent; Alabama, 97.2 percent; Louisiana, 97.8 percent; Mississippi, 99 percent; Arkansas, 99.3 percent; South Carolina, 99.7 percent.

At the other end of the scale we find another story. The Federal Government was providing only 10.5 percent in Connecticut, 13.7 percent in Wyoming, 14.9 percent in Maine, 18.9 percent in Massachusetts, 23.1 percent in New Jersey, and 24.8 percent in Vermont.

I am not charging that the New Deal relief program deliberately demoralized the State relief agencies, but I do contend that such demoralization inevitably followed when the Federal Government turned on its tremendous streams of relief money. That it became impossible to withhold relief funds from States, despite their refusal to appropriate any money themselves, is admitted by Mr. Hopkins.

In his letter to the Senate Committee on Appropriations on May 4, 1935, Mr. Hopkins stated:

It is not the function of the Federal Emergency Relief Administrator to dictate within States to what standards of living they shall adhere. Nevertheless, when in the estimation of the Administrator the State is making inadequate effort to meet its responsibility, he may withdraw Federal funds. This is a threat neither easy to make nor easy to carry out. There are States where the stoppage of Federal funds as a means of forcing officials to do their duty would have no other result than to reduce the people on relief rolls to starvation.

It was that colossus of relief, C. W. A., which spent $900,000,000 in 4 months, which was responsible for the practically complete break-down of local and State relief systems. It was then that the Federal Government took all the unemployed in its fatherly embrace and told them the story of Santa Claus. The Baltimore Sun of January 24, 1934, had this to say about C. W. A.:

The Director now denounces the whole business. He charges waste, graft, and inefficiency. He lays the blame partly upon the politicians, partly upon the businessmen, partly upon our own people. The money will be exhausted February 15. He asks $300,000,000 to continue in a greatly reduced way until May 1. Then he urges abandonment. But at that notion there is an enormous howl. Governors, mayors, and communities violently protest. They say it is impossible for the Government to shift this burden back. To stop in May will be to throw 4,000,000 men and women, with their families, out on the streets to starve. Neither the States nor the cities are in condition to take care of them. They are all about broke. Private charity has dried up as a result of the dole policy. Industry could not possibly absorb any considerable number of these people. They beg for another and more adequate appropriation.

Following the short-lived C. W. A. experiment, the Federal Government was in the relief business to the hilt. Moreover, it could not withdraw, because the States had lumped everything with the Federal Government, and all attempts to distinguish between sources of relief funds were virtually abandoned. During 1934 and the early part of 1935 there was only one recognized source of relief—Washington.

According to many observers, the presence of Santa Claus in Washington was a factor in the success of the present administration at the polls in November 1934. Whether or not it considered that the concentration of activities in the Capital had accomplished its purpose, the New Deal early in 1935 made one of those dazzling reversals of policy which have always characterized it. It suddenly plumped into the laps of State governments the direct-relief problem for 1935–36. This turn-about is described in a recent report of Administrator Hopkins, as follows:

The passage of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 marked a new phase in delineating the responsibility of the Federal Government for the solution of the relief problem. Under the division of responsibility postulated by this act, the Federal Government recognized and assumed the obligation of caring for a large majority of the great group of persons in need as the result of industrial unemployment, while to the State and local governments was left the primary responsibility for the care of other families in need of aid. This latter group represents for the most part unemployable persons and comprises the types of dependency to which local governments have traditionally provided assistance. To assist the State and local governments in meeting the increasing burden of the latter group, provision was made in the Social Security Act for grants-in-aid for two large groups of persons in need—the aged and women with dependent children.

The present proposal to continue W. P. A. envisions the perpetuation of this policy of State relief for unemployables and Federal relief for the able-bodied unemployed.

One of the results of a federally administered work-relief program is its mesmerizing effect on the tax-consciousness of communities and their citizens. When a municipality takes money from its citizens and uses it for public improvements, the citizen is in a good position to judge whether he is getting value for what he is providing. When the citizen sees the mighty Government in Washington shipping out money to his particular bailiwick, he loses all sense of personal liability for the blessings, and believes it is manna from Heaven. This curious deadening of the taxpayers' instinctive caution against unwise and unnecessary expenditure of the public moneys is manifesting itself all over the United States.

We have all of us seen a situation in a community where a public improvement is suggested by a handful of citizens. The community in general immediately condemns it as not worth the cost. Were it a case of local responsibility, the whole matter might stop there. However, with the Government apparently furnishing the funds, the little coterie who first suggested the improvement begins its manipulations. Contractors, architects, and builders' supply houses are given glowing accounts of the new project. The whole company begins to assail local politicians, whose resistance breaks down under the assault, and who then seek the cooperation of those higher up. From hand to hand the "buck" is passed. until the Federal Government is asked to approve the project, allocate the necessary funds, and to begin construction.

Perhaps the Federal administrator also turns down the project as unwarranted. Then comes a manifestation of hurt civic pride. Aroused and stung by the slur, the same citizens who first condemned the project now join in the common wail, "They can't do that to us", and the present administration, being particularly sensitive to partisan political pressure, very likely approves the project on second thought. Thus comes into being something that only a handful wanted at first and for which all will pay over a period of many years.

The relief administrators have always maintained that their made-work projects were important and valuable because they were sponsored by communities which were unable to undertake them themselves. There is evidence that the demand for these projects frequently do not originate with the communities themselves, nor do the communities always consider them desirable.

I have in mind an experience in my own State of New Jersey. The city of Summit is a community of about 15,000 population, with a reputation for managing its own affairs very capably. It has preserved its credit throughout the depression. Recently it successfully floated an issue of $600,000 in bonds at 3¾ percent. As I am informed, there is no pressing need for school construction at the present time. Whenever it feels it should expand in that direction it does so within its own financial set-up.

Sometime ago W. P. A. representatives, so it is reported, offered the School Board of Summit $25,000 of Government funds if the city would provide $75,000. This money was to go for school construction. The school board examined into the matter and declined the offer as being of no advantage to Summit. W. P. A. then raised its offer to $35,000, and this was likewise declined. These offers had been on the basis of loans at 5-percent interest but with 25 percent of the sum as a gift.

The next move on the part of the W. P. A. was to raise the offer to $45,000 and to reduce the interest charge from 5 to 3½ percent. I understand that there was an intimation that the sum offered could be increased if the city of Summit was interested. The city, however, did not want the money and washed its hands of the whole affair.

Upon receipt of the above information, I wrote the mayor of Summit, Hon. J. W. Bancker, as to the city's attitude. In return I have a letter from which I quote:

> The school board and I have been opposed to the Federal plan of offering bait of this kind, which in many cases has been swallowed and debt incurred for plant not really needed. I am opposed to the plan for the further reason that I think nothing should be done to encourage Federal participation in activities that should be entirely a function of local government. The present financial mess has resulted from too many participations of this kind.
> I have stated my position many times locally and have no objection to your using this letter if you so desire.

This is an illustration of the Government practically coercing a community into doing something it believes unmerited.

When Mr. Hopkins set up the C. W. A. in the latter part of 1933, he erected a banquet table for all the parasites in the land. He did not do this deliberately, of course. The strange thing is that he was surprised when the parasites appeared. In February 1934, before a Senate Appropriations Committee, Mr. Hopkins said of C. W. A.:

> I am perfectly frank to say that when this enterprise was started it did not occur to me that people would do this kind of petty chiseling.

This experience with C. W. A. may have chilled somewhat Mr. Hopkins' inherent belief that all men are noble and upright. However, the lesson of that unfortunate experience appears to have been missed, for we find Mr. Hopkins before the Appropriations Committee of the House on April 8 of this year still protesting that he is astounded at manifestations of political manipulations in W. P. A. I give you a portion of his testimony:

> Ever since I first became identified with relief in New York State, I have found that some local politicians attempt to use this relief * * * for political purposes, and attempt to spread the word around the town that in order to get a job "I am the fellow that you have got to come to." Well, that pleases his vanity and his ego, and he will make loose statements like that. But we do not employ our men that way. One of the problems that we have to contend with is that of people who have nothing whatever to do with our administration trying to make the public and the voters believe that they are the people who need to be seen.

This is Mr. Hopkins being extremely naive. Recognizing as he does that relief is being used to further political ends, what does he do? He issues a series of orders to administrators in the field advising them, in effect, that they must not administer relief along political lines. That is about as effective an attack on the problem as the handshake that precedes a boxing match.

In the New York Times of Thursday, April 23, 1936, there appeared an editorial entitled "Proposing a Solution", from which I quote, as follows:

> The Economy League estimates that during the first quarter of last year, before W. P. A. was launched, the cost of the mixed system of work relief and home relief then being directed from Washington by F. E. R. A. amounted to $28.45 a month for each case on the relief rolls. At this rate it would cost $1,707,000,000 annually to carry 5,000,000 cases. If one-half of this sum were met by the States and local governments their share would be $853,500,000. Considered as a lump sum this is substantially more than they spent last year, but in this connection it must be remembered that many States and municipalities contributed so little to a solution of the problem in 1935 that their combined expenditures for relief amounted to less than 10 percent of the total sum spent for this purpose within their borders. It is fair to ask for a larger contribution. And if their contribution amounted to as much as one-half of a total relief bill of $1,707,000,000 the Federal Government would be able to shoulder the remaining half without difficulty. In fact, such a division of costs would automatically bring the Federal Budget closely into balance.
> Apparently the line of least resistance in Washington in dealing with this greatest of all current governmental problems is to muddle along with the present program simply because there appears to be "no alternative to it" and "nothing else to do." But here in this proposal of the National Economy League or some variation of it is an alternative, and a constructive one. It offers a method of decentralizing responsibility which ought not to be centralized in Washington of restoring local authority and of putting relief on a basis which will not risk Federal credit by an apparently endless addition of new billions to the national debt.

Division of responsibility in the administration of employment relief between the States and the Federal Government most certainly makes for inefficiency and waste. It is a duplication of effort. The States must maintain their own force of administrators and relief workers. The Federal Government must continue its large administrative and clerical staffs in Washington and in the field. With bulging bureaus and all the paraphernalia of forms, requisitions, and questionnaires it is no wonder that the Federal relief monster eats up much of the substance intended for the unemployed.

It appears to me that the remedy for all this confusion, duplication, and wastefulness lies in the proposal which the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] makes in his amendment to the pending bill.

Under the provisions of the amendment, the Federal Government becomes the medium through which the larger proportion of relief money becomes available to the States. This is an answer to any argument that many States are unable to find sufficient revenue to furnish adequate relief within their own borders and that the Federal Government, with its greater revenue-raising powers, must be the chief fountain-head of relief funds.

The amendment sets up standards so that a uniform system is brought into being for the distribution of the relief appropriation to the States. It provides an elasticity that would permit payments to States under emergency conditions over and above the regular allocations on a matching basis. It leaves to the States themselves the mechanics of furnishing relief, thereby restoring local initiative and preventing duplication of effort and the inefficiency attendant upon relief centralized in the Federal Government. Under it State sovereignty again has some meaning.

The amendment also specifically prohibits—in fact penalizes—any attempt to make relief a political football.

Since the New Deal began its relief activities with an acknowledgment that in the States themselves lay the proper field for administering relief, and since it has, after a period of absolute centralization, returned to a partial recognition of this principle, it would seem to me logical that the present administration would welcome this amendment.

The New Deal has always taken the position that federally administered relief was to endure only so long as an emergency persisted; that with the return to normal conditions, the Federal Government would step out of the relief picture entirely; that it would step out not only from the administration of relief, but from providing the funds.

Normal conditions, of course, are not yet achieved. It is not yet time for the Federal Government to stop further grants to the States. The amendment of the Senator from Michigan does not propose that this be done. It does, however, provide for "breaking the jump" between centralized Federal relief and the ultimate return of the problem to the States.

To continue federally administered relief is to admit that there has not been sufficient recovery to restore to the States their traditional prerogatives. This premise is one a new dealer could hardly afford to admit, since the present boast of the administration is that recovery is practically at hand.

I intend to support the amendment of the Senator from Michigan, and I urge its adoption by the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 12870) to aid in defraying the expenses for the celebration of the bicentennial of the birth of Patrick Henry to be held at Hanover Courthouse, Va., July 15, 16, and 17, 1936, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, inasmuch as I purpose to ask the Senate to grant me the privilege of having considered at this time a joint resolution now on the calendar, I shall make a brief statement as to the nature of the joint resolution. I refer to Order of Business No. 2119, being the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 525) to enable the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans, and for other purposes.

It will be remembered that this Commission is composed of the President of the United States; on the part of the Senate, of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY], and one HENRY F. ASHURST; on the part of the House of Representatives, of Hon. SOL BLOOM, of New York; Hon. CHARLES F. MCLAUGHLIN, of Nebraska; Hon. FRANK J. G. DORSEY, of Pennsylvania; Hon. GEORGE P. DARROW, of Pennsylvania; and Hon. JOHN TABER, of New York.

In addition there are Presidential Commissioners, who are C. O'Conner Goolrick, of Virginia; Daniel J. Tobin, of Indiana; William Hirth, of Missouri; Maurice E. Harrison, of California; and Harry Augustus Garfield, of Massachusetts.

As passed by the House the joint resolution authorized an expenditure of $200,000 for the purpose of making appropriate arrangements for the celebration. The Senate Committee on the Judiciary reported the joint resolution with an amendment to increase the appropriation to $250,000, but in view of the fact that the time is short and it is necessary to have this authorization become a law so that the appropriation may be included in the deficiency appropriation bill, if I can secure consent to have the joint resolution now considered, I purpose asking that the amendments recommended by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary be rejected and that the joint resolution be passed in the form in which it came from the other House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LOFTIN in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, I tried to follow the historical statement of the Senator. As I understand, the joint resolution authorization has passed the other House?

Mr. ASHURST. It has.

Mr. MCNARY. In an amount of $200,000?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes.

Mr. MCNARY. Then the Senate committee reported the measure with an amendment increasing the amount to $250,000?

Mr. ASHURST. Yes. The Senate committee reported the House joint resolution with an amendment increasing the amount $50,000.

Mr. MCNARY. The Senator now proposes to ask that the amendment be rejected so the joint resolution will carry the original amount provided by the House?

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator has correctly grasped the situation. There is another amendment proposed by the Senate committee, but if I can secure permission for the consideration of the measure, I shall ask the Senate to reject that amendment also, so the House joint resolution may be passed without amendment.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arizona?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 525) to enable the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments, on page 2, line 6, after the word "individuals", to insert the words:

And if the participation of other nations in the commemoration be deemed advisable, to communicate with governments of such nations.

And on page 4, line 13, to strike out "$200,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$250,000", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, established for the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution of the United States by the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution providing for the preparation and completion of plans for a comprehensive observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution of the United States", approved August 23, 1935 (hereinafter referred to as the Commission), is authorized and directed to prepare and publish certain historical and educational material, as specified in the approved plans of the Commission, for distribution to libraries, schools, and organized study groups, as well as to Constitutional State and local commissions and individuals; and if the participation of other nations in the commemoration be deemed advisable, to communicate with governments of such nations.

SEC. 2. (a) The Commission is authorized and directed to (1) prepare and provide for the general distribution of photolithographic copies of a painting of the Signing of the Constitution accepted by the Commission; and (2) prepare reproductions of approved portraits of the signers and the history of the Constitution, and of its time, together with their facsimile signatures and appropriate biographical sketches, for distribution to libraries, schools, organized study groups, Constitution State and local commissions, and other proper sources.

(b) To carry out the provisions of this section, the Commission is authorized to have printing, binding, photolithography, and other work done at establishments other than the Government Printing Office, as provided for in section 12 of the Printing Act, approved January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., title 44, sec. 14), as amended by the act of July 8, 1935 (49 Stat. 475): Provided, That nothing in this act shall preclude the furnishing of the necessary number of copies of all such publications for the use of the Library of Congress, and for international exchange, as required by the United States Code, title 44, sections 139, 139a, and 228.

SEC. 3. The Commission, in order to execute the functions vested in it by law, is authorized to employ, without regard to the civil-service laws, and fix the compensation, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, of a historian and such assistants as may be needed, for stenographic, clerical, and expert services, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere.

SEC. 4. The Commission is authorized to prepare, and provide for the general distribution of, suitable medals and certificates for commemorating the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution.

SEC. 5. In carrying out the provisions of this resolution or any other provision of law relating to the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Constitution, the Commission is authorized to procure advice and assistance from any governmental agency, including the services of technical and other personnel in the executive departments and independent establishments, and to procure advice and assistance from and cooperate with individuals and agencies, public or private. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported by the committee.

The amendments were rejected.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget approved the proposed increase of $50,000 in the measure just passed. I ask that his letter may be incorporated in the RECORD. I am glad, even in a small and modest way, to help bring about a reduction of appropriations.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, May 15, 1936.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR ASHURST: On May 8, 1936, you transmitted to me informally through your secretary a copy of House Joint Resolution 525, "To enable the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans, and for other purposes", and requesting information concerning its relation to the program of the President.

I have taken this matter up with the President, and he has directed me to advise you that the proposed legislation would not be in conflict with his program.

Very truly yours,

D. W. BELL, Acting Director.

INSTRUCTION AND INFORMATION ON CRIME CONTROL

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the bill (S. 4673) to authorize the Attorney General to provide instruction and information on the subject of crime control was introduced by the chairman of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary at the request of the Attorney General of the United States. The bill has been considered by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary and reported favorably unanimously. A misconception as to the purport of the bill prevails on the part of some newspapers. I, therefore, ask that the bill, and the report of the Committee on the Judiciary in favor of the bill, may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the bill and report were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 4673

A bill to authorize the Attorney General to provide instruction and information on the subject of crime control

Be it enacted, etc., That authority is hereby given to the Attorney General of the United States to provide instruction and information in methods of cooperation between the Department of Justice of the United States and the law-enforcement agencies of the several States, the subdivisions and municipalities thereof, and to provide for the collection and dissemination of information on the subject of crime prevention and control and identification.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from the Treasury of the United States such amount as may be necessary to carry out the provisions hereinabove set forth.

[S. Rept. No. 2111, to accompany S. 4673]

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4673) to authorize the Attorney General to provide instruction and information on the subject of crime control, after consideration thereof, report the bill favorably to the Senate with the recommendation that it do pass with the following amendment:

On page 1, line 9, after the words "and control", strike out the period and insert the words "and identification."

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., May 26, 1936.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Supplementing my oral statement to the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday, with reference to S. 4673, permit me briefly to state the principal reasons for the passage of the bill, as follows:

Section 1 of the proposed bill would supply basic and specific authority for the following:

1. The maintenance of the system now in vogue in the Federal Bureau of Investigation in connection with the training of special agents.

2. The maintenance in the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the police school, which has already met with great success, and which should, in my judgment, be supported and strengthened. Under this system, training of the same type and character as that given to our special agents is supplied to carefully selected representatives of various police departments. This is a highly important work, not only of instruction but in furthering our program of cooperation, as it affords intimate contact with police agencies throughout the country and tends to the dissemination of information as to the technique, qualifications, and system approved by the Department of Justice.

3. The maintenance of the civil fingerprint section already established in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and which has become an important adjunct thereto. At the present time there are 130,000 fingerprints in this particular section, and the possibility of valuable work along this line is easily visualized.

4. The maintenance in the Federal Bureau of Prisons of the present system of training guards and other members of its administrative staff, with authority to extend this type of instruction to selected and specially qualified groups.

5. The supplying of instruction and information in methods of coordinating our activities, improving our standards, and in promoting a better understanding between the representatives of the Department of Justice and other law-enforcement agencies.

6. The collection and dissemination of information on the subject of crime prevention and control: This touches not only the highly important matter of the effective cooperation of all law-enforcement agencies—Federal, State, and local—upon which the success of the effort to deal with the crime problem is immediately dependent, but it would enable the Department of Justice, as a clearing house of information, to supply valuable data in connection with the work going on in various parts of our country in the matter of crime prevention. The Department is constantly in receipt of requests for information on this highly important subject, and efforts in this direction have the support of practically all competent authorities on the subject of criminal-law administration.

S. 4673 does not contemplate any reallocation of authority in the Department of Justice, or any radical departure from the existing practices and program. It is a constructive measure designed to support and justify the activities already under way, to make them more effective and to place the Department of Justice in a position to gather and supply information upon all aspects of the crime problem.

Very respectfully yours,

HOMER CUMMINGS, Attorney General.

PROTECTION AGAINST LOSS OF CHECKS IN THE MAILS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 9496, which was read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
May 22, 1936.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 1 to the bill (H. R. 9496) to protect the United States against loss in the delivery through the mails of checks in payment of benefits provided for by laws administered by the Veterans' Administration and concur therein; and

That the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 2 to said bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. There was a conference report and an agreement on House bill 9496. The Senate adopted the conference report, but when it went back to the House the House disagreed to the conference report and agreed to the amendment of the Senate no. 1, but insisted upon its disagreement to Senate amendment no. 2, increasing the salaries of certain Assistant Postmasters General. In order that we may have prompt disposition of the bill, I move that the Senate recede from its amendment no. 2.

The motion was agreed to.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, because of a communication I have just received from the executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors, and because the subject matter is one of very great importance to the cities of the country, I desire to inquire of the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] in charge of the bill, if there is any warrant for the fears expressed by those who represent the organization referred to and whether or not direful consequences will ensue from an amendment which appears in the bill. May I read the statement so the question will be understandable:

In view of the provisions of that portion of the deficiency appropriation bill pertaining to P. W. A. loans and grants, which provision reads as follows:

"Provided, That not more than 30 percent shall be granted on any such project the cost of which is more than $100,000, and in no case shall the grant exceed 45 percent", the United States Conference of Mayors believe it necessary to call to the attention of the United States Senate the following statement of facts:

This proposal alters fundamentally the basis upon which the applications from the major cities of the United States were submitted to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works. Practically all the projects from this group of cities, as indicated in the list submitted to the Senate by P. W. A. Administrator Ickes and printed on pages 377–443 of the Senate hearings, were prepared and filed on the assumption that a 45-percent grant would be authorized. If the proposal now before the Senate is adopted, reducing the amount of the Federal grant from 45 to 30 percent, I am authorized to state on behalf of a substantial number of the major cities having project applications included in the already approved list that these cities will be unable to carry out their responsibilities and thus will be unable to participate in the W. P. A. program.

This inability to proceed on a 30-percent basis arises from the following:

1. In those cases where funds are available for the city share of 55 percent of the project, it is impossible overnight to secure the additional 15 percent required if a Federal grant of only 30 percent is authorized.

2. In those cases where the city share has been predicated on the incurring of debt to the extent of 55 percent of the cost of the project, the existing constitutional, statutory, and charter debt limitation renders it legally impossible to increase the city indebtedness up to 70 percent of the cost of the project.

3. A third group of cities involved are those which have by referendum vote of their citizens approved bond issues for 55 percent of the cost of the project or projects. These referendums have practically all been based on the proposition that a 45-percent grant would be authorized. The reduction of the grant to 30 percent invalidates most of these referendums, thus necessitating new elections. The time required under the various laws to hold new elections completely eliminates any possibility of participation due to the provision in the Senate bill requiring projects to be undertaken immediately.

The Conference of Mayors specifically points out that almost without exception the approved applications before the P. W. A. from the large industrial cities of the country involve amounts over $100,000. It is only in the small towns, villages, and rural areas where the projects consistently run under $100,000. Therefore, if the provision reducing the amount of the grant is adopted, it simply means the shutting out of participation on the part of those metropolitan areas in which the bulk of unemployment exists. The very purpose of the P. W. A. program is thereby defeated.

In view of the above the Members of the Senate should know that in approving the present P. W. A. loan-and-grant provision in the deficiency bill, the important cities in their States which have approved applications included in the list now before the Senate will be unable to carry out any responsibility and will of necessity have to withdraw their applications.

It is submitted:

1. That no logical reason is apparent for discriminating between the various projects on the basis outlined in the bill (namely, those over $100,000 and those under $100,000) in regard to the amount of the grant to be given.

2. It should be made clear that if the 30-percent grant feature is retained, the great majority of applications from the large industrial cities having the bulk of unemployment will have to be withdrawn, thus defeating the goal of the P. W. A. program.

The Conference of Mayors believes once this situation is brought to the attention of the Senate, the changing of rules in the middle of the game, at a time when the cities do not even have an opportunity, due to legal and financial limitations, of learning the new rules, will not be authorized. The P. W. A. program, waiting to go into operation only for the release of further appropriations, can only be preserved and carried out if the basis upon which the applications were filed, namely, a 45-percent Federal grant, is continued.

PAUL V. BETTERS,
Executive Director,
United States Conference of Mayors.

WASHINGTON, May 29, 1936.

I inquire of the Senator from Colorado if these results will follow the amendment which is referred to by the mayors of the larger cities of the country?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I think the gentlemen who constitute the conference of mayors have overlooked the actual situation.

The bill which came before this body from the House did not contain a single cent for public works. What we are putting in the bill is an additional grant. We are giving an opportunity which did not exist under the House bill. That is, the mayors are complaining of an increased beneficence on the part of the Government. There are no limitations whatsoever in the bill in reference to the W. P. A. appropriation. There is an appropriation of $1,425,000,000 which is turned over to the President. If he sees fit, with that money he may make 100-percent grants to these cities. There is no limitation. In the bill itself is a specification for buildings and other work relief.

The conference of mayors refer to the list of approved projects. They refer to the votes they have taken. All those approved projects, all those votes, were with reference to projects to be carried out under the $4,800,000,000 appropriation, which we are not now considering. We are providing an additional appropriation. If the mayors have a complaint, it is because they did not come within the original appropriation. The 45-percent grant which they are looking for was the rule adopted by the Administrator of Public Works in the distribution of the public-works funds.

It is not intended in this bill, as the Senate committee seeks to amend it, to tie the hands of the Administrator to this list. This list of projects—and I speak a little frankly—was gathered up hurriedly. It was gathered up at the time the $4,800,000,000 act was under consideration, to impress upon the Congress the necessity for making that great, and in my judgment that unwarranted, appropriation. It was not a carefully considered list. Some $800,000,000 have been approved; votes have been taken; but we have here an increase over the bill as passed by the House which will amount to $300,000,000.

The purpose of the committee in providing what is the equivalent of a new appropriation for this purpose was to make the money go as far as possible. If we permit 45-percent grants, we shall not put as many people to work as if we make 30-percent grants. In other words, take a $100,000 project: If the Government gives 45 percent, the money will run out sooner than if it makes 30-percent grants; and the thing we have in mind in this bill is the employment of those in need. If we take off this limitation, we shall simply reduce the efficiacy of the appropriation.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON. Permit a word in response, just for a moment.

I thank the Senator from Colorado for his explanation, but I am unable to follow him in what he says about adding employment; for, after all, the big problem that presents itself to us today is employment. If up to this time 45-percent grants have been the rule; if the bill changes the 45-percent grant to a 30-percent grant; if it be true that elections have been held in the large cities of the country upon the theory of a 45-percent grant, then it seems to me that we are disrupting the trend of the endeavor to reemploy and, instead of giving more opportunity for employment, we are not only destroying what now has been entered upon or endeavored to be entered upon, the preliminary stages of which have been complied with, but we are making it more and more impossible for the larger cities to contribute the amount that is thus demanded, and thereby we increase unemployment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Senator from California speaks of changing the rule. When the original act was passed appropriating $3,300,000,000, all of which was put in the hands of the then emergency administrator, the 30-percent grant was the rule that was applied in all the projects at that time. The 45-percent grant has been applied only in a much smaller amount, and that is in the allocation of some $400,000,000 or less out of the $4,800,000,000. That is, we are going back to the rule which was applied in the larger appropriation for public works, and which, in my judgment, operated satisfactorily.

So far as large cities, small cities, and rural districts are concerned, I am unable to see why there is or can be a necessity for discrimination. We are doing this, I will say to the Senator, and I know he will agree with that, because he thinks these matters should all be on the larger-grant basis: We are limiting the construction of projects to those that can be completed within 1 year. Necessarily, that limits construction to smaller projects. It was the hope of the committee to multiply the number of projects by putting a limit upon the cost involved in their construction; so if the Senator has in mind great city constructions, the type of constructions where bond issues will be authorized, they are not feasible under the 1-year limitation.

Mr. JOHNSON. That is all the more reason, I think, for the elimination of the 1-year limitation; but it does not answer the problem we are just considering.

Suppose, as I understand the Senator—and, of course, he knows the statistics; I do not—$400,000,000 of projects upon a 45-percent basis have been agreed upon. Some of those are now in process of construction. Some of them have passed merely the preliminary stages. If the bill changes the amount of grant that is accorded to those projects, it seems to me only confusion can result.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, there is no change in the grant to any project which is under construction. The bill does not apply to any project that is under construction. It applies only to new projects to be authorized. For all the projects that have been authorized, the money is now allocated, obligated, set aside. This provision is merely dealing with projects to be authorized after this money is made available.

Mr. JOHNSON. Oh, yes; but there are many projects where the construction perhaps has not been undertaken nor the contracts made, but where elections have been held upon the theory, and the theory of the Government itself, that the grant was to be 45 percent. Now it is proposed to change it to 30 percent, and it makes confusion; it does not tend to diminish unemployment; and it seems to me it cannot accomplish any beneficial results.

Mr. ADAMS. If I may add one word, the Senator says the 30-percent basis does not increase employment. I think the mathematics of the situation is against him. If the Government gives $300,000 upon condition that $700,000 be provided by a city for a waterworks, there is a million dollars which will be expended, which will furnish employment. There will be left for another employment $150,000 which would not be available if the grant were 45 percent. In other words, we are spreading the money further, and in my judgment more persons will be employed.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BULKLEY. That conclusion is based on the assumption that the municipality can put up 70 percent. Suppose the municipality is so hard up, or so bound by debt limitations, that it cannot put up 70 percent. Then, in order to obtain the employment, the Government will have to have recourse to the W. P. A., and will be putting up 100 percent. That is the very suggestion the Senator himself made, that the W. P. A. is available for these projects.

I contend, with the Senator from California, that employment will be increased by a 45-percent grant. Furthermore, there is no doubt that in the form in which this provision appears it is a discrimination against the larger projects in the larger cities. The larger cities are the very places where unemployment is most distressful, and why there should be a discrimination against the larger cities is something that I do not think the Senator has explained.

Mr. ADAMS. I will say to the Senator that approximately one and a half billion dollars is available to meet unemployment wherever it exists. Necessarily the larger cities, where greater unemployment exists, will have the larger share of that amount. In this instance, a comparatively small amount is involved. It is an effort to encourage a different type of public-works improvement, a type which I think is less available to the great cities than to the smaller cities and the rural communities, where it is a question whether it would be better to have $600,000,000 for construction or a billion dollars for construction.

Mr. BULKLEY. We are asking to have it made available on terms that the cities can meet. I am sorry this matter has come up in such a hurry that I have not the specific facts; but I know in my own city there are embarrassments due to debt limitations, that there is difficulty in going up to these high percentages, and that we are very much distressed right now and obliged to keep a large number of otherwise unemployed persons on the W. P. A. rolls, which cost the Government 100 percent.

Mr. ADAMS. Of course, I cannot understand that a donation from the Government would be an embarrassment.

The question is, How much shall the Government donate? Shall it donate one amount or another? It seems to me the donees ought to be a little more grateful and say, "Well, now, 30 percent will be helpful, though, of course, we should like more." I think, however, the Treasury has an interest in the matter; I think the unemployed of the country as a whole have an interest in the matter; and I think those interests will be subserved by imposing these limitations. If I were given my own choice in the matter, I should put the 30-percent limitation on all the projects.

Mr. JOHNSON. Why do you not?

Mr. ADAMS. I could not get votes enough in the committee, I will say.

Mr. JOHNSON. That is a good reason. I will not quarrel with the mathematics of the Senator from Colorado. I do not feel that I am able to cope with him in mathematics. The only thing in which I was "cinched" when I was in college was higher mathematics.

Mr. ADAMS. I doubt that very much, because, as I have observed the Senator on the floor of the Senate, nobody has dealt more in higher mathematics than has the Senator from California.

Mr. JOHNSON. Is it not obvious to the Senator that a policy has been started by the Government and that policy has been followed? The Senator says there are $400,000,000 of projects under that policy in connection with which communities which are hard put to it financially today have been able to pass, by the votes of their people, laws providing for participation in a policy of the Government. I am not discussing that now, and I am not saying whether grants of one sort or grants at all should be accorded, but after these hard-put communities have voted upon the subject suddenly they are told, "Your vote is null. We will destroy its effect entirely. You must begin again. You must attempt again to do the thing you sought to do under the aegis of the Government. You must begin to do it all over."

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, will the Senator from California inform the Senate how many such projects are involved in this matter?

Mr. JOHNSON. I do not know.

Mr. GLASS. Do the mayors tell us how many?

Mr. JOHNSON. No; the communication I have received, which came only today, does not say how many.

Mr. GLASS. Do they know how many there are?

Mr. JOHNSON. Please do not ask me; I do not know. I was calling attention to a matter which was brought to my notice only today, and I was seeking information about it. I assume they do know, and, with time sufficient to ascertain, undoubtedly the information could be furnished to the Senator and to the Senate. I have no doubt on that score.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that the information as to the various projects which were submitted under the former appropriations is in the record. The point I have been unable to make the Senator understand is that we are starting something new. This is a new bill; it is not part of that which has gone before. The projects which have been voted, the bond issues which have been authorized, have no relationship to the appropriation which is now under consideration.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, may I ask what the pending amendment is?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the pending amendment.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I suggest that the amendment on page 29, down to line 24, be agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. My inquiry is, What is the pending amendment?

Mr. FLETCHER. That is the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment now pending.

The CHIEF CLERK. The pending amendment is, on page 29, line 4, after the word "appropriation", to strike out down to and including line 15, and to insert the amendment of the committee on page 29, beginning with line 16 and ending with line 23, as amended.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, one amendment to the amendment has been offered and agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the clerk stated that the question was on the amendment of the committee "as amended." How has it been amended?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment which has been offered and agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] offered an amendment, on page 29, line 19, after the word "act", to insert the words "and a separate list of persons who, because of illness or advanced age, are unemployable."

Mr. FLETCHER. Why can we not agree to the amendment down to line 24?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I do not know that I am going to agree to that amendment to the amendment. I did not hear the amendment offered.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON. I wish to apologize to the Senator, if he is interested in the pending amendment, for breaking in in the fashion in which I interrupted. I called the attention of the Senator from Colorado to the particular matter which had come to me, and asked him if I might interrogate him upon it. I did not desire to disturb the progress of the bill.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, in a very few moments we will reach the section in which the Senator is interested, and then we might act on it, if an amendment is to be offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I should like to ask what amendment to the amendment has been agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania will be stated again.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 29, line 19, after the word "act", the Senator from Pennsylvania proposed to insert the words "and a separate list of persons who, because of illness or advanced age, are unemployable."

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I was not in the Chamber at the time that amendment was offered, and I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment to the amendment was agreed to. It has no relevancy to this particular section, so far as I can see. The amendment reported by the committee provides for a survery of unemployable persons and restricts the list to persons who are citizens of this country, or, if aliens, they must have filed declaration of intention to become citizens, and they must not have illegally entered the country.

As I understand the amendment as it has been read by the clerk amends that section so as to provide that a list of persons who are sick or of advanced age be made, and the rest of the section would provide that from such a list of persons who are sick or of advanced age should be stricken those who are aliens. It does not seem to me that that would make good sense at all.

Mr. McNARY obtained the floor.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me with particular reference to the matter before us?

Mr. McNARY. Not for the moment. I am advised that the senior Senator from Pennsylvania offered the amendment to the amendment which was adopted earlier in the day.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I understood that; and that is why I have moved to reconsider the vote.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator from Pennsylvania is now absent from the Chamber, and I do not care to have any proceedings taken regarding the amendment during his absence.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I shall be glad to withdraw my motion temporarily, until the Senator from Pennsylvania returns, but I do not want the amendment to be adopted in the form in which it is at this time.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator will have 2 days in which to move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BYRNES. I will ask that the amendment be passed over until the Senator from Pennsylvania returns to the Chamber.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, prior to the departure of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] he talked with me in regard to this particular amendment to the amendment of the committee, at which time I understood from him that the acceptance of his amendment to the amendment of the committee was agreeable. As a matter of fact, if I do not misinterpret the construction of the words the Senator has added, they merely provide that when any person is disqualified for work under the amendment there shall be made for future reference a list of those who are not employable by reason of illness or old age or other disqualifications. That was the explanation given to me of the Davis amendment.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, that is simply asking for a factual statement, but it does not prevent the elimination of those people from the relief rolls.

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator will take the language and read it, he will find that it has no reference to this particular section. I may be in hearty accord with the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania, but it certainly seems to me that it has no relevancy to the language of this particular section. However, I shall ask that no action be taken until the Senator from Pennsylvania returns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is that the amendment, as amended, be passed over for the time being?

Mr. BYRNES. That is my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered, and the clerk will state the next amendment passed over.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 29, after line 23, to insert the following:

No Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted with funds provided for in this appropriation unless and until an amount sufficient for its completion has been allocated and irrevocably set aside for its completion, and the President is hereby authorized to restore to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works out of the funds hereby appropriated any sums which after December 28, 1934, were, by order of the President, impounded or transferred to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration from appropriations heretofore made available to such Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works and allocated by such Administration to public-works projects.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the committee amendment. I had prepared the amendment so that it should come after line 10, on page 30, understanding that the paragraph to which reference is now being made was a single amendment. I offer the amendment to the amendment, and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 30, after line 10, it is proposed to insert the following:

That the President of the United States is authorized to appoint two boards of three members each, one to be known as the Florida Canal Board and the other as the Passamaquoddy Board, the members of which shall be qualified members of the engineering profession who are not employees of the United States, or of the State of Florida, or of the State of Maine, and who have in no manner been connected with or have any financial interest, present or prospective, in what are known as the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal project, Florida, and the Passamaquoddy tidal power project, Maine.

The Florida Canal Board shall review the reports heretofore rendered in connection with the project for a sea-level ship canal across the State of Florida, with particular reference to the questions of (a) whether the construction of such a canal across the State of Florida between the St. Johns River and the Withlacoochee River would create any consequential or irremediable disturbance of the ground water levels of the State of Florida; (b) the estimated costs of constructing, maintaining, and operating such a canal; and (c) the justification for the expenditure of the Federal funds estimated to be required. The board shall make such further study of these and other pertinent questions relating to this project as it may deem necessary.

The Passamaquoddy Board shall review the reports heretofore rendered in connection with the Passamaquoddy tidal power project in the State of Maine, with particular reference to the questions of (a) the engineering feasibility of the project; (b) its justification, including the possibilities with respect to the establishment of industries requiring electric power in eastern Maine; (c) its scientific value from the knowledge and experience to be gained with respect to tidal-power development; and (d) estimated costs of construction, operation, and maintenance. The board shall make such further study of these and other pertinent questions relating to this project as it may deem necessary.

Each of the aforementioned boards shall report its findings and recommendations to the President on or before July 20, 1936. Should the conclusions of such boards be favorable to the continuance by the Federal Government of the two projects hereinbefore mentioned, or either of them, the President is hereby authorized to make allotments for carrying forward such project or projects during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, from any funds now or hereafter available for relief and work relief on useful projects, as follows:

For a ship canal across the State of Florida, not to exceed $10,000,000: Provided, That the total estimated capital cost of such canal shall not exceed $150,000,000, including all funds previously allotted thereto.

For the Passamaquoddy tidal-power project, Maine, not to exceed $9,000,000: Provided, That the total estimated capital cost of such project shall not exceed $42,000,000, including all funds previously allotted thereto.

The members of the boards herein authorized to be appointed shall receive compensation at the rate of $50 per day for each day of service, including Sundays and holidays, together with their necessary traveling expenses, and each board is authorized to employ and fix the compensation of such personnel as it may find necessary to assist in the performance of its functions, without regard to civil-service laws and regulations or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and to pay their necessary traveling expenses. The expenditures authorized by this section shall be paid from funds heretofore or hereafter appropriated for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

The Secretary of War and the Administrator of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works shall make available to the boards herein authorized all reports, records, plans, estimates, or other data and information in their possession which in any manner relate to the two projects hereinbefore mentioned and shall render such aid and assistance as said boards may request in connection with the duties imposed upon them by this joint resolution.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the deficiency bill, throughout consideration of the bill, had to perform the somewhat disagreeable duty of making points of order. A good many proposals have come before our subcommittee which the subcommittee declined to put upon the bill, regardless of their merit, because they constituted what we regarded as legislation on an appropriation bill. We have endeavored to apply that rule uniformly. By reason of the direction contained in the rules of the Senate Appropriations Committee and by reason of the rules of the Senate, I feel obliged to raise what I regard as a point of order against the amendment. It seems to me that it is legislation upon an appropriation bill. Further, it seems to me that it is not germane to the section to which it is applied.

Let me illustrate what I mean. The amendment opens with the provision:

That the President of the United States is authorized to appoint two boards of three members each.

The amendment describes their duties and their functions. It seems to me that is clearly legislation. In years past appropriation bills were subject to many abuses. In many instances the necessity for the passage of the appropriation bills led to the coercion of Congress into acceptance of amendments. General legislation not dealing directly with the appropriation was placed upon appropriation bills. The result was that the Senate, in the course of a long experience, out of its wisdom, provided rule XVI, which forbids the inclusion of new or general legislation in an appropriation bill and provides that no amendment may be made which is not germane.

No one is more reluctant than am I to make points of order against various matters which have come before the committee; but, in view of the fact that points of order were made against project after project, against amendment after amendment, it seems to me I am obliged to make a point of order in the present case; and I therefore make a point of order against the pending amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, it is recognized that the Senator from Colorado has full right to make the point of order. However, I point out the fact, which appears to me to be incontrovertible, that the point of order is not well taken, for the reason that the committee has inserted in the bill a provision of general legislation which my amendment seeks to amend or modify.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Does the Senator take the position that the adoption of an amendment by a committee invalidates the rule of the Senate—in other words, that a committee can make an amendment in order on a general appropriation bill which would otherwise not be in order?

Mr. ROBINSON. No, Mr. President; certainly not. However, the Senator from Colorado has not made the point of order to the committee amendment.

Mr. CLARK. I was about to say, if the Senator will permit me, that the amendment which the Senator from Arkansas has offered seems to me one of the most remarkable ever presented to the Senate, because it is not only in contravention of the ordinary rule of the Senate against legislation on an appropriation bill, but it is even legislation in the second degree. In other words, I think clearly the committee amendment is subject to a point of order because it is legislation; and on the principle that two wrongs do not make one right, it seems to me the Senator from Arkansas cannot logically argue against the point of order made by the Senator from Colorado simply by reason of the fact that no Senator has as yet seen fit to make the point of order against the committee amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to state the case I think I can convince him that the position he has just announced is not well taken.

The committee has proposed the insertion of an amendment to the bill which itself is legislation, and the insertion of that amendment makes necessary the consideration of the amendment I have proposed, unless it is designed indirectly to prevent the allotment of funds appropriated in the bill for the two projects carried in my amendment.

The language which the committee has offered is:

> No Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted with funds provided for in this appropriation unless and until an amount sufficient for its completion has been allocated and irrevocably set aside for its completion—

And so forth.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him in order to make an inquiry?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes. I should like to have a chance to state my case, but I will yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I shall not interrupt the Senator if he would rather I should not do so.

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. My inquiry is directed to the particular part of the bill which the Senator was reading. It occurred to me that that was a limitation upon an appropriation rather than legislation. The Senate and the Appropriations Committee have authority, under the rules, to impose limitations upon appropriations, and I think that is the interpretation which is applicable to the section which the Senator is reading.

Mr. ROBINSON. No, Mr. President; that interpretation is not sound. Under the law which we passed last year the President made an allotment of funds for the two projects incorporated or referred to in this amendment, and he had full authority to make that allotment. The committee now proposes as an affirmative proposition to prevent the initiation of Federal projects unless the entire amount necessary for their completion is provided at the time they are initiated. That is not a limitation in the legal or proper sense of the word. It is an affirmative provision of law.

Under the existing law the President could allot any portion of the funds appropriated in this bill to carry forward the two projects which are under consideration; but the committee seeks to prevent that from being done by having enacted a provision of law that no project shall be undertaken unless all the funds that are necessary for its completion shall be supplied at once. My contention is that that is general legislation; under the indisputable precedents of the Senate it is subject to amendment; and the point of order that the amendment relates to general legislation does not lie; otherwise, the committee could violate its own rules and have immunity from the correction of such mistakes as it might be found to have made.

The committee seeks now to enact a general law on the subject of initiating projects, namely, that no project shall be commenced unless all the money necessary for its completion is provided at the time of its commencement. If that is not general legislation, if it does not come within the rule to which reference has been made, it is difficult to conceive a case in which that would occur.

So, I assume there is no question about the right of the Senate to amend this amendment. The committee cannot propose to legislate in a general appropriation bill and deny the right of the Senate to modify its proposition.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In other words, Mr. President, if I understand the Senator's position, it is that if the point of order is to lie at all, it must lie against the committee amendment after it shall have been perfected by such amendments as Senators may desire to offer to it, whether legislative in character or not.

Mr. ROBINSON. Possibly the point of order might be made against the committee amendment itself; but the committee amendment, constituting legislation, is subject to amendment.

I have made no point of order against the committee amendment, nor has any other Senator. What the committee apparently is seeking to do, or what the Senator from Colorado is seeking to do by the committee amendment, is to enact general legislation on an appropriation bill and then take advantage of the rule of the Senate to prevent any Senator from changing or having an opportunity to change that amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's contention seems to me to be reasonable. The committee amendment itself is subject to a point of order. Does the Senator agree to that?

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly; it is legislation.

Mr. NORRIS. Then I wish to ask the Senator, as a practical matter, if the committee amendment is subject to a point of order—and I make the suggestion in order to save time as much as for anything else; for the Senator's amendment, of course, will excite a great deal of discussion and consume considerable time—would we not be wasting our time, knowing that, whether the Senator's amendment shall be agreed to or not, the entire provision is going to be subject to a point of order and that a point of order will certainly be made by some Senator opposing the amendment? Would we not be wasting our time to go ahead with the amendment?

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. May I call attention to the rule, which reads:

> Or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate.

This amendment has been moved by a standing committee of the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; but it is not a committee amendment. The committee is subject to the rules of the Senate, and cannot report an amendment——

Mr. FLETCHER. The amendment has been reported by a standing committee.

Mr. NORRIS. Which, if offered by a Senator, would be subject to a point of order and itself escape, the only difference being under the rules of the Senate that when the committee proposes an amendment subject to a point of order on these grounds, and the point of order is sustained, the entire bill goes back to the committee.

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not think the committee amendment is subject to a point of order, because it has been reported.

Mr. ROBINSON. The committee amendment has been reported by a standing committee of the Senate, the Appropriations Committee. The amendment to the committee amendment has also been reported by a standing committee of the Senate, the Committee on Commerce. The Senate Committee on Appropriations saw fit to incorporate legislation in this bill. Having done that, having brought in an amendment that otherwise would be subject to a point of order—that is to say, if the committee had not reported the amendment, the committee cannot now be heard to make a point of order against an amendment that is germane to its amendment.

Mr. GLASS and Mr. CLARK addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield first to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. As chairman of the Appropriations Committee, it was my opinion, and I so stated, that the proposal was legislation and subject to a point of order, and, that under the rules of the Senate, the committee had no right to report this amendment to the bill, because when the committee acted there had been no action by any standing committee of the Senate, and the Committee on Appropriations has no right under the practice, as I have observed it for 16 years, and under rule XVI of the Senate, to incorporate legislation in an appropriation bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. But it did do it.

Mr. GLASS. I know it did, and, therefore, in my judgment, it is subject to a point of order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The provision concerning general legislation is to be found in paragraph 2 of rule XVI and has nothing whatever to do with whether or not it is proposed by a standing committee of the Senate. The rule is absolutely explicit, and, if the Senator from Arkansas will pardon me, I should like to read that paragraph. It is as follows:

> The Committee on Appropriations shall not report an appropriation bill containing amendments proposing new or general legislation, and if an appropriation bill is reported to the Senate containing amendments proposing new or general legislation, a point of order may be made against the bill, and if the point is sustained, the bill shall be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations.

There is not a line in that paragraph dealing with general legislation which mentions the fact that it shall be reported by a standing committee of the Senate. That reference is found in paragraph 1 in relation to amendments proposing to increase items of appropriation.

Mr. GLASS. That is the very point I made as chairman of the committee, but the committee disregarded my views.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. The truth is that the entire title II of the House bill as it came to the Senate deals with general legislation. It carries provisions that are legislative and not simply appropriations; and, in view of the fact that the entire title deals with legislative matters which are beyond the scope of mere appropriations, it cannot be held that an amendment to that title, which deals with a legislative matter, is, therefore, out of order.

Mr. ROBINSON. That is the point I am attempting to make, provided the amendment is germane.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I do not wish to interrupt the argument of the Senator from Arkansas, but it has been interrupted so much that, with his consent, I will trespass upon his good nature for one more suggestion. According to the argument of the Senator from Kentucky, any matter of legislation would be in order as an amendment to the committee amendment. In other words, many measures of great importance are pending in this body, and, for instance, the Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill would be in order as an amendment to this appropriation bill, if the contention of the Senator is correct; and a measure which has been pending in several committees of the Senate for the last year and a half to take the profit out of war also would be in order on this amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I think the correct test is whether my amendment is germane to the provision that is in the bill, whether it is germane to the committee amendment. I make no issue on that phase of the point of order which is raised by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]. I think it is germane, and will proceed to argue that point when I have the opportunity to do so; but I do not think the point of order lies that it constitutes general legislation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that as soon as I can get the floor in my own right I intend to make a point of order against the committee amendment; and if the point of order be overruled, in conformity with the latest contention of the Senator from Arkansas—not the one he was making a few moments ago—then I intend to offer the Wagner-Costigan bill as an amendment to the committee amendment; and if that shall be voted down, I intend to offer other bills as amendments to the committee amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Of course, the Senator from Missouri may take his own course about that, but I hardly think it is appropriate during the time I am addressing the Senate on the point of order for him to say what he proposes to do if the Senate does not agree with him in the conclusion he reaches. He may take any course he pleases.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] both partially rely upon the fact, they say, that the proposed amendment is in the form reported by a standing committee of the Senate. Is it not a fact that it is not in the form reported by the Commerce Committee?

Mr. ROBINSON. It is almost in the identical form.

Mr. VANDENBERG. "Almost" is not enough under the rule, is it?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes. I think it is substantially in that form. The only change that has been made in the amendment is with reference to the time of the report of the board. Of course, if the Senator chose to be that technical, I could very easily remove that objection by changing the amendment so as to conform to the exact date carried in the resolution. However, I do not anticipate anyone here wishes to pursue that course.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. I am not a parliamentarian. I have been here 34 years, and I do not know any more about parliamentary practice today than when I came, and therefore I am asking the Senator from Arkansas the question. Is it competent for the Appropriations Committee of the Senate to make a point of order against a provision in a House bill passed by the House?

Mr. ROBINSON. No.

Mr. GLASS. Therefore, we did not make the point of order against title II of the bill. It did not originate with the Senate committee. It came over from the House.

Mr. ROBINSON. But the Senator from Virginia is in error about that. I had not referred to the general legislation which is carried in the original House bill. I had referred to and had taken note of the general legislation which the Senator from Virginia reported when he reported the pending bill.

Mr. GLASS. I understood that was the position taken by the Senator from Arkansas, but my friend the expert parliamentarian from Kentucky, Mr. BARKLEY, took the position that the whole title was subject to a point of order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Oh, no, Mr. President. I did not take that position. I said that because the House included title II, which is legislation, the amendment to that legislative matter brought forward by the Senator from Arkansas is not subject to a point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the other body incorporates general legislation, and general legislation comes here in an appropriation bill, it is subject to amendment in this body. The only valid question that can be raised is whether the proposed amendment is germane to the provision in the bill. I have said that over and over again, and yet for some reason there are those on the floor of the Senate who do not seem to understand my position as I am endeavoring to define it.

That is not the point upon which I rely. The point upon which I rely is that, aside from any question as to whether the rule which has been invoked contemplates that the Appropriations Committee can report in a general appropriation bill a provision for general legislation without subjecting itself to the danger of the penalty provided in the rule against general legislation in appropriation bills, the committee has reported a provision which does constitute general legislation, and under every rule, both the rules of the House of Representatives and the rules of the Senate, we have the right to modify that provision. The only legal limitation on that right found in our rules is whether the proposed modification is germane to the provision which it is sought to modify.

I do not know how to make the matter any more clear. I avert and avoid questions as to whether a point of order would lie to the original provision reported by the Appropriations Committee because that question is not here. I am directing my argument to the point of order made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]. His point is that I have offered a provision of general legislation to a general appropriation bill. My reply to him is that the provision sought to be amended is itself general legislation and, therefore, subject to amendment. The only limitation on the right to amend is whether the proposed amendment is germane to the provision which is under consideration. I have never gotten far enough to state why I think it is germane.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. As I understand, the precedents are unbroken, particularly since the time of Vice President Marshall, that once the House enters a field of general legislation in an appropriation bill which it passes, then the provision of the Senate rules providing against general legislation on a general appropriation bill cannot be invoked to stop either the Senate committee or the Senate itself from continuing in that field of general legislation which has been invaded by the House.

Mr. ROBINSON. So long as the continuation is germane.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes; so long as the continuation is germane. I think an examination of the precedents will show that they are unbroken. I am certain they are unbroken since the time Vice President Marshall presided over this body.

Mr. ROBINSON. I think that is true.

Let me state now why I think the second feature of the point of order made by the Senator from Colorado does not lie, namely, that my amendment is not germane to the provisions to which it relates. I am seeking to amend the proposed general legislation reading as follows:

No Federal projects shall be undertaken or prosecuted—

And so forth. The provision has been read a number of times and I shall not again complete the reading of it. But for that provision the President, so far as the law is concerned, could make the allocation contemplated by my amendment, namely, $10,000,000 for the Florida ship canal and $9,000,000 for the Passamaquoddy power project. If that provision remains in the bill unchanged, he cannot do it.

The object is to change the law. The purpose of the provision which I am seeking to amend is to make it impossible for an allotment to be made on the two projects to which my amendment has reference. If the committee provision is not incorporated in the bill, if the law is not changed, it is still possible for the President, if he chooses to do so, to do substantially what he did in the beginning, namely, allot from the work-relief fund sums for carrying on the construction of the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy power project. Is there any Senator who disputes that? But for this proposed change in the law, the proposed change to be made at the instance of the committee, the projects might be carried forward under this bill; but if that change is made in the law which the committee amendment contemplates, there can be no allocation of funds for either the Florida ship canal or Passamaquoddy. I like that name. There is something rather soothing about the name "Passamaquoddy." [Laughter.]

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I should not like to permit to pass unchallenged the Senator's statement that the amendment of the Appropriations Committee was intended to preclude any allocation either to the Florida ship canal or to the Passamaquoddy project. Neither of them was mentioned, and I do not think either one of them entered the mind of any member of the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. ROBINSON. Well, the Senator does not doubt that the legal effect of the language is as I have stated. I do not mean to imply that it was intended that the provision should be limited to these two projects. It is a general provision of law which would apply to all projects.

Mr. GLASS. That was intended; but we had not in mind Passamaquoddy or the Florida canal, because when we acted we had not any idea that those projects would be revived.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I yield.

Mr. HALE. I should like to state that when the amendment which now appears in the bill was before the Appropriations Committee I moved to lay it on the table for the very reason that I thought it would block any appropriation that might be made for one or the other of these two projects. My motion, however, was rejected.

Mr. ROBINSON. I thank the Senator from Maine. The Senator from Maine, then, when the amendment was under consideration in the committee, recognizing its effect on these two projects, sought to lay the amendment on the table; and it is not, perhaps, of first materiality what was in the minds of the proponents of the provision, if it was not expressed. It is sufficient to say that the legal effect of the provision is to prevent an allotment for either of these projects.

Mr. HALE. I may say that at the time this matter came up, my impression is that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] was not in the committee room.

Mr. GLASS. I certainly was not, because not during the consideration of the deficiency bill did I hear of Passamaquoddy or the Florida ship canal. I voted for the Florida ship canal, so far as that is concerned.

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I know it.

Mr. GLASS. But I thought the amendment was subject to a point of order, and so stated in the general committee.

Mr. HALE. I am very sure the Senator from Virginia was not present.

Mr. ROBINSON. I unqualifiedly accept the statement of the Senator from Virginia that he did not have in mind these particular projects, and that he opposed the amendment; but the truth of the matter is that if the amendment should be agreed to it would so change the general law that these projects could not be carried on, and if it should not be agreed to they still could be carried on.

In my judgment, that is a complete answer to the point of order made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] that the amendment offered by myself is not germane to the provision to which it is sought to be attached. If the amendment I have proposed should be agreed to, it would modify the committee amendment so that as to these two projects already commenced it might be possible to continue them. It is true that their continuance is not made certain by the provisions of the amendment, but it is also true that if the boards proposed to be created, after they have made their studies, report that the projects are feasible and worthy—if, in other words, the reports of the boards are favorable—then the President will have an authorization for these projects to the extent that he may allot $10,000,000 for the one and $9,000,000 for the other for expenditure during the fiscal year.

I do not know why I should take more of the Senate's time in discussing the point of order. It seems to me clearly established that the Senate has the right to amend this provision if it chooses to do so; that it would be unreasonable to say that the committee may report an amendment constituting general legislation, as almost everyone concedes, and that that provision should not be subject to modification by the Senate itself. It is the well-established rule that even though general legislation may be incorporated in a measure by this House or the other House, or by a committee of this body, if the provision does constitute legislation it is subject to amendment just like any other provision. The only limitation on the right to change it is that the changes must be germane to the subject matter of the proposed legislation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire to enter a point of order against the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). The point of order made by the Senator from Missouri against the committee amendment is overruled.

Mr. CLARK. I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. CLARK obtained the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before the Senator from Missouri takes the floor, will he permit the Chair to make a statement as to his ruling?

Mr. CLARK. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri made the point of order that the committee amendment amounted to general legislation. The Chair overruled the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri because title II of the bill as it came from the House of Representatives contained many matters of general legislation, and in such a case the rule laid down by Vice President Marshall is stated thus:

> Notwithstanding the rule of the Senate to the effect that general legislation may not be attached to an appropriation bill, still when the House of Representatives opens the door and proceeds to enter upon a field of general legislation which has to do with a subject of this character, the Chair is going to rule—but, of course, the Senate can reverse the ruling of the Chair—that the House having opened the door the Senate of the United States can walk in through the door and pursue the field.

In view of that ruling, the Chair announced that the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri was overruled. From the ruling of the Chair the Senator from Missouri has appealed to the Senate.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire very briefly to discuss the appeal.

I had great affection in his lifetime and have great respect for the memory of Vice President Marshall. I cannot forget, however, that at one time when I was familiar with proceedings of that sort, and was parliamentarian of the other House, that great Vice President was overruled nine times in 1 week by the Senate of the United States, and therefore I do not think the matter is necessarily settled. Furthermore, it does not seem to me that the ruling of Vice President Marshall is in any way applicable to this situation.

The Chair holds, and holds properly, that title II of the bill does contain some legislation. Many appropriation bills come over here from the House that contain some item of legislation; but from the present ruling of the Chair it would follow that if any general appropriation bill contained any item of legislation, therefore any other item of legislation would be in order in the Senate on a general appropriation bill.

I do not believe that is sound. In other words, it seems to me the necessary application of the ruling of Vice President Marshall, which the Chair has just read, would be to the particular provision which it was sought to amend, and that from the ordinary artifice of dividing a bill into titles, it does not follow that if a particular title happened to contain matter of legislation it would open up the whole title to any other item of legislation. In other words, the question should be whether or not the provision sought to be stricken out by the pending Senate amendment is legislation, and whether that should be opened up by the Senate amendment.

Mr. President, I am thoroughly in favor of the general purpose of the Senate committee amendment, and there is no difficulty about making the committee amendment in order on any general appropriation bill by some very simple transformation in language turning it into a limitation. The committee had in mind to make this amendment as a limitation on this appropriation bill, but they have not done it in the apt terms of limitations on appropriation bills according to the text of the rules which for a generation have been established both in the House of Representatives and in the Senate. The proponents of the amendment to the committee amendment seek to take advantage of the fact that the committee amendment itself is not in the aptest language to open up the general field of legislation. Therefore it seems to me that if the point of order which I have made should be overruled, the Senate should in all good conscience repeal rule XVI, and open up general appropriation bills to any sort of legislation which any Senator desires to offer at any time.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I am not an expert on parliamentary law, but I know the intent of the Senate committee in reference to this provision to be that which the Senator from Missouri describes. It was an effort to put a limitation upon the use of the particular appropriation contained in the bill. It is not general legislation, it is not new legislation. We merely state that the money appropriated by this bill shall be so used that any project to which it is allocated shall be completed within the limits of this appropriation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. As I have said, I am in entire sympathy with what I conceive to be the purpose of the Committee on Appropriations. Does not the Senator agree with me that if advantage be taken of a possible inappropriateness in language, converting this committee amendment from a limitation in a general appropriation bill into an excuse for opening up the committee amendment to amendments of a general legislative character, it opens the door wide to any sort of legislation which may be contemplated by any Member of the Senate?

Mr. ADAMS. I am thoroughly in accord with the decision of the Chair, but I beg to differ with the reasoning. My understanding of the terms "new legislation" and "general legislation" is that they should be construed to mean something alien to an appropriation bill. In other words, title II does not contain within it that which I think can be correctly defined as new or general legislation. Every part of an appropriation bill is legislation. An appropriation bill is legislation. What the rule seeks to forbid is attaching to an appropriation bill legislation upon other subjects which are new, and which are matters of general legislation, rather than the regulation, the control, and the direction of the particular appropriation. In that sense I do not believe that a limitation, however inaptly framed, which is directed exclusively to the appropriation made by the bill, is either to be termed "new" or "general" legislation. Therefore, it has seemed to me that the premise upon which the Senator from Arkansas argues is unsound.

I should be willing to concede that if this be legislation opening the gates, it would open them to germane legislation, and to germane legislation only. I cannot see that proposed legislation providing for the appointment of a commission, that commission to go out and engage in scientific undertakings, scientific investigations, to determine the commercial feasibility of a project, is germane to an appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has not ruled on the question as to whether or not it must be germane. The only question on which the Chair ruled was the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. ADAMS. I wanted it made clear that my original point of order was submitted on the ground that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas was general legislation and that it was not germane to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, what is the decision of the Chair on the point of the germaneness or nongermaneness of the proposal?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has not passed on that question, and the Chair cannot pass on the question of whether or not it is germane. That must be submitted to the Senate. The Chair has ruled only on the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mc McNARY. Mr. President, I was just about to express my approval of the ruling of the Chair, which does not indicate that I am at all favorable to the project on its merits.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, may I ask the Chair to make a further explanation? There seems to be a good deal of misunderstanding among Senators about me as to what the issue is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question raised by the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri goes only to the committee amendment. The Chair overruled the point of order made by the Senator from Missouri, holding that, while the amendment did amount to general legislation, nevertheless title II of the bill itself contained many items of general legislation, and under the ruling of Vice President Marshall, the Chair, having been advised that that ruling has been uniformly followed, held that the House of Representatives having opened the door, the Senate could go in. Those were the words of Vice President Marshall. A vote to sustain the ruling of the Chair should be in the affirmative; a vote against the ruling of the Chair should be in the negative.

Mr. BILBO. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BILBO. My understanding is that if the Chair is overruled in his position, that would send the bill back to the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] and vote "yea."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], who is unavoidably absent. I am advised that if he were present he would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. METCALF (when his name was called). Owing to the absence of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], with whom I have a pair, I withhold my vote, not knowing how he would vote if present.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. FRAZIER. My colleague the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] is necessarily absent. If present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. DAVIS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], who, I understand, if present, would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 53, nays 19, as follows:

So the decision of the Chair was sustained.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, by the vote just taken the Senate has to all intents and purposes repealed rule XVI and thrown open the door to any sort of legislation on a general appropriation bill. In other words, the Senate has complete jurisdiction to construe its rules in any way it pleases. However, it certainly seems, in view of the action just taken by the Senate, that the argument of the Senator from Arkansas against the point of order of the Senator from Colorado is entirely sound, and therefore the point of order of the Senator from Colorado ought to be overruled, because if the committee amendment proposing legislation is not subject to a point of order, then clearly the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, or any other amendment on any other legislative subject, is not subject to a point of order under the recent ruling of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands from the Parliamentarian that the question before the Senate is, Is the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas to the committee amendment germane to the committee amendment?

Mr. CLARK. The Senator from Colorado, as I understood, made two points of order. The first point of order, unless the Senator has withdrawn it—and if he withdrew it I failed to hear him do so—was that the amendment was legislation on a general appropriation bill and in contravention of rule XVI. His second point of order was that the amendment was not germane to the committee amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate has just voted on the question whether or not the amendment proposed by the Appropriations Committee to the bill is in order. The Senate decided, by a vote of 53 to 19, that it was in order. The question now is whether or not the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas to the committee amendment is germane to the amendment held by the Senate to be in order. The Chair understands that that is the parliamentary situation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I desire again to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the first point of order made by the Senator from Colorado against the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas was that it amounted to general legislation on an appropriation bill. His second point of order was that the amendment was not germane. The mere submission of the question of germaneness, which under the rules of the Senate must be submitted to the Senate, does not dispose of the first point of order made by the Senator from Colorado; and I am now inquiring whether the Senator from Colorado adheres to the first point of order.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, my point of order is based upon two grounds: First, that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas constitutes general legislation, in that it provides for the creation of boards, describes their powers and their functions, delegates to the boards the power to make scientific investigations and economic researches, and provides an appropriation contingent upon the reports which the boards make. The second point of order is that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas is not germane to the amendment of the committee.

Upon the question just voted on, I must say that I voted to sustain the ruling of the Chair. I disagreed with the reasons which the Chair gave. I think the amendment to which the point of order was made was a limitation upon an appropriation bill; that it was not general legislation.

I think the contention that it is general legislation cannot be justified by reason of anything contained in the provision. The Senator who preceded the Vice President in the chair felt that the amendment was general legislation, but was justified by other things in the bill. My own judgment is that his ruling was correct but that the reasoning upon which it was based was incorrect.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The present occupant of the chair understands that the Senate voted to sustain the ruling of the Chair, which was that the amendment in question was legislation, but that it was justifiable on account of the general legislative propositions contained in the bill as passed by the House.

Mr. GLASS. But, Mr. President, that decision related solely to the committee amendment, and not to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is not referring to the amendment now proposed to the amendment of the committee. He is merely stating his understanding of the situation with respect to which the Senate just voted. The point of order was made, and the Chair held that, while the amendment in question was legislation, it was in order, and the Senate sustained the ruling of the Chair. Now the Senator from Colorado makes a point of order that the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas is general legislation and, in addition thereto, that it is not germane to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the whole of title II is, in effect and in many respects, general legislation. It comes that way from the House to us. It has been held by the Senate that we have a right to amend it. The Senate has held that the committee amendment is in order. Now the question is whether the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas is germane. It certainly is germane, and it certainly is relevant to the committee amendment. That being true, the point of order should not be sustained.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I presented my views on the point of order at length while another than the Vice President was occupying the chair. I do not wish to repeat what was then said, but will point out to the Vice President that the language which is sought to be amended is as follows:

> No Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted with funds provided for in this appropriation unless and until an amount sufficient for its completion has been allocated and irrevocably set aside for its completion—

And so forth. That amendment would have the effect of changing the law, or preventing the allotment of funds which may be hereafter appropriated to the two projects that are referred to in the pending amendment to the committee amendment. If it were not adopted, the President could still, as a matter of law, if he chose to do so, make allotments from the funds in this bill.

What the pending amendment seeks to accomplish is to modify the committee amendment so that if the boards to be created under the authority of the amendment to the amendment shall report favorably on the projects, after making certain specific investigations called for by the language of the amendment, the President may then have authority to make additional allotments to the Passamaquoddy project and the Florida ship canal project, notwithstanding the general provision contained in the committee amendment that no project shall be initiated unless at the time of its initiation a sufficient amount of money shall be provided for its contention. Plainly to me, it is a provision which the Senate has a right to amend, and, unless it can amend it, the committee would have the right to incorporate provisions of law in appropriation bills without any opportunity to the Senate to change the language or to modify the effect of the provisions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair once more state his understanding of the parliamentary situation. The present occupant regrets he was not in the chair at the time the original point of order was made. The Senate by a vote of 53 to 19 has determined that the committee amendment to the appropriation bill is in order. Therefore, any amendment that is germane to the legislation is in order. The question of germaneness of the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas is the question now before the Senate.

Apparently, as the Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian, whoever drew the rules of the Senate was not willing to trust the presiding officer to determine the germaneness of an amendment of this kind, as, under the rules, the Chair does not have the right to determine the germaneness of an amendment to legislation on an appropriation bill. The Chair, therefore, submits to the Senate the question, Is the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas germane to the amendment of the committee?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BILBO (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer that pair to the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the previous roll call with reference to my pair and its transfer, I vote "yea."

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). Again referring to my pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. ROBINSON. I announce that the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. COSTIGAN], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. COOLIDGE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are unavoidably detained.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I should perhaps make an explanation of the amendment. During the course of the debate on the parliamentary questions which were raised, there were references to some of the provisions of this amendment. If I may have the undivided attention of Senators, I should like to condense my discussion of the amendment as much as may seem practicable.

It is perhaps not necessary to state the circumstances which have prompted the introduction of this subject at this time. Every Member of the Senate, probably, is familiar with the essential features which are involved in the questions raised by the amendment.

Last year the Congress passed a large work-relief bill, and gave the President authority to initiate the construction of projects with one controlling purpose in mind, namely, to provide employment for a large number of persons who were on the relief rolls. Among the projects which were initiated under that authority were two very large ones, namely, the one pertaining to the Florida ship canal and the other relating to the Passamaquoddy tidal-power plan. The completion of these projects, it appears from the record, would require, in the case of the first project, the Florida ship canal, approximately $150,000,000, including the amount that has already been expended under the allotment made by the President; and as to the second project, Passamaquoddy, the total is estimated to approximate $42,000,000.

There was no question as to the legal right of the Executive to initiate the projects. So far as my information goes, no question has ever been raised of the legal right to initiate the two projects. Questions have arisen which involve the subjects of public policy, the feasibility of the projects, their adaptability to the purposes for which they are to be constructed, and other related questions.

The time is approaching when the question must be determined whether work on the projects shall be suspended or continued. The object of presenting the amendment at this time is to resort to a method by which a conclusion may be reached as to those questions. If the amendment should be agreed to it would result either in a continuation of the work or an abandonment of the projects. In all probability the latter outcome would be the result if the report contemplated by the amendment should be unfavorable to the project. While the Executive would have the power, unless the law is changed, to make new allotments, I am sure he would hesitate to do so on the state of the record as it now exists.

It has seemed to me fair and proper to present the questions involved in the amendment for the consideration of the Senate, inasmuch as unless something is done great confusion will result. There are now something like 5,000 laborers employed at Passamaquoddy and approximately 6,000 engaged in work on the Florida ship canal. If the work is to be continued it should be done, of course, without interruption or with as little interruption as may be permissible.

In an effort to work out the controversy fairly it is proposed that the President shall appoint two boards consisting of three members each, all the members of the boards to be engineers. In order to insure impartial reports, reports not biased or prejudiced by conclusions heretofore reached, it is also provided that no one who is employed by the Government of the United States or by either the State of Florida or the State of Maine, or who has an interest direct or indirect, present or prospective, in the financial transactions incident to the two projects, shall be eligible to membership on either board.

It is also contemplated that if the boards shall be created and constituted as just stated, they shall discharge certain functions. They would have available, of course, for their study all the investigations and findings which have been made heretofore either by the engineers under the jurisdiction of the War Department or by those connected with the Works Administration. In addition to that they would have certain functions which would be specially imposed upon them.

With respect to the Florida ship canal, there are four aspects of the duties of the members of the board to which attention is now directed.

First, the board is to consider whether the construction of the canal would create disturbance of the ground-water levels of the State of Florida. One of the objections urged to the project is that it will disarrange the ground-water levels of the State; and this new board will be expected to give special attention to that phase of the matter.

The second function relates to the estimated cost of construction, operation, and maintenance.

The third is a very broad one and an important one insofar as the future fate of these projects is concerned. It relates to the justification of the expenditure of the Federal funds necessary in connection with the project.

The fourth requirement is that the board shall make such further study of these and other pertinent questions as it may deem necessary.

The President's view is that it will be informative and helpful to have the study and the advice of a board whose judgment may be relied upon as unbiased and unprejudiced in determining these fundamental questions, which have relationship to the merits of the projects and which should govern in determining whether they should be carried forward.

With respect to the Passamaquoddy project, while the duties of the board to be created to consider that project are somewhat different from those of the board to study and report on the Florida ship canal, the duties are closely analogous.

First, the board is charged with the direct duty of passing on the feasibility of the project from an engineering standpoint. Certainly this phase of the inquiry has been involved either directly or indirectly in all the examinations that have been heretofore made; but it is believed, in view of the contentions that have been raised respecting the proposed tidal-power project, that it would be advantageous to have the matter studied and passed upon by such a board as the amendment contemplates.

The second duty of the Passamaquoddy board relates to the justification of the project, including the possibilities relating to the establishment of industries requiring electric power in eastern Maine. In the debates here much of the controversy has revolved around this question, and it seems appropriate and helpful to have definite information relating to it.

The third obligation on the board involves a study of the scientific value from the knowledge and experience to be gained with respect to an experiment in tidal-power development. At this time it does not appear to be necessary to elaborate upon that aspect of the subject. It involves a field inviting to research. It is a subject that is intimately connected with the development in a large portion of the State of Maine where development apparently is greatly needed.

The fourth task of the board will be to estimate the cost of construction, operation, and maintenance; and it is also provided in the amendment that unless the estimates come within a certain limit—a limit of $150,000,000 with respect to the Florida ship canal, including the amounts already expended, and $42,000,000 as to the Passamaquoddy project, including the amounts spent there—the allotments may not be made by the Executive under the authority of this measure.

Fifth, as in the case of the ship canal, the Passamaquoddy board is authorized to make such further studies as it may find necessary to the proper performance of its duties. In the original joint resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and reported a few days ago by that committee to the Senate, it was provided that the reports should be made on or before June 20, 1936. I doubted at the time whether that limitation gave sufficient opportunity for the boards to complete their tasks; and in this amendment the time has been extended until July 20. While it is desirable that the boards shall have full opportunity to study and reach conclusions concerning the specific questions that are submitted to them under the amendment and the other general subjects which they are at liberty to inquire into, it is also desirable that the issue should be brought to a conclusion as speedily as circumstances reasonably permit.

As already indicated, there are approximately 11,000 persons at work on these two projects. If the projects should be suspended indefinitely, it would be necessary as to many of those laborers to provide other employment, and to break up the organization and then reestablish it, as would have to be done if the reports were unduly delayed, which would, from the standpoint of every person, be undesirable. So the policy of the amendment is to invite and to cause as prompt a decision as the circumstances will permit.

It is provided in the amendment that if, as to the projects or either of them, the report is favorable, the President may make allotments from the funds in this bill for carrying on work on the project that has been so approved. In the one case, the Florida ship canal, the allotment that would be authorized is $10,000,000; in the case of Passamaquoddy it is $9,000,000; those sums being sufficient for present requirements.

There are other provisions in the amendment of comparatively slight importance. All the departments which have information on these subjects are required to supply that information to aid the boards in the discharge of their duties. They are also instructed to render any assistance the boards may request.

In view of the controversy and present status of these projects, it seems to me that the amendment provides a fair and satisfactory way to determine the issues which have arisen. I should hope that the Senate will keep the projects alive by adopting the amendment. There would thus be given a further opportunity to study them, with the assurance that they would not be carried forward unless the reports justified that course, and with the assurance that they will be carried on if the facts appear to justify doing so.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. As I have understood the matter, in our discussions in the committee it was distinctly understood that, whatever might be the fate of the proposal here today, it has no bearing upon any future action the Congress may take. In other words, if there should be favorable action upon the amendment, the action would not bind the Congress in any sense, and it is not to be considered as an authorization of the ultimate completion of these two projects. Does the Senator from Arkansas agree with me in that statement?

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, clearly, as a matter of law, there is no express authorization of the projects in the amendment. Such a provision would be inconsistent with the purpose of the amendment. As to how any Senator would regard the action of Congress in authorizing an allotment for these projects to be expended during the next fiscal year, the Senator from New York is as able to reach a conclusion as am I. I agree with him that there is no legal obligation on the Congress to make additional appropriations.

Mr. HALE obtained the floor.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, may I complete my colloquy with the Senator from Arkansas?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from New York? He desires to further inquire of the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it is our practice in connection with river and harbor projects and water-control projects, after due consideration by the appropriate committees of the Congress, to make a definite authorization for the completion of a project. I want it distinctly understood that the testimony brought out before the Committee on Commerce—and, as I understand the Senator from Arkansas today, he confirms this statement—if the Congress should take favorable action and vote $10,000,000 and $9,000,000, respectively, for these projects, such action would not bind in any sense the present Congress or any future Congress in the sense in which a Congress may be bound by the ordinary appropriation for a river and harbor or water-control project.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine has the floor. After the Chair recognized the Senator from Maine the Senator from New York said he desired further to interrogate the Senator from Arkansas. The Senator from Maine has the floor. Does the Senator yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. HALE. I will yield if it will not take any considerable time.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator. I am going to permit the Senator to proceed immediately, if he will just permit me a moment.

I do not want the statement just made by the Senator from New York to stand, even for one moment, without my distinct and complete dissent. I think it would be perfectly absurd to take any action which would authorize another year's work upon these projects unless the Congress is prepared to see them through to the finish. Therefore, this decision is a conclusive decision, and no amount of camouflage and no amount of weasel-worded arguments can make it anything else.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, in view of the fact that there is no possible connection of any kind between the two projects included in the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] I am about to ask that the amendment be divided, and before doing so I wish to address the Senate briefly, giving my reasons for asking for a division.

The situation in regard to the Passamaquoddy project is as follows:

Under the powers given him in the $4,880,000,000 relief bill, which became a law in 1935, the President started and has already spent on the Passamaquoddy project in the neighborhood of $6,000,000. Extensive surveys have been made, lands and options have been acquired, buildings for the employees have been built, and improvements in the grounds connected with the buildings have been made. An actual start has been made on the construction of one of the main dams, and two of the smaller dams have already been constructed. The peak of employment was some 5,000 employees, largely taken from the relief rolls.

When the War Department appropriation bill came before the Congress last March along with it came a Bureau of the Budget recommendation for an appropriation of $29,000,000 for the Passamaquoddy and four other projects, including the Florida ship canal project. The House refused to include the appropriation because, as its Committee on Appropriations stated, these projects had never been authorized by the Congress. The appropriation for Passamaquoddy, as recommended by the Budget Bureau, was $9,000,000.

When the bill came before the Senate, the friends of Passamaquoddy, on the ground that the President had the authority to start the project, that he had started it, and had in his hands the necessary funds for carrying it on and, therefore, needed no further legislation for carrying it on, asked the Committee on Appropriations to leave out the $9,000,000 for Passamaquoddy, should the committee decide to adopt the Budget Bureau's recommendations.

The committee accepted our recommendation to leave out the $9,000,000 for Passamaquoddy, and thereupon turned down the Budget Bureau's recommendation for the remaining four projects. Later, on the floor of the Senate, when a floor amendment was offered to take care of the other four projects, and which still left out the nine million for Passamaquoddy, the floor amendment was beaten. Subsequently, a similar amendment, but leaving out appropriations for both Passamaquoddy and the ship canal, was adopted by the Senate. The bill, as enacted, included the final amendment passed by the Senate providing appropriations for the three other projects.

As a result of the tactics of the friends of Passamaquoddy, no action was taken by the Congress on the project other than the action of the House Committee on Appropriations, which refused to approve the Budget Bureau's recommendation for the five projects because none of them had previously been authorized directly by the Congress. The appropriation asked for was a direct congressional appropriation, and not a relief allotment.

The Florida ship canal project, on the other hand, while still open to an allocation to it of relief funds by the President, as the Senator from Arkansas has stated this afternoon, has against it the adverse vote in the Senate.

I cannot see that the situation has changed so far as Passamaquoddy is concerned. The President has full power to take care of it if he sees fit so to do. I regret that pending amendment has been offered.

Much abuse has been heaped on the Passamaquoddy project. Senators have referred to it repeatedly with scorn and ridicule. It is no matter for scorn or ridicule. Long before the depression hit our country, great power interests in this country were considering the very practical question of harnessing the tides on both the American and the Canadian shores of Passamaquoddy Bay to develop a great tidal power, through the use of private funds. For that purpose these power interests, cooperating with the originator of the project, Mr. Dexter Cooper, a prominent engineer, the brother of the Cooper who built the great dam at Muscle Shoals, had expended nearly a half million dollars in preliminary soundings and surveys, and the purchase of abutments and land options.

A charter had been secured from the State of Maine in 1925, and from the Government of Canada in 1926 to erect and operate a great tidal electric plant. This tidal plant would produce, it was estimated, from a million to a million and a half horsepower, and produce it at a very low cost per kilowatt-hour.

The development on the Canadian side of the project was held up on account of a possible injury to Canadian fishing interests, and a commission was appointed by the two countries to investigate the question of injury. That was in the winter of 1930, as I recall. I was instrumental in getting legislation through Congress authorizing the investigating commission. This, of course, was long before any question of the Government's financing the proposition had been suggested.

The commission held lengthy hearings on the question of injury to the Canadian fishing industry, and made a report which was somewhat unfavorable, but not conclusive; and more time was asked by both governments to go on with the investigation. No further survey has since been made. In the meanwhile the parties interested went ahead to develop, through the use of private capital, a smaller unit on the American side.

The hope of the whole eastern section of Maine and the adjacent Canadian territory is to get this international power project started; and, had it not been for the depression, it might well have been started with private capital by this time. Always there has been a question in the minds of many persons whether power can actually and practically be developed by the tides. The engineers are agreed that it can be developed. A practical demonstration through the starting of the smaller Passamaquoddy power would give the real impetus that is needed to get the greater international project started, and the one proposition would fit into the other.

The region where the plant is located is settled by as fine a class of people as we have in the State of Maine—people whose families have been on the land for more than a hundred years. Many of them come of seafaring stock. In the days of wooden ships this was a great shipbuilding community, but with the passing of the wooden ship that industry has gone; and so it is with the lumber industry, the sardine industry, and other industries in which these hard-working, thrifty people once flourished. I know of no locality in the country which would better warrant rehabilitation than this county on our extreme eastern frontier or which would pay better dividends for rehabilitation. That a great developed power in this vicinity, in connection with their excellent harbor facilities, will bring manufactures from other parts of the country to Eastport and its vicinity is the expectation of those who favor the project. The work that has already been done has been of infinite value to the community and to the State at large.

That the present project by itself is a low-cost power unit, I do not claim. That by itself, unless one credits to relief a considerable part of the cost of the installation, it is warranted economically, I do not claim; but as an initial step toward the starting of a much larger and much more beneficial private project I believe it is most certainly warranted.

I have favored the Passamaquoddy project from its inception. I favor it now, and I wish to have an opportunity to cast my vote in its favor. Unfortunately, under the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, the project is linked up with another project in which I do not believe, and against which I have cast my vote in the Senate. It has been estimated that this second project, the Florida ship canal, will cost the Government upward of $150,000,000. It has been suggested to me by friends of Passamaquoddy that in order to insure the legislation for its continuance I should change about on the ship canal and also vote for its continuance.

Mr. President, I cannot reconcile myself to any such change of front. I will have no part in saddling on our Government an ultimate expenditure of more than $150,000,000 for a project in which I do not believe in order to save the Maine project, dearly as I should like to see the latter put through. If the two projects are coupled together, therefore, I must vote against the amendment.

Mr. President, I ask that a separate vote may be had on the two questions at issue. Under rule XVIII I believe I am entitled to such division. I ask that the amendment be divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON in the chair). The Senator from Maine asks for a division of the amendment. In the opinion of the Chair, he is entitled to a division.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, inasmuch as the vote is not to be had now, I suggest that we meet that question when we reach it. Consideration of that question may properly be deferred until we are ready to vote.

Mr. HALE. Under rule XVIII, I have a right to a division, have I not?

Mr. ROBINSON. It is merely suggested that we can determine that question when we are a little nearer ready to vote. There is no use going into it this evening.

Mr. HALE. Is it not the ordinary procedure to determine the question when the request is made?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The parliamentarian advises the Chair that under rule XVIII it is the right of the Senator from Maine to have a division of the question. No action need be taken by the Senate upon it.

Mr. ROBINSON. The question will arise again when we reach the point of voting. The Senator need not raise the question now, unless the Senate is ready to vote.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, unquestionably rule XVIII accords the Senator the right to demand a division of the question. The demand can be made at any time before the vote. The Senator from Maine desires to raise it at this time. I think the proper attitude on the part of the Chair is to declare that there shall be a division of the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The opinion of the Chair is that no action need be taken at the present time. The Senator from Maine has a right to a division of the question.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the amendment is before the Senate and will be voted upon in due course. Any Senator has a right to raise the question suggested by the Senator from Maine, but not beforehand and not until a vote is reached. We have not reached the point of agreeing or disagreeing to the amendment. When action is to be taken upon the amendment, then the request of the Senator will be in order. I do not see any need of raising the question at this time.

Mr. McNARY. It is plainly the right of the Senator from Maine, under rule XVIII, to demand a division of the question. It becomes pertinent at this time because, as the Senator stated, he favors the Passamaquoddy project and is opposed to the Florida canal project. Consequently, there is no need of doubling the argument when he wants to state clearly his position with respect to one of the projects on the motion. I think it would be proper for the Chair to declare that the Senator from Maine has a right to a division of the question and, therefore, set at rest any issue about the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The ruling of the Chair, as has been stated twice, is that the Senator from Maine has the right absolutely to a division of the question.

Mr. HALE. I call for that division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no further action to be taken at this time.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is the Senator from Maine ready to vote now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no necessity for calling for a division now. Notice has been given. The present occupant of the chair rules that the Senator has a right to a division of the amendment, and the matter rests there until the question comes before the Senate for a vote and then the question will be divided.

Mr. HALE. I want the amendment to come before the Senate. The amendment is going to be debated. Of course,

I want to have something further to say about the Passamaquoddy project.

Mr. ROBINSON. It happens Passamaquoddy comes last in the amendment.

Mr. HALE. Not in my request for a division.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator may present his request if he desires to do so, but he cannot have a vote upon the amendment while it is being discussed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair state that in the opinion of the Chair, according to the amendment, the first question to be voted upon is the Florida ship canal.

Mr. HALE. I have simply gone about it in the other way, and have stricken out the provision relating to the Florida ship canal, leaving Passamaquoddy to be acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment which has been presented obviously applies first to the Florida ship canal. Upon that amendment, in the opinion of the Chair, the vote will first be taken on the Florida ship canal and subsequently upon Passamaquoddy.

Mr. HALE. Very well.

Mr. METCALF. Mr. President, today the Finance Committee agreed to report what I believe will prove to be the worst tax bill the Senate has ever been called upon to consider. I will modify that statement slightly by saying that I think probably the worst tax bill ever presented was the one which came to us from the other House.

Now we are trying to see how much money we can spend; not doing it in a legislative way, but by turning it over to some individuals to do with just as they wish. Is it not time that we went back to proper legislative procedure and that Congress should know where and how the money is to be spent?

Students will some day study the past 4 years of American history with wonder and amazement. It has been a period of chaos and political upheaval. I say the past 4 years, because it began with the party conventions of 1932. Immediately following those conventions, the present occupant of the White House made a series of vital speeches in which he entered into a solemn contract with the people of this country. We had every reason to believe that this contract would and should govern the course of events in this Nation during the 4 years which were to follow his inauguration.

These policies were outlined in the following solemn remarks made in the campaign of 1932:

> I regard reduction in Federal spending as one of the most important issues in this campaign. It is the most direct and effective contribution that Government can make to business.

In September he solemnly promised:

> I shall use this position of high responsibility to discuss up and down the country, in all seasons, at all times, the duty of reducing taxes. * * * This I pledge you, and nothing I have said in the campaign transcends in importance this covenant with the taxpayers of this country.

In October 1932 Governor Roosevelt said:

> Federal extravagance and improvidence bear a double evil; our whole people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxes.

In Chicago Candidate Roosevelt outlined his views on bureaucracy by saying:

> We must merge; we must consolidate subdivisions of Government; we must abolish useless offices.

In July 1932 Governor Roosevelt said:

> Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet deficits. Stop the deficits!

And he added:

> Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy.

I call the attention of the Senate to the phrase "liberal governments."

Upon the pledges and program roughly outlined in these speeches, the American people went to the polls in November 1932, and placed the present administration in complete control of the economic and social policies of this country.

On the date of the anniversary of the Russian revolution, President Roosevelt is said to have cabled to Soviet President Kalinin the following words:

> I am happy to extend sincere felicitations on this memorable anniversary.

Very soon the Democratic Party will celebrate the anniversary of its nomination of the President of the United States. Will a return greeting be sent by President Kalinin? Most certainly the placing in a powerful W. P. A. position of Katherine Kellock, wife of the propaganda agent for the Soviet Embassy, should please the heart of the Russian President. Certainly the adherence to socialistic doctrines on the part of the administration merits the felicitations of a Communist government. Surely the fight on the part of Secretary Perkins to retain radical aliens in this country should merit the approval of a Nation openly, instead of secretly, communistic; and surely the vast destruction of capital and private property through deliberate waste and extravagance merits a kind word from Communists all over the world.

It is a long, long way from the promises of the Democratic candidate in 1932 to legislation such as we have before us today. We were promised economy, and we have received extravagance. As the able Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] pointed out yesterday, relief appropriations up to the next fiscal year will total $13,187,675,000. We are now about to appropriate nearly $2,500,000,000 for the C. C. C., for general public works, and for boondoggling. Instead of reducing taxes, we have been working 4 months on a billion-dollar tax bill; and we are faced with the probability of enacting a tax law which no one can understand, which few businesses can withstand, and which is much more in keeping with communism than with the individualistic beliefs of the American people.

No one really knows where this relief money is to go. We know that much of it will be wasted, and we know that much of it will be used for political purposes. Old Boondog will take most of it for useless and silly projects.

The boondog bays. He tears crazily through the country on his mission of boondoggling, dragging the political tin can tied to his tail by General Farley and feeding on the few remaining assets of a fast-disappearing race of taxpayers. Mr. President, I am afraid he has the rabies.

Old Boondog took Wigwam Brook at West Orange, N. J., in an unguarded moment, and left $14,962 of taxpayers' money to pave the bed of Wigwam Brook:

> How peacefully should the waters sleep,
> With Boondog's mattress in her deep!

Harry Hopkins sent his Old Boondog into Allentown, Pa. He should have known that a boondog afflicted with rabies would dash straight to the nearest institution for mental observation, and so he did. When he left Allentown, the W. P. A. started giving facials, manicures, and hair waves to the patients in the Allentown State Hospital. So gratifying was Old Boondog's sense of well being that he announced beauty treatments would be given to the inmates of the Philadelphia General Hospital and the Torrance State Hospital; and all at the expense of the taxpayers.

Mr. President, I have heard of W. P. A. schools for tap dancing, for opera, for housemaids, and sewing circles, but this adventure within the portals of mental institutions at last brings Old Boondog into a sphere of activity more directly related to his nature.

Old Boondog had a hard day in Vermont. At Burlington he allotted $24,000 to repair the walls of the reservoir, only to find there was nothing wrong with the reservoir. How Old Boondog must have growled and tossed his froth! But he would not leave until he had taken at least one more bite out of Mr. Taxpayer. Not Old Boondog! So he allotted $62,000 to repair the community center. When he could not find a community center anywhere, he left in disgust and made a mad dash for Massachusetts.

At Waltham, Mass., $10,000 of the taxpayers' funds were left to boondoggle the water and filth from a piggery.

Five hundred thousand dollars of taxpayers' money has been allotted for a school for housemaids. Oh, how nice it will be for the hungry families on relief to have servants with Parisian finesse, who know all the delicacies of the table and how to serve them. "Friandises, Madame?"

Old Boondog is trying to find out how much of everything we eat and wear. Thousands of dollars in public funds are being spent to determine how much we have paid for crutches and hot-water bottles. I have one of the schedules. Here is what the W. P. A. worker is supposed to find out when he canvasses the American home: How many sun suits, bathing suits, pairs of drawers, shirts, ties, pajamas, rubbers, you own; what they are made of, and how much you paid for them; how much you pay for shoeshines; what your underwear is made of, and whether it is knit or woven, in suits or shirts and drawers. Old Boondog wants to know how many pairs of shoes you have, what kind of shoes they are, and how much you paid for them. How many cigarettes do you smoke, and what do you spend for candy and ice cream and whisky.

This schedule, printed as part of a W. P. A. project and costing thousands of dollars, seeks the answers to something like 700 questions about the personal habits of American families. A memorandum from the Department of Labor says this investigation will be made into the habits of all groups of people. Senators, Old Boondog may be at your front doors one of these days!

In West Virginia Old Boondog announced that the President had approved $45,066 to repair Johnny Cake and Panther Creeks and to improve 3 miles of road from Mohawk to Isban.

Espanola, N. Mex., has 314 inhabitants, and gets a W. P. A. gymnasium costing $19,000.

Mr. President, I am going to vote against this wanton extravagance. I suppose there is little possibility of doing so, but I should like to get down to the business of legislating instead of taking orders from the executive branch of the Government. All of us know that very little legislation originates on Capitol hill, and a very few of these appropriations are actually approved by us at heart. I should like to cut the deficits; to reduce the cost of government by 25 percent; to go up and down the land at all seasons and declare the necessity for cutting taxes; to carry out the pledge of absolute loyalty to the economy program; to regard Federal spending as one of the most important issues in public life; to stand by the philosophy that economy is the most direct and effective contribution that government can make to business; to adhere to the belief that nothing transcends in importance the economy covenant with the taxpayers of the country; to adopt and live under the philosophy that Federal extravagance and improvidence bear a double evil; and that our whole people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxation. I should like to accuse the present administration of being the greatest spending administration in peacetime in all our history. Mr. President, we must legislate; we must consolidate subdivisions of Government; we must abolish useless offices. Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet deficits. Stop the deficits!

I am indebted to President Roosevelt for many of these words. They are words out of the dead past—a past which has been forgotten, but a past which will be a skeleton in the closet of the Democratic Party for many years to come.

Mr. President, of course, we should see that no one suffers or goes hungry or cold; but why throw away the money of the taxpayers as it is being thrown away today?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, earlier in the day the Senate adopted an amendment presented by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] to an amendment of the committee, on page 29, line 19. At the request of the Senator from Oregon, I asked that the amendment as amended be passed over. Since that time I have communicated with the Senator from Pennsylvania and I have his authority to state that he has no objection to a reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment which he offered to the committee amendment was agreed to, relating to the preparation of a list of unemployables. I therefore move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have not had opportunity to confer with the able Senator from Pennsylvania. However, I am advised that his wishes are that the motion to reconsider shall prevail. Is it not the understanding of the Senator from South Carolina that the Senator from Pennsylvania desires that the amendment be inserted at another place in the bill?

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from Pennsylvania stated that he was vitally interested in the adoption of the amendment which he offered; therefore he did not want to have any doubt about it being included in the bill, and that he would desire to offer it at some other place in the bill. If the Senator from Pennsylvania does not return, I shall be glad to offer his amendment at another point in the bill. The Senator from Pennsylvania and I are in accord as to this matter. He is very much interested in this subject and is entirely willing to withdraw his amendment after the vote by which it was adopted shall have been reconsidered.

Mr. McNARY. I think that is very fair, and certainly would protect the Senator from Pennsylvania, which is all the interest I have in the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS] to the committee amendment, on page 29, line 19, was agreed to, be reconsidered. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have authority from the Senator from Pennsylvania to withdraw his amendment, the vote by which it was agreed to having been reconsidered.

I now desire to offer an amendment on page 29, line 21, which was offered in the Committee on Appropriations. It does not appear in the text, having been omitted through some oversight. After the word "not", on line 21, I move to insert the words "prior to the date of the approval of this act."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRNES. This amendment now having been perfected, I ask whether we cannot at least dispose of it this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I should not want final action taken on this amendment today. I think it is rather understood that the Senate is to take a recess at this time.

Mr. BYRNES. Very well.

Mr. McNARY. The request of the Senator and his inquiry may well be renewed tomorrow at 12 o'clock, but I do not want further action taken this evening.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1936

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Open our eyes, O Lord, that we may see wondrous things out of Thy law. Give us not the spirit of fearfulness, but of power and love and discipline. Look upon us in our limitations and transgressions with divine compassion and mercy. We rejoice that there is a God who has adapted Himself to the wants of men; that there is a ruling spirit in the center of power and wisdom that knows how to love the unlovable and will endure more and more gloriously through the ages of time. Almighty God, as sin is a rebuke to any people, we beseech Thee to shed abroad Thy peace in all this troubled world and make it radiant with righteousness, truth, and wisdom. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 12120. An act to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 4549. An act authorizing the State Highway Board of the State of Georgia to replace, reconstruct, or repair the free highway bridge across the Savannah River at or near the city of Augusta, Ga.; and

S. 4618. ORDER OF BUSINESS

The SPEAKER. There are two special orders this morning. With the indulgence of the gentlemen who are to be recognized under those special orders, the Chair will recognize Members to prefer unanimous-consent requests which will not involve any time.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING URGES THE WOMEN OF AMERICA TO SUPPORT THE PEACE AMENDMENT

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a magazine article which deals with a bill I have introduced.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is the article very long?

Mr. LUDLOW. It is not. My remarks and the article will probably not consume more than a page and a half of the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, with the whole world in a state of seething restlessness; with greed and hatred fanning the flames of strife in many lands; with dictators thrumming the strings of war; with the tramp, tramp, tramp of marching feet echoing and reechoing throughout Europe, Africa, and the Orient; with portentous and unmistakable signs indicating the imminence of a conflict that may almost, if not quite, destroy civilization; are we going to sit idly by and permit this Seventy-fourth Congress to adjourn sine die without doing something of an effective nature to save our precious boys from being dragged into the slaughter pens of foreign wars?

I once knew a great man who, in spite of his patrician birth and ancestry, and his high position of wealth and distinction in society, always took compassionate interest in the problems of the poor, and the most stirring eulogy in a deluge of laudatory comment on his life and works after he had passed to the Great Beyond was a simple sentence expressed by a member of the bar of my home city:

He had a conscience that never slept.

Realizing the frightful possibilities of the world situation I cannot refrain from expressing the fervent wish that the consciences of Members of Congress would never sleep until we enact legislation at this very session of Congress to protect America from involvement in the terrible tragedies that lurk just beyond our visible horizon. If we think hard and prayerfully we will have to admit that we have done nothing worth while at this session to keep our country out of war.

The neutrality law we have enacted is so weak a four-horse team could be driven through it. It is no protection. Our well-meant McSwain bill to take the profit out of war by statute has struck the reefs and floundered in the Senate. We are driving rapidly toward the close of the Congress, leaving America pathetically exposed to war.

It is not, even now, too late to do something if we will take up and pass House Joint Resolution No. 167, the war-referendum and anti-war-profits resolution I have introduced. It provides for an amendment to the Constitution: (a) To permit the people of America to vote on a declaration of war except in the case of attack or invasion and; (b) to take the profit out of war.

Take the profit out of war and there will be few wars. The referendum part of my proposed amendment is based on the philosophy that those who have to suffer and, if need be, to die and to bear the crushing burdens and sorrows of war, shall have something to say as to whether war shall be declared.

Not through pride of authorship but from a firm conviction I am certain that this is the best proposal so far advanced to keep our country out of foreign wars. I believe that if it is adopted America will never enter another war except righteous wars of self-defense.

The magazine, Good Housekeeping, which numbers its readers by the millions, has placed its powerful influence back of my proposed peace amendment, and it has entered upon a patriotic campaign to introduce my resolution to the women of America as a measure that will serve effectively to keep America out of war. Who has a better right to vote on a declaration of war than the wives, mothers, sisters, and sweethearts of the men whose lives will be thrown into the holocaust if there is another war? Women go down into the valley of the shadow of death to bring our boys into the world. Why should they not have something to say as to whether their flesh and blood shall be hurled into the hell of foreign conflicts?

Mr. William F. Bigelow, the distinguished and wise editor of Good Housekeeping, has undertaken to point out to the women of America how very important it is that my resolution shall pass as a protection to the homes and firesides and the lives of our fine young Americans.

He is urging women all over this country to request their Members of Congress to sign discharge petition no. 28 which I have filed at the Speaker's desk as the only means available under parliamentary procedure to bring my proposed peace amendment out of committee and before the House for action at this session. The discharge petition will not become effective unless, or until, 218 Members of the House sign it.

Under the caption "Good Housekeeping Advocates a Peace Amendment" the following appears in the June issue of that magazine:

On the 14th of February 1935, Mr. LOUIS LUDLOW, Representative from Indiana, introduced the following joint resolution in Congress:

"SECTION 1. Except in the event of an invasion of the United States or its territorial possessions and attack upon its citizens residing therein, the authority of Congress to declare war shall not become effective until confirmed by a majority of all votes cast thereon in a Nation-wide referendum. Congress may by law provide for the enforcement of this section.

"SEC. 2. Whenever war is declared, the President shall immediately conscript and take over for use by the Government all the public and private war properties, yards, factories, and supplies, fixing the compensation for private properties temporarily employed for the war period at a rate not in excess of 4 per centum, based on tax values assessed in the year preceding the war."

The resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. A hearing on the bill was held June 19, 1935. Mr. LUDLOW has made several attempts to have the bill reported out so that it can be debated on the floor of the House, but the bill was still in committee on May 1st. A letter to your Congressman urging him, or her, to sign discharge petition no. 28 at the Speaker's desk may force the reporting of the bill. As this is the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress, no bills will hold over; the peace amendment bill will die with all the others bottled up in committees. It will therefore be necessary for a new bill to be introduced when the Seventy-fifth Congress convenes in January 1937.

Such a bill will be introduced; we can promise our readers that. It may, probably will, be worded differently, but its chief purpose will be the same: so to amend the Constitution as to give to the people the right to pass judgment on any proposal to go to a war outside our own borders. Note that no attempt is made to curtail the authority of Congress "in the event of an invasion." No sensible person would want to delay action by our armed forces in such an emergency. We should at all times be prepared to strike, and strike hard, if we are attacked.

Now a peace amendment is not going to be passed by Congress unless voters demand that it be passed. It means giving up power that Congress has always held unrestrictedly. Many Congressmen think that that power should be given up, that no small group should hold in its hands the destiny of a people—possibly the death sentences of millions of our youth. So here is something for women to do—mothers of sons, wives, sisters, sweethearts. Men who will vote for a peace amendment—the beginning of the end of war for this country—can be elected in November—if the women say they must be.

Mr. Eby (Kerr Eby) replied as follows when we told him about the peace amendment:

"By the Lord Harry, I believe you may have nailed something! Not because such an amendment seems right and proper to me, but because it would drag the question right out into the open to be fought for and against. It is a concrete issue. Something to get hold of. It has the beauty of being truly democratic American in that it uses our own institutions in our own way. * * * Your idea is grandly democratic to me. Those who are about to die can vote on it.

"At the risk of being officious, I'd suggest that the idea of the President and Congress being wholly at liberty in defense should be heavily stressed, and (this I most sincerely believe) neither our Army nor Navy should be weakened in the least—until the time all nations acquire some sense. I'm just nut enough to believe that time will come. The world is literally dying for peace."

In its May issue Good Housekeeping published the following powerful appeal which I wish every woman in America—especially every mother—might read and ponder over:

A PEACE AMENDMENT

We are suggesting a big thing for Mothers' Day—for the Mothers' Days of all the years to come. Flowers our mothers have had in profusion, and flowers they will have as long as flowers are given as tokens of love. Another significance is becoming attached to the day: A solicitude for all mothers, that they may have the care that belongs to every woman who brings a child into the world. And now we are ready to consider the next big forward step: To say to mothers that, without the consent of the majority of the voters in a referendum, their sons and daughters may not be drafted for war purposes, unless the country is attacked or invaded. This assurance should come, can only come, through an amendment to the Constitution. Let us call it the peace amendment.

The power to declare war is, in the Constitution, given unrestrictedly to Congress. In the beginning there was nothing else to do; the people were so widely scattered, the means of communication so slow and unreliable, that it was impossible to discuss with the Nation the things that might seem to be driving it to war, and ask for a referendum vote. Now all that is changed. By means of the radio every voter may sit at the President's desk and listen to his reasons for asking a declaration of war. It is no longer necessary for a small group of men and women—531 at present—to have the power to make the decision that may mean to millions of young men that they are to be offered as bloody or gassed sacrifices to the god of war, that their bodies may be left, as useless to the world as to themselves, on foreign battlefields. They who will have to do the fighting will know, as well as do the Members of Congress, the reasons why the fighting should be done. And their lives should not be pawned without their consent.

The question as to whether Congress has ever abused its power need not enter here. It is the question of a larger right that we are discussing. There is so much evidence that all wars are useless and that they not only waste lives and livelihoods but fail to settle disputes between nations, that there is abundant reason for declaring that the people themselves should decide whether they want the Nation to go to war. That does not touch the matter of defense in case of attack. As commander in chief of the Army and Navy, the President can use these forces at any time. And in the world as it is now and seems likely to be for a long time to come, those forces should be sufficient to meet any emergency, any possible combination of nations against our own.

There is now pending before the House of Representatives a bill proposing a peace amendment. At a hearing on the bill its author, Hon. LOUIS LUDLOW, of Indiana, said: "The decision as to whether there shall be war or peace should be made * * * by the 125,000,000 people who comprise the American Nation * * *. This proposal reaches to the very fundamentals of equality as defined in the Declaration of Independence. It makes me indignant to think that a man, just because he happens to hold an official station, may order me out to be shot and killed without consulting me; and in the interest of justice, in the interest of perpetuating the principles of equality on which this Nation arose in majesty out of the oppressions of the past, it is time to revise the fundamental law of the land so that every citizen of the Republic, however poor and humble, shall have an equal right with every other citizen to decide whether or not this Nation shall go to war."

Yes, there are arguments against a peace amendment, and lots of them—perhaps as many as were raised against any amendment ever proposed or ratified. One of them is that a referendum would cause delay. Gen. Smedley D. Butler—you will remember that he was with the marines at Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood—is for it just for that reason. "I believe it will delay action", he said, "and that therefore all these adjustments can be made. There is no necessity for fighting except in cases of invasion." And there are many more objections. But we are not so much concerned with the negatives based on the difficulty of going to war that this amendment would impose—for we think they are largely mechanical and could be solved—as we are with the fact that killing men to settle disputes is a senseless pastime, as outmoded as it is costly. This whole thing is not a question of whether power should be taken from Congress, but whether there should not be given back to the people the right to decide whether or not they are willing to have their sons killed in battle or die of wounds or disease or spend a lifetime in pain.

Women have asked Good Housekeeping what they can do to end war. We believe that work for a peace amendment promises better results than anything else they can do, for with such an amendment war, so far as this country is concerned, will be a thing of the past. The people will not vote for the United States to take war to another nation. And if we give no cause for war—and keep our powder dry—we will not be attacked.

Now, you mothers * * *.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the address of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER], I may address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that immediately following the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG], I may address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

DON'T LET THEM FOOL YOU, MR. FARMER! HERE ARE THE FACTS

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, for months now we have been hearing from certain newspapers and certain politicians that as a result of the policies of this administration the plight of the American farmer has become more and more unbearable.

We are told that he has not really made any progress in the last 3½ years, and that, on the contrary, the American farmers' precious home market is being taken away from them by tariff negotiation which let in a flood of competitive farm imports.

We are subjected to sensational stories of how Chinese coolies and South American peons are unfairly competing with the American farmer in his own front yard.

LET US LOOK AT THE RECORD

Mr. Speaker, I would not for a moment deny to these sensationalists the right to make all the ridiculous statements they wish to about the policies and accomplishments of this administration, but I would humbly suggest that every once in a while in a political campaign there ought to be a breathing spell during which a few indisputable, unassailable facts could be introduced and examined by the electorate.

I believe that the people of my district wish more than anything else to know the facts on these controversial issues, and I consider it both a duty and a privilege to present these facts.

WHAT TABLE NO. 1 REVEALS

The figures I use are the official statistics made public by the Department of Commerce and analyzed by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture.

Table 1 shows agricultural imports classified between noncompetitive and competitive products.

Referring to the last column of competitive imports minus sugar, it will be noted that, while these imports were considerably larger in 1935 than in immediately preceding years, they were substantially smaller than in the years prior to 1931.

[1] Competitive agricultural imports include imports similar to agricultural products commercially produced in the United States or directly substituted to a significant extent for domestic agricultural products.
[2] Imports for consumption.

Foreign Agricultural Service Division. Compiled from Foreign Commerce and Navigation of the United States and official records of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The United States has for many years imported regularly and in large volume a number of competitive agricultural products, such as wool, sugar, and flaxseed. But it is not these "regularly imported" products which have aroused general interest in recent months. Most of the recent discussion in regard to agricultural imports has been concerned with such products as grain and feed, meats, dairy products, and eggs.

IMPORTS DECREASE

When the monthly statistics of imports of these latter products are examined for the period January 1934 to date, it will be found that these imports started to increase in the middle or latter part of 1934. They reached their peak, taking the groups as a whole, during the middle of 1935 and have since shown a marked recession. Generally speaking, the imports of grain, which started in 1934, declined abruptly or ceased as soon as the crops of 1935 became available. The imports of livestock products have held up longer simply because it takes more time to restore livestock numbers than to increase the production of annual crops.

NO IMPORTS IN JANUARY

Table 2 shows the imports of certain selected products, by months, since January 1934.

It will be noted that the imports of oats began in small volume in July 1934 and reached a peak of 2,600,000 bushels in March 1935.

Imports of oats have been insignificant since July 1935, there being no imports whatever in January and only 6,000 bushels in February 1936.

A similar situation is shown in the imports of rye, which have been negligible since August 1935.

CORN IMPORTS EXPLAINED

The imports of corn continued longer than those of oats as the 1935 corn crop did not become available until November of that year.

Not only was the 1935 corn crop about 350,000,000 bushels below normal but the quality in many of the Corn Belt States was exceedingly poor, thus making a large part of it unfit for shipment.

The reduction below normal in last year's crop occurred largely in certain Corn Belt States which normally ship out considerable quantities.

Even with the reduced numbers of livestock in the United States the 1935 corn crop was inadequate, because existing stocks had to be replenished, feed requirements per animal unit were larger as a result of the severe winter, and, in addition, industrial utilization of corn increased.

FARMERS MAKE MONEY ON CORN

As a result of the above factors, domestic corn prices continued at a level sufficiently high to permit the importation of corn from Argentina, where prices were very low as a result of a record crop last year.

These imports were confined largely to the coastal regions.

Nevertheless, imports of corn have been running substantially smaller during the current marketing season than in 1934–35, and the imports in March 1936, the latest month for which figures are available, were about 65 percent less than in March 1935.

The imports of barley malt, which started to assume significant proportions in 1934 after the repeal of prohibition, showed a considerable increase in 1935.

These imports reached a peak of almost 44,000,000 pounds in June 1935, but have since fallen off, amounting to 18,153,000 pounds in March 1936.

VERY LITTLE WHEAT IMPORTED

Imports of wheat continue at a higher level than in the 1934–35 season.

This is due to the fact that our spring wheat crop in 1935 was much below domestic requirements for this type of wheat and was also of unusually poor quality because of serious rust damage.

Nevertheless, imports of wheat from the 1st of July 1935 through March 1936 totaled only 28,000,000 bushels, or a little more than 4.5 percent of our total wheat production in 1935.

Imports through March were still below the estimated deficit in our spring wheat supplies this year.

ANIMALS AND ANIMAL PRODUCTS

Turning to animal and animal products, it will be observed in the following table that imports of cattle started to increase in February 1935 and continued throughout 1935 considerably above the corresponding months of 1934.

The total imports in 1935, however, of 378,000 head were substantially less than the imports in the years 1927 to 1929.

Imports of canned beef, most of which came from Argentina and Uruguay, have for many years been substantial.

Imports in 1935, however, were larger than in any year since 1929, and imports during the first 3 months of 1936 were somewhat larger than those of a year earlier.

TALLOW

Imports of tallow, which is also a beef product, commenced in September 1934 and rose to a peak of 33,000,000 pounds in May 1935.

Since that time imports have shown a definitely declining tendency, amounting to only 5.4 million pounds in March 1936.

BUTTER

Imports of butter were substantial during the first 6 months of 1935 but they were of very small volume during the last half of the year.

While the imports of butter in 1935 reached a relatively high level of 22,675,000 pounds, they did not equal the record imports of 23,741,000 pounds reached in 1923.

The imports of butter in the first 3 months of 1936 were 58 percent less than in the same months of 1935.

DRIED EGGS

Imports of egg products, chiefly dried eggs from China, were larger in 1935 than in any year since 1931 but were considerably smaller than in the years prior to 1931.

So far as 1935 is concerned these imports reached their peak in May and June.

This review of the principal agricultural import products shows clearly that imports are receding from the peaks reached in 1935 and in some cases are now of negligible proportions.

INSIGNIFICANT PROPORTION

While the imports of these products were larger in 1935 than in the immediately preceding years, they represented in most cases an insignificant proportion of the production of similar products in the United States.

A comparison of the imports of certain competitive products with our average production is shown in table 3.

PERCENTAGE SMALL

It will be noted, for instance, that our imports of corn in 1935, amounting to 43,242,000 bushels, represented only 1.7 percent of our average corn production during the period 1928 to 1932.

Last year's imports of oats amounted to eight-tenths of 1 percent of the average production, wheat 3.2 percent of our average wheat production, and barley and barley malt 4.7 percent of our barley production.

SHORT ON RYE

Rye is the only one of the grains the imports of which reached a substantial percentage of our average domestic production.

The proportion of imports in 1935 to average production was approximately 25 percent.

The reason for these relatively large imports of rye is to be found in the fact that in both 1933 and 1934 the rye crops in the United States were less than half of our average previous production.

These very short crops, coming at a time when the repeal of prohibition led to some increase in consumption, made it necessary for the United States to import substantial quantities of rye in order to satisfy our domestic requirements.

As previously indicated, the imports of rye have been negligible since our 1935 crop became available in July of last year.

Incidentally, the production of rye in the United States in 1935 was in excess of our domestic requirements, so that we now have an export surplus of this grain.

BEEF AND PORK

With respect to meat, the total imports of beef in 1935, most of which consisted of canned beef, represented only 3 percent of our average total federally inspected production of beef and veal.

The imports of pork represented only one-tenth of 1 percent of our average total inspected pork.

In fact, these pork imports were only 11.3 percent of our reduced exports of cured pork in 1935, excluding lard.

CHEESE AND BUTTER FOR 1935

Imports of butter in 1935 were substantially greater than the average imports in preceding years but they represented only 1.1 percent of our average production of butter in this country. Imports of cheese and casein in 1935 each represented about 10 percent of our average production. It will be noted, however, that imports of both of these items in 1935 were considerably below average.

Imports of egg products, chiefly dried eggs, in 1935 were much smaller than average, although they were larger than in immediately preceding years. The imports in 1935 represented about eight-tenths of 1 percent of the average egg production of the United States.

WHAT I HAVE SHOWN SO FAR

I have shown that there was a substantial increase in the imports of certain agricultural products in 1935, compared with the immediately preceding years, that these imports have shown a definite recession, and finally that they have, in practically all cases, represented an insignificant part of our domestic production. Now let us consider in more detail the relationship of the drought of 1934 and also of the agricultural-adjustment programs to this increase in agricultural imports.

WHAT THE DROUGHT HAD TO DO WITH IT

To understand the significance of the drought in relation to imports, it is necessary to know the extent to which our production in 1934 was reduced from normal. The drought of 1934 was the most widespread and serious in the history of the United States and affected seriously the production of all of the major crops in this country except cotton and tobacco.

The products principally affected were feeds and fodder. It has been estimated by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics that the drought of 1934 caused a reduction from average in our production of feed of 50,000,000 tons.

In other words, in order to have had a normal supply of feed during the latter half of 1934 and up until the crops of 1935 became available it would have been necessary to import 50,000,000 tons.

But, as a matter of fact, the United States, during the full 18 months from July 1934, when the effects of the drought first became apparent, until December 1935, when the 1935 corn crop became available, imported less than three and one-half million tons of all types of feeds and fodder, or only 7 percent of the shortage.

BEEF CATTLE AND CALVES

A similar situation exists with respect to the imports of livestock and livestock products.

Beef cattle may be taken as an example. The number of beef cattle and calves in the United States in January 1934 was estimated to be 36,000,000 head.

The number in January 1935 was estimated at 32,000,000 head.

This reduction of 4,000,000 head may be compared with our imports of beef cattle in 1935 of only 368,000 head.

In the case of imported beef, which consists principally of canned beef, the situation is much the same. The federally inspected slaughter of cattle and calves in the United States in 1934 produced six thousand seven hundred and twenty-seven million pounds of beef and veal, compared with five thousand two hundred and sixteen million pounds in 1935, a drop of about one thousand five hundred million pounds.

Figures for both years include provisional estimates of beef produced from relief slaughter. The imports of beef and veal in 1935, including canned beef on a dressed-weight basis, were just short of 200,000,000 pounds, or 13 percent of the reduction in our Federal slaughter between 1934 and 1935.

HOW DID A. A. A. AFFECT IMPORTS?

These are only a few of numerous examples that might be cited of the tremendous decrease in production of agricultural products in the United States resulting from the drought and of the relatively small part that imports played in making up this loss in production.

The question is frequently raised, however, as to the effect of the agricultural-adjustment programs on imports.

Many people who do not realize the overshadowing importance of the drought in reducing domestic supplies of food, feed, and livestock in 1934 and 1935 seem to be under the impression that the imports have been a direct result of the agricultural-adjustment programs.

They are unable, as they put it, to see the justification of paying American farmers to reduce production and then permitting imports to come in to take the place of American products.

A MINOR FACTOR

First of all, it must be admitted that the adjustment programs, by helping to raise American farm prices, were to some extent a factor in making the American market more attractive to imports; but they were only a minor factor, since the reduction in production that may be attributed to the adjustment programs is very much less than the reduction that may be attributed to the low yields resulting from the drought.

Furthermore, there were no production-adjustment programs with respect to certain products, such as rye, barley, oats, dairy products, beef cattle, and eggs, the imports of which showed large increases.

These facts will be best brought out by an examination of individual products.

REDUCED PRODUCTION OF WHEAT

The United States production of wheat in the crop year 1934–35 was 497,000,000 bushels, a drop of 364,000,000 bushels from the annual average of 861,000,000 bushels for the 5-year period 1928 to 1932.

Of this reduction about 310,000,000 bushels were chargeable to the drought and 54,000,000 bushels to acreage reduction, in accordance with adjustment contracts under the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

WHEAT UNFIT FOR USE

Wheat imported into the United States for consumption in 1934–35 totaled 14,000,000 bushels, or only 5 percent of the loss caused by the drought.

These imports represented only 3 percent of the United States wheat production for the crop year.

Furthermore, of this total importation of 14,000,000 bushels, over 57 percent represented wheat unfit for human consumption brought into the country chiefly as feed for livestock in the drought-affected areas.

In the 1935–36 crop year, production of all wheat in the United States totaled 603,000,000 bushels, or 257,000,000 bushels less than the 5-year—1928–32—average.

The reduction in production during this crop year was also due primarily to unfavorable weather conditions and particularly to serious rust damage in the spring-wheat States.

Imports of wheat during the first 9 months of the crop year—July through March—amounted to 28,000,000 bushels.

AT LAST FARMERS ARE MAKING MONEY

In the last analysis, the most important phase of this whole import subject is the effect of these imports upon the income of American farmers. Are imports really coming into the country in such volume as to depress our prices and result in a serious decrease in farm income?

It has already been shown that the imports since 1934 represent, in most cases, a very small part of our domestic supply.

It is for this reason that in the vast majority of cases they have had no significant effect in depressing American farm prices.

The most that can be attributed to imports is that in certain cases such as, for example, butter, seasonal imports during the period when our butter supplies are shortest in the winter prevent prices of butterfat in this country from rising as much as they otherwise would.

In other words, the tariff of 14 cents a pound on butter is, under these circumstances, effective in maintaining American prices above world prices by substantially this amount.

One way of considering the signficance of imports to farm income is to compare the value of the imports of competitive products year by year with the gross farm income of the United States for the same years.

[1] Competitive agricultural imports include imports of agricultural products commercially produced in the United States or directly substituted to a significant extent for domestic agricultural products.

[2] Includes income from rental and benefit payments of $278,000,000 for 1933, $594,000,000 for 1934, and $480,000,000 for 1935.

AMAZING GAIN TO FARMERS

The income of farmers in the United States in 1935, when the competitive agricultural imports were valued at $623,000,000, was $8,110,000,000.

The income of farmers in the United States in 1932, when competitive imports were valued at only $296,000,000, was only $5,337,000,000, the lowest in the recent history of this country.

The table also shows that in the years prior to the depression, when imports of competitive farm products were running at a total value in the neighborhood of $1,000,000,000 a year, the income of the farmers of the United States was much larger, running between $11,000,000,000 and $12,000,000,000 a year.

In other words, the American farmer has been better off from the standpoint of total income in the years when competitive imports have been large than in the years when such imports have been small.

In the more prosperous years farm prices are high enough so that imports are attracted into the American market over the prevailing tariff wall.

In the years of very low farm income prices are so low in this country that the American market is not attractive to imports.

ANOTHER WAY OF LOOKING AT IT

Another way of considering the significance of imports is to relate the changes in volume of imports to the prices received by American farmers. Just as in the case of gross farm income, the prices received by farmers have been higher during periods of large imports than they were when imports were small.

A few specific examples will suffice to make this clear. The average farm price of wheat in the United States in both the calendar years 1934 and 1935 was 84 cents a bushel.

In those years the imports of wheat for consumption in the United States were approximately 8,000,000 and 17,000,000 bushels, respectively.

In 1933 the farm price of wheat was 67 cents a bushel and imports were 32,000 bushels.

In 1932 the farm price was only 38 cents a bushel and imports amounted to the negligible figure of 3,000 bushels.

MORE MONEY FOR CORN

The average farm price of corn for the calendar year 1935 was 77 cents a bushel. Imports of corn in that year totaled 43,000,000 bushels. The farm price of corn in 1934 was 65 cents a bushel, and imports were 3,000,000 bushels.

In 1933, when the farm price of corn averaged only 38 cents per bushel, our imports of corn amounted to only 160,000 bushels.

BETTER PRICE FOR OATS

The farm price of oats in the United States during the crop year 1934–35, when imports amounted to approximately 16,000,000 bushels, was 48 cents a bushel.

But the average price to producers of oats thus far in the 1935–36 season, when imports have amounted to only 63,000 bushels, has been 28.5 cents a bushel.

RYE ALMOST DOUBLES IN PRICE

The farm price of rye was 71.3 cents a bushel during the marketing year 1934–35, when imports amounted to 11,000,000 bushels. The average farm price of rye thus far in 1935–36, when we have had practically no imports, has been only 38 cents a bushel.

The fundamental fact that should be borne in mind in considering imports in relation to farm income and farm prices is that prices received by American farmers for most of those drought-affected products are determined primarily by the domestic supply-and-demand situation, and that increased imports are a result of relatively high prices and decreased imports are a result of relatively low prices.

FALSE STATEMENT CORRECTED

I have seen statements that the increase in imports of competitive agricultural products during 1934 and 1935 has been due in large part to reductions in duties made in connection with reciprocal-trade agreements.

This simply is not true.

Generally speaking, there have been no changes in our tariff rates on the principal imported items.

In other words, reciprocal-trade agreements have had little, if anything, to do with the increase in imports.

The only trade agreements that have been signed up to the present time in connection with which the United States made any significant reductions whatever in duties on agricultural products are those with Cuba, Canada, and the Netherlands.

Of these three trade agreements, the only one that was in effect throughout the year was the one with Cuba.

TRADE AGREEMENT WITH CANADA

The trade agreement with Canada has been in effect only since January 1, 1936.

It is, therefore, obvious that this agreement could have had nothing to do with the increase in agricultural imports in 1935.

With respect to the possible effects of the agreement in causing larger imports into the United States during 1936 and future years, it is important to note that the duty reductions made on the Canadian agricultural products which would be likely to offer the most competition, namely, cattle, cream, and seed potatoes, were on only a limited quantity.

For example, the duty on beef cattle weighing 700 pounds or more was reduced on a quantity equivalent to three-fourths of 1 percent of our domestic slaughter of cattle and calves, namely, 155,799 head.

Incidentally, imports of cattle of this weight from Mexico or any other countries at the reduced rate have to come within a total of 155,799 head.

The duty on calves weighing 175 pounds or less was reduced on a quantity equivalent to one-fourth of 1 percent of our total annual slaughter of cattle and calves, or 51,933 head.

During the first 3 months of the operation of the agreement the imports of cattle weighing 700 pounds or more from both Canada and Mexico have totaled 44,031 head or 28 percent of the total customs quota.

The imports of calves have totaled 4,458 head or 8.5 percent of the total quota.

ONLY 1,293 GALLONS OF CANADIAN CREAM

In the case of cream the duty was reduced on a quantity of 1,500,000 gallons.

During the first 3 months of the agreement, however, the actual imports of cream have total only 1,293 gallons, which indicates that in spite of the duty reduction the American market is not attractive to shippers of Canadian cream.

Cheese is the only important agricultural item the imports of which have shown any significant increase since the signing of the Canadian trade agreement.

It is true that imports of cheese in the period January through March were considerably larger than in the same period of the immediately preceding years and somewhat larger than in the corresponding months of years prior to 1930, when the same rate of 5 cents a pound applied.

But even though these imports showed some increase, they represented only 3.3 percent of the Cheddar cheese production in the United States during the same 3 months.

Incidentally, the total imports of all kinds of cheese from all countries were only 7 percent larger in the first 3 months of 1936 than in the corresponding months of 1935.

EXPORT MARKET GAINS

Against this possible small disadvantage of increased cheese imports must be set the very substantial gain in the exports of a considerable number of agricultural items from the United States to Canada, which may be directly attributed to reductions in duties made by Canada in connection with the trade agreement.

For example, our milled-rice exports to Canada totaled 2,746,000 pounds in the first 3 months that the trade agreement has been in effect, compared with 331,000 pounds in the same months of 1935, a gain of 730 percent.

Our exports of grapefruit to Canada totaled 191,000 boxes, compared with 139,000 boxes in January through March last year, a gain of 37 percent.

Exports of oranges to Canada amounted to 722,000 boxes during January through March of this year, compared with 568,000 boxes during the same months last year, a gain of 27 percent.

There were equally substantial gains in the exports of a large number of dried and canned fruits and nuts.

Our egg exports to Canada rose from the negligible figure of less than 7,400 dozen in January through March 1935 to 78,000 dozen in the same months of 1936. Exports of American cured pork to Canada—bacon, hams, and shoulders—totaled 118,000 pounds in the first 3 months of the year, compared with only 2,000 pounds in the same months of 1935.

At the same time the exports of cured pork to the rest of the world were 41 percent smaller than last year. The 1936 exports of other pickled and salted pork to Canada increased sharply, the figures for the first quarter being 151 percent larger than in 1935.

INCREASED BUYING POWER

Looking at the matter from the standpoint of farmers in the United States as a whole it seems clear that the gains in our exports of farm products to Canada much more than offset any losses resulting in increased imports of Canadian agricultural products into the United States. And beyond this, account must be taken of the increased purchasing power in the industrial sections of the country for such things as dairy products and beef, which results directly from our larger sales of manufactured goods to Canada under the trade agreement.

NOW YOU HAVE THE FACTS

Now that you have the facts you can see for yourself how much of the misleading propaganda by certain newspapers and by certain politicians is vicious, untrue, and intended to deceive you. The test of any policy in behalf of farmers or any other group is determined by the results. The fact that farmers are making more money today than at any previous time in years is the final answer to all the enemies of the Roosevelt administration who are trying to prejudice the farmers by substituting false propaganda for the truth. Do not let them fool you, Mr. Farmer! Make them stick to the facts!

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM O'BRIEN

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 10565) for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien, with a Senate amendment, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "not otherwise appropriated" and insert "allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CENTRAL VALLEY WATER PROJECT AUTHORITY OF CALIFORNIA

The SPEAKER. Under the special order, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] for 10 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may revise and extend my remarks and include therein a report to the P. W. A. with reference to the Central Valley Water Project Authority of the State of California by B. W. Thoron, Assistant Finance Director of the P. W. A., dated July 26, 1934, and certain correspondence that I have had back and forth between the P. W. A. and the Secretary of the Interior.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, when we had the reclamation projects under consideration a week ago, I attempted to obtain from the Public Works Administration in time so that I might use it during the debate, the report of B. W. Thoron, the Assistant Finance Director of the P. W. A. on the Central Valley project. I have just procured permission to extend my remarks in the RECORD to include that report.

My office first asked for that report a week prior to that date, and on the 16th day of May, the Saturday prior to the date when the matter was coming up in the House, a letter was written to the P. W. A. Administrator, Hon. Harold L. Ickes, requesting it, because at that time they said that they would require such a letter. Not having received it on Tuesday, the day before the matter came up, I called Mr. Ickes myself and was promised that I would receive it. It arrived after my time had expired on the floor. Immediately thereafter I wrote the P. W. A. and complimented them on their efficiency in seeing that the documents did not arrive until it was too late to use them in the debate.

What does that report disclose with reference to this project? It discloses that the administration itself, in its own investigation from inside sources, did not have a proper basis for submitting such a proposition to the President or for making an allotment for it. It discloses that this director, after his investigation, said that the estimates of power revenues by the applicant, by the Federal Power Commission, and by the engineer examiner are widely at variance; that the dependable market for power does not appear to us to justify the estimates of revenue of the applicant, as it appears that there must be a very large development of the market for power to absorb all of the available power which may be developed in connection with the project. On the other hand, he states the use of water for power must be subordinated to the other requirements if the water is to be available as and when needed for the other purposes of the project. This means that there will be a large variation in the amount of water released from the so-called Kennett Reservoir, and that that is absolutely true, because the reservoir is so near the head of the Sacramento Basin and the water stored must be used to equalize the flow from the tributary streams entering the Sacramento below the reservoir, that it will result in drawing down the water level of the reservoir in such way as to materially affect the operating head.

As to the plan of financing, it discloses that it does not appear that any estimate of assured revenues can be made which would warrant the conclusion that a loan for the construction of this project, payable solely from the net revenues derived therefrom, would be reasonably secured.

The project, if economically sound and carried to completion, would be of far-reaching benefit to the whole State of California, and more particularly to the counties which will receive its benefits, as well as to the particular lands directly affected. It therefore seems entirely reasonable to suggest that the cost of the project and the responsibility for financing it should be apportioned in some way commensurate with the benefits.

The report further states that a conservative estimate of reasonably assured revenues could be used as a basis for issuing a limited amount of revenue bonds to finance the plans at cost. The report further states that, in addition, proper account has not been taken of surplus crops that are now available and the question as to whether we should enter into that kind of reclamation project at a time when we have a surplus of the crops which that particular project would raise.

It appears from this report—and the entire report will be in the RECORD, under my permission to extend remarks—that this is absolutely being entered upon without regard to the question of its economic necessity and the economic efficiency of bringing more land into cultivation at such a time as this.

I am not surprised, in view of the manner in which allotments are being made by the P. W. A. and by other outfits in connection with the Government out of relief funds, that this allotment has been made so far as it has been made by the P. W. A. and other governmental authorities. It is so ridiculous that we should spend all this money at this time, a time when we have such a surplus of all these crops that are raised in this valley, further to develop irrigation projects. It appears in this report that it is absolutely unnecessary to go into such a large-scale project to take care of land already under cultivation, and that there can be no justification for it except as new lands are brought under irrigation. Those people who have irrigation projects would be faire to the country and to themselves if they would not come here with such outlandish and such ridiculous projects; and I hope the Congress will have all these things in mind when they come to vote on these matters again.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. GEARHART. Does the gentleman understand that there are between 400,000 and 500,000 acres in the upper San Joaquin Valley in a high condition of productivity which, unless they receive water from the building of this project, will revert to the condition of the desert and become utterly worthless?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I refuse to yield further; I have not the time. I will tell the gentleman the situation. The situation is that it is absolutely unnecessary to take care of the lands that are under high cultivation to have this great big expensive project. A few things could be done in the upper San Joaquin Valley that would entirely provide for and take decent care of these lands that are under cultivation; but there is absolutely no excuse for this big project, and the reports of the engineers all the way through sustain this viewpoint without conflict, stating that it is absolutely unnecessary to have this expense lay-out in order to take care of the lands already under cultivation.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I may say to the gentleman from New York that I live within a few miles of the land I just described, and I know, personally, that no definite plan has been offered by any engineer of consequence, or any engineer whose opinion is worthy of consideration, for the saving of these parching lands of the upper San Joaquin other than through the utilization of some, if not all, of the units of the Central Valley project.

Mr. TABER. Does the gentleman recognize the State engineer of California as an authority? He has studied the project and has demonstrated it clearly in his report.

Mr. GEARHART. I recognize Mr. Edward Hyatt, the State engineer of California, as the most able, consistent, and eloquent advocate of the Central Valley project in the United States today. We are in constant consultation with him. You cannot cite one in whom we have greater confidence.

Mr. TABER. And he has said that what the gentleman has asked is not necessary. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. Under the special order the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CARPENTER. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I trust that what I am about to say will not be misunderstood or will not seem out of place. I assure you I am most sincere. My service here the last 4 years has become such a vital part of my life that for some reason or other I do not feel I can sever my connections with this honorable body without expressing myself in these very few remarks before I leave.

While I have not served in Congress very long—there are many who have served so long they are considered veterans—I have been here and taken part in the affairs of our National Government during one of the most critical periods of our Nation's history. It has been my pleasure to have labored with, to have been personally acquainted with and met men and women who are destined to go down in history as our great leaders.

It has been a very great pleasure to have served with you, my colleagues, during these critical years. And while we may have had our differences in regard to legislative matters, you have always been so very courteous and considerate of me at all times.

I have never before witnessed men and women for the most part with such an earnest desire to serve their fellow men—so willing to give every matter presented to them their serious consideration or who had such sympathetic understanding of the needs and desires of the people of this country. I have never seen individuals to such an extent dedicate all their energies and even their very lives to those they represent, and to the general welfare. Would that I had the ability and the skill of a great artist to paint the wonderful battle scenes of the great struggles that go on here daily and to truly portray the heroes who patriotically, earnestly, and conscientiously carry on in these very chambers from day to day, whether they be leaders or merely buck privates in the rear ranks.

No one can appreciate the many duties and responsibilities that go with the office of Congressman until he has been elected to that high office. There is great joy and honor in attaining such position. After it has been reached the road is rough and rocky, with many pitfalls, and the woods are full of relentless savages. Honest and conscientious actions can be so misconstrued as to make them appear in an opposite light. Unfavorable news items, no matter how unfair, or whatever the motive, leave a wound that never heals.

Why do men aspire to such undertakings, you may ask me, if they have to undergo such strain, such hardships, and such humiliation? They seek the office. No one compels them to do so—it is voluntary on their part—and having attained it, why do they cling to it? It is that human ambition engendered in the spark of life that makes one desire to live, and in desiring to live to desire others to live. Living is not merely existing. It comprises those attributes which have ever been dominate among human beings—life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness as pronounced at the birth of our Nation, to secure which it is written that governments are instituted among men. It is irresistible, like the force of a glacier that sweeps all before it till the course is completed even out to the sea.

May our descendants never arrive at that period when they no longer desire leadership, or having attained the same they are not willing to make the sacrifices that go with it, as well as to enjoy its honors.

It is, therefore, with great reluctance that I leave these halls at this time. I have enjoyed every minute of my stay. I say again in conclusion it has been a great privilege to have been among you. Your political affiliations have made no difference to me, so that you were sincerely working for the best interest of those you represent and the best interest of our great country as a whole. When the Seventy-fourth Congress is declared adjourned sine die, may I extend to each and every one of you my best wishes and a fond adieu. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield for that purpose?

Mr. YOUNG. I yield.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I am sure I voice the sentiments of the entire membership of the House when I say that we have learned with very deep regret of the determination of the gentleman from Kansas voluntarily to retire from Congress. He has served here with us for 4 years, and during that period of service he has been a useful Member of this body. He has been modest, but able and indefatigable in the discharge of his duties as a Representative of his own district and also as a Representative of the entire country.

We regret very much the prospect of continuing our service without his presence. I am sure all of us extend to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER] as he retires from this House the wish of great happiness in private life, and he carries with him the assurances of the profound esteem, respect, and affection of all Members of the House of Representatives. [Applause.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker and Members, the Fourth Congressional District of Kansas, which has been represented for 4 years by my congenial and able colleague, RANDOLPH CARPENTER, is the middle district of the State. It is bounded by five of the other six districts. It includes the Flint Hills, the prairie-grass grazing country, with the rich valleys along the streams. To the north and the east of his district is the corn and the alfalfa section, to the west and south the great wheat region.

RANDOLPH CARPENTER is a native son. He is a lawyer, and a son of a distinguished lawyer, a World War soldier with distinction, and the head of a delightful family. His grasp of legislative matters has been comprehensive, and he has the fine, quiet courage to follow his convictions. He is doing the unusual and remarkable thing of retiring voluntarily. To us he is the inscrutable. However, since he made his decision he has exhibited no evidence of regret.

He belongs to the opposite party from mine, and his withdrawal increases my party's chance to rerepresent the district. But, laying aside all those things, being our honest selves for a moment, we regret his going. He has been a credit to the fine traditions of our State, and our agricultural people will remember him as having been an active and true friend.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. YOUNG] is recognized for 3 minutes.

THE TOWNSEND PLAN AND OLD-AGE SECURITY

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Speaker, the Townsend plan is just another chain-letter racket. Nickels and dimes were taken from credulous old people for the benefit of Clements, Townsend, and racketeers who then lived in newly acquired luxury. That was cruel and uncalled for. Townsend plan leaders claimed to welcome a congressional investigation. Then Dr. F. E. Townsend, after a showing had been made of use of the mails to defraud by his organization, contemptuously refused to answer questions. He was a contumacious witness. He should be punished for contempt. That very night the entire Townsend old-age organization of 75, occupying 13 offices in Washington, cleaned out the offices of files and furniture and, like thieves in the night, stealthily stole away. Dr. Townsend claimed that the investigating Congressmen were persecuting him. He declined to answer further questions and walked out. He said the House of Representatives was unfriendly and unfair. Then, when the House of Representatives yesterday voted to refer the contempt charges to the United States attorney of the District of Columbia for investigation by that official with a view toward prosecution upon contempt charges and an impartial trial in a court of justice, Dr. Townsend said:

The House of Representatives was afraid to bring me before it for an open discussion of this notorious case.

He is a charlatan, a faker, a racketeer, a fraud. [Applause.]

The Townsend plan has become the cruelest hoax ever perpetrated upon our fathers and mothers. The entire scheme is so fantastic—the taxation feature is so burdensome, so cowardly and cruel—that many worthy people who now believe will eventually meet with bitter disappointment. This is unnecessary and uncalled for. It is most reprehensible. Conscienceless agitators and demagogic politicians may thrive momentarily by espousing this phantasmagoric plan claiming to give $200 per month to every elderly individual. Their ascendancy will be brief and their downfall sudden and certain.

The Townsend plan provides for money to be taken from wage earners, producers, and salaried people by a tax of 2 percent upon all business transactions plus a slight increase in inheritance, gift, and income taxes. This money is turned over to elderly people, regardless of need, to force its expenditure within 30 days "to keep a constant demand for production and consumption" and to take care of the needy aged.

Of 127,000,000 people in this country, 10,000,000 or more would seek these old-age annuity payments. The annual cost would be $24,000,000,000, plus the tremendous expense of administration, if every elderly individual were to be paid $200 per month. This would be equivalent to an added tax of $190 per year for each man, woman, and child in the United States. A man earning $100 per month and having a wife and two children would pay $760 in added taxes. At present the American people are overburdened with taxes. The average annual per-capita tax of every individual in our country is now $122.

There are already too many Government employees. Under the Townsend plan there would necessarily be a vast increase. Unfortunately the McGroarty bill (H. R. 7154) provides that the proceeds from the transaction tax shall first pay the cost of administration before anything whatever is paid to elderly people. I personally do not believe in bureaucrats first.

Supposing, instead of pensioning 10,000,000 men and women our Government would employ that additional number or increase the standing Army to that number, paying every soldier of the 10,000,000 $200 per month, requiring the expenditure of that salary within 30 days. Would that restore prosperity? Or would it bankrupt the Nation?

Prudence in the expenditure of this money is not within the theory of the plan. What is the opinion of Dr. Townsend as to the necessity of prudently spending money? When before the Ways and Means Committee he was interrogated by a member of the committee, as follows:

Mr. HILL. He could not go out and squander it in order to get rid of it, so that he may be eligible to receive $200 the next month?

Dr. TOWNSEND. We do not care what he does with it. That is immaterial. Let him have carte blanche. Let him buy whisky with it if he wants to kill himself off as quickly as he chooses. That is immaterial. It is commerce—business—that we want in the country. We are not going to regulate people's morals in the least when we give them money to spend.

Mr. HILL. Suppose a husband and wife qualify to receive this pension. They would be receiving $400 per month. Let us say they have a family of grown-up children. Would it be permissible for those children to live with them and be supported from the provisions supplied with this pension money in the home?

Dr. TOWNSEND. Why not? Why not let elders buy commodities and give to their children if they like? That is immaterial.

All taxes are burdensome. The transaction tax is a multiple sales tax. Such a tax is heartless and cruel in its operation. Childhood, youth, sickness, poverty, and misfortune do not escape it. I favor liberal old-age pensions. I consider a transaction tax atrocious. Nearly 50,000,000 men and women who work for wages and salaries, and their dependents, the farmers, middle-class people, and the poor must bear its burdens. Every tax imposed upon producers, upon industry, and business transactions adds to the cost of producing and distributing products and must be paid by the consumer. The farmer would be a chief victim of the transaction tax. He buys and sells out of proportion to his net income. Workingmen and children would be sufferers from the Townsend plan. Prices of necessities would increase much more than wages of workers, and even from the low wages would be deducted this transaction tax. Young and middle-aged parents and their small children would feel the pinch of restricted earning power under the Townsend plan. It is cruel and unconscionable to apply a multiple transaction sales tax upon the food and clothing of 36,000,000 children under 15 years of age. We must not decrease the opportunity for our children nor make their lot harder. The last place we should send the tax collector is into the homes of young men and women who are bringing up the future citizens of this Nation. Unfortunately the Townsend plan makes no provision whatever to raise wages corresponding with increased prices of commodities.

This depression has been prolonged because of the vast load of taxes and interest charges. The Townsend plan provides for a universal tax, a tax to raise a greater sum than was ever before collected in the same length of time anywhere in the world. The alleged benefits of the plan are speculative. The burden of the tax is definite, certain, and unescapable. No such burdensome tax has ever been proposed for the poor since the French Revolution. The real burden of the tax would be passed on to the workers in the form of higher prices. This, in effect, would further reduce wages already reduced by the transaction tax.

The proper administration of the plan would require a Government check-up every month to learn whether or not each beneficiary has spent the money given him and the amount of the individual income, if any, which should be deducted from his $200 pension. As there are over 10,000,000 eligibles scattered throughout the country, it would require an army of snoopers, sneaks, spies, informers, supervisors, collectors, and bureaucrats to supervise its administration.

If our people etablish a practice of using their political power to vote themselves pensions, regardless of need, then we are cultivating an appetite that is insatiable. The demand will grow and grow. Already it is suggested that the pensionable age be reduced to 55 years and that several other million beneficiaries be brought within the plan. If 10,000,000 people can live in idleness off others, why not 20,000,000?

About 350 years ago, while Elizabeth was Queen, somebody thought of the poorhouse. Since then we have found better ways of doing everything. We have exchanged the quill pen for the fountain pen and printing press; the candle for the electric light; the horse for the railroad, automobile, and airplane. Stagecoaches, tallow dips, flintlock muskets are gone, never to return. Nevertheless, we still tolerate the poorhouse. We care for our needy aged by methods in vogue in 1588.

After years of depression this problem is particularly acute. Savings of thousands of aged people have been wiped out, despite the fact that they providently and thriftly saved for their future. They are destitute. Their sons and daughters, lacking jobs in many instances, cannot help. Younger people and the middle aged may never be able to accumulate sufficient for their own old age. Certainly they are not able to adequately provide for their aged and infirm parents. This depression, like war, leaves its toll for future generations to pay. The question is, Shall we provide for our aged extravagantly and cruelly in poorhouse, or humanely, economically, and scientifically by old-age pensions?

Old-age pensions provide an open road for happiness and contentment for men and women who have through no fault of their own beheld the savings of a lifetime swept away as a result of ill-founded trust and abiding faith in big city bankers, in manipulated insurance companies, in exploiting building-and-loan associations, or have been swindled in any manner through the connivance of others, or who have by reason of economic conditions been unable to lay aside sufficient for the rainy day that awaits us all. Local communities now overburdened, relatives now unduly burdened caring for the less fortunate, and county poorhouses will be displaced. A new era is at hand. The aged and infirm will face security and contentment instead of uncertainty, humiliation, and misery.

The need for old-age security legislation is largely due to the congestion and intensity of modern industrial processes. Either aged people, in honorable poverty, must be supported by private charity or by society. I favor old-age security legislation because it is the duty of the Government, and also because the reliance upon private charity is an unequal and insecure dependence for men and women who have earned the right to live their few remaining years in modest independence and enjoy repose.

The hope we all cherish is an old age free from care and want. To that end people toil patiently and live closely, seeking to save something for the day when they can earn no more. And yet the same fate awaits the majority. In the life of the worker there are weeks, often months, of enforced idleness, weeks of unavoidable sickness, losses from swindling, and then as age creeps on there is a constantly declining capacity to earn, until at 60 many find themselves destitute. There is no more pitiful tragedy than the lot of the worker who has struggled all his life to gain a competence and who at 60 faces the poor house. The black slave knew no such tragedy as this. It is a tragedy reserved for the free worker in the wealthiest and greatest nation on earth.

There is nothing radical about the old-age pension idea, though personally I do not fear being termed a "radical." The word "radical" is derived from the Latin word meaning "root." We ought to go to the roots of our social and economic troubles. As a matter of fact, payment of old-age pensions by the State or National Government involves no new policy nor any innovation of principle. In 1913, as a member of the General Assembly of Ohio, I participated in the enactment of Ohio's first mothers' pension law. Before that time the State had dealt in haphazard fashion with children of destitute widows. Children were sent to children's homes and the mother to work. This blighted the lives of children and brought misery to the mother. Instead of cruel separations of mothers and children, we now have the enlightened system of mothers' pensions, with regular payments to mothers to take care of their children. The family is kept together. Furthermore, the cost to the State is less. No State that has adopted mothers' pensions has reurned to the old inhuman methods. I urge the same principle for the needy aged who, after a lifetime of industry and struggle, at 60 becomes in need of assistance from the Government or from public or private charities. It is time to free white hair and wrinkled brows from dread and anxiety. Instead of "over the hill to the poorhouse", the Government should lend a helping hand in a scientific and adequate manner to our deserving and needy aged as they go down the sunset side of life.

Private charities, bread lines, and soup kitchens must not be the only answers of American intelligence and sense of justice to the problem of unemployment and indigent old age. Out of the hardships of this depression when millions of people sought work which they could not find, let us hope that a better future may come for aged men and women whose condition is desperate even in the best of times and through no fault of their own.

The truth is that if the Townsend plan means $200 per month for every elderly individual of 60 or over then there is no bill pending in the Congress that would provide such pensions. The size of the monthly payment to elderly individuals depends, under the McGroarty bill, H. R. 7154, on the amount of money the taxes produce after cost of administration has been deducted. Of course, this may be very fine for the bureaucrats and the administrators of the plan, but it would not be so good for the elderly people who are dependent. How can we say to the people we represent that we are providing old-age security for them unless we definitely write into the statute laws some substantial minimum as a certain amount that every worthy elderly person of this country will receive? Under this McGroarty bill, which is the latest Townsend plan, the annuity payment to the elderly people that we represent may be from nothing up. Of course, as a sop and because they have been talking so much about $200 per month, the bill states that in no event shall the payment exceed $200 per month, but everyone knows that after the cost of administration has been deducted, the payment will be but a fraction of that amount.

H. R. 3977, Mr. McGROARTY, was abandoned by its author. He stated that he would not vote for this bill.

H. R. 7154, Mr. McGROARTY, clearly states that the pensions shall be "in such amount not exceeding $200 per month." The pension may be from nothing up. Unfortunately no minimum is provided.

Townsend-plan leaders in Congress estimate the 2-percent transaction sales tax might provide sufficient money to enable old-age-pension payments to provide $50 per month. Members who have studied the bill carefully estimate the amount would not exceed $28 per month. This is less than is provided in the Social Security Act of 1935.

Townsend-plan leaders frequently refer to Dr. Robert Doane, a political economist, as favoring the Townsend plan. Dr. Doane stated before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives as follows:

Mr. FULLER. You have studied the Townsend bill, have you not?
Dr. DOANE. I have not. I have never read the Townsend bill.
Mr. FULLER. You know that the general purpose of it is to pay $200 a month to every person over the age of 60? [Referring to H. R. 3977, Mr. McGROARTY, since abandoned.]
Dr. DOANE. Yes; I know that.
Mr. FULLER. As an economist, do you think that this Government would stand that financial strain and burden?
Dr. DOANE. Not at the present level of income and the present rate of production; no.
Mr. FULLER. That is all (p. 1119 of official record of hearings).

Since that time, Dr. Doane has testified that the scheme is fantastic, would result in the wildest inflation, and that the cost of bread and other necessities would skyrocket. He said:

The Townsend plan for raising the required revenue is not only decidedly not feasible, but is filled with formidable danger to the entire American fiscal, social, and economic structure. * * * Any heavy tax on mass consumption always checks and lowers the consumption powers of labor. As a matter of common-sense fact, known to every man or woman possessed of any knowledge whatsoever of economics, it would be utterly impossible to raise any such sum proposed by the Townsend plan under any form of taxation. A 2-percent tax on all transactions is an entirely different thing once it works its way through the entire fabric of a nation's economic life. Through the sheer multiple effect of its cumulative action, as it is passed on as a cost factor from one transaction to another, it really becomes a 50-percent tax upon the wealth and income of the consumer.

He added:

The Townsend plan, if put in effect, can only serve to vastly increase unemployment.

Many thoughtful individuals believe that a 2-percent transaction tax would prove ruinous to every small-business man in this country. They believe that it would be impossible for the independent merchant, for example, to compete with the chain-store system, because the independent merchant buys his merchandise through a system that requires many transactions, with the result that there would be multiple taxes; whereas the chain-store system has a more simplified system of distribution that avoids many transactions and would have a decided advantage over the independent merchant. It is stated that large industrial organizations that own the complete unit of production would have a decided advantage over small organizations. I do not want great corporations to become larger and more powerful. I personally believe that small business institutions have done much to develop the progress of our country.

Mr. Stuart A. Rice, Acting Chairman of the United States Central Statistical Board, states that in 1934 transactions subject to a 2-percent transaction tax amounted to only $105,000,000,000, and that a 26-percent transaction sales tax would be necessary to provide pensions of $200 per month.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MORITZ], a member of the "McGroarty bill 7154, the Townsend-plan steering committee", said in the House of Representatives, January 15, 1936:

> Dr. Townsend has stated before the Ways and Means Committee that if the age of 60 is not practicable to start out with, he would be willing to start at the age of 75. He has told me personally the reason he has advocated $200 per month is that no politician can come along and raise the "ante."

Congressman MORITZ is one of the Townsend plan leaders in Congress. (See CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 428, Jan. 15, 1936, issue.)

On January 17, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. MONAGHAN], chairman of this steering committee, stated:

> I wish to say that I have not defended the sales tax in any speech on this floor. I have condemned it. There is a vast difference between a sales tax and a transaction tax, the one proposed in the revised McGroarty bill. (See CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 615.)

Dr. F. E. Townsend flatly contradicts this statement. Read page 1016 of the report of the Senate Finance Committee (Feb. 18, 1935). Following are excerpts from Dr. Townsend's testimony:

> Senator BARKLEY. So it is really a sales tax.
> Dr. TOWNSEND. There is a distinction, but there is very little difference. A sales tax has to necessarily be a tax on a transaction. All taxes on transactions of a financial nature are sales taxes.
> Senator BARKLEY. So it is a distinction without a difference.
> Dr. TOWNSEND. Well, the public conception of a sales tax is a limited-transactions tax. That is the only difference.
> Senator BARKLEY. The transactions tax would be unlimited; it would apply to all transactions involving sales?
> Dr. TOWNSEND. That is what we propose to do.
> Senator BARKLEY. The name is changed in order to get away from the term "sales tax"?
> Dr. TOWNSEND. That is all.

The Townsend plan to pay $200 per month to every individual of 60 years of age or older is really an emotional adventure in the field of economics. It is the capitalization of a wish. It has nothing to do with reality. If $400 a month to every elderly couple of 60 years will bring about recovery and prosperity, why not demand $1,000 per month for each elderly couple and so bring about a boom?

It is unconscionable and despicable for any man to elevate himself into public office by capitalizing upon the suffering and the credulity of old people who are in need. Yet there are individuals who are deceiving thousands of worthy old people into believing that they will receive $200 per month. Some of these so-called Townsend leaders have been living in luxury at the expense of impoverished but trusting elderly people. The cruel part of this performance is that a few unworthy men will deceive worthy elderly men and women, secure dimes and quarters from them, and secure their trust and confidence for a time, and perhaps some will win election to high public office.

This Townsend plan which is being urged is thoroughly and completely unconstitutional. The pitiful part of the whole thing is that the proponents are not even proposing to repeal the social-security law; but they are, in fact, greatly impeding the progress of proper old-age security laws. The Supreme Court would hold unconstitutional the imposition of a transaction tax upon the wage earners of our country for the benefit of a small group—about 8 percent of the people.

The Townsend plan, in fact, is not an old-age-pension plan. It is a scheme for further increasing the burdens of the poor. A 2-percent tax on every transaction will increase the cost of the necessaries of life tremendously. Salaried men and wage earners would not only pay taxes upon their small salaries, but they would pay, under this scheme, a tax upon anything they buy. Nothing escapes. They must pay taxes on the food and the clothes they buy for the children, medicine for the sick, milk for the babies, all to enable an elderly couple over 60 years of age to receive $4,800 per year. Ten million persons in this country of 60 years or over would be beneficiaries of this plan as long as it lasted. Exclusive of the cost of the administration, which would be tremendous, an amount sufficient to pay elderly people $200 per month each is more than six times the present normal annual revenue of the Federal Government from all sources of taxation.

The tax on transactions is a tax on every step of the processing, transportation, and sale of commodities, as well as a tax on all business transactions of every kind. On many articles 2 percent would be collected 12 times or more. Consider a loaf of bread. The farmer who grows the wheat would pay 2 percent in selling it to the grain elevator; the railroad that carries it to the elevator pays another tax; when a flour mill buys the wheat a tax is paid again; the miller is assessed another 2 percent when he sells the flour to a baker; and the railroad that carries it to the baker pays; the trucking is another transaction, and so on. The final buyer, who proposes to eat the bread, will find that its price has gone way up.

The farmers of our country under the Townsend plan would be forced to submit monthly reports showing every transaction they made—every basket of eggs sold, every quart of grain marketed, every coop of chickens taken to the produce house, each load of wheat sold to the grain dealer. On each transaction the farmer would have to pay a 2-percent sales tax. I represent all the farmers of Ohio. I would never vote such a burden on my constituents. Think of the wage earner paying this enormous tax on the clothing he buys for his family and upon every morsel of food he places on his table. This is the heaviest, most burdensome, most outrageous pyramided sales tax ever proposed to any Congress. It is amazing that many people have been so deceived that they are urging Congress to tax themselves out of existence. The McGroarty bill does not provide an economic panacea. It does not give a short cut to prosperity. It does not answer the prayers of our aged. It proposes an unbearable transaction sales tax which, if forced upon the people of the United States, would only pay a pension amounting to approximately $28 per month.

In 1934 the entire national income was approximately $50,000,000,000. The Townsend plan would take more than 40 percent of it. A man on a salary of $40 a week would contribute more than $16 of his pay every week—not directly, of course, but indirectly through the transactions tax.

On the basis of current income it simply cannot be done. It is impossible. The rainbow in the sky is too far beyond the horizon. Through the medium of indirect taxes the $40-a-week man will contribute $16 a week, which will be given to an elderly person to spend. The buying power of the $40 man will be reduced accordingly. The cost of the scheme will fall almost entirely on those who are least able to afford it—on the people who live on wages and small salaries. The income of this class is now consumed almost wholly in living expenses, and it is they who will have to bear the heavy load of the tax on all transactions.

Why stop at $200 per month? Anyone who believes it would work at $200 would believe it still better at $300. So, in order to get Dr. Townsend's following away from him, a political demagogue would only have to raise his ante.

Wage earners and salaried employees would suffer a lower standard of living because their purchasing power would decline, due to higher living costs, and 2 percent of their earnings would be regularly taken away by the tax.

The Townsend plan would drastically redistribute the national income, but at the expense of millions of wage earners, salaried employees, farmers, and owners of small businesses.

If prosperity could be restored by taxing 92 percent of the population in order to give money to the other 8 percent to spend, would it not be better to give this money to young married people? They have greater obligations and responsibilities. They have homes to build and children to rear and educate.

Those who advocate the Townsend plan include bank transactions. Therefore, every check issued, every withdrawal, would cost 2 percent additional. Such a tax would destroy our banking structure.

The total business transactions, exclusive of bank transactions, during 1935 amounted to less than $500,000,000,000. In fact, a sound economist estimated that the total business transactions in 1933 amounted to $250,000,000,000 and that the total for 1935 was much under $500,000,000,000.

Furthermore, if 10,000,000 men and women, or 1,000,000 men and women, over 60 years of age were taken from their jobs and younger people given these same jobs, how does it help to restore prosperity by substituting one group of unemployed for another?

Common sense, social vision, and an intention to do justice to our elderly people dictate that our energies should be applied in the coming years to liberalizing and making effective the beneficent provisions of the Social Security Act of 1935. Old-age pensions should commence at the age of 60. They should be adequate to provide real security for those who go down the sunset side of life.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAHON] is recognized for 3 minutes.

JAPANESE-AMERICAN TRADE

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, during this session of Congress I have heard this administration repeatedly denounced for its trade policy with Japan by members of the minority party. The Secretary of State is held up to scorn and ridicule, and a casual reader of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD would be led to believe that Japan has overrun our Nation with cheap goods, and outgeneraled the American businessman, intimidated the State Department, and routed the Tariff Commission and the President. This is far from the truth.

The truth is, last year we sold Japan $203,000,000 worth of American goods and bought from Japan only $153,000,000 worth of goods. By far the largest item in our purchases from Japan was raw silk, which we, of course, do not produce. The truth is that Japan is our best customer in the world for raw cotton. For years Japan has bought more than a million and a half bales of raw cotton per year from us. Last year she bought 1,518,000 bales of cotton from us for $98,587,000. The truth is that Japan is the third best customer in the world for American goods. The truth is that during each year of the Roosevelt administration we have sold much more American goods to Japan than Japan has sold to us. During the past 3 years we have sold $156,000,000 more goods to Japan than Japan has sold to us. The truth is that during the administrations of the Republican Presidents Hoover, Coolidge, and Harding, Japan flooded us with goods, we buying from Japan each year during those administrations many millions of dollars in goods in excess of our sales to Japan. During the 4 Hoover years of 1929, 1930, 1931, and 1932, the value of Japanese sales to us exceeded our sales to Japan to the extent of $336,000,000.

The truth is that for the first time in 50 years we have a so-called favorable balance of trade with Japan. When I consider the excess of our purchases from Japan over our sales to Japan during the former Republican administrations and the fact that for the first time in history we sell Japan far more than she sells us during this administration, I find myself wholly unable to concur in the attacks made on this administration by certain Republican critics.

Oh, but it is said by a Member of the minority party in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 28, 1936, that, though we sell large quantities of raw products to Japan, Japan fabricates the great majority of the products we sell her and ships them back to us. This is extremely and unpardonably inaccurate.

This brings me to a brief consideration of our textile purchases from Japan. As heretofore stated, last year we sold Japan 1,518,000 bales of raw cotton. Japan shipped back to us in textiles and cotton products of all kinds the equivalent of 17,000 bales of cotton. Japan failed to ship back to us in fabricated products 1,501,000 bales of cotton of the aggregated weight of about 750,500,000 pounds. Of course, if we compare bales of cotton we sell to Japan to yards of cloth we buy from Japan, we might mislead those who do not know that a bale of cotton weighs 500 pounds and represents hundreds of yards of cotton cloth.

Mr. Speaker, I do not advocate the importation of cotton textiles from Japan. I much regret that any cotton textiles are imported from Japan. But as long as we can sell Japan more than a million and a half bales of cotton per year and buy back from her only about 17,000 bales of cotton per year in goods, I can see no cause for hysteria.

We have got to sell our cotton somewhere, and I will not be one to endeavor to drive away the best foreign customer the Texas cotton farmer has left.

But it is pointed out with alarm that the importation of certain textiles from Japan has increased several hundred percent within the last year. That is bad, but with the increase we still receive in textiles and cotton goods from Japan the small comparative amount which I have indicated.

Japan's export of cotton cloth to the United States last year amounted to less than 2 percent of the Japanese export of cotton textiles. According to Secretary Hull, imports of countable cotton cloths from Japan in 1935 were equivalent to about one-half of 1 percent of the total yardage of American production.

We export more cotton cloth than we import, but Japan is decidedly the largest cotton-textile exporting nation in the world, with England in second place. It is true that the New England textile manufacturers cannot compete in foreign markets with Japan for reasons that are well known. This is regrettable, but it is not the fault of the southern cotton farmer. Most certainly it is not the fault of this administration.

May I quote the following very striking and encouraging statement of March 9, 1936, by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture:

> Domestic cotton consumption in December (1935) is reported by the Bureau of the Census at about 498,000 running bales. This is 2 percent less than consumption in November, but nearly 20 percent greater than consumption in December 1934 and the largest consumption for the month since 1928. Consumption in January amounted to about 591,000 bales, which was nearly 8 percent greater than last year, and the highest for the month since 1929. Consumption for the 6 months ended January 31 of 3,007,000 bales is the highest since the same 6-month period ended January 31, 1930. Mill activity during both December and January and the first half of February has been at a level about equal to the 1922 to 1927 level, inclusive, according to the New York Cotton Exchange. * * *

The merciless critics of our Japanese trade policy should not be ungrateful for the improvement made in our domestic textile trade during this administration. They should be willing to look at the whole picture and note that for the first time in history the value of our exports to Japan exceed the value of our imports from Japan. However, this alert administration, in its endeavor to further assist the domestic textile industry, has within the last few days increased the tariff on certain Japanese textiles an average of 42 percent.

Mr. Speaker, the Republican tariff policy "bottled up" American agriculture, deprived us of our foreign markets, did irreparable injury to the cotton farmer, and did a great deal, directly and indirectly, to stop the commerce of the nations, and thereby impeded world progress. This administration, in this respect, has performed no miracles and has made some mistakes, but on the whole our foreign and domestic trade has increased and the American farmer and businessman can feel and see at least a little ray of hope.

CELEBRATION OF THE BICENTENNIAL OF THE BIRTH OF PATRICK HENRY

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I introduced day before yesterday a bill appropriating $10,000 toward defraying the expenses of the celebration of the bicentennial of Patrick Henry, to be held in the county of Hanover in my district in the State of Virginia. The committee very promptly reported this bill favorably, and I understand it was a unanimous report. I have not the report with me, Mr. Speaker, but it is rather illuminating and interesting, and I hope the membership may find time to read it. I do not desire to take up any further time of the House at this time.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of this bill (H. R. 12870) to aid in defraying the expenses for the celebration of the bicentennial of the birth of Patrick Henry, to be held in Hanover Courthouse, Va., July 15, 16, and 17, 1936.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 to aid in defraying the expenses for the celebration of the bicentennial of the birth of Patrick Henry to be held at Hanover Courthouse, Va., July 15, 16, and 17, 1936, such sum to be expended for such purposes by the Patrick Henry Bi-Centennial, Inc., Ashland, Hanover County, Va., and without regard to any other provision of law.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MRS. MURRAY A. HINTZ

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6163), for the relief of Mrs. Murray A. Hintz, with a Senate amendment thereto, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "not otherwise appropriated" and insert "allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand the amendment, it simply provides for getting the money through another channel.

Mr. DEMPSEY. It is to be taken out of the Conservation Corps fund rather than out of unappropriated funds in the Treasury.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. AYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and following any special orders on the calendar for that day, I may address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12527) making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended as to each of such amendments in the accompanying conference report, namely:

On amendment no. 1: Appropriates $1,147,500 for "Miscellaneous expenses", instead of $1,142,500, as proposed by the House, and $1,162,500, as proposed by the Senate, the agreed increase being for the collection and classification of information.

On amendments nos. 2 to 5, inclusive, relating to the appropriation "Training, education, and welfare, Navy": Appropriates $130,000 for the Naval Training Station, Newport, R. I., as proposed by the Senate, instead of $125,000, as proposed by the House, and appropriates $3,379 to carry out the provisions of the retirement law touching civilian instructors at the Post Graduate School at Annapolis, Md., as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 6 and 7, relating to the Naval Reserve: Appropriates $7,868,469, as proposed by the House, instead of $8,000,000, as proposed by the Senate, and provides for 19 Reserve officers above the grade of lieutenant to be employed on continuous active duty at full pay, as proposed by the House, instead of 20, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 8 to 11, inclusive, relating to the Naval Academy: Appropriates an additional $15,793 for pay of civilian professors and instructors, as proposed by the Senate, $15,593 being for carrying out the provisions of the retirement law touching such personnel, and $200 for pay of physical instructors, and appropriates for other classes of personal services $585,623, as proposed by the House, instead of $590,866, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 12: Restores the limitation proposed by the House upon expenditures from the appropriation "Engineering" for Diesel-engine development.

On amendment no. 13: Appropriates for "Ordnance and ordnance stores" $21,700,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $22,500,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment no. 14: Strikes out, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation of $5,000,000, proposed by the House, looking to the establishment of a reserve supply of strategic minerals of domestic production. In taking this action it was the sense of the managers on the part of both Houses that the Navy Department should appoint a board of officers to make a study of the need of acquiring stocks of domestically produced strategic minerals and that the report of such board should be presented to the Naval and Appropriation Committees of the House and Senate at the commencement of the next regular session.

On amendment no. 15: Eliminates the proposal of the Senate touching the pay and allowances of the present incumbent as attending physician at the Capitol.

On amendments nos. 16 to 21, inclusive, relating to public works, Bureau of Yards and Docks: Appropriates $3,395,300, instead of $2,990,300, as proposed by the House, and $5,000,000, as proposed by the Senate, the increase of $405,000 being occasioned by the addition of the following projects proposed by the Senate: Improvement of interior illumination, Naval Academy, $270,000; improvement of water front, naval operating base, Norfolk, Va. (total cost, $300,000), $135,000; increases total cost of harbor and channel improvement project at Pearl Harbor from $900,000, as proposed by the House, to $1,500,000, instead of $2,000,000, as proposed by the Senate, and makes such sum of $1,500,000 available for the procurement of dredging equipment, as proposed by the Senate; and strikes out, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation of $295,000 of the Naval Hospital fund, proposed by the House, toward new and improved Naval Hospital facilities in the District of Columbia.

On amendments nos. 22 and 23, relating to the appropriation "Aviation, Navy": Increases from $24,000 to $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, the amount of the appropriation that may be employed for traveling expenses of service personnel in ferrying new airplanes from point of production to point of operating base, and, with respect to Government production of airplanes and engines, strikes out the inhibition proposed by the House against the Navy engaging in the production of other than primary training airplanes and of airplane engines, other than experimental engines, but retains that portion of the House limitation denying the use of the appropriation for the construction of a factory for the manufacture of airplanes.

On amendments nos. 24 to 30, relating to the Marine Corps: Increases by $11,250 the maximum amount that may be expended for flying pay of officer personnel, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates an additional $32,073 for the Marine Corps Reserve on account of 45-day trainees, as proposed by the Senate, and appropriates $300,000 for transportation, as proposed by the House, instead of $319,600, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 31 to 33, inclusive, relating to the appropriation "Replacement of naval vessels": Provides specifically that the President shall determine as a fact that capital-ship replacement construction has been commenced by any of the other signatory powers to the London Naval Treaty of 1930 before the Navy may begin capital-ship replacement construction, and provides for the merger of unexpended balances on June 30, 1936, of "Increase of the Navy" appropriations with the appropriations proposed under the head of "Replacement of naval vessels", all as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments nos. 34 to 36, inclusive, relating to salaries, Navy Department: Appropriates $117,720 under the Office of the Judge Advocate General, as proposed by the House, instead of $120,920, as proposed by the Senate, and appropriates $61,660 under the Office of Naval Intelligence, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $60,080, as proposed by the House.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. BIERMANN].

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Speaker, in every year since the close of the World War the United States has spent more money on its Navy than any other nation on earth with the exception of one year, when Great Britain spent slightly more than we did. In every year since the close of the World War the United States Government has spent more money on its Army than any other nation on earth. A few weeks ago I put into the RECORD figures that show that for the fiscal year 1937 the United States Government is going to spend for past wars and in preparing for future wars more than $4,200,000,000. There is no use of this Congress or any political party talking about economy in government or about cutting down expenses or about reducing the burden of the taxpayers if we vote this kind and size of appropriation.

A year ago the Congress passed the so-called Vinson bill, which committed this country to enormous naval armament. Immediately the newspapers carried reports of this action of ours being used in Japan as a reason for voting more money for the navy in Japan. This year, when our naval appropriations bill was being discussed, patriotic people in this Congress—we know they are patriotic because they testify to it themselves—told us that the foreign countries are spending so much money on their navies that we have to spend more money on ours.

After we passed this naval appropriation bill in the House, the following Associated Press dispatch, under a Tokyo date line, appeared in one of the daily newspapers:

TOKYO, JAPAN.—Japan's naval secretary, Admiral Osami Nagano, told parliamentarians Monday Nippon must build more ships soon or be outdistanced by America.

Japan may have a naval strength 80 percent of that of the United States, the admiral said. But, he added, unless a new construction program soon is undertaken, Japan's ratio will fall to 58 percent of American strength by 1941.

Steady progress in United States naval building, said Nagano, is the reason.

Large appropriations here are being used as the excuse for increased appropriations in Japan and then increased appropriations in Japan are used on this floor as the excuse for our increased appropriations, and the record still stands that no one has come onto the floor of the House and attempted to defend these appropriations from the standpoint of defense. We all talk about appropriations for defense, but on the basis of defense they cannot be defended or excused. There is no second lieutenant in the Army and there is no ensign in the Navy who will sign his name to a statement proposing any manner by which this country can be successfully invaded.

These appropriations cannot be excused on any other ground than that the United States is going to engage in war on some foreign shore and I do not imagine there are a dozen Members of the House who want that. [Applause.]

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] such time as he may desire to use.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD regarding the services of my colleague the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARPENTER], following the remarks of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to use to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, I assume the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. BIERMANN] endeavored to impress the House with a startling statement when he said that we were spending more money on our Navy than is being spent by Japan. This is an old story.

Whenever the appropriation bill comes before the House, with regularity and precision, with such regularity that we might even measure the day of the week or the month by it, the gentleman from Iowa makes the startling disclosure about the money spent for the Navy.

Mr. BIERMANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. Not now; I will yield later. If the gentleman wants to measure the United States Navy and the personnel of the United States Navy and the pay of the United States Navy and the subsistence which the United States Navy enjoys by a Japanese yardstick, he may do so; but speaking for myself I am not willing to have the boys of the United States Navy provided with a subsistence of fish and rice and kept on a beggarly pittance. [Applause.]

Nor am I willing to lower the standards of the men that work in the navy yards, the men who contribute with their brawn and brain to build up the national defense—I am not willing to measure their standard by the standard prevailing in Japan. [Applause.]

I am proud of the United States Navy. I am proud that the majority of Congress has evinced a spirit that will place them in the fore rank—not in the rear rank of the navies of the world. [Applause.]

Now I will yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. BIERMANN. The gentleman quoted me as saying that we have spent more money on our Navy than Japan. What I said was that this country in every year since the World War had spent more money on its Navy than any other country on earth with the exception of 1 year, when England spent a little more. The gentleman said——

Mr. DITTER. I am not yielding to the gentleman for a speech. If I misquoted the gentleman or if I have not made an accurate statement in relation to what he said, I hope the gentleman will correct me.

Mr. BIERMANN. That is what I am trying to do.

Mr. DITTER. Did the gentleman make the statement that we spent more money on our Navy than Japan did?

Mr. BIERMANN. I did not make it that way. I said we spent more money.

Mr. DITTER. Oh, this is an old matter. The gentleman and I have fought this out before. If the gentleman from Iowa did not leave the impression on other Members, he left the impression on me, that the United States Navy is paying too much of the taxpayers' money for the maintenance of the Navy, and he made a comparison with Japan by which he tried to emphasize the fact that we spent too much on our Navy.

Based on that, if he wants to stand for that kind of a program he may, but, speaking for myself, I want the needs of the boys of the United States Navy and everyone who contributes to the building, maintaining, and operating of our Navy to be based on the standard of living in America rather than the standard of living in Japan. And it is my conviction that the overwhelming majority of the people of the district which I represent have a patriotic fervor which will not be bartered on a Japanese bargain counter. If, as a pacifist, the gentleman from Iowa feels that it is a proper indictment to lay against those of us who are defending a national-defense program, that we spend more than Japan, I am willing to accept the indictment.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. If I understand the gentleman correctly, he is not one of those in this Congress who believes in sinking the Navy and destroying the Army as a matter of national defense.

Mr. DITTER. That is correct. Just a word or two about the bill. Mr. Speaker, I feel that the committee really should be commended for this bill. We have really provided some economy, and I believe every member of the committee has been careful to safeguard the interests of the taxpayers and mindful at the same time about national defense. I must express a regret with respect to one item in the bill. I wish we had provided in the bill—and not having provided for it this year I think in another year we will—for a model basin, which I believe to be necessary. I think it should be provided for our Naval Establishment. I believe that the money that that will entail—an expenditure of approximately $3,500,000—will be money well spent. It seems to me that at the present time there is inadequate provision for that kind of work which such an experimental station would bring to us. At the present time we are sending to foreign shores some of the vessels that should be tested here at home, and speaking for next year's naval appropriation, I think there is little doubt but that a testing, experimental basin will be provided, and an appropriation brought into the House in connection with it in next year's bill.

Just one other word about another feature of the bill mentioned during this discussion. The Naval Affairs Committee was challenged during the discussion with a matter of the selection board. I think the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON] and the members of his committee, have a definite duty to bring in legislation to correct the conditions that presently prevail in connection with the operation of the selection board. It is my fervent hope that we will have some corrective measures next year, to do away with the criticism presently directed against the operation of that board.

Mr. Speaker, I hope when action is taken on this conference report today there will be a unanimity on the part of those who believe in national defense, to support the report, and that there will be no encouragement given to those individuals who want to measure the United States Navy by the measure of Japan. [Applause.]

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it is necessary to appropriate over half a billion dollars to give the sailors and the personnel of the United States an American diet. I wonder if the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER], in speaking of the rice diet of Japan, has in mind the diet on which the unemployed of this Nation are now subsisting. This very week 11,000 unemployed of the W. P. A. in New York City have been discharged. Before a month is over the number will be 40,000 discharged from the W. P. A. in New York City. Throughout the country by July 1 over 700,000 unemployed now working on W. P. A. will have been discharged—discharged on the ground of reduction of personnel and for the reason that there are not sufficient funds to carry them on the W. P. A. pay roll. I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania to please explain to the unemployed in his district just what kind of diet he expects the unemployed in his district to live on, whether it is going to be a Japanese diet or an American diet, after they have been discharged from the W. P. A. by June 30 of this year. Here we are appropriating over half a billion dollars under the guise of so-called national defense. It seems to me that national defense means defense against invasion, defense against a foreign foe who may invade our shores and come into the United States and attack our homes; but does any man with any amount of common sense believe that we need over half a billion dollars to protect our homes from invasion? Are we preparing here for a defensive war, or are we preparing here for an imperialistic war and an offensive war? While we are throwing away over a billion dollars on the Army and the Navy for war purposes, we find we have not sufficient funds to keep 700,000 unemployed on W. P. A. pay rolls. W. P. A., I repeat, is discharging 700,000 unemployed. Let us pause and give some thought to the diet on which they will have to subsist after June 30, 1936.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, we are now discussing the naval appropriation bill. At the same time we are talking about the welfare of the people in the Navy. No one wants to see the men employed in the Navy kept as well as those in any other department of Government more than I. I am not going to yield to anyone in reference to national defense. I believe we should protect our country, we should have adequate defense. But what is adequate defense? No one has yet defined it, but I do believe that in this naval appropriation bill, where we are spending over $532,000,000, we are going away beyond what we need to spend at this particular time for adequate defense. When you increase the naval appropriations bill by $72,000,000, when you are spending $4,000,000 laying down a couple of keels that the President says may be necessary, when you build two battleships that will cost $104,000,000 or more; if there ever was a Congress that put this country on the rocks of financial disaster, this Congress is doing it—the greatest spenders in the Nation's history. I do not care whether you are Republicans or Democrats, or what you are, you are spendthrifts and you will regret it. The situation is simply this: You must curb your spending. If you increase your naval appropriation this year you will have to increase it next year. That is the history of the Navy and every other department of the Government. Every time an appropriation bill is increased, the next year it is increased again, because there are more people on the pay rolls.

The only way we are going to get ourselves into a position whereby we can regulate the affairs of this Nation is by economizing in Government department spending.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I will yield if you will give me a minute when my 3 minutes have expired.

The statement of Mr. Morganthau, Secretary of the Treasury, several weeks ago, was that by the end of 1937 we will be $40,000,000,000 in the red. The fact of the matter is, according to statements that were given out in yesterday's Post, after they pay the bonus and a few other things which this Congress has appropriated, we will be close to $40,000,000,000 in the red by the end of 1936, a year ahead of when it was contemplated by the Secretary of the Treasury. Think of it.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. If you will give me more time I will.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. If you will give me 5 minutes, I will yield.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Did the gentleman vote for this naval appropriation bill when it was before the House?

Mr. RICH. I did not. No. I am opposed to the great expenditures that we are voting in this House of Representatives. There is not a Member of this House, and the gentleman will be one of them, who will not, within the next 3 or 4 years, wish that we had economized.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. RICH. I yield now to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Would the gentleman tell us in what way this sum should be reduced? Will he specifically indicate to the House those items which, in his judgment, should be deleted from the bill?

Mr. RICH. Well, the amount you are spending for laying down these new keels. [Applause.]

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman tell us how much that is?

Mr. RICH. I do not care if it is only $50, the principle of it is wrong. The trouble with those who are for a large Navy is they cannot help but spend more to build up a greater naval organization, so they have more power in affairs of Government. I do not believe we need to spend $100,000,000 for battleships for national defense. One-fourth of the amount for airplanes will, in my judgment, do four times the good in national defense.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has again expired.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to supplement the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] in the matter of expenditures, but I pretend to know but very little about the merits of this bill. As I have said before, we have to go along with our committee.

Before we returned this year we were often invited to meetings on the subject of neutrality and military expenditure, and we must make a report of our legislative action. We found in framing neutrality laws that it was like climbing a tree to put out a forest fire, and we passed legislation that seemed far from being effective. We have to yield now to the judgment of the committee. They say we need a Navy sufficient for national defense. We do not know exactly what is necessary or the type of defense that may be most needed. I live near Boston, and I cannot sympathize with the danger the gentleman does not fear in case of attack. But is there not something more than the national defense in this bill? Do you big Navy men really mean that you want a Navy large enough to assert our rights on the high seas? Do you want a Navy large enough to protect and preserve our honor? No one seems to dare make that assertion. You simply say, "We want a Navy for national defense." Why cannot someone here be courageous enough to say, if this expenditure means it, "We want a Navy large enough to protect our honor"? I just want to call attention to the fact that no one seems to have discussed this phase of the argument.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Gladly.

Mr. RICH. If we would protect our honor, we would stay at home and attend to our own business and we would not be afraid of foreign nations. [Applause.]

Mr. GIFFORD. That is a very important question, and I wonder what attitude this Congress would take, representing our people, if a question of our honor really was at stake. The impression I now have is that only enough money should be asked for that will insure our safety within our own boundaries.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. UMSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, it is not a precedent but it is an unusual experience to present a conference report which, if adopted will result in the total of the naval appropriation bill carrying $4,522,175 less than the bill carried when it was sent from the House to the Senate. As passed by the House the bill carried a total of $531,068,707. If the conference report is adopted, the total will be $526,546,532. The amount carried in the bill is $23,044,767 below the total proposed in the Budget.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE FOREIGN SERVICE

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 267) for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of catastrophes of nature, and ask that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 267) for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of catastrophes of nature, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1 and 4, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 2: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert: "$19,745.33"; and the House agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert: "$19,592.25"; and the House agree to the same.

S. D. McREYNOLDS,
SOL BLOOM,
HAMILTON FISH, Jr.
Managers on the part of the House.

KEY PITTMAN,
ROBERT J. BULKLEY,
WALLACE H. WHITE, Jr.,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to S. 267, authorizing an appropriation for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States, who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of catastrophes of nature, submit the following written statement explaining the effect of the action agreed upon:

The Senate receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the House nos. 1 and 4. The no. 1 amendment added in the House was "Gustava Hanna, widow of." Matthew E. Hanna, the husband, died during the consideration of the pending bill and it was necessary to insert the name of his widow. Amendment 4, made by the House, struck out "$1,006.82" and inserted "$821.92." This was the loss represented by Willard L. Beaulac, secretary of the American legation at Managua, Nicaragua, when the earthquake occurred. This was agreed to by the Senate. Amendments 2 and 3 in conference were in reference to the amount of the loss sustained by Matthew E. Hanna, American Minister to Nicaragua, during the earthquake which occurred on March 31, 1931. The bill as passed in the Senate gave the amount of this loss as "$25,368.58", which was amended in the House by inserting "$16,122.08", and the amount agreed upon in conference was "$19,745.33", which is amendment no. 2. The Senate bill called for "$25,215.50", which was amended in the House by inserting "$15,969", and the amount agreed to in conference was "$19,592.25", which is amendment no. 3.

S. D. McREYNOLDS,
SOL BLOOM,
HAMILTON FISH, Jr.,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Tennessee explain the conference report?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I shall be pleased to do so. This is a bill providing for payment for certain property destroyed by a volcano in a foreign country, personal property of Mr. Hanna, who was the representative in that country of this Government at that time. As the bill passed the Senate it carried $25,368.58. The original claim was $36,971.50. A subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House to which the bill was referred recommended $15,969, but the full committee overrode the action of the subcommittee and reported $25,368.58. The bill was objected to in the House and went back to the committee, being finally reported out carrying the minimum amount of $15,969. It was passed by the House and went to the Senate in that form.

The conference report represents a compromise between the two Houses with the amount agreed upon about halfway between the figures of the two Houses. The main question of difference came on the matter of what items were necessary for these people to have at that location at that time for the service of this Government.

Mr. TABER. What position did Mr. Hanna occupy?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. He was our minister.

Mr. TABER. And he claimed to have lost $35,000 of personal effects?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Yes. We held that that was more than necessary in his status at that time.

Mr. TABER. And the House finally allowed $15,969?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Yes; that was the action of the House; and the compromise between the two Houses fixed the amount at $19,745.33.

Mr. TABER. Is not that an excessive amount for personal and household effects?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. We thought so in the House at the time, but there was such a difference of opinion as to what was necessary that no one could reach a definite conclusion in the matter.

Mr. TABER. Does the gentleman really think Mr. Hanna had that amount of personal and household effects?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. He did; he had that and more.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. THURSTON. Is it our policy for the Federal Government in effect to carry insurance on the personal effects of members of the Foreign Service?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. No. In this case the building was furnished by the minister himself because we had no furnishings there. It has been the policy to take care of losses in such cases.

Mr. THURSTON. I assume the other employees would have to carry their own insurance on their personal effects.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. I do not know. They did where this office was located.

Mr. THURSTON. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CORRECTION

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to correct the RECORD.

In the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of May 26, 1936, page 7954, is a statement to the effect that on June 12, 1930, the first speech ever made in the American Congress on old-age pensions was delivered by Congressman T. ALAN GOLDSBOROUGH. This was, of course, a statement inadvertently made, since it is not in accordance with the facts.

On December 6, 1915, a bill, H. R. 233, was introduced by me for the pensioning of American citizens who had reached the age of 65 years, were incapable of manual labor, and whose incomes were less than $200 per annum.

On September 8, 1916, page 2253 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, will be found a speech of some length I delivered in this House in support of my old-age pension bill. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the RECORD will be corrected accordingly.

There was no objection.

Mr. FOCHT. Let me add, that soon after introducing my old-age-pension measure and speaking on it and urging the justice and humanity and righteousness of properly caring for the aged, America entered the World War, when everything else was laid aside to win that war. After retiring from Congress in 1923 and having been the first to, in a legislative way, call the attention of the country to old-age pensions, my activities for the help of the aged were continued in Pennsylvania, where legislative action was being inaugurated by the State legislature.

In July 1933, Governor Pinchot proposed an extraordinary session of the Pennsylvania Legislature for the purpose of enacting old-age-pension legislation. Some of the Republican leaders did not realize the importance of accepting the Governor's challenge, and the next year lost the State to the Democrats for United States Senator, 22 Congressmen, the Governor, and State offices. On this date I sent the following telegram to Republican State Chairman Gen. Edward Martin, and which appeared in the daily press of the State:

Assuming the challenge of Governor Pinchot as it appeared in the evening papers to be correct, I would urge upon you the acceptance of this challenge to call the legislature in extra session and pass the old-age-pension bill, conditioned that the senators and members serve without salary the same as Members of Congress do who are called to attend extra sessions. This will clarify the attitude of the Republican State organization toward the old-age-pension law and other humanitarian enactments. As you know, the bill can be readily put through under suspension of the rules in less than a week.

It will be recalled that Congressman Focht first introduced an old-age-pension bill in Congress in 1915 and now has a bill on the calendar there for the same purpose to be considered at the next session to convene in January. Mr. Focht has been identified with the Republican organization for 50 years and is a hearty supporter of progressive organization politics.

Again, on December 30, 1935, my attitude on old-age pensions was solicited by the press, and the following is my answer:

"I am in favor of old-age pensions—safe and sane old-age pensions—just as I was in 1915, when I introduced in Congress the first bill to provide pensions for the aged", Congressman BENJAMIN K. FOCHT, of Lewisburg, representing the Eighteenth District, declared today following the use of his name as one of 39 Members of the House who are claimed as supporters of the Townsend $200-a-month old-age-pension plan at the coming session.

"I have not committed myself to the Townsend plan, nor will I", Congressman FOCHT said. "I was queried upon the measure and stated my position as I am stating it now. I asked that my letter be used in setting forth my position, but this apparently has not been done." The Townsend National Weekly, official organ of Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., cited the names of 39 Congressmen who were claimed to be in favor of the Townsend plan, and the name of Congressman FOCHT was included.

"My record on old-age pensions speaks for itself", Congressman FOCHT said, "and it has not changed. However, to say that I am in favor of the Townsend plan, when it has not yet been formulated, is just shooting too many stars. I am afraid that Dr. Townsend is overleaping the horse, and to definitely commit myself before the Townsend plan is presented in definite form would be rank folly."

In speaking of a safe and sane pension plan Congressman FOCHT suggested a proposition whereby the Federal Government, the State, and county would each contribute a reasonable sum.

SUFFRAGE FOR RESIDENTS OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The SPEAKER. The Chair has been handed a petition signed by prominent citizens of the District of Columbia, representing the Citizens' Joint Committee on National Representation and cooperating organizations proposing a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to grant to residents of the District of Columbia representation in the House, Senate, and electoral college with the same rights as are enjoyed by residents of the States, with the request that it be brought to the attention of the House. The Chair does so, and refers the petition to the Committee on the Judiciary.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1937—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I regret to report that this bill is $1,000,000, in round numbers, in excess of the Budget recommendation. As the bill was reported by the committee and as it passed the House it was $11,000,000 under the Budget estimate. The Senate exceeded the Budget by $29,000,000, in round numbers; and we finally compromised on a bill, as presented in this conference report, in round numbers, $1,000,000 in excess of the Budget.

As large as the bill is, it is not large enough to provide for many additional appropriations asked by those who appeared before the committee urging provision for additional projects or larger appropriations for those already provided for; and I want to express appreciation of the kindness of those whose requests we were unable to approve, and especially our colleagues for their consideration and tolerance when we were unable to take care of all of them.

Every dollar perhaps requested by our colleagues was justified. I am certain the money, if appropriated, would have been well spent, but we had to cut the cost to the cloth, and even after making every effort to keep the bill within bounds it is one of the largest agricultural appropriation bills ever reported to the Congress.

Mr. LUDLOW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. LUDLOW. Can the gentleman from Missouri, one of the ablest men who ever served in this Congress, tell us what the conference did with reference to that strange and fantastic project known as the shelterbelt?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. No provision was made by the House for the shelterbelt project. The Senate added $1,000,000 for that purpose. The committee on conference finally agreed to compromise on $170,000, with the provision that it should be used to liquidate the entire project.

Mr. LUDLOW. The gentleman believes, does he not, if this legislation prevails, the project will be absolutely liquidated and wound up, and there will be no reason for future appropriations by the Congress for this purpose?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. This bill disposes finally and completely of the entire shelterbelt project.

Mr. LUDLOW. I appreciate all the gentleman has done to wind up this strange and fantastic venture, but may I ask him just why it is necessary to appropriate $170,000 for this purpose? Is there some moral or legal commitment there that requires this expenditure?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. There is no commitment, but we have in the nurseries at the present time a little in excess of 60,000,000 trees. If no provision is made to dispose of them, the money which has been previously spent in their production will be wasted, and it was thought this amount would be justified in order to distribute to the farmers the remaining trees now in process of production.

Mr. THURSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. THURSTON. Amplifying what the gentleman has just said, if the executive branch of the Government will not make funds available to projects which have had the express disapproval of the Congress, then the project will be terminated?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. This will effectively and finally conclude the entire project.

Mr. LUDLOW. As one Member of the Congress, I wish to extend my congratulations and my commendation to the able gentleman and his conferees for being instrumental in bringing about the abandonment of this very wasteful and impossible project. It was proposed to spend $258,000,000 in the creation of a forest belt across the United States, including regions where the Lord will hardly permit a cactus to grow. It is not given to men to so reverse the order of Creation. The whole project reeked with wastefulness. Even a pamphlet that was issued to advertise it was prepared in such an expensive way and with such artistic embellishment that it cost the taxpayers of this country $4,011.64.

I wonder how long it will take us to learn that the road to economy is the road to recovery, and that we will never again have happiness and prosperity in America unless we stop such wastefulness.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I may say there were many reasons which justify this project. Undoubtedly the completed shelterbelt would be of great service, especially in that particular section of the country. The liquidation of the project does not necessarily indicate lack of merit, but the committee thought that under present circumstances it was not advisable to spend this amount for the purpose.

Mr. BIERMANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. BIERMANN. Did I correctly understand the gentleman to say that about 6,000,000 trees are now in the nurseries to be set out?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Something in excess of 60,000,000 trees.

Mr. BIERMANN. Can the gentleman tell us in what States these trees are to be set out?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I do not suppose there will be any necessity for prorating them. They will be distributed to all farmers who desire them and who will agree to plant them without expense to the Government. If there should be so many applications that the supply would not be adequate, doubtless they would apportion them to the various States in which the shelterbelt project is located.

Mr. BIERMANN. Does not the location of the trees depend in some measure on the kind of trees they are?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. All of these trees are varieties which are adapted to the region in which they are to be planted.

Mr. BIERMANN. Does the gentleman have any information as to how the trees are getting along that were planted previously?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We have received reports and photographs indicating a survival in some cases of almost 100 percent. In other cases, especially in regions visited by the drought, the mortality was high, but there is reason to believe that with the data now available trees can be supplied that will survive in practically all parts of this area.

Mr. BIERMANN. This money will not be entirely wasted. There will be much good result in the way of trees?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I do not think a dollar of this appropriation will be wasted. We should get several dollars' benefit out of every dollar expended.

Mr. BIERMANN. Does the gentleman have any figures as to how much money has been spent on this shelterbelt up to date?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. We expended last year $2,700,000.

Mr. BIERMANN. That plus the $170,000 included in the present bill is the total?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That will be the total cost at the close of the next fiscal year.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Did the conferees consider any provision allowing the remaining trees to be sent to farmers to be planted in wood lots or something like that?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. No stipulation is made as to exactly where these trees shall be located. That is left with the individual farmer, but our understanding is that a large part of them will be planted in wood lots and around the homestead, where they will be cared for and produce the greatest benefits.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I may say that I have felt from the first this project was doomed to failure; and, although I am not rejoicing, I was convinced from the first, as I say, that the project would fail, because I have seen too much of these trees trying to grow under existing circumstances.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I may say in response to the gentleman that the results obtained from this project are not to be measured by the number of trees which have been planted and which now survive but rather of the impetus given to reforestation throughout the West. In the future, as these trees develop, the farmers, seeing the results, will plant trees at their own expense. The project is to that extent demonstrational and educational.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I am glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. On the other hand, I think the shelterbelt has brought ridicule on the idea of planting trees. If they had designed them from the first for wood lots, then much good would have come from it, but I cannot think this has done a great deal of good because it has been so fantastic.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. May I say to the gentleman that not all of them were planted in shelterbelt blocks but on practically every farmstead in this area the trees were used about the buildings and have added materially to the comfort and beauty of these farm homes.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, will my colleague yield to me in this connection?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. TARVER. In view of the statements made by the chairman and the possibility that there may be an effort made to secure an allocation to work of this character of further public-works funds, I feel it is proper that the RECORD should show that a majority of the conferees on the part of the House thought this project had not been successful and that it would be unwise to continue it, and that it was not simply a question of lack of funds which influenced your conferees to insist that the project should be liquidated.

I may say also in this connection that as one member of the conference I felt that the funds which have been allocated to this work and are now unused, which appeared to be at the time of the hearings before our subcommittee $750,000 in amount, should be properly used for the liquidation of the project and that no appropriation ought to be made by Congress for the purpose of liquidation at all, and I still hope that when the administrative authorities having this matter in charge find that Congress has disapproved the continuation of the project, instead of using the funds that are carried in this bill to liquidate it, they will use the funds which have been allocated them insofar as they are unexpended for the purpose of carrying out the liquidation proposed by Congress, and that it will not be necessary to spend the amount of $170,000 carried in the bill.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I may say, Mr. Speaker, of course, there is room for wide divergence of opinion on this as on other items in the bill. There appeared before the committee witnesses and experts who testified to the great usefulness of this project and to the valuable results that would be derived from it, both at the present time and for many years to come, and the committee, after considering the matter exhaustively, thought it wise to provide sufficient funds to take care of the remaining trees and then liquidate the project.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. THURSTON. In justification for allowing $170,000, it was the thought of the subcommittee that this fund might be expended in assisting in the distribution of these trees among the farmers so that they could have them to erect windbreaks around their premises. So the winding up or the discontinuance of the belt idea still has the sympathetic consideration of the subcommittee in promoting stock to build windbreaks around the homes of farmers who want to obtain and plant these trees.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. May I inquire of the gentleman about the appropriation for the acquisition of additional forest lands?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. As the gentleman knows, the Budget made no provision for expenditures for that purpose. An amendment was offered on the floor of the House for $25,000,000 which, as the gentleman recalls, was defeated. The Senate then proposed an amendment of $10,000,000, and in conference we agreed on $2,500,000.

Mr. LUCKEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to my friend from Nebraska.

Mr. LUCKEY. In reference to the reforestation program in the Great Plains section, I wish to say that I have lived there for many years. I felt that the so-called shelterbelt project was rather impractical, but there is a great possibility for reforestation in the Great Plains section if we know just exactly what should be done after a scientific study and investigation of the problem. For instance, years ago Chancellor Bessie, of the University of Nebraska, one of the leading botanists of this country, was instrumental in promoting a reforestation project in the northwestern part of Nebraska, which has now developed into a very fine forest. We also recall that Sterling Morton, who lived in Nebraska City, was a great advocate of tree planting and was the originator of Arbor Day in this country. Much good work has been accomplished. There are still great possibilities along these lines, and we should not lose sight of the fact that something should be done for the Great Plains section—the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, and western Texas—along the line of scientific study of what is practical for these States; and, following such a careful study, carrying out a plan in accordance with our experience and based on such scientific study.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. LUDLOW. Does not the gentleman believe that some of this enterprise ought to be left to the local initiative of the counties and States, rather than devoting the money of all the taxpayers to such work?

Mr. LUCKEY. Yes; and the States are doing a great deal of work along this line; but what we need now is a coordination of all the forces under one head, so we can go forward with as little duplication of effort and waste of money as possible in bringing forward a sound program of reforestation. Instead of going at it in a visionary way, we should proceed in the most practical way possible.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I agree with the gentleman, and unquestionably the expenditure of this money has given a salutary impetus to the cultivation of trees and reforestation studies which will bear fruit in the future. It is similar to the demonstrational work of the soil-conservation program. There is not one of those 150 conservation projects which would be justified if the only advantage accruing was to the particular section of land on which located, but they are intended to be educational, and unquestionably the work of the Government in building these units of the shelterbelt is going to bring about increased interest and better methods of farming in those sections which will encourage private enterprise to take up the work where the Government is leaving off.

Mr. PIERCE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to Governor PIERCE.

Mr. PIERCE. Do I understand that there is only two and a half million dollars appropriated for the purchase of forest lands? That is a very small percentage.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. That is one-fourth of the amount suggested by the Senate.

Mr. PIERCE. What was the amount asked for by the commission?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. There was no request to the committee in any amount. The Budget made no provision. This appropriation is in excess of the Budget.

Mr. Speaker, if there are no further inquiries, I ask for a vote on the conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCREYNOLDS). The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 2: Page 4, line 10, insert the following: "Provided further, That hereafter funds available for field work in the Department of Agriculture may be used for the purchase of arms and ammunition whenever the individual purchase does not exceed $50, and for individual purchases exceeding $50, when such arms and ammunition cannot advantageously be supplied by the Secretary of War pursuant to the act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. 412): Provided further."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 16: On page 24, line 11, insert after the semicolon the following: "and the Secretary of Agriculture, upon application of any exporter, importer, packer, owner, agent of, or dealer in livestock, hides, skins, meat, or other animal products, may, in his discretion, make inspections and examinations at places other than the headquarters of inspectors for the convenience of said applicants and charge the applicants for the expenses of travel and subsistence incurred for such inspections and examinations, the funds derived from such charges to be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the appropriation from which the expenses are paid."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 71: Page 75, insert, after line 6, the following:

"The authorization of $2,500,000 for the survey, construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of main roads through unappropriated or unreserved public lands, nontaxable Indian lands, or other Federal reservations other than the forest reservations, under the provisions of the act of June 24, 1930 (46 Stat., p. 805), provided for by section 6 of the Highway Act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat., p. 994), for the fiscal year 1937, is hereby canceled for said fiscal year and made applicable to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment no. 85: Page 90, after line 10, insert:

"Sea-food inspectors: For personal services of sea-food inspectors designated to examine and inspect sea food and the production, packaging, and labeling thereof upon the application of any packer of any sea food for shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of the Federal Food and Drugs Act, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', approved August 27, 1935 (49 Stat., p. 871), $80,000: Provided, That on and after July 1, 1937, receipts from fees authorized to be collected by the operations of Public Act No. 346, entitled 'An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', shall be covered into the Treasury to the credit of 'Miscellaneous receipts', and hereafter appropriations for the operations under said act are authorized to be made annually out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert:

"Sea-food inspectors: On and after July 1, 1936, receipts from fees authorized to be collected by the operations of Public Act No. 346, entitled 'An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', shall be covered into the Treasury to the credit of Miscellaneous Receipts, except such fees paid after June 30, 1936, on account of services rendered prior to July 1, 1936, and required for payment of obligations incurred prior to such latter date. For expenses of inspection, including personal services of sea-food inspectors designated to examine and inspect sea food and the production, packaging, and labeling thereof upon the application of any packer of any sea food for shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of the Federal Food and Drugs Act, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 10A of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', approved August 27, 1935 (49 Stat., p. 871), there is appropriated an amount equal to the sum received during the fiscal year 1937 from the fees hereinbefore mentioned, to be warranted monthly: Provided, That the sum of $40,000 shall be advanced from the general fund of the Treasury on the first day of the fiscal year to the foregoing appropriation, to be returned to the surplus fund of the Treasury when the first $40,000 of revenue from the aforesaid fees has been received and warranted for the fiscal year 1937."

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following substitute amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield for that purpose?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I do.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLMER: In lieu of the amendment offered by Mr. CANNON of Missouri under the title "Food and Drug Administration", subtitle "Sea-Food Inspectors", insert:

"Enforcement of the Sea-Food Inspectors' Act: For personal services of sea-food inspectors designated to examine and inspect sea food and the production, packing, and labeling thereof, upon the application of any packer of any sea food for shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of the Federal Food and Drugs Act, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 10 (a) of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', approved August 27, 1935 (49 Stat., p. 871), $40,000."

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I shall have to make the point of order that the proposed amendment is not germane to the pending amendment. The amendment proposes that the Government advance $40,000 which shall be repaid from fees; in other words, that it shall lend $40,000 for this purpose. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Mississippi is an outright appropriation—in other words, gratis service to the packers. The Speaker, I am certain, will recall the decision in the Sixty-fifth Congress, in which it was held that a proposition to buy could not be amended by a proposition to give. In other words, that a proposal to give is not germane to a proposal to sell. The Speaker will also remember one of the early precedents cited by Mr. Hinds in which an amendment to pay a claim was held not to be germane to a proposition to refer a claim to the Court of Claims. The doctrine in both cases sustains the contention that a proposition to make an appropriation would not be germane to a proposition to make a loan.

I reserve my point of order in order that the gentleman from Mississippi may be heard.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard for a moment on the point of order, contrary to the position just taken by the gentleman from Missouri.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, the original Senate amendment numbered 85 is an amendment adding to the House bill an appropriation, not a loan, in the amount of $80,000 for the payment for personal services of sea-food inspectors. The argument of my colleague Mr. CANNON would be sufficient to justify holding that the amendment submitted by the conferees in lieu of the Senate amendment, is out of order by reason of the fact that that amendment proposes a loan or advance instead of a direct appropriation, but the point of order has not been made against the amendment submitted by the conferees. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi as a substitute for the amendment offered by the conferees is exactly in line with the original Senate amendment numbered 85 in that it proposes a direct appropriation of $40,000, whereas the original Senate amendment proposes a direct appropriation of $80,000. It is inconceivable, merely by reason of the fact that the conferees have offered an amendment proposing a loan instead of an appropriation which might have been held out of order had the point of order been made, that a substitute for that amendment cannot be offered just exactly in the terms of the original Senate amendment, except as to the amount involved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The contention of the gentleman from Georgia is that the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi is a substitute for that is carried in the original bill as an amendment of the Senate?

Mr. TARVER. As I understand it the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi is offered as a substitute for the motion of the gentleman from Missouri to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment, and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi is certainly germane to the Senate amendment.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi is an amendment to the pending amendment and it is well established that the admissibility of an amendment under such circumstances is judged by its relation to the amendment to which it is offered and not by its relation to any other provision in the bill. The proposed amendment is not germane to the amendment to which it is offered.

I reserve the point of order to give the gentleman from Mississippi an opportunity to discuss his amendment.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, this appropriation is intended for the purpose of furnishing funds whereby food packed in the sea-food industry may be inspected, similar to that inspection that is granted to the meat-packing industry of this country. This is a wholesome proposition. It is in the interest of the public welfare that this sea food be inspected.

At the last session of the Congress there was a law passed authorizing this appropriation. The Pure Food and Drug Department, acting upon the authority of that authorization, asked the Budget for $80,000.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. After the authority and the Food and Drug Department made their request of the Budget, did the Budget not approve and make its recommendation to the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. COLMER. The Budget made its recommendation to the Appropriations Committee. I thank my colleague.

Then the Senate inserted this item of $80,000, just as we are asking in this amendment, for this purpose. We are merely asking that the recommendation of the Pure Food and Drug Department and of the Budget and of the authorization of this Congress be carried out by this appropriation, except that for the purpose of compromise, to be frank about it, instead of asking for $80,000, we have provided for just one-half that amount or $40,000.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. Is it not a fact that the gentleman is only asking for the same thing that is now granted for meats; that is, inspection by the Government?

Mr. COLMER. That is my understanding.

Mr. PATMAN. And the Budget recommended $80,000 for that purpose and you are only asking for $40,000 in this amendment?

Mr. COLMER. That is true.

Mr. PATMAN. I hope the amendment is adopted.

Mr. COLMER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield.

Mr. THURSTON. The real matter in controversy is whether we should furnish a revolving fund of $80,000, so that ultimately the fees would repay something to the Treasury, or your proposal to pay $40,000 out of the Treasury, no part of which would be returned to the Treasury?

Mr. COLMER. That is quite true. Under the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], the distinguished chairman of this committee, we are granted $40,000 as a kind of initial revolving fund. We are merely asking by this amendment that you give us $40,000 without any strings tied to it. That is a frank, candid statement of the whole situation.

Let me say that this does not alone involve my selfish interest or my congressional district. This matter goes to the welfare of the consuming public. As I stated once before upon this floor, there is an opinion prevalent among the consuming public that canned sea foods are injurious and poisonous. The sea-food industry is a big industry in this country. In my district alone there are some fifteen or twenty thousand men engaged in this industry. Unless we can receive an inspection service for this sea food, and this prevalent opinion continues to grow that this product is not good for human consumption, that industry would likely be destroyed and those men will go upon relief and add to the unemployment list.

I appeal to my colleagues, not for any selfish reason but upon the merit and upon the justice of my cause, that we not twiddle about this thing, but give us this $40,000 that we have asked for, just one-half the amount that the Budget recommended, and vote for my amendment.

I want to thank my colleague the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], who has been so courteous to me throughout this matter and to the cause that I represent. Even though he has seen fit, under a sense of his duty to hold down this appropriation as much as possible, to oppose me in this, I appreciate the courtesy, and I hope the amendment will prevail and that we may get this $40,000. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCREYNOLDS). The Chair is ready to rule upon the point of order.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] to the Senate amendment appearing on page 90, line 10, with reference to sea-food inspectors, provides for a loan. The amendment reads:

Provided, That the sum of $40,000 shall be advanced from the general fund of the Treasury on the first day of the fiscal year to the foregoing appropriation, to be returned to the surplus fund of the Treasury when the first $40,000 of revenue from the aforesaid fees has been received and warranted for the fiscal year 1937.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] is an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] and provides for an outright appropriation of $40,000. The difference between the amendments is that one is a loan and the other is a straight appropriation without return.

It has been well settled that an amendment to change a condition of that character is not in order. So the only question is whether or not the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi must be germane to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri or to the Senate amendment. The Chair is of the opinion, from previous rulings, that it must be germane to the amendment to which it is offered. That is, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi must be germane to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri, because it is offered as an amendment to that amendment.

In support of that statement the Chair reads the following syllabus from Cannon's Precedents, volume VIII, section 2924:

It is not sufficient that an amendment proposed to a pending amendment be germane to the bill, but it must also be germane to the amendment to which it is offered.

In view of that situation, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TARVER. In the event the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri should be voted down by the House, the gentleman from Mississippi would then be in order to offer his motion to recede and concur with his amendment to the Senate amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is a correct statement.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COLMER) there were—ayes 21, noes 28.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were refused.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently there is not a quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 130, nays 147, not voting 148, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. HAINES, is unavoidably absent. If he was present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk the following motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. COLMER moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate no. 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter in the Senate amendment insert:

"Enforcement of the Sea Food Inspectors Act: For personal services of sea-food inspectors designated to examine and inspect sea food and the production, packing, and labeling thereof upon the application of any packer of any sea food for shipment or sale within the jurisdiction of the Federal Food and Drugs Act, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to amend section 10 (a) of the Federal Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, as amended', approved August 27, 1935 (49 Stat., p. 871), $40,000."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the proposed amendment to the Senate amendment embraces provisions that are not in conference; that the gentleman can propose only such things as are embraced within the jurisdiction of the conference; and the amendment exceeds that matter by releasing restrictions that have already been agreed to by the conferees.

The SPEAKER. As the Chair reads the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi, it contains exactly the same language as the first portion of the Senate amendment except the amount is $40,000 instead of $80,000.

Mr. BLANTON. But, Mr. Speaker, it releases restrictions that have been agreed upon.

The SPEAKER. In the opinion of the Chair the amendment is germane.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, only those matters that were embraced within the jurisdiction of the conferees may be offered as amendments.

The SPEAKER. This Senate amendment was reported back to the House still in disagreement, as a matter of fact, and is now before the House for such action as the House may see fit to take. The gentleman from Mississippi has offered a motion to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment. The Chair has held that the amendment is germane and therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the gentleman from Mississippi on this splendid tribute to his popularity in the House, and I desire to join those who voted for him in this well-merited complaint. The vote was a vote in favor of the gentleman and is a testimonial to our deep affection for him and the esteem in which he is held. It was a vote on the gentleman from Mississippi and not a vote on the merits of the amendment before us.

Mr. Speaker, I would not oppose this amendment if it involved merely the item before us today, but it is the entering wedge, and when we admit it we open the door to millions of dollars of expense in supplying similar service to other industries in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad to yield such time to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] as he may desire.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the very impassioned plea made by my distinguished colleague from Missouri [Mr. CANNON]. I appreciate the very kind references he made to me in the beginning of his speech, but as he went along, I was reminded of the old adage, "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts", because he bore down on me pretty hard before he concluded.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a matter of personal popularity. It is true I did ask some of my colleagues to support me in this piece of legislation. It is even true I went to the door and saw a few of the Members when they came in.

You know, I was rather impressed when I first came to Congress a few years ago with the fact that every time I came in that door to answer a roll call there was a man standing there telling me to vote with the committee, or telling me how to vote. I used to resent that. He always stands there and says "The vote of the committee is yes" or "The vote of the committee is no." So today, I just took the precaution of going out there to the door in order to offset any committee action. If I did wrong, and if I was in error, I apologize. The man at the door, who usually says "Vote with the committee" retreated after I got there.

Mr. BOILEAU. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. I wish to voice my protest against a custom that has developed here of employees of the House standing at the various doors telling Members how to vote. All they say is "Vote 'yes'" or "Vote 'no.'" I wonder under what rule anyone is authorized to instruct employees of the House to stand out there and tell Members how to vote?

Mr. COLMER. I am sure it was not the distinguised chairman of this committee.

Mr. BOILEAU. Oh, I do not say that. I did not make any such inference.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, this is a serious matter. I take issue with my distinguished friend and colleague. It is on a parallel with the meat-inspection provisions of the Pure Food Act. If this inspection service is granted it can have but one purpose, and that is to protect the consuming public who consume sea-food products. If there is any food products that need inspection, I submit it is sea-food products.

The House has voted down the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri, which is tantamount to an endorsement of the proposal which I have made. I am not going to take the time of the House unnecessarily, because there is not a great deal involved; just $40,000. I am asking you to take the strings off of this amount and let the people of our country have this service to the extent of $40,000.

I hope the House will confirm what it has already done and support this motion. [Applause.]

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, before my colleague concludes, will he yield for a question?

Mr. COLMER. I yield.

Mr. DOXEY. Is it not a fact that the Director of the Budget has approved an appropriation for this purpose in the amount of $80,000, while all the gentleman is asking in his motion is $40,000?

Mr. COLMER. That is quite so, and I thank my colleague.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, this is the situation with reference to the pending motion. The Senate tacked on amendment no. 85, which provided for sea-food inspection to come out of the Treasury of the United States, $80,000, and it was provided that on and after the 1st of July 1937 receipts from fees authorized to be collected for sea-food inspection should revert to the Treasury. In conference it was worked out so that $40,000 should be set up and then the fees should go into a revolving fund.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] offered an amendment providing for what the conferees had agreed to and the House voted it down. An attempt is now made to come back here and take $40,000 out of the Treasury and not provide that the fee shall come back, which makes it a little worse than the Senate amendment and carries it way beyond the provisions of the Senate amendment so far as a raid on the Treasury is concerned.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. COLMER. Is it not a fact that the authorization passed by the Congress last year, which I do not have before me now, provided for just such an appropriation?

Mr. TABER. Not in just this way, no; because there was an authorization which required, as I recall the situation, the tax to be levied and collected from those who offered the shrimp for inspection.

Mr. COLMER. I may say to the gentleman that if he will investigate the matter further he will find he is in error.

Mr. TABER. We looked it up and we found that the Budget language that was submitted and the language submitted by the Senate did not comply with the statute.

Mr. COLMER. I may say further to the gentleman that the amendment offered now is in language prepared by the Budget.

Mr. TABER. Whether it is the language of the Budget or not, it is not language which will protect the Treasury of the United States.

I do not know who will be out in the hall asking folks to vote, but right now I am asking the membership of this House to vote to protect the Treasury and not permit this thing to go through without providing how these taxes shall be collected and how the money shall revert to the Treasury.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TARVER].

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, this squabble over $40,000, to my mind, is entirely unjustifiable. I am a member of the committee of conference which submitted the report which, so far as this amendment is concerned, the House a few moments ago, by a yea-and-nay vote, turned down. I voted with my fellow conferees in favor of the conferees' report, but our attitude was disapproved by the House. It therefore is not now a question of supporting the conferees or supporting the committee. The conference committee's attitude has already been rejected, and the question now before the House is what we ought to do to endeavor to solve this question of difference between the House and the Senate.

The Senate wants $80,000 for this purpose, and the gentleman from Mississippi, in an effort to reach a compromise, has proposed to appropriate $40,000. I think we ought to meet him halfway. I think we ought to agree to the amendment.

This is not any effort to raid the Treasury. If you wanted to protect the Treasury, I may say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] he ought to have objected last year when they passed through this House a Senate bill by unanimous consent authorizing the appropriation of money from the Federal Treasury to carry on this work.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I will be pleased to yield.

Mr. TABER. Frankly, I was not able to be here when that bill was up. I was engaged on hearings in committee. I try to protect the Treasury, but I cannot always be here and look after all these matters. I have to rely on some of the others some of the time.

Mr. TARVER. Of course, all the Members of Congress are not individually responsible for a legislative authorization which may be passed by Congress and enacted into law, but, after it is passed and signed and approved by the President, it constitutes a legislative expression of the purposes of the Congress and authorizes the appropriation of money in accordance with the collective will of Congress; and in this case legislation, subsequent to the time when the promises were made to the committee which originally considered the matter by the shrimp people, has been enacted by Congress under the unanimous-consent rule, providing that the expense of this investigation and inspection shall be paid from the Federal Treasury instead of being paid altogether by the people who are interested in the industry.

Unless we want to disapprove or repudiate the legislation we unanimously passed last year, we ought at least to make provision for a reasonable part of this expense. Forty thousand dollars will not be enough. This is unquestioned. The Budget estimated it would require $80,000. If we agree to $40,000, as proposed in the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi, the effect will be that the fees paid by the shrimp people themselves must pay one-half of the cost of inspection, and the Federal Government, instead of doing what it impliedly promised last year and paying it all, is going to pay one-half of it. This seems to me to be a happy and a reasonable compromise, and it certainly is my hope that the membership of the House will accede to the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi and remove this cause of controversy between the House and Senate. [Applause.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, like my chairman, I have no quarrel with my good friend from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER]. I merely want to say a few words in defense of the action of the Democratic employee of the House who, upon roll-call votes, stands at the door and tells incoming Members what issue is being voted upon, and who for 25 years has served the House faithfully and well, and that is Johnnie Snyder. [Applause.]

Frequently a matter comes up on the floor under debate where the committee conducts general debate for an hour or more and Members have to go in and out of the Chamber on important business. They have to meet constituents, they have to sign important documents, they go out to committee meetings, expecting to get back in time to vote by the time the question comes to a vote.

When the bell rings they come in, and then Mr. Snyder, who has served here for 25 years, served faithfully the Democratic administration of the House, stands at the door and says, "This is bill, or resolution, or amendment, or conference report so and so. The committee vote is 'aye' or the committee vote is 'no.'" He does not tell the Member how to vote. He would be the last man in the world who would tell a Member how to vote; he is one of the most modest men you ever saw, and one of the most faithful men. He is industrious and on the job every minute that the House is in session.

I frequently have to go to the Appropriations Committee's room on important business, and when I come back I say to Johnnie, "Is this vote on the committee?" I find out about the situation and then exercise my own judgment as to how to vote.

Mr. COLMER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I will be glad to yield to my friend from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. I want to say to the gentleman that I had no intention of reflecting on any of these valuable employees of the House. I hope that there is no such inference from my remarks.

Mr. BLANTON. I am glad to hear it.

Mr. BOILEAU. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. Let me say that I had no intention of reflecting on any employees working at the door. My criticism was against the system and not against any employee.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to say that when the Republican Party was in power they had a faithful employee who occupied the same position that Mr. Snyder does. He stood there at the door and gave Members the facts as to the situation.

Mr. BOILEAU. And it will not be long before the Progressives will have a man standing at the door. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, the gentleman's grandchildren will be gray-headed before that time. [Laughter.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COLMER) there were 60 ayes and 65 noes.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 149, nays 129, not voting 147, as follows:

LOOKING TO THE CAMPAIGN

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting therein an address delivered by my colleague from New York [Mr. ANDREWS] on May 27 over a national hook-up of the National Broadcasting System.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following radio address delivered by Hon. WALTER G. ANDREWS, of New York, on May 26, 1936:

Members of the national radio audience, as a radio fan myself I am mindful of the fact that in these days you are invited to listen to a lot of so-called political orators, and as a speaker this evening I wish to avoid, if possible, being put into that class. My time on the air with you is brief, so I shall confine myself to some observations which I believe are pertinent, Looking to the Campaign. These for your information are based upon 5 years' service in the House of Representatives, a reasonable business experience, and contacts largely with my fellow citizens in New York State. In talking with you I may also state that I am one of those who believe that, given the facts and a fair understanding in any situation, the average citizen is better qualified today to exercise his or her political judgment than at any time in our history. Largely due to the development of the press in its news from Washington, and in particular the radio, a vast majority of our citizens are much better informed than ever before.

We have now witnessed over 3 years of the so-called New Deal, and what are to be our considerations looking to the campaign and the election? At the start, to be sure, some of the early expressions of Mr. Roosevelt and some of the measures sponsored by his leadership gave us hope for the solution of our pressing problems, but this did not last for long.

Mr. Roosevelt's personal charm lasted about 2 years, and even before that the failure of his policies became evident. At the outset, having no real or sound convictions of his own, Mr. Roosevelt surrounded himself with a group of impractical theorists. It is this group, to a large extent, who have supplied the ideas of the New Deal. It is interesting to note that among the entire group of departmental bureaucratic advisers of the President it would be most difficult to find one self-made man or anyone who from experience knows what it is to meet a Saturday night's pay roll or manage a farm. Looking to the Democratic National Convention and Mr. Roosevelt's renomination, how can his 1936 platform be anything but meaningless. Here is a man who promised to reduce Federal expenditures. He has increased them enormously. He has cynically violated most of the other major planks of his 1932 platform.

Figures taken from the books of the Treasury Department itself show that up to May 18 last the Federal Government, under the present administration, has expended the colossal sum of twenty-two and one-half billion dollars. Putting this long figure another way, twenty-two thousand million dollars. The magnitude of this spending becomes more alarming when you realize that during this period the Government has been putting out more than $2 for each dollar of revenue it has taken in. The administration right now is in a hot spot. It is unwilling if not afraid to cut expenditures at the moment. It is equally unwilling and probably afraid to impose the added taxes which would be required to bring the revenues somewhere near its expenditures.

It was the President himself who once said, "Taxes are paid by the sweat of every man who labors." The people must be assured that Government borrowing will stop as soon as possible, thus releasing funds for private enterprise. Honest relief must be provided for those who require it, but the Republican Party cannot attempt to follow the present administration's wasteful policy. The New Deal administration is about to go into a national election. What is it going to do after election if it be successful in retaining control of the Government? If its future is to be judged by its past performances, the spending will continue, along with its experiments.

The second count against Mr. Roosevelt is his disregard of American tradition. Attempts to intimidate a free people through the N. R. A., the A. A. A., the Potato Act, and other similar devices have failed. Mr. Farley's attempt to buy the election of 1936 through the political domination of W. P. A. workers, corruption of the civil service, and wholesale patronage disposal to hundreds of thousands of additions to the Federal pay roll will not prevail against the rising tide of sane thinking among the voters. Everywhere allegiance to Roosevelt and Farley is a requisite for getting a W. P. A. job. Hunger and anxiety to work are not enough. Desperate tactics are being employed by Roosevelt, Farley & Co., for they are not so sure of winning as they would have you believe. But these tactics will not succeed as in 1932 and 1934. The people have awakened. The majority of them will not endorse a national Tammany Hall bossed by a stamp seller, chairman of the New York Democratic Committee, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, and ex-officio Postmaster General. If Mr. Roosevelt is sincere in some of his early expressed ideals for the Federal Government, why doesn't he listen to the pleadings of his friend Senator NORRIS, who asks that Mr. Farley resign one of his jobs? When have we ever heard of such brazen thirst for political power in one man on this side of the Atlantic? Mr. Farley is a smart man, but he made a bad mistake the other day during his private-car trip through the country, while in Michigan. He included in his talk a reference to one of the Republican candidates as "merely the Governor of a typical prairie State." This shows what the Tammany national chairman thinks of the Middle West. No matter who the Republican candidate may be, Farley's crack should be plastered on every fence post in the Mississippi Valley.

The third count against the President is from a practical standpoint probably the most damaging of all. He has failed to reduce unemployment appreciably, in spite of all his spending, with an increase in the national debt from twenty-one to thirty-four billions of dollars. American Federation of Labor statistics place present unemployment at about the same as in September of 1933. Roosevelt's petulant attacks on American businessmen merely expose his own incompetence. It is his vacillating and undependable policies which prevent the average man in business from making any long-range plans. The result is a vast amount of idle capital. Our successful Presidents have in the main cooperated with businessmen and with all other classes, instead of denouncing them. Our heritage has been that the Government has been the servant of the people and not their master.

The fourth count against Mr. Roosevelt is his deliberate creation of class hatred, his attempt to buy the votes of the farmers and those who want honest work. In order to fight depression the wisest, as well as the most honest, course to adopt is the encouragement of unity among Americans. It is the duty of a President to set an example of faith, hope, and charity. This last quality is conspicuously absent in the President. His self-complacency attributes to all opponents an unworthy motive. He has done a good deal to discredit the word "liberal" as applied to the political world. Matthew Arnold, a genuine social reformer, who once described himself as a liberal of the future, asserted that a liberal must keep himself free from petty hatreds and prejudice. There are none like him in the New Deal gang. They resent criticism no matter from whom it comes.

The best that can be said about Mr. Roosevelt is that he is a pleasant man, but shallow on fundamentals and pleasant only when he is not opposed.

His record furnishes us with no reason for entrusting him with the conduct of national affairs for another 4 years. Under his confused and spendthrift rule the Nation has been hurried toward eventual bankruptcy. Leading Democrats have protested these policies in vain. Many good Democrats, who voted for him in 1932, are now joining in this chorus. The country is not going to revolt in November. It has already revolted. The determination to turn to sound principle has already been made by the people. This is apparent everywhere. The only question to be immediately decided is into whose hands to place the new leadership. This question is to be decided at Cleveland next month, which brings me before closing to a few words to the Republican voters and delegates to the national convention.

Herein rests our great responsibility. I believe it paramount that every Republican urge his or her delegate to use their influence to elect the strongest possible candidate with the adoption of a platform devoid of bunk and capable of performance. It should be straightforward, concise, and clearly stating the honest and actual intentions of the Republican leadership.

For the last 3 years we have been at the mercy of the Roosevelt-Farley gang, who have posed as the Democratic Party while violating almost every fundamental principle upon which that party has formerly stood. The Republican Party must appeal to persons of moderate circumstances and moderate frame of mind and to the young people of our country looking to the future. Those in moderate circumstances are the backbone of America. The everyday man and woman of America, the heads of families, have a great stake in the Republican Party. Only through it can their families, their homes, their savings, and their ideals find protection against rising socialism and its great bureaucracy.

If the Republican Party should nominate a man who is merely the heir of old and broken-down machine politics, a man who has not rubbed elbows with his fellow men, we had better close up shop today. But we will not nominate such a man.

With this the Republican Party will represent common sense over socialism, common honesty over crazy bureaucracy, common decency over a lower code. If we will give this great majority in this country of common men and women the chance to make the choice, there can be no question of a victory in November. It will be a victory for American traditions and principles.

THE DISTRICT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend in the RECORD dated tomorrow a copy of a letter addressed to the chairman of the Senate conferees on the District of Columbia appropriation bill, answering a letter I have just received from him, and outlining a matter coming into conference on Monday morning next between the House and the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, under unanimous consent extend in the RECORD a copy of a letter dated tomorrow the chairman of the Senate conferees on the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

The letter is as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., May 30, 1936.

Senator ELMER THOMAS,
Chairman, Senate Conferees, District Appropriation Bill,
Senate Office Building.

MY DEAR SENATOR THOMAS: Your letter of May 29 (embracing 5 pages, typewritten, single-spaced) addressed to me as chairman of the House conferees, copies of which at the time of sending you gave yesterday to the five Washington newspapers for publication, is before me for reply.

Your procedure, Senator, is most unusual and unprecedented. We five House managers invited you and the other Senate managers to meet us in conference next Monday, hoping that it might be possible then to reach an agreement on the 87 Senate amendments you placed on the House appropriation bill. You could have telephoned your acceptance. It required no five-page letter. Yet on Friday, when agreeing to meet us in conference next Monday, you made an attempt to prejudge and predetermine all of the issues of the conference, by making an extended argument in your five-page letter, given front-page notoriety last night and this morning by your personally interested ardent backers—the local newspapers.

I won't complain, however, Senator, but accept the situation with much gratification, because your unprecedented action inviting from me a reply, affords me a most apropos opportunity, thus by you made both parliamentary and proper, frankly and fully to place before you and the public the exact position of the House conferees, which you and your forum, the interested Washington newspapers, continue to ignore and misrepresent, and with erroneous statements and counterfeit logic seek to avoid.

We are not going to let you side-step the issues or misrepresent the facts or shift the responsibility. You placed 87 Senate amendments on the House bill, which, without question or consideration, passed the Senate in 15 minutes, as so reported by all local newspapers. Your 87 Senate amendments involved millions of dollars, 6 being legislative matters that should have been reported only by a legislative committee. One is to establish pay parking meters in Washington, so that every person who parks an automobile in their Nation's Capital would be forced to pay tribute to one monopoly. You did not expect the House to agree to your 87 amendments, because you asked for a conference and had Senate conferees appointed immediately, before any House Member had seen any of your 87 amendments, and the local papers immediately quoted you as saying that the House would be compelled to agree to the Senate action or there would be no bill, and you would pass a continuing resolution.

In your first amendment you demanded that the taxpayers of the United States should contribute, out of their Federal Treasury, the huge sum of $5,700,000 on the local civic expenses of the Washington people. You at the time had access to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which showed that when such proposal was made in the House only 11 Members voted for it, and that upon a record roll-call vote in the House the bill passed allowing a contribution of only $2,700,000, with only 26 Members voting against it.

Then, again, you knew that the House subcommittee had held exhaustive hearings on the request of Superintendent Ballou to give him $78,660 to be spent on his so-called character education, and that the House committeemen, by a unanimous vote, had decided that the $87,540 you allowed Ballou last year, and the $63,383 you allowed him the year before, had been wasted, misspent, and perverted; that he was using it on only 10 of his 175 schools, and was doing no good, but lots of harm; and they unanimously refused to allow any part of the $78,660, and the House approved their action by passing the bill, with only 26 Members voting against it on record roll-call vote. Yet, by amendment, you had the Senate to place this $78,660 in the bill for Dr. Ballou to waste and misspend.

Then, again, you knew that through hearings the House subcommittee had ascertained that judges drawing salaries of from $8,000 to $12,500, and prosecuting attorneys drawing large salaries up to $8,000, and doctors drawing salaries up to $7,500, and other employees drawing high salaries were selling part of their time to outside employers, and the House provided in its bill that no such official or employee drawing as much as $2,400 per year should accept outside employment, and you placed a Senate amendment on our bill, striking out this House limitation, which was included in the House bill which passed with only 26 votes against it on roll-call record vote.

I firmly believe that 95 percent of the people of Texas would strongly support the House on the above three issues. I firmly believe that in spite of your tremendous popularity in your own State, and the honor and eulogies your five Washington newspapers daily bestow upon you for fighting their battles, that 90 percent of the people of Oklahoma would strongly support the House on all three of the above issues.

Yet, Senator, you have held this bill in deadlock since April 24 1936, notwithstanding the fact that in a final effort to get a bill so that the District of Columbia would not be deprived of some urgent badly needed, new construction and equipment the House conferees proposed that if the Senate would yield on the three propositions above mentioned that the House conferees most generously would yield on the other 84 Senate amendments. You refused. You claimed that an expert named Parker, and Mr. Richards, had given convincing proof that Washington people were overtaxed and we asked to be allowed to question them, and you arranged for the Senate and House conferees to meet in joint hearing on May 7, 1936, to hear Parker and Richards.

We met together on May 7, 1936, to hear Parker and Richards and, to our surprise, you had no stenographer there to take down the evidence. We asked that you call one of the official stenographers, as we wanted the evidence taken down and printed, so that it would be of some value. To our great surprise, you obstinately refused to have a stenographer or to have it taken down, so all five of our House managers refused to sit with you in the hearing, as your arbitrary action caused all of us to have suspicions regarding the entire proceeding. We all withdrew and learned afterward that you then sent for a stenographer, and, with our House conferees absent and with no opportunity for any of us to ask the witnesses questions, you proceeded to allow them to introduce a lot of irrelevant, erroneous documents and statements which, had we been present, we could have made them admit, through pertinent questioning, were of no value and had no probative force and effect whatsoever; yet you had same printed into a worthless document of 53 printed pages.

We House conferees finally succeeded in getting this Mr. L. H. Parker before us on May 13, 1936, and we elicited from him facts that you made no attempt to develop. We made him admit that he is drawing an annual salary of $9,600 from the Government, yet last October accepted employment from the Washington Board of Trade, and that they paid him $5,500 in cash for his absurd, ridiculous statement that "Washington is the third highest taxed city in the United States." Every posted person in Congress knows there is no truth whatever in such statement. His 26 pages of testimony in our printed hearings show that Parker does not know anything whatever about Washington taxes.

Parker was in error about the date he bought his own home, and as to what he paid for it, and as to its assessed value. He testified that he bought it new in 1929, when he bought it in 1931; he testified he paid $17,250 for it, when he paid $17,950 for it; he testified that during the 3 years he owned it it was assessed at $14,000, when during said time it was assessed at $11,010 and it is now assessed at only $10,110; he testified he paid an automobile tax of $18, when the tax official, Mr. Allen, certifies that he paid only $2, of which $1 was a property tax on his auto and the other $1 was for registration and annual license tags.

I will guarantee that neither the people of Texas nor Oklahoma would give any credence to the evidence of a man who had been paid $5,500 in cash for giving it.

As to Mr. Richards, since he has lately gotten on the board of trade pay roll, he has suddenly changed front from the evidence he has been giving us for the past 20 years. He won't deny that in 1927 the tax rate here was $1.80 per $100; that in 1928 the Commissioners lowered the tax rate to $1.70 per $100, and he was present, assenting to Commissioner Hazen's testimony in 1934 that "for 1934 they had lowered the tax rate from $1.70 to $1.50 per $100, which meant a saving that year to Washington taxpayers of $2,445,000; also that they had reduced the assessed valuation of real estate by $80,000,000, which meant another saving of $1,200,000, and for 1935 they were making an additional reduction in assessed valuation of real estate of $50,000,000; that they had given a 25-percent reduction in water charges, which meant another saving of $600,000, as they had increased the metered allowance from 7,500 to 10,000 cubic feet; and they were allowing 10 percent discount on bills, which meant another saving of $100,000 to local taxpayers.

Mr. Richards assenting thereto then heard Commissioner Hazen admit the many privileges Washington people enjoy, and the many exemptions from ordinary taxes they have which people in other cities have to pay, and heard Commissioner Hazen testify that Washington people are the best cared for, are the least taxed, and enjoy more privileges than any other people in the United States.

You, Senator, and your conferees, made no attempt to elicit from Mr. Richards the reason for his change of front. We have a certificate from Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor of the District, showing that instead of retiring on March 14, 1936, with retired pay for life of $1,265 per annum, payable in 12 equal monthly installments every year, Mr. Richards resigned on March 12, 1936, and will now draw no retired pay. He did this so he could go on the pay roll of the Washington Board of Trade. Many times he has testified that property here wanted by the Government has cost us as high as 10 times its assessed value, based on the evidence of Washington experts. Hence we do not pay any attention to his change-of-front testimony now, since he has gone on the pay roll of the Washington Board of Trade. When it has paid Parker $5,500 for giving them a worthless statement, it must be paying Mr. Richards pretty high compensation to induce him to waive his retired pay for life.

You contend, Senator, that taxes are not extremely low here. How about your own. You own your own apartment in the large apartment house at No. 1661 Crescent Place NW. There are 49 other apartments in this building owned by individuals like yourself, all taxed together as one piece of property. In 1933 this property embracing the 50 apartments was rendered at an assessed valuation of $687,450, upon which at the then tax rate of $1.70 on the $100, there was paid a tax of $11,686.66, your one-fiftieth of same being $233.73. This year said property embracing said 50 apartments is rendered at an assessed valuation of only $597,705, which is a reduction in assessed value of $89,745 since 1933, and the tax paid this year at the reduced tax rate of only $1.50 per the $100, is $8,965.58, your one-fiftieth part of same being only $179.31, if yours is an average of said 50 apartments. The above facts were certified to us by the tax assessor of the District of Columbia, who further shows that above your $1,000 household-furniture exemption allowed you here by law, you render $500 of household furniture upon which you pay an annual tax of only $7.50, and that your 1935-model family sedan is rendered at an assessed value of $785, upon which you pay a property tax of only $11.77, and that you pay $1 per year for your registration license tags. Don't you know, Senator, that the property you own here would cost you at least three times as much taxes per annum in Oklahoma or Texas as the amount you pay here in Washington?

In our House hearings we showed the actual renditions of all the newspapers in Washington and of about a hundred citizens drawing salaries of from $20,000 to $75,000 per year, and none of them would think of selling their property for double its assessed value, and some of them were paying $2 and $3 per annum on their family Cadillacs and Packards.

Your first bluff was that you would make the House give a Federal contribution of $5,700,000 by passing a continuing resolution, but we called that by assuring you the House would amend it, and refuse to allow it.

Then you bluffed again by stating you would force the President to pay the District expenses out of Federal relief funds so as to make all of the expense be borne by the United States, and the President called that bluff by stating he would use no relief funds for such purpose.

Now in your letter you bluff again by threatening to pass your ridiculous resolution to let the President appoint three men of the qualifications you specify, to decide what amount of Federal contribution Congress shall give to Washington people, and that we appropriate $50,000 to pay these men. And in your letter you say "the Government of the District of Columbia is the direct and unavoidable responsibility of the President." I thought you were acquainted with the Constitution. The President does not have any control whatsoever over the District of Columbia. It is not his concern. The Constitution provides that "the Congress shall exercise exclusive control." Watson on the Constitution, page 698, says: "The Constitution confers upon Congress absolute control and authority over the District of Columbia." In Gibbons v. The District of Columbia, and numerous other cases, the Supreme Court of the United States held that under clause 17, of section 8, of article I of the Constitution "Congress is given exclusive jurisdiction over the District of Columbia for every purpose of government, national or local, in all cases whatsoever, including taxation." So the President has nothing to do with it. It is solely a responsibility of the Congress. And we are not going to allow you to shift it to the shoulders of the President. He appoints the Commissioners solely because Congress delegated that authority to him by statute.

Of course we know who would select the three men you have in mind. The Senate selects all judges, all prosecuting attorneys, all directors, all commissioners, all administrators, all heads of bureaus—all this and all that. You might, Senator, accidentally select some fellow like Parker, who, without your having found it out, had gotten on the pay roll of the Washington Board of Trade at $5,500 cash per high tax opinion, or you might accidentally select some fellow like Richards, who resigns without retirement pay so he can work for the Washington Board of Trade, when he could have retired and drawn retired pay for life of $1,265 per annum, which is a pretty fair pension.

What is the use of paying $50,000 to your three men when only last year President Roosevelt had his Treasury experts to make an investigation of taxes paid in 15 comparable cities, and he certified to us that the taxes paid in Washington are lower than those paid in any other cities of between 300,000 and 825,000 population in the United States.

Have you forgotten the long, expensive, exhaustive investigation made by the Mapes committee, which found taxes here so low they immediately had the House pass the four Mapes bills, increasing the gasoline tax, the tax on automobiles and trucks, providing an income tax, and other taxes that people in all other cities pay, and all of said bills died in the Senate. We are not going to waste another $50,000 on any worthless commission.

Before I conclude, Senator, I must remind you of a few of the things the United States has done for the District. It has made out of a swampy, unhealthy, mosquito-ridden, small town, one of the finest, most beautiful cities in the world, where lots that formerly you could hardly give away, are now worth a fortune. It owns the original water conduit here, and has spent over $20,000,000 out of the Federal Treasury in perfecting the water system. It has built the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and reflecting pools used for skating in winter, the $14,750,000 Memorial Bridge, the wonderful new boulevard highway to Mount Vernon, the $10,000,000 Supreme Court Building, the magnificent Congressional Library, and scores of other remarkable places of interest, all with United States money, that attract hundreds of thousands of tourists here constantly. The Washington Star for April 26, 1936, quoted the board of trade as stating that during the last 5 years visitors to Washington had spent the enormous sum of $221,547,992 in cash, which greatly benefited every businessman in Washington.

Moreover, under the old regime, the Government paid all of the debts incurred by the District, and has kept it out of debt with large annual contributions from the Federal Treasury, so people here pay no interest.

And under the old unjust 50–50 arrangements, the United States furnished half of the money to install the sewer system here, to pave the streets, to build the many fine bridges, including the million-dollar bridge on Connecticut Avenue, to build most of the 175 school buildings of Washington, to procure and develop the numerous fine playgrounds, the 1,200 parks, big and little, the jail, penitentiary, the courts, the municipal building, the markets, some hospitals, branch libraries, and many other permanent improvements which people of all other cities must buy and pay for themselves without help.

People in other cities have to pay State taxes, county taxes, school taxes, water taxes, and many other special taxes. Here in Washington people pay one tax of $1.50 on the $100 on both tangible personal property and on real estate. They pay only one-half of 1 percent on intangibles. They get their water furnished for only $6.60 per year for an average family, with a 10-percent discount on that when paid within 15 days after due. They pay only 2 cents gasoline tax, when it is 7 cents in Tennessee, 5 cents right over here in Virginia, and 4 cents right over here in Maryland, plus a sales tax. They pay only $1 per year for registration and license tags on automobiles and trucks, no matter whether they are a fourth-hand Ford or a $12,000 new Rolls Royce. They are allowed $1,000 of household furniture exempt from all taxes. They have the wearing apparel, whether worth $5 or $50,000, exempt from taxes. They have their private libraries, whether worth $5 or $50,000, exempt from all taxes. They have their ashes gathered free, their trash gathered free, and their garbage gathered free. They pay no monthly or yearly charge for sewer service. They do not have to pay for repairing or repaving of streets contiguous to their property. They do not have to pay for repairing or repaving sidewalks around their property. The shade and ornamental trees in front of their property are furnished free, have fences built around them free to protect the first few years of early growth, are pruned free, are sprayed free, are cared for free, and are replaced free when they die. Other than the Federal taxes that people in all cities pay, the Washington people pay no estate tax, no inheritance tax, no gift tax, no income tax, and no sales tax.

The Washington people enjoy the pansy beds, the rose gardens, the cherry blossoms, the flower-covered Hains Point Drive, the Capitol, the Congressional Library, the national functions, all without cost to them.

No wonder that Commissioner Hazen was forced to truthfully say that "Washington people were better treated, were least taxed, and enjoyed more privileges than any other people in the United States."

You speak about the "voiceless people of Washington." They are not voiceless. They have you and other Senators fighting all the time to give them everything they want. I am thinking of the "voiceless people of Texas", the "voiceless people of Oklahoma", who can't be heard here when you are taking $5,700,000 of their money out of the Treasury and giving it to Washington people. I am making my fight to protect the people of Texas, and the people of Oklahoma, and the people of the other States from having to make an unjust contribution on the annual taxes of Washington people.

I have discussed the matter with many of my House colleagues, and they assure me that this is one time they are not going to knuckle down to these unreasonable demands. The newspapers have misrepresented and misquoted the Speaker on this subject. They have misrepresented and misquoted the President about it. The President knows just how pampered Washington people are, and he is not going to be unjust to the other 120,000,000 people of the United States just to give this handsome $5,700,000 birthday present to Washington people every year.

You speak of the President's Budget. Congress goes under and over it all the time. It merely fixes a maximum. The President expects Congress to keep under it, otherwise there would be no need of Congress. We could all stay at home and let the Budget estimates be spent. You, however, have already realized to what an impossible extreme your contention about the Budget has carried you, for the Budget does not authorize the Eastern High School, or the Police Court Building, or the Chain Bridge, or the needed fire trucks and apparatus.

As none of the Washington papers would dare to publish this letter, my only means of getting the facts of this situation before the American public, is to publish it in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and, fortunately, the House granted me consent to do so last evening before we adjourned. We House conferees are willing to meet you Monday on the 87 Senate amendments, and see whether we can reach an agreement, which I believe is preferable to any continuing resolution.

Respectfully submitted.

THOMAS L. BLANTON,
Chairman, House Conferees.

DEMOCRATIC ACHIEVEMENTS

Mrs. O'DAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered by the Postmaster General.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. O'DAY. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD I include the following address of Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic National and State chairman, at a testimonial dinner given in his honor at the Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, N. Y., Thursday night, May 21, 1936, 7 p. m., by the Onondaga County Democratic committee, and broadcast over radio stations WFBL and WFYR, both of Syracuse:

It is a great pleasure for me to join with my friends of central New York in this fine gathering that has assembled for the purpose of lending further impetus to the sweeping wave of Democracy. We are nearing the time of the national convention and national campaign with increasing enthusiasm everywhere, which is indicative of the even greater confidence that a confident people have in the leadership of our President, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

His leadership has been on behalf of the great mass of our people. He has realized, more than anyone else before him, that our national prosperity depends upon the prosperity of all our people, and it would be well for those more abundant in wealth to delve deeply into the facts beyond this simple truth, for if they did they would find that even they would profit more if those less favored prospered more.

Their nearsightedness in this regard is unexplainable. No one has reason to know this more than the people of New York State, who have lately witnessed the sorry spectacle of the so-called young stalwarts in the Republican assembly blocking by obstructionist methods the benefits accruing from the National Social Security Act. Because of the stupid tactics of a stupid opposition a grave injustice is being done the sick, the infirm, the crippled, and the aged of this State for no logical reason whatever.

The battle waged on behalf of the State Social Security Act by our Democratic legislators, and by those Republican legislators whose intelligence surpassed their partisanship, is fresh in your memory. We have reason to be thankful that this whole question was kept before the people right up to the closing days of the legislature by the battle waged by our militant Governor. I say with all sincerity that the unceasing struggle in this fight made by him insures by a greater plurality than ever the reelection this fall of a Democratic Governor and our entire Democratic State ticket.

I predict that the Democrats will not only retain their strength in the State senate but I also prophesy that the anger of our people against those who refused to do the right thing by the crippled, the sick, the aged, and infirm will result in the defeat of a great number of Tory assemblymen and may again give our party the control of the lower house, as was the case in 1935, when a complete Democratic administration gave the people of the State the finest program of legislation ever enacted.

In the field of national affairs I know of no way to more clearly bring out the barrenness of the opposition than to ask a few simple and plainly understandable questions:

Have you noticed that none of the enemies of President Roosevelt invite a comparison between what he has done and what was done under the Republicans?

Have you noticed that none of his critics invite a comparison between the condition of the farmers under Roosevelt and under Hoover?

Have you noticed that not one of these pompous "saviors of America" invite a comparison between the more than 6,000 bank failures under Republican rule and the less than 400 under Roosevelt, and under Roosevelt the depositors of the closed banks were saved millions of dollars under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation?

Have you noticed that even Hoover does not ask you to compare the production of the great basic industries under his administration with the production under Roosevelt?

Have you noticed that the spokesmen of predatory interests do not ask a comparison between the trade of retail stores throughout the country during the Hoover and Roosevelt administrations?

Have you noticed that these champions of the old deal do not dare talk about conditions in the last 4 years of the old deal?

Have you noticed that all their speeches are appeals to the big-money interests and find no time for a discussion of the rights and conditions of the masses of the people?

Have you noticed that Chairman Fletcher, who manages the old-deal campaign, instead of boasting of principles and enunciating policies, confines his boasting to the amount of money his people are able to raise to put an end to government by the people?

Have you noticed that the old deal has not yet submitted substitute plans for the Roosevelt policies, and that its spokesmen are as barren of constructive suggestions on raising the depression now as they were during the last 4 Republican years when our condition grew more desperate with each succeeding month?

Have you noticed how all those called by Theodore Roosevelt "the malefactors of great wealth" are united against Franklin D. Roosevelt?

If you have not noticed, notice now, and meditate on the meaning.

There is a meaning that requires no great brain to figure out.

Whether it is abysmal ignorance or sheer dishonesty, the constant reference by themselves and by the press to the special pleaders of the predatory interests as Jeffersonians and Jacksonians is grotesque.

No Jacksonian or Jeffersonian at any time in history would have been permitted to contaminate the rarified atmosphere of that precious company. It represented more openly than ever before in the country's record the "ganging up" of the privileged against the people and a people's government.

But it was not the first time these privileged few have "ganged up." They "ganged up" against Jefferson, fought him tooth and nail, denounced him constantly, and everywhere ostracized his followers from the drawing rooms of the fashionable and the favored.

They "ganged up" with a vengeance against Jackson—referred to him as a Socialist, an ignoramus, a creature of the mob, unfit to associate with gentlemen, and ostracized his followers from their assemblages.

The purpose of the New Deal is—

To end privilege, which was the heart of the purpose of Jefferson and Jackson.

To protect the interests and proper opportunities of the average man, which was the soul of the programs of Jefferson and Jackson.

To make government the instrument of the people for the service of all the people, which was the fight made by Jefferson and Jackson.

To make impossible the dictatorship of money, which was the basis of the struggles of both Jefferson and Jackson.

To prevent by proper laws the rule of monopoly and autocracy, which was what called down on Jefferson and Jackson the hatred of the seekers of privilege.

Both Jefferson and Jackson stood for constitutional government precisely as Franklin D. Roosevelt stands for it.

And both were denounced by the Federalists and Whigs of their day as wreckers of the Constitution—as Roosevelt is today.

There was scarcely a single measure of Jefferson's administration that was not denounced as a violation of the Constitution. This is not hyperbole for the purpose of making a startling statement. The facts are:

That when Jefferson repealed the judiciary act passed in the last hours before his inauguration to pack the Federal courts with enemies of democracy, they said he was violating the Constitution.

When he demanded a constitutional amendment on the election of Presidents, he was ferociously attacked for "destroying the Constitution."

When he gave us the embargo law, he was hysterically denounced by certain business interests for violating the Constitution.

It would be hard to find a single Federalist speech made in Congress or a single editorial in a Federalist paper through the 8 years of his Presidency in which Jefferson was not held out as a violator of the Constitution and a wrecker of "American institutions."

And that which was true of Jefferson was just as true of Jackson. He was continuously abused as a wrecker of the Constitution during the 8 years of his Presidency.

It was a lie about Jefferson and Jackson—and just as much of a lie about Roosevelt.

But Jefferson did act beyond the Constitution once, and consciously. It was when he acquired the vast empire of Louisiana by purchase.

He knew what we all know now—that the acquisition of this territory, removing it from the clutches of Europe, was necessary to the future of the Nation. He knew that failure peaceably to secure it would probably mean war. Everyone agreed to that. And when he found he could buy it, he bought it.

But he could not thus acquire it without going beyond the Constitution. He might have asked for a constitutional amendment. He thought about it. But at the time Spain was protesting to France, and France was winning her battles in the war, and delay might easily have been fatal to the purchase. He was unwilling to sacrifice the vital interest of the Nation at such a time. And so he bought and kept Louisiana without an amendment. He did not believe that when the life of the Nation and the vital interest of the people were at stake that he could justify a gamble.

When we want an opinion of Jeffersonian or Jacksonian democracy we will not go to public men whose whole careers has been built on the Hamiltonian or anti-Jefferson theory of government.

We prefer to go to history and to the published works of Jefferson and Jackson.

Just as these men fought the battle of the common people, Roosevelt is fighting it today. Just as they were the pet aversions of the plutocrats of their day, Roosevelt is today. Just as they were denounced for violating the principle of constitutional government, Roosevelt is today. Just as they were pictured constantly as destroying American institutions, Roosevelt is today. Just as they were said to be arraying class against class, Roosevelt is today.

And just as Jefferson and Jackson prevailed over the plutocracy of their time, Roosevelt is today.

And his victory will come because truth will prevail over the distortion of facts being issued as opposition propaganda.

The old dealers are clearly not prepared in attacking the New Deal to invite comparisons with the old. The strategy agreed upon is to leave the old deal out of consideration at all. But since the old dealers want the old deal back, and if successful at the polls propose to bring it back, the comparison of the old deal and the new is inevitable. It is necessary.

Frightened at the thought of the comparison the reactionary politicians and the interests they represent have thought to divert attention from the old deal by raising the clamor for a square deal as against the New Deal.

True the average man—the farmer, the worker, the miner—has been getting the squarest deal he has had in generations under the New Deal, but the interests are not thinking of these.

They want a kind of square deal that will allow financial tricksters and gamblers to enrich themselves as before by gambling with the money of innocent investors resulting in the loss of hundreds of millions.

They want a square deal for the banks, which to some of them means the right to use depositors' money for gambling enterprises on the market while refusing loans to legitimate business enterprise.

It has been made dangerous under the New Deal for great banking institutions to flood the American market with foreign bonds the bankers knew or were warned would be repudiated, and these financial speculators want a "square deal" of a type that will allow a renewal of such nefarious practices.

The exploiters of the farmers, who have bought the products of their toil at ruinous prices and raised the price to the consumers for their own enrichment, want their kind of a square deal. The New Deal has brought the intervention of the people's Government for the protection of the farmers who feed the Nation.

Those who by questionable methods of manipulation flooded the market with securities that brought prices grotesquely out of proportion with the value of the stock, and are now compelled to play fair with the investing public, are clamoring for a square deal. All the New Deal has done has been to protect the honest investor in his savings; and that is not a square deal at all in their way of thinking.

The utility combines, whose methods are well illustrated in the revelations of the lobby investigation, and who have been milking the public with the smug acquiescence of Government, are threatened with regulations that will give a square deal to the consumers—but to the power magnates this is not a square deal for them.

Under the New Deal does the farmer get a square deal? Ask them. The answer is "yes."

Does the worker get a square deal? Ask them. Their spokesmen declare that under the New Deal they are getting the squarest deal they have ever had.

The men in industry, growing old after a lifetime of service for society in the factories, and haunted by the fear of being thrown out into the street to starve when too old to work, are now insured against that horror by the New Deal—and that is a square deal for them.

The average man depositing his hard-earned money in banks as a protection for his old age, for the education of his children, whose money was swept away under the old deal because of vicious banking methods, is now protected—and under the New Deal he has a square deal, too.

And the honest legitimate banker, whose bank was losing the confidence of the public because of the vicious methods of unscrupulous bankers, has been accorded a square deal by the New Deal reforms, which restores the confidence of his patrons.

Does the miner, reduced to desperation by the state of chaos to which selfishness has reduced the great mining industry, get a square deal under the New Deal? The head of the miners declares publicly they are coming nearer to getting a square deal than ever before.

And does the jobless, anxious to work, and left to private charity for bread for himself and children, want the old deal or the new? Under which does he get a square deal? Ask him! He will answer in the affirmative.

The reactionaries seeking a restoration of the old deal are the old dealers who never gave a square deal to the public in their lives and never will, without the intervention of the people's Government.

The issue is the New Deal with its square deal against the Old Deal, in whose vocabulary the words "square deal" never appeared until now.

Is the New Deal a square deal for you? The answer is yes; and it is my honest opinion that so many affirmative votes will be registered in November as to cause our critics to shudder in their selfishness and our supporters to contemplate with confidence the completion of the entire New Deal program under 4 more years of Roosevelt and recovery.

OUR NATIONAL DEFENSE—VOCATIONAL EDUCATION A STRONG FACTOR

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, one of two things a nation must always do, pay small sums to educate and train its youth or pay large sums to regulate crime and build prison walls.

It almost dumbfounds us when our attention is called to the fact that in 1932 we spent only $2,968,010,400 to educate and train the youth of our Nation, while we spent $12,000,000,000 to look after crime and all of its ramifications. In other words, we spent practically four times as much money in 1932 for crime as we did to educate and train our youth. We spent more money in these United States in 1932 for crime and its ramifications than we did to build and support churches, plus homes for our people, plus educating and training our youth for future citizenship.

Mr. Speaker, I am strong for the support of this vocational education bill now before this House. Speaking of national defense of our Nation, the only national defense we have for the future of the Nation lies in the training of the boys and the girls who are to take up the reins of Government when we lay them down.

Without a record vote, a few weeks ago this House passed the national defense war bill of $600,000,000 and the Navy bill of over $500,000,000 for the national defense of our Nation.

And now there is a disposition on the part of some to question the advisability of giving $12,000,000 a year to educate the hand, the heart, and the head of the boys and girls of this Nation to equip them to go out into life's school and earn an honest living.

Mr. Speaker, someone has well said, "We must educate, or we must perish." This axiom is ever true. To perpetuate our form of government we must educate our boys and girls in homemaking, in industrial arts, and in agricultural pursuits.

We must see to it that when our youth go out into the business world that they have a clear understanding of what is necessary in business procedure and government in order to perpetuate our institutions. We must put forth every effort to bring them to a full realization that the homes, the schools, and the churches of our Nation must be perpetuated if our democracy is to continue to function. We must adjust our educational institutions from time to time so as to dovetail into the social and economic conditions as each succeeding generation finds them.

Therefore, it is only natural that the youth of our Nation should expect this Congress to give them this $12,000,000 in order that they may be better trained in the vocational avenues they will have to travel when they get out in the workaday world.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Horne, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill and joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 12870. An act to aid in defraying the expenses for the celebration of the bicentennial of the birth of Patrick Henry to be held at Hanover Courthouse, Va., July 15, 16, and 17, 1936; and

H. J. Res. 525. Joint resolution to enable the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission to carry out and give effect to certain approved plans, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11687) entitled "An act to amend the Federal Aid Highway Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate had adopted a concurrent resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 39. Concurrent resolution empowering the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate to have printed 2,000 additional copies of the hearings held before the subcommittee of said committee of the Senate during the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress pursuant to the resolution (S. Res. 185) authorizing the Committee on Appropriations to conduct an investigation of the expenditures by the Federal Government for the cotton cooperatives, etc.

The message also announced that the Senate recedes from its amendment no. 2 to the bill (H. R. 9496) to protect the United States against loss in the delivery through the mails of checks in payment of benefits provided for by laws administered by the Veterans' Administration.

REFERENCE OF PRIVATE CLAIMS BILLS

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of H. Res. 498 which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 498

Resolved, That Rule XXI, clause 3, be, and is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"3. No bill for the payment or adjudication of any private claim against the Government shall be referred, except by unanimous consent; to any other than the following-named committees, namely: To the Committee on Foreign Affairs, to the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to the Committee on Pensions, to the Committee on Claims, to the Committee on War Claims, to the Committee on the Public Lands, and to the Committee on Accounts."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman please explain the reason for this?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment of the rules with reference to the referring of private claims bills. For many years the Committee on Foreign Affairs has been handling private claims relating to the Consular Service. Some time ago a suggestion was made that a point of order might lie against such claims. There are some on the Consent Calendar, and to obviate the possibility of a point of order being made against a long-established custom, an amendment to this rule seems necessary, and the Committee on Rules reported it out and it was thought that this would be the most expeditious way of disposing of it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. As I understand, the other committees are agreeable to this?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain whether or not this resolution changes the rule with respect to the committees that are authorized to report out bills appropriating money?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Not at all.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

INAUGURATION OF THE PRESIDENT

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 38, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 38

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a joint committee consisting of three Senators and three Representatives, to be appointed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively, is authorized to make the necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President-elect of the United States on the 20th day of January next.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I shall not object, because we want to have a good celebration when Governor Landon is inaugurated next January; but will the gentleman please explain why we should make the arrangements now?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman knows, the "lame duck" amendment advanced the date of the inauguration from March 4 to January 20. When the inauguration was on March 4 the Congress, which met in December, could provide for this, but arrangements must be made sometime in the fall, or not later than November, as I am informed, for the celebration of the event to which the gentleman from Massachusetts so optimistically referred.

If the committee is going to handle it, it must be done now.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

PARKS AND PARKWAYS FOR RECREATIONAL-AREA PURPOSES

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 10104) to aid in providing the people of the United States with adequate facilities for park, parkway, and recreational-area purposes, and to provide for the transfer of certain lands chiefly valuable for such purposes to States and political subdivisions thereof, with Senate amendments, and agree to the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman say something about these amendments?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. This bill was passed by the House, and the Senate did away with about three-fourths of the bill, but permitted it to pass in one particular only.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. What does the bill really provide, as it now stands?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. It provides for the cooperation with States in making surveys of national parks and park areas.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Has this been to a committee?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. This bill was passed by the House. It went to the Senate, and the Senate amended it, and we are asking to accept the Senate amendments.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think the gentleman should withdraw it for the time being and let us look into it. The members of that committee on this side of the House are not present at this time.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I must object.

THOMAS JEFFERSON MEMORIAL

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 522.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 522

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 12027, a bill to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Library, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, in view of the interest expressed, I might say that the Rules Committee does not propose to call up any other resolutions after this one today.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. If the rule is passed now, does the gentleman expect to call up the bill this afternoon or on Monday?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. We expect to call it up this afternoon. There is only 1 hour of general debate. I do not think we will take very much time on the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

I now yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOYLAN].

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to take but a few minutes on the rule, because the Members are all familiar with it.

The subject matter is that of providing a memorial in the city of Washington to the memory of Thomas Jefferson. On April 13 last I delivered an address, in which I explained in detail what the commission proposed to do. That date was the one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson.

In the Seventy-third Congress I introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee to take this matter under consideration. The committee consisted of three members appointed by the President of the Senate, three members appointed by the Speaker of the House, three members appointed by the President of the United States, and three members appointed by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation. That is the foundation that raised the funds to purchase the home and grounds of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello.

The Members of the House were the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. SMITH, the gentleman from New York, Mr. CULKIN, and myself. Those appointed by the Senate were Senator MCNARY, Senator LONERGAN, and Senator THOMAS of Utah. The Presidential appointees were Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Collins Randolph, both lineal descendants of Thomas Jefferson, and Joseph Tumulty. The representatives from the Thomas Jefferson Foundation were Stewart Giboney of New York, president of that foundation, Fiske Kimball of Philadelphia, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Philadelphia, and the third representative, Dr. George Ryan of New York, president of the board of education, who was instrumental in raising the funds for the purchase of Monticello.

We have worked on the project and secured the services of a distinguished architect, John Russell Pope, who was the architect of the Archives Building in Washington, the most beautiful of the group, from Pennsylvania to Constitution Avenue; he was also architect of the famous war memorials for the United States Government abroad, and the buildings of Yale University, and also architect of the Shriners' Temple in Washington on Sixteenth Street, the most beautiful specimen of Egyptian architecture in the United States. Everything we have done has been in harmony with the Fine Arts Commission and with the National Park and Planning Commission. We have reached a state now that we are asking for the authorization to go ahead with our plans. The understanding of all concerned is that no application is to be made this year for any funds. The application for funds will be made to the next Congress or some subsequent Congress. All we ask today is an authorization for funds, so that it can be honored at some future time, and we can proceed to the erection of this memorial.

You all know the particular reasons why we should honor Jefferson. If there would be no other reason, it would be the fact that he was the author of the Declaration of Independence. Just consider a young lawyer journeying to the city of Philadelphia from his home in Virginia, at that time in his early thirties, and sitting down in a small furnished room in a house in the city of Philadelphia and writing the Declaration of Independence. Those of us who have to make little speeches here on various subjects on the floor know how we sometimes have to sweat it out of ourselves. We have to get information from various sources, look up works of reference; yet here was a young lawyer who came into this small room in a house in Philadelphia, sat down, and wrote with his own hand, without any assistance whatever, the Declaration of Independence.

As I have explained, there is no partisanship at all in the appointment of this commission, as both parties are represented. We regard, and most Americans regard, Jefferson as next in the hearts of the people to George Washington. Other founding fathers throughout the years ought to be remembered, but at this time we seek to honor the memory of Thomas Jefferson.

Just imagine! The average visitor comes to the city of Washington and inquires where he can find the Jefferson memorial, only to be told there is no memorial to Jefferson in the Nation's Capital except one small statue outside the east entrance of the Hall of the House of Representatives, and that is on a raised pedestal, and unless someone attracts your attention to it you do not even see it.

Jefferson himself was a very modest and unassuming man; and I think at this late date it is little enough for us, in appreciation of the splendid services he rendered the Republic, to erect this monument to him in the Capital City. We do not ask that it be erected anywhere but in Washington, where the whole Nation will see it and where it will stand out as the offering of a grateful people to the young Virginian who did so much toward the founding of our country. [Applause.]

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOYLAN. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. Have the plans gone so far that the type of a memorial has been determined upon?

Mr. BOYLAN. Not except that it is to be of classical design. Several suggestions have been made. It has been suggested that it be a large monument of Jefferson and to the rear or the sides of it a marble building to house Jeffersoniana.

Mr. GIFFORD. Would there be a profile of Jefferson himself?

Mr. BOYLAN. Yes; I may add that the building would house not only Jeffersoniana, but matters that have been written about him.

Mr. GIFFORD. Would the gentleman mind a suggestion? I would suggest to the members of the commission that if there is to be a profile of Jefferson himself, it be made with tears streaming down the cheeks.

Mr. BOYLAN. I do not quite get the meaning the gentleman desires to convey.

Mr. GIFFORD. Our liberties have gone; and he would be feeling dreadfully about it were he alive. He should be so pictured, should he not?

Mr. BOYLAN. I may say to my friend from the illustrious shores of rugged Cape Cod that our greatest concern in this matter is honoring the memory of Jefferson.

Mr. GIFFORD. Only a memory.

Mr. BOYLAN. We are not going into the philosophy of the situation; we are simply asking a memorial to perpetuate the name of the man who wrote the Declaration of Independence, who was the author of the statute of religious liberty in Virginia, and who was the founder of the University of Virginia.

Mr. GIFFORD. And he is only a memory; not a living, vital force. I was hoping somebody would suggest that the freedom he advocated still lived and that his works of long ago still existed.

Mr. BOYLAN. I am sure any aid or assistance the gentleman could give to perpetuate the name, the fame, and the memory of Thomas Jefferson would be gratefully appreciated by the American people. [Applause.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to permit me to submit a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes, gladly.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

THOMAS JEFFERSON MEMORIAL

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I believe this is the first time that the party in power has made any move to honor the memory of an outstanding Republican. Not only was Thomas Jefferson an outstanding Republican, but he was one of the early exponents of an adequate tariff to promote and protect American industry. The time was when Thomas Jefferson's memory was honored by the Democrats. Yearly they gave Jefferson dinners in various parts of the country at $1 per plate, but as the need for Democratic campaign funds increased the New Dealers realized they could not very well boost the price to $50 per plate at a Jefferson dinner because he had been held up to us as the embodiment of simplicity and rugged Americanism. So the party in power placed Mr. Jefferson upon the shelf and brought Andrew Jackson down, dusted him off, and put on a $50 dinner, not only in Washington but in various parts of the country. They could, of course, think of no more appropriate date upon which to give a $50 dinner than on Jackson Day because Andrew Jackson believed in the spoils system.

Thomas Jefferson went into partial eclipse when it was found that the New Deal program ran contrary to the Constitution of the United States. No more do we hear him mentioned on your side of the aisle. He is not even a memory to most of you. I have often wondered, as I have sat in this Chamber the past 3 years, what Mr. Jefferson must be thinking as he looks down from his place in the azure blue and contemplates what those who belong to the party to which he belonged are doing in the name of democracy and to bring about a more abundant life.

The Republicans revere the name of Thomas Jefferson. We believe he was a great American. He does not need a memorial to perpetuate his name and fame any more than do Lincoln and Washington, but now that we have erected memorials to those two great Republicans it is only fitting and proper that we erect a memorial to that other great Republican, Thomas Jefferson. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, before leaving the Chamber my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], prepared an amendment which he asked me to offer in his absence. I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk may read this amendment in my time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I did not yield time for the purpose of amending the rule.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I have 10 minutes, and I hope the gentleman will not consume my time.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I did not yield for the purpose of amending the rule.

Mr. KNUTSON. I am just having the amendment read so that the Members may give it consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KNUTSON for information: Page 1, line 12, after "$3,000,000", insert: "Provided, That there shall be inscribed upon such monument or memorial the oath taken by Mr. Roosevelt to 'implicitly follow and observe the principles and teachings of government enunciated by Thomas Jefferson.'"

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Who did the gentleman say proposed this amendment?

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am not surprised that he refrained from offering it himself and delegating that task to the gentleman from Minnesota. He was probably ashamed to do it in person.

Mr. KNUTSON. I will say to my good friend that the gentleman from Pensylvania [Mr. RICH], who could not be here, merely wishes to remind the majority of certain obligations that the Democratic Party took 3 years ago, which have been very conveniently forgotten. Of course, you all would prefer to forget certain things that were promised to the American people in 1932.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I thought there was considerable interest in this matter, else I would not have requested the 5 minutes. I do want to suggest, however, that this is an inopportune time to erect a memorial to Thomas Jefferson. I think I may well be speaking for the real Jeffersonian Democrats, most of whom are now taking a walk. It would seem that at this time the matter of expense ought to appeal to you, but the matter of $3,000,000 is nothing for this administration after all. People may be going hungry and dependent on relief, yet you consider spending money for such a purpose.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the Members will not think I am lacking in full appreciation of this great man. I think we should perhaps do something to perpetuate his memory, even if his great works and doctrines have now been abandoned by his party. Certainly I recall that he made a great struggle for the liberties of the people. I read somewhere only yesterday that it would be harder to get back our liberties from the Government bureaucracy, which we are establishing at the present time, than if our liberties had been taken away by a dictator. These great bureaus will wish to perpetuate the stranglehold which they are steadily acquiring over us.

Do you Democrats really feel that you have been loyal enough to Jeffersonian principles during these recent days of experimentation to point out to the young people of this Nation who come to Washington a great memorial to Jefferson? They will say "Yes; he was indeed a great patriot, but he did not believe as his own party believes today." They must necessarily have been taught about him, and they must know that we have departed almost entirely from his teachings. I wish I could bring back to my mind more quickly at this moment the many tenets that he held sacred and which have been so violently repudiated by his own followers. I was not entirely facetious when I suggested to the gentleman from New York that Jefferson ought to be pictured with tears streaming down his face if his likeness be included in the memorial.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. Has it ever occurred to the gentleman that perhaps the Democrats are trying to salve their consciences?

Mr. GIFFORD. It occurred to me that perhaps they feel at this particular time they ought to try to keep up appearances to the public at large by pretending at least they still believe in and respect their great leader of long ago.

Mr. HOUSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOUSTON. A moment ago the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] stated that he would like to know what Jefferson was thinking of as he looked down upon the New Deal.

I wonder what Jefferson thought when he looked down on the Harding administration and the Hoover administration of do nothing.

Mr. GIFFORD. Tears would be shed by some Republicans at some of the things that happened during the Harding administration.

Mr. HOUSTON. I would think so.

Mr. GIFFORD. We do not pretend that in all individual cases all our leaders were perfect.

Mr. HOUSTON. Does the gentleman mean those who are in the penitentiary as the outgrowth of that administration?

Mr. GIFFORD. We bow our heads in shame at some of the things that happened then. But we are willing to acknowledge it. Some people are big enough to do that.

Mr. HOUSTON. The gentleman does not boast of it?

Mr. GIFFORD. No; I do not boast of it. I recently heard your own President compared to that person who said, "If I ever had the opportunity to acknowledge a mistake, I would be very glad to do it." But, of course, he appears unwilling as yet to acknowledge that any errors have occurred in these many futile experiments.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12027) to authorize the execution of plans for a permanent memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 12027, with Mr. SHANNON in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GREENWOOD].

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I have no desire on this occasion to enter into any political argument about this proposal, but I should like to speak in my own time of some of the outstanding achievements in the life of Jefferson, which this memorial would commemorate.

Recently I visited the Library of Congress and had the privilege of looking over the library of Jefferson. I noted the wide scope of the scholarship of this great American. There were books on architecture, scientific farming, education, government, and various international questions.

Thomas Jefferson was able to speak and read six languages, and they say at the time of his death he was learning a seventh language.

We know of his great contribution to American government and to the affairs of the world.

A few years ago I had the pleasure of visiting Monticello, his home, and I observed that magnificent residence, which one great architect said was the finest and most outstanding piece of Grecian architecture embodied in residential style in America. I went down to the hillside of the old homestead where Jefferson is buried, and there on his monument is an epitaph written by Jefferson himself, and it is in these words:

Here is buried Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of American Independence and of the statutes of Virginia for religious freedom and father of the University of Virginia.

This great American had been Governor of the State of Virginia. He had been our Minister to France. He had been Secretary of State under George Washington and Vice President under John Adams and twice President of the United States, but all of these political honors were ignored in his epitaph and he set out these three outstanding achievements: Author of the American Declaration of Independence, which sounded to the world the principles of representative democracy; author of the statutes of Virginia, the principles of which were later incorporated in the Bill of Rights, which gave American independence of religious thought and belief; and father of the University of Virginia, a democracy of education upon which any representative democracy in government must be based.

These were three outstanding achievements, but perhaps the greatest of these was authorship of the Declaration of Independence. Previous to the Revolution the world knew very little about representative government, governed only by monarchies. The doctrine of the divine right of kings prevailed, whereby the monarch could do no evil. Because of his divine appointment, the monarch ruled and could commit no error; but the fathers of the American Revolution had expressed in this Declaration their thought that government is dependent upon the consent of the governed, and America has made 150 years of progress along this line. If Thomas Jefferson were to come back today, there would be no occasion for tears in his eyes because of the progress made or the standing of America in the family of nations. Representative government as proposed by Jefferson has endured. It was a new doctrine and a new creed that Thomas Jefferson laid down in this Declaration, that no longer could a monarch claim divinity and rule with arbitrary power, but that governments derived their just powers from the consent of the governed. This is America's greatest contribution to the civilization of the world, and Thomas Jefferson is the author of this thought that was written into the Declaration of Independence and later embodied in the Constitution of the United States. We have evangelized the world, and other democracies have followed the principles laid down by Jefferson.

Too long we have delayed paying proper honor to this great man whom we do not claim from a partisan standpoint, but because he was a great American. Like Lincoln and like Washington, he was a great American and belongs to the ages. He made his contribution to the progress and advancement of our Nation and the civilization of the world, and as one individual Member of the House I am pleased that we can pay tribute to him by properly commemorating his life and achievements in the Capital City of our country. This bill should pass without division of opinion. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, the membership will recall that this bill has been on the Consent Calendar for some weeks. On each occasion when that calendar was called there has been a great deal of discussion, not on the life and character of Jefferson, not on the feasibility of erecting a suitable memorial to his memory, but on the more material aspects of this bill, and that is this:

Can we, as Members of this House of Representatives, with a clear conscience, every one of us believing, as I think we believe, that we should cut the expenses of this Government to the very bone, vote to authorize an appropriation of $3,000,000 at the present time for this or any other like purpose?

I do not think there is a Member of the House who reveres or respects the memory of Jefferson more than I always have. He was one of the great outstanding Americans. He was one of the great, if not the greatest, exponents of the rights of the common people.

Those of us who are now somewhat solicitous of the rights and prerogatives of the people look to Jefferson himself for guidance, and Thomas Jefferson would never consent under these conditions to spend $3,000,000 of the people's money to erect a memorial to him.

If you revere the teachings of Jefferson, if you are conscientious in wanting to respect that great humanitarian, you will never consent to add to the burden of the taxpayers of this Nation any more money than you have, especially for a purpose which can be delayed until we have at least approached the balancing of the Federal Budget.

I have listened for the last 5 years in this House to pleas in behalf of the unemployed men and women who have not enough bread, milk, and meat for themselves and their children. I have listened to more demagoguery in that respect than ever before came out of the mouths of legislators.

Today you plan to divert the equivalent of the aggregate income of 3,000 families averaging $1,000 each at a time when that income is badly needed to keep body and soul together. Gentlemen, the responsibility is yours. If you can, in the face of the conditions which confront this country today, with 12,400,000 people out of employment, with the States, counties, and municipalities burdened in addition to what the Federal Government is giving them for support of our needy—if you can, with a clear conscience, vote $3,000,000 for the erection of a memorial even to so great a man as Thomas Jefferson, it is your responsibility, and I have said all that I care to say on the subject. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN].

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, when the Jefferson Memorial Commission was appointed I was honored by membership on that body. The association has been most delightful and has more or less led me to read more liberally than I had on the subject of Jefferson. Jefferson, to my mind, is, perhaps, the outstanding liberal of the ages. I heard Calvin Coolidge deliver an address at a commencement exercise and he referred to the Declaration of Independence and stressed the part that men of various types played in the Revolution. He said that Jefferson could not have fought the battles of the Revolution and that Washington could not have written the Declaration of Independence. Former President Coolidge's conclusion was that we could not have won the Revolutionary War without the participation of both these great Americans. I am not going to try out title here to Jefferson's partisanship. I think that is interesting, and, of course, in these days is becoming controversial. I simply call the attention of the House to the fact that this outstanding liberal, who by his pen laid the foundation of free institutions in America, is without a monument or marker to his memory in this great National Capital. Our Commission has been over this situation. We have considered the greatness of Jefferson's achievements, the question of cost, the question of construction, and all of those details, and this bill is the fruit of our nonpartisan discussion.

I have listened with interest, but not with alarm, to the discussion of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT]. It is just as important in these days to the youth of America that their souls should be fed as well as their bodies. [Applause.]

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CULKIN. In a moment. The only way that this will be accomplished is to encourage and inculcate in the youth of America a desire to study the history and the achievements and contributions to human liberty that were made by this man whom I again call the outstanding liberal of the ages. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have been taught always to believe that unless the body is fed the soul might depart from that body and would be fed on another shore. Does the gentleman not think it is more important to feed the body in order that the soul might enjoy the beautiful things we have on earth?

Mr. CULKIN. If the citizenship of America loses its soul—and it will if it is forgetful of the memories and sacrifices and leadership of the past—then we descend to the level of dumb beasts. This is one effective way to bring to all Americans what Jefferson stood for in government. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the erection of this memorial for three reasons. The first is that the memory of Thomas Jefferson does not need this memorial. The second is that as we build these extrinsic monuments we destroy in the heart of America the capacity for real inspiration to be derived from great men, and the third reason is that we probably could put this money to better use under an emergency. So far as the first reason is concerned, let me remind you, if you go to St. Paul's Cathedral in London and begin to clamber through those great recesses and up into the nave you will see an inscription which says, "If you would see the monument to the builder, look about you." That is true. If you want to see the monument to Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of St. Paul's, look about you and there you will see the great edifice, dedicated to the retreat of the human soul, where people can go and forget their tribulations and worries for a little while. It seems to me that if we want to find a memorial to Thomas Jefferson we must look about us in America. That is a far more verile and living memorial than a great mass of dispassionate stone and masonry to be erected in Washington. I am one of those unorthodox idealists who somehow feel that we have missed the mark, so far as Thomas Jefferson is concerned.

He stands out as an exemplar of the spirit of democracy, trying to bring human hearts together. As I survey the American scene today I sometimes wonder whether we have made a single bit of progress since the teachings of the Carpenter of Nazareth in bringing human hearts together. How light would be our burden, how easy of solution would be our problem if there was not forever that spirit of contest, that spirit of difference that translates itself into invectives and terms of vituperation. That is the thing that Thomas Jefferson taught—democracy. We have missed the goal. I do not believe that a $3,000,000 memorial is going to be very inspirational, either to this generation or to the generations that are to be.

It is a rather significant thing that on tomorrow, in all the cemeteries of the land, speakers will ascend the rostrum and speak about the sacrifices that we made for this wonderful country and for our permanent institutions. They will speak about catching the spirit and inspiration of those sacrifices, and yet the significant thing is that the fragrance of the flowers dies before the setting sun and all the beautiful rhetoric somehow passes away on the evening breeze, so seldom do we catch the spirit in the human heart, which is, after all, the only worth-while shrine.

In proportion as we catch the inspiration of Jefferson here and translate it into human hearts in America, we will have done something far greater than by spending $3,000,000 on a great building that is cold and lifeless and not given to any kind of inspiration.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No. My time is too short.

The third reason is this: I believe we can put the money to better use. For instance, there are projects in my district where cities are trying to secure necessary sewer improvements, and the reason they cannot get them is because there is lack of bonding power and insufficient contribution on the part of the Federal Government, so that they cannot institute proceedings that are going to better conditions under which they must live. If we have $3,000,000 to spend, let us use the money properly and give it to some of those districts, some of those school districts that now have inadequate educational facilities, and that would like just a few dollars or a few thousand dollars with which to repair and improve the conditions under which the children in those areas must go to school.

Would it not be a far better thing, as a matter of fact? As the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] said, I cannot reconcile my conscience to the expenditure of $3,000,000 when Thomas Jefferson's memory does not need it, when we create an incapacity in the hearts of the country for catching the real inspiration, and when the money can be used to a far better and more practical use. [Applause.]

It is regrettable that partisanship should creep into this discussion. It is far too reverential for that. Any discussion of memorials is necessarily an appeal to the religious nature of every man on this floor. I revere the memory of Jefferson as much as the most ardent Democrat in this Nation. But there is an essential fitness about things and this does not appear to be the time for such a memorial.

It would be far better to cater to the practical needs of the distressed people of this Nation in a time of emergency than to be expending $3,000,000 on a memorial that is unnecessary.

It has been said here today that man does not live by bread alone. Let the authors of that suggestion finish the language of that text. It continues: "But by every word * * *." Yes; by every word. The real memorial to Jefferson is the degree to which the human heart captures his inspiration and reveres his memory, and to rely upon a memorial such as is proposed is but to eloquently confess our incapacity for finding that inspiration without first gazing upon a great mass of masonry and stone.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY].

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, at the last moment I have obtained consent of my own mind to give expression to my feelings upon this occasion.

I regret exceedingly that any man capable and able to occupy a seat in this great deliberative assembly would at this time raise any partisan question in connection with this effort to build a memorial to one of America's greatest men. From the foundation of the world there has been at work in this world two classes of people—two crews. There has been a construction crew and a wrecking crew. Thomas Jefferson belonged to the construction crew and was opposed to the wrecking crew. If Thomas Jefferson had never done anything more than write the Declaration of Independence, that enunciated the doctrines which took from the backs of the defenseless people the autocratic foot of autocracy, he would have immortalized himself. If he had never done anything more than help pen the Virginia statutes of religious liberty, which meant to the peasant, to the man in the ditch, the same that it meant to the President of the United States or the monarch on his throne, he would have immortalized himself. If Thomas Jefferson had not succeeded in making his name historic for all generations to come by those two acts, he would have completed the task when he founded and erected under his own supervision the great institution of learning, to send light and inspiration to the people, over at Charlottesville, Va., the third great achievement, of which he was proud to the end of his entire career.

Then today the question is raised whether it is prudent or wise for the Congress of the United States to appropriate an infinitely small sum of $3,000,000 to build a statue in the Capital City of the Nation to this great author of a great government theory and government philosopher. I am not willing for the school children traveling from the East, the West, the North, or the South to go upon the streets and highways of this country and find memorials to Thomas Jefferson here and there, and then come to the United States Capital and find a statue of Washington, a statue of Daniel Webster, of Lincoln, and a few others who compared with Thomas Jefferson, and go back home and say to the teacher, "I visited the great Capital City of Washington. I traveled the streets and avenues. I searched and looked in vain for a monument reared to Thomas Jefferson in the Nation's Capital."

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 additional minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. The inference would be that the Congress, with the power to appropriate, had neglected to perform its duty in properly memorializing the name of the man who recognized in the Declaration of Independence that all men are born free and equal, and have certain inherent and inalienable rights, among which are to be reckoned the right to life, to liberty, and to the pursuit of happiness. These great doctrines—human life, human liberty, and human happiness—were the great principles that stimulated and inspired Thomas Jefferson to write the great books he did that the school children of the future may read as works of inspiration.

When they walk up and down Pennsylvania Avenue I want them to be able to look upon a statue built of marble and granite that will stand through the centuries, defying the corroding touch of time, as a tribute to the founder of the great principles of democratic government. But I say to you now that you do not disparage his great name by calling him Republican or Democrat. He was known as a Republican in his day. If Thomas Jefferson were living today, the people of America would place him side by side with the immortals of the ages. Let us build a monument to his memory that will stand there like a great beacon light to attract the eye and inspire the souls of our children and our children's children, and on down through the generations of the future. [Applause.]

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. We have beautiful monuments in this city to Washington and Lincoln, but is it not a fact that the greatness and honor of these two men were born of the ideals and the spirit of Thomas Jefferson?

Mr. MAY. Both of them were students of Thomas Jefferson. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. LUCKEY].

Mr. LUCKEY. Mr. Chairman, no one can have greater respect for this great statesman and publicist, this man who sponsored the rights of the common people, Thomas Jefferson, than I; but I feel that this is not the proper time to spend $3,000,000 on a monument to his memory. Today in this House we have agreed to the expenditure of practically $800,000,000. In the words of our good friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], "Where are we going to get the money?"

The great humanitarian needs of this day are too great to merit this proposed expenditure, or that now under way at St. Louis, where millions are now being spent on another Thomas Jefferson Memorial. Let us apply some of the ideals of that great man whom we would thus memorialize and husband our resources so that they may be used in behalf of the citizens of this country to whom Jefferson dedicated his life.

I think it is about time we stopped this spending. I, too, would like to see a monument to Thomas Jefferson, but this is not the time to erect it. We have hundreds and hundreds of monuments here and the people hardly notice them. I see them walking through these Halls day after day hardly recognizing or paying attention to the monuments standing along the corridors.

A few days ago our attention was called to the deplorable conditions existing at the National Training School for Girls in this city. There is a place we ought to put our money. There is a place we can build character and where our money will count for something. Let us put our money where it can be used to develop living monuments that will be a credit to the ideals of Jefferson.

I shall, therefore, Mr. Chairman, oppose this measure at this time, much as I should like to see a wonderful monument erected to this great statesman; but this is not the time to make this expenditure. Let us vote this measure down. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I believe that if we are going to spend any money on Thomas Jefferson it would be a splendid idea, rather than erect a monument of marble and granite, to send out to the members of the Liberty League and the proponents of various alien and sedition legislation some of the teaching of Thomas Jefferson.

For instance, I think if Thomas Jefferson were alive today there are certain gentlemen in this House, and distinguished gentlemen, too, who would ask for the indictment of Thomas Jefferson.

Thomas Jefferson said in a letter written to W. S. Smith in 1787:

> God forbid we should ever be 20 years without such a rebellion.

He was referring to Shay's rebellion.

> The people cannot be all and always well informed. The part which is wrong will be discontented in proportion to the importance of the facts they misconceive. If they remain quiet under such misconceptions, it is lethargy, the forerunner of death to the public liberty.

Again, Thomas Jefferson said in a letter:

> I hold it that a little rebellion now and then is a good thing, and as necessary in the political world as storms are in the physical.

Imagine what some investigating committee would have done to Thomas Jefferson if he were alive today.

Also, in a letter to W. S. Smith, written in 1787, Thomas Jefferson said:

> What country can preserve its liberties if its rulers are not warned from time to time that the people preserve the spirit of resistance? Let them take arms. The remedy is to set them right as to facts.

If Thomas Jefferson had attempted to make a statement like that over the radio today, I wonder how many gentlemen would rise on the floor of the House of Representatives and demand that the radio broadcasting company cancel Thomas Jefferson's broadcast.

A great deal is said nowadays about the right of the Supreme Court to declare laws passed by the representatives of the people unconstitutional. Thomas Jefferson was there in those days when the Constitution was written, and he knew what was meant when the Constitution was written. He had a pretty good idea as to what kind of government they were trying to set up at that time. Here is what Thomas Jefferson said with reference to the Supreme Court:

> It has long been my opinion * * * that the germ of dissolution of our Federal Government is in * * * the Federal judiciary—

Note what he said about the Federal judiciary—> an irresponsible body, working like gravity by night and by day, gaining a little today and a little tomorrow, and advancing its noiseless step, like a thief over the field of jurisdiction.

Then, again, in a letter to Spencer Roane, in 1821, Jefferson said:

> The great object of my fear is the Federal judiciary. That body, like gravity, ever acting, with noiseless foot and unalarming advance, gaining ground step by step, and holding what it gains, is engulfing insidiously the special governments into the jaws of that which feeds them.

The Supreme Court has certainly gained plenty of ground since Thomas Jefferson made that statement. A lot of territory has been taken from the days of the decision of Marberry against Madison to the Guffey coal decision.

Again, in a letter to William C. Jarvis, written in 1820, Thomas Jefferson said:

> It is a very dangerous doctrine to consider the judges as the ultimate arbiters of all constitutional questions. It is one which would place us under the despotism of an oligarchy * * *.

I think he had a right to talk about the powers of the Court under the Constitution, because he was around the country in those days when the Constitution was written.

Again he said:

> The Constitution has erected no such single tribunal, knowing that to whatever hands confided, with the corruptions of time and party, its members would become despots. It has more wisely made all the departments coequal and cosovereign within themselves.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. LUNDEEN. From what document is the gentleman reading?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. I am reading from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which contains excerpts from Jefferson included therein by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAVERICK].

Coming back to Thomas Jefferson and this proposed memorial, may I say that I am going to vote against the measure first of all because, as I stated in the debate today on the conference report on the naval appropriation bill, there are too many people being taken off the W. P. A. on the ground of economy. Three million dollars would put a lot of W. P. A. workers back to work, and I feel if Thomas Jefferson were alive today, and if he had the choice between erecting a monument to himself or to some other great patriot for that matter, or giving work to the unemployed, he would vote to furnish work to the unemployed.

More important than anything else is this. If you do erect a monument to Thomas Jefferson, then let it not be a monument of mortar or granite, but let us print and widely distribute these teachings of Thomas Jefferson so that they may permeate in the heart and mind of every American.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to use to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN].

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. Chairman, I have just a few words to say. I am in favor of the Thomas Jefferson memorial. It should have been built years ago. Men do not live by bread alone. There is something spiritual in this world. There is a lesson we need to be taught by the inspiring memorial that is to be erected in this great American city. It will help to keep forever before us the American plan of government: That all men are equal; that life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are inalienable rights; that the first duty of government is to safeguard those rights and guarantee them. Today violent attacks are being made against democratic government throughout the whole world. We in America should remember Thomas Jefferson and the Declaration of Independence.

Freedom—religious, political, economic—comes to us not as a matter of course. Freedom comes only after bitter strife and is preserved and fostered by struggle. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Thomas Jefferson was our foremost apostle of human liberty. He had infinite faith in the common people at a time when democracy was only a name. He was more than a liberal, a progressive, in his day. He was a radical. He was author of the most revolutionary document ever written. He is the great inspiration of forward-looking people today.

The spokesmen of reactionary forces sometimes attempt to shape the philosophy of Jefferson to fit their selfish ends. But in the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson speaks for himself. When the forces of reaction invoke his soul in oratorical tribute, we defend him from their praise.

I shall be pleased to vote for this great Thomas Jefferson memorial.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUNDEEN. I yield.

Mr. MAY. As a matter of fact, in the construction of this memorial at a cost of $3,000,000, 80 percent of it will go for wages to the men who build it.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Certainly; and I am sure the American people will erect a great memorial commemorating the life and services of Thomas Jefferson. We who revere the memory of Lincoln should recall that Lincoln was a disciple of Thomas Jefferson. He was a student of Jefferson and continually quoted him.

The gentleman from Illinois spoke about the schools. I always want to aid our schools. I have fought a great deal on this floor for schools. In my speeches of May 16 and August 7, 1935, I pointed out the impoverished condition of the schools and demanded Federal aid for schools and students. The emergency education and recreation program, Federal project no. 1, should be continued and enlarged, and I urge Members to see that sufficient appropriations are made for this purpose. We want to carry on many activities that will help the country and someone has asked here: "Where are we going to get the money?" I may say that if you will tax the wealth of this country and the great fortunes of this country, you will have plenty of funds to carry on. We should at least apply the British rates. There are men like Eugene Grace, of the Bethlehem Steel, getting over $1,000,000 a year in salary and bonus, and one of our great publishers in 1935 getting over $500,000 a year as salary. Railroad executives are receiving amounts running higher than the salary of the President of the United States, and yet they are trying to demolish the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad in the State of Minnesota and destroy jobs and wages for our railroad men.

THE PUBLIC IS OPPOSED TO M. & ST. L. SPLIT-UP

A resolution introduced by our Farmer-Labor Senator, ELMER BENSON, asks that the Interstate Commerce Commission withhold approval of the proposed dismemberment of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad until a committee of Senators can investigate the social and economic effects of the proposed sale and the origin of the proposal. I hope this resolution will be favorably reported out by the committee and passed by the Senate. The people of Minneapolis and Minnesota and other States affected have a right to know just what the effects of this dismemberment will be and why it is being advocated when State and municipal officials, business, labor, and the Farmer-Labor Party of our State are definitely opposed. Why is this plan being advanced? Who is behind it? These facts must be brought out before the Interstate Commerce Commission is permitted to pass upon the proposal.

Of the eight railroads composing the Associated Railways Co., which was formed to bring about this purchase, one has already withdrawn. The Great Western Railway withdrew when its officials learned that the public is opposed to the plan, that more than a hundred communities would be deprived of services they now enjoy, and that more than 3,000 M. & St. L. employees will be imperiled.

The other companies composing the Associated Railways are the Great Northern, Burlington, Illinois Central, Soo Line, Rock Island, North Western, and Milwaukee roads.

MINNEAPOLIS BUSINESSMEN OPPOSE DISMEMBERMENT

The Minneapolis City Council retained a special attorney, Charles E. Elmquist, who is also attorney for the M. & St. L. executive defense committee. George K. Belden is chairman of the businessmen's committee assisting in opposing the dismemberment plan. Businessmen of Minneapolis realize that loss of jobs for more than 1,000 Minneapolis employees would be a serious economic blow to the city. The grocers, butchers, bakers, and creditors of these employees are concerned.

Minneapolis businessmen are interested in this matter to the extent that they conducted a tour over the Minneapolis & St. Louis line to check up on reports of the road's condition. They found in a 1,000-mile trip over the Minneapolis & St. Louis line to Peoria, Ill., and return, that stories about the broken-down condition of the road were greatly exaggerated. Their trip took them through Albert Lea, Mason City, Marshalltown, Oskaloosa, Des Moines, and Fort Dodge. They took a special train. Their party was composed of 35 businessmen. They found the railroad made average passenger running time. They made comments on the smooth-riding qualities of the trackage. This committee found throughout Iowa and southern Minnesota a growing support of the railroad. They passed through 90 miles of track scheduled for abandonment between Fort Dodge and Albert Lea. Immediately upon their return they began active solicitation of defense funds, they appointed captains of defense teams, and they are now calling on merchants and others directly affected.

WHAT IS BACK OF THIS MOVE?

When we compare the financial condition of the Minneapolis & St. Louis with the financial condition of the railroads wishing to purchase the Minneapolis & St. Louis, we wonder what is back of this move. It happens that the Minneapolis & St. Louis owes the R. F. C. nothing. The North Western is indebted to the R. F. C. for $46,589,000, according to the January statistical number of Railway Age. The Minneapolis Tribune reports that the Milwaukee has debts of $12,000,000; the Rock Island, $13,718,700; the Illinois Central, $17,863,000, with an application for $7,488,000 more; the Soo Line, $6,843,002. The Minneapolis & St. Louis management expects to make a net of $750,000 or more this year. This would be a 5-percent return, which most railroads have not been making in recent years.

The Minneapolis terminal of the railroad alone has been valued by the Interstate Commerce Commission at more than $4,000,000, and the entire system at more than $35,000,000. The Associated Railways are trying to get this property for $7,200,000, and the R. F. C. is apparently willing to loan $4,750,000 to the Associated Railways to finance the reorganization of the M. & St. L. It appears that the R. F. C. offer, made in 1934, preceded by a few months the efforts of these seven railroads to purchase the M. & St. L. The people of Minnesota and the Northwest have a right to know why the R. F. C. made this offer apparently before being requested to do so, and why the chief examiner of the railroad division of the R. F. C. continues to play an important part in the hearings being conducted at the present time in the various States affected. The people of these States are overwhelmingly opposed to the plan. Many of those who have attended the hearings held by the Commission in the districts affected have reached the conclusion that the matter would never have been seriously considered had it not been pressed by agents of the R. F. C. Witnesses have been unable or are unwilling to furnish evidence showing the origin of the plan. The present earnings seem to justify a capitalization of the railroad of $17,000,000, which is $10,000,000 more than the Associated Railways offer to pay.

M. & ST. L. EMPLOYEES MUST BE PROTECTED

Mr. Speaker, I have a mandate from the people of the Third Congressional District of Minnesota to oppose dismemberment of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad. I am serving on a congressional committee created to prevent this dismemberment. From the first moment the attack began, from the very first mention of dismemberment, we answered the attack. We went into the front lines to repel those who for selfish reasons planned injury to Minneapolis, Minnesota, and the Northwest.

The split-up of this railroad would be a serious blow to Minneapolis, Excelsior, Hopkins, and over a hundred other communities in the States of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, and Illinois. It is a blow to the entire Northwest. The M. & St. L. has the second largest pay roll in the city of Minneapolis. The wives and children of these 3,000 employees are directly affected. Labor is opposed to the plan and that is enough for me. A thousand railroad men are in danger of losing their jobs. They will enter the ranks of twelve and a half million already unemployed.

We demand a thorough investigation of the origin of the plan to dismember the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad. We want to know the motives back of it. The people have a right to know the economic and social results of such a plan. The Benson Senate Resolution 287 to investigate the M. & St. L. dismemberment would accomplish this purpose. When I endorse this resolution, I speak for the citizens of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Hennepin County, Excelsior, Hopkins, and other communities in Minnesota.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and include such data and information as may be applicable to the remarks I have made here.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUNDEEN. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. How can the gentleman from Minnesota and the gentleman from Kentucky say that 80 percent of the money for the construction of this monument is going to labor, when the Commission has not agreed upon any design, although they have given some consideration to it? We are expected to vote $3,000,000 for a monument, the design of which has not been considered to the point of giving us any information whatever as to what it is even going to look like.

Mr. LUNDEEN. So far as that is concerned, I will say to the gentleman I have every confidence in the Commission and in the architects and designers of the monument. I am no expert in this line and I am not concerned about that.

Mr. CULKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUNDEEN. Yes.

Mr. CULKIN. The fact is that 90 percent of the $3,000,000 will be expended in material, workmanship, and labor. Does the gentleman know that?

Mr. LUNDEEN. I have received information to that effect, and I believe that is true.

Mr. CULKIN. And the bill that is offered here is offered as the joint offering of a group that has considered this matter for an entire year.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] such time as he may desire.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I must confess I have been somewhat surprised at some of the arguments that have been presented during the course of the discussion of this matter. I very deeply regret that in the consideration of a proposal to erect a memorial to one of the great, outstanding Americans, any possible tinge of partisanship or sectionalism should enter the controversy.

I happen to recall that in the year 1911 the Congress of the United States passed a resolution providing for the setting up of a commission for the construction of an adequate memorial to the life, character, and achievements of Abraham Lincoln, and although I am the son of a Confederate soldier who fought for 4 long years to destroy the Government that Abraham Lincoln was trying to preserve, it gave me pleasure, not only to see the passage of that resolution in 1911, but, subsequently, to know that my party, under Woodrow Wilson's administration, composed very largely of southerners, had carried forward and provided the funds for the construction of that great everlasting memorial down yonder on the Potomac River to the memory of one of the greatest men, in my opinion, this country has or ever will produce. [Applause.]

Why were sentiments of this character aroused in my bosom? Simply because I believe in the spiritual philosophy of One greater than any man who ever walked this earth, who said that "man shall not live by bread alone." When noble memories and reverence for the traditions of the past no longer appeal to our people, then there is danger that the Republic may perish. [Applause.]

The monarchies of Europe are not ungrateful or unmindful of their great and heroic figures. Those of you who have traveled abroad in the great capitals of foreign nations will see upon every street and avenue magnificent memorials and effigies erected to their great, outstanding leaders, while the charge has been made that republics are ungrateful. I trust this is not true of ours.

And here on this floor this afternoon I am surprised to hear some men, even Democrats, arise and say that the Government of the United States cannot afford this amount of money to erect an everlasting memorial to the greatest political philosopher and humanitarian of the age.

They ask if Jefferson were alive would he approve of this? Possibly no. If Abraham Lincoln, from your State of Illinois, you who just opposed this resolution, were alive and he had been asked if he wanted this great memorial constructed at a cost of $3,000,000, out of his innate modesty, he probably would have said no; you can turn it to a more useful purpose.

But that is not the issue here—what those men may have said. Happily the achievements of great men are not measured by themselves or their contemporaries but by a grateful posterity.

We ought to be ashamed to haggle over the small authorization, not expenditure, to construct an adequate memorial to that great man who was the author of the Declaration of Independence, of our statutes for religious freedom, the founder of the University of Virginia, the real constructive advocate of the Bill of Rights in our Federal Constitution—I say it seems to me it is rather a small position for any American, Democrat or Republican, to take the stand that we ought not to authorize this sum to perpetuate the memory of that man who, in my opinion, has impressed the minds of all men on the philosophy as well as the perpetuity of our institutions. I hope this bill will pass. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I had not expected to speak, but I shall use 2 or 3 minutes of the remaining time at my disposal. I call attention to the fact that stone as it lies in the ledge represents only 5 percent of the cost of the building into which it is to go, and that in monuments it represents much less; that in all buildings here the labor represents 95 percent, and in the monuments vastly more than that. So it does seem to me that since we are providing work at the present time there could be no other possible way in which you could be more justified in providing work that gives such tremendous percentage of the amount expended to labor.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman give us an outline or some information of the proposed memorial—what it is going to look like?

Mr. KELLER. That has not been worked out as yet.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Has it been worked out at all? Can the gentleman give us any idea about what it is going to look like? Can the gentleman give us any idea how much is going to be paid for labor and how much is to be paid for granite?

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, so far as the building of monuments is concerned, I had occasion recently to go into that with reference to the Clarke Memorial, and the statement of the gentleman from Illinois is correct, so far as stone in the ledge is concerned or iron ore is concerned. More than 90 percent of the cost of the structure is represented in labor, transportation, and construction.

Mr. WOLCOTT. But one gentleman assured us that 8 percent would be for labor.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Oh, no; 80 percent.

Mr. WOLCOTT. How does anybody know how much is going to be paid for labor?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I went into a study of that.

Mr. WOLCOTT. How does the gentleman know it is going to be made of granite or bronze?

Mr. GREENWOOD. Whether it is in the form of granite or limestone or marble, the value of the stone is insignificant compared to the amount paid for labor, transportation, and construction. Statistics show that more than 90 percent of the value goes for labor.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And if it happens that this monument is not built of granite, the gentleman's remarks are of no avail.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Oh, not at all.

Mr. WOLCOTT. We have nothing to show that it is even going to be made of granite. If it is to be made of bronze, how much will go into labor?

Mr. GREENWOOD. The same statistics apply, whether it is made of marble or granite or any other building material.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not yield further. I ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOYLAN] whether some plans have been made.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Chairman, let me say to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT], he has persistently made the misstatement that no plans have been made. This is about the fifth speech that he has made in opposition to this memorial.

Mr. WOLCOTT rose.

Mr. BOYLAN. I do not yield. The gentleman had his say, and plenty. The gentleman is interested only in a mere mess of pottage.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOYLAN. I do not yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think the gentleman, in all fairness after making that charge, should yield.

Mr. BOYLAN. I do not yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me to answer the charge that he had made that I am interested only in a mess of pottage?

Mr. BOYLAN. I do not yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. BOYLAN. Repeatedly, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan has been told that a distinguished architect has prepared plans. Not only did I tell him it again in my remarks today, but on four previous occasions I have told him. He has ears and he will not hear. I told him these plans were submitted, not only to the Commission, but to the Chief Executive of the United States. Yet all he has in his mind is what is it going to cost, who is going to get the money. I cannot add a word to the beautiful sentiments expressed by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], that outside of the mere question of food, which is talked about so much by the opposition, there is a spiritual value in this memorial that will revivify and rekindle the patriotism of our people. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my colleague from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I think there are two statements here that should be answered.

Mr. KELLER rose.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not yield to the gentleman, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I supposed that all time had expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not yield to the gentleman for a parliamentary inquiry or for any other reason.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois exhausted all time on his side of the Chamber.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, there are two questions that should be answered. In the first place, having some solicitude for the welfare of the people of this Nation who are on relief and have not shelter over their heads, I am accused of having interest only in a mess of pottage. A mess of pottage, my friends, when there are 12,400,000 people out of employment today, and we have appropriated $10,000,000,000 here in the last few years to feed the hungry of this Nation. A mess of pottage!

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I think it is laudable that you gentlemen went along in 1911——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I understood I had been yielded 3 minutes.

Mr. MAPES. I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think it was laudable that the Democratic side of this House, as well as the Republicans, went along together in the erection of the memorial to Abraham Lincoln in 1911. If conditions in this country now were as they were then, I think I would feel much differently about this. However, at that time the national bonded indebtedness was less than $1,000,000,000, and today it is over $32,000,000,000, and constantly growing. How can you reconcile your actions in voting $3,000,000 for this monument in face of that situation?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

All time has expired.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission (hereinafter referred to as the Commission), heretofore created for the purpose of considering and formulating plans for designing and constructing a permanent memorial in the city of Washington, D. C., to the memory of Thomas Jefferson, shall determine upon a plan and design for, and proceed with the construction of, such memorial upon a site selected by the Commission, under a contract or contracts hereby authorized to be entered into in a total sum not exceeding $3,000,000.

SEC. 2. In the execution of its functions the Commission—

(a) May designate as its executive agent any officer, agency, or establishment of the Federal Government qualified and equipped to act in that capacity, and any such officer, agency, or establishment so designated is authorized to act as such agent.

(b) May avail itself of the assistance and advice of the Commission of Fine Arts, and the Commission of Fine Arts shall, upon request, render such assistance and advice.

(c) May make expenditures for personal services, without regard to the provisions of the civil-service laws and regulations or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, the purchase or preparation of plans, designs, and estimates, printing and binding, office equipment and supplies, contract stenographic reporting service, books and periodicals, traveling expenses of members and employees of the Commission (including such expenses and allowances for members of the Commission when required to be in Washington, D. C., in connection with the work of the Commission), and such other contingent and miscellaneous expenses as may be necessary: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5) shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service rendered for the Commission under authority of this subsection.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SHANNON, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 12027, and, pursuant to House Resolution 522, he reported the same back to the House.

HISTORY OF FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, in 1908 Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte ordered the creation of a staff of investigators to have jurisdiction over all investigative matters within the purview of the United States Department of Justice. A small group of about 35 agents was authorized to make the necessary investigations.

This was the humble beginning of the Federal Bureau of Investigation which has come within the past few years to be known as the foremost law-enforcement body in the world.

TWO PERIODS OF GROWTH

There have been two periods in the growth of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The first extended from its inception in 1908 to May 1924. During this time many new duties devolved upon the investigative staff of the Bureau. In 1912 the white-slave laws were passed. During the World War there was an increase in duty resulting from the activities of enemy aliens. Also demanding the investigative attention of the agents of the Bureau were the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act and the Bankruptcy Act.

ENLARGEMENT OF INVESTIGATIVE UNIT

The enlargement of this investigative unit until 1924 was the result of a natural growth. That is to say, each problem was handled as it arose. There was no looking into the future; there was no certain goal or standard toward which this unit was striving. There was only the business of investigating violations against the laws of the United States and gathering evidence in cases wherein the United States was an interested party.

GOOD LEADER SOUGHT

In 1924, when Harlan F. Stone, now a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was appointed Attorney General of the United States, he regarded this routine manner of operation as wholly inadequate. In was clear to him that what the Bureau needed was an ideal and a leader who believed in it.

Back in 1908, when the Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice was first being created and organized, a young fellow 13 years of age was attending the public schools of the District of Columbia. Upon his graduation from high school, he entered the Library of Congress as a clerk and studied law at George Washington Law School in the evenings. In 1917 he was a clerk in the Department of Justice, and in 1919 he was appointed special assistant to the Attorney General. From 1921 to 1924, he served as Assistant Director of the Bureau of Investigation.

JOHN EDGAR HOOVER APPOINTED

This was the man whom Attorney General Harlan Stone chose to carry out the ideal of honest and efficient law enforcement. His name was John Edgar Hoover.

STRIVING TOWARD A GOAL

Less than 30 years of age at the time of his appointment as Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in May 1924, Hoover, even then, envisioned the day when the Bureau would be an efficient crime fighting organization, powerfully equipped with the necessary paraphernalia for exterminating the rats of the underworld and striving toward a goal of ridding this country of its blight of crime.

MR. HOOVER ANSWERS TO NO ONE BUT THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Hoover knew what he wanted and he had the assurance of Attorney General Stone that as Director, Mr. Hoover would answer to no one but the Attorney General and that as far as he was concerned, the Bureau of Investigation was a separate Government agency, free from all outside interference. It was evident that Justice Stone knew what he wanted. He wanted this young man, Hoover, to give full vent to his enthusiasm.

Once in office, Hoover wasted no time. He completely reorganized the Bureau and effected many economies in its administration.

SELECTION OF PERSONNEL

His first thought, however, concerned the personnel under his supervision. For the task ahead, he wanted young and progressive men, well educated and forward-thinking. He immediately ordered that the age limits for new agents of the Bureau be set from 25 to 35 years and that preference in appointment be given to qualified attorneys. The seniority rule of promotion was discarded. All advancements in the service were to be based solely on merit. He weeded out undesirables. There rapidly developed a corps of men who brought to their work the same enthusiasm as their Director. Today there are a few more than 600 of these special agents. They have been carefully selected from thousands of applicants. They must be graduates of law schools of high standing, expert accountants, or have had constructive types of law-enforcement experience. In addition, each must have had at least 2 years' practical experience in the business world.

These are high educational requirements but to Mr. Hoover they are not sufficient to enable an agent to start the work of investigating. He must know more. Hoover, therefore, instituted a training school for agents. Here, over a period of 14 weeks, the newly appointed agent receives an intensive course in all phases of law-enforcement work. He studies the elements of each of the offenses against the United States; he becomes thoroughly versed in the methods of scientific crime detection; he becomes an expert in the science of fingerprinting and a qualified handler of all types of firearms.

FINGERPRINT COLLECTIONS

At the beginning of his term, Director Hoover was also concerned with another problem—the centralization of the fingerprint collections scattered throughout the country. After tireless efforts in that direction, he was successful in having transferred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation the records of the identification bureau of the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the fingerprint collection of the Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kans. There were a little over 800,000 fingerprint cards with which to institute this national fingerprint exchange. It was pledged to give free service to any law-enforcement agency desiring to avail itself of these facilities. At every opportunity, Director Hoover has endeavored to preach the doctrine of coordination of all the forces of law and order in the fight against crime; without it his ideal of law enforcement cannot survive.

Phenomenally the collection has grown until today there are over 5,900,000 cards on file with an average of 4,500 arriving daily from approximately 10,000 contributing agencies. At the commencement of this work, the Identification Division received but 300 cards a day from less than 1,000 agencies. At that time only 14 percent of the incoming records were identified; today, previous criminal records are established in over 50 percent of the cases referred to the Bureau.

TRAINED STAFF OF TECHNICIANS

Intent on moving forward, Hoover early realized the need for a trained staff of technicians to attack a crime problem from the viewpoint of science. Acting to meet this need, he established a technical and research laboratory to assist in the current criminal investigations conducted by the Bureau's special agents. He has offered to the outside world of law enforcement the full facilities of this laboratory, evidencing again his supreme desire for cooperation among law-enforcement agencies. In addition, the laboratory, in the true spirit of the Bureau, is engaged in conducting research in the various police sciences. Improved methods of scientific crime detection will be placed in the possession of all peace officers who earnestly desire to raise the standards of their profession.

CRIME STATISTICS COMPILED

In 1930, Congress granted Hoover the authority to collect and compile crime statistics. It was the beginning of the important work of gathering national police statistics on a uniform scale so that those interested in crime trends and the remedies therefor would have tangible figures to point the direction toward which their efforts should be expended.

YOUNG CRIMINALS

With the aid of these statistics, Hoover is now able to call the attention of the country to the fact that 20 percent of the criminal element is composed of persons not yet of voting age. With these figures, he has hopes of making the people of this Nation crime conscious; of yanking their heads out of the sand and forcing them to face squarely the problem of law enforcement.

COOPERATION WITH LOCAL OFFICERS

The program of cooperation with local and State law-enforcement agencies, so evident in the projects of Director Hoover, was extended recently in the establishment in Washington, D. C., of training schools for municipal and State law-enforcement officials. The course of training lasts for a period of 12 weeks and covers the broad general field of law enforcement. Two classes have graduated. Since that time nearly all these men have advanced to better positions in their respective organizations. Many are engaged in the work of instructing their fellow officers in the modern criminal-detection methods learned during their training in Washington. These student-officers have returned to their homes convinced of Hoover's desire to cooperate with every honest and upright local authority.

During this entire march of progress, Hoover saw another great need. There was something radically wrong in the restrictions which beset his agents. Time after time, his men were called upon to cope with dangerous criminals who were armed in many cases with the latest and deadliest of weapons; yet Congress had not seen fit to empower agents to carry firearms. In fact, these special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation had no authority to make arrests but had to rely on local law enforcement officers to effect desired apprehensions.

ROVING BAND OF CRIMINALS

But something had been happening all this time. There arose in certain sections of this country a roving band of criminals, the backwash from the later prohibition era. These bandits boldly entered banks in broad daylight, gathered up their loot, and sped in high-powered automobiles across State lines. The local police, lacking funds, gave up the chase. The same thing happened in the commission of other crimes. Once these crimes were committed, their perpetrators fled to another State and in most cases were safe to continue their careers of depredation. Mr. Hoover sat in his office in Washington and saw all these things. He knew he was powerless to come to the aid of the local authorities. Even if he were, his agents were unarmed and without authority to make arrests. Something had to be done to remedy this grave fault in the Nation's fight against the lawless.

ATTORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS CHAMPION OF LAW ENFORCEMENT, NEW LAWS PASSED

Appointed by one champion of honest law enforcement, Hoover found another in the present Attorney General of the United States, Hon. Homer S. Cummings; and in May and June of 1934, with the passage of new laws by Congress, another milestone of law enforcement was reached. This legislation included the Federal reward bill (of which I was the author), the National Stolen Property Act, the Extortion Act, and the Federal antiracketeering statute. Another act made it a Federal offense to rob national banks and member banks of the Federal Reserve System; still another made it a Federal offense to flee from one State to another to avoid prosecution or giving testimony in certain cases. Heretofore, the killing or assaulting of a Federal officer was not an offense against the United States; prosecution had to be instituted in the State courts. An act was passed to remedy this strange situation.

AGENTS PERMITTED TO CARRY FIREARMS

With the passage of these bills and the delegation of the investigative duties thereunder to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, came the authorization for special agents to carry firearms and the power to make arrests. Congress had already in June 1932 passed the Federal kidnaping statute, commonly known as the Lindbergh law.

MOST ACTIVE PERIOD OF BUREAU

The period from June 1932 to May 1936 has been the most intensively active in the entire history of the Bureau. There is a saying that the more laws you have, the more crime will result. But these laws passed by Congress were not made to break; they were made to catch the criminal; to supply a stopgap to the free-flowing interstate commerce of lawlessness. Hoover realized this and also realized that the Bureau was about to stand a stern trial. He also knew that if he triumphed, his ideal of law enforcement would be well on its way to attainment.

BAD MEN OF COUNTRY APPREHENDED

Much that is sensational has been written within the last few years about the Federal Bureau of Investigation and its Director, John Edgar Hoover. These years witnessed the imprisonment or death of criminals such as Dillinger; Homer Van Meter; Fred, Doc, and Ma Barker; "Pretty Boy" Floyd; "Baby Face" Nelson; Alvin Karpis; William Mahan; Thomas H. Robinson, Jr.; Harry Campbell; and countless others less notorious but no less a menace to society during their short reigns of terror.

SIXTY-THREE CASES INVOLVING KIDNAPING SOLVED LAST 4 YEARS

Since the passage of the Lindbergh law in June 1932, 63 cases of kidnaping and plots to kidnap have been investigated and solved. The sentences of the 149 persons thus far convicted total 2,095 years, 11 months and 2 days. This does not include the 31 life sentences, the 4 death sentences, nor those persons who committed suicide or who were killed resisting arrest or murdered by their compatriots.

NEW BANK ROBBERY ACT

The Federal Bank Robbery Act was passed on May 18, 1934. Since then 187 cases of robbery of national banks of the Federal Reserve System have been reported to the Bureau. Investigations in these cases have resulted in the conviction of 115 persons in the Federal courts and the imposition of 3 life, 1 indeterminate, and over 2,500 years in sentences. On August 23, 1935, Congress by amendment, included in the Federal Bank Robbery Act all insured banks of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and thereby added a great deal to the duties of the special agents of the Bureau.

CONVICTIONS IN 95 PERCENT OF CASES

Very few people know that since the beginning of the present fiscal year, July 1, 1935, until April 30, 1936, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has secured over 3,000 convictions with sentences of more than 8,000 years, together with one of death and three of life imprisonment. Still fewer people know that in the same period recoveries of property and savings to the Government amounted to 28½ million dollars. These are the figures that tell the true story of Director Hoover's administration of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. But there is another final figure which demonstrates the efficiency of this law enforcement Bureau. Of the cases investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and brought to trial since July 1, 1935, 95 percent have resulted in convictions.

AMERICAN COOPERATIVE COTTON ASSOCIATION

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, concerning the American Cooperative Cotton Association, which was discussed rather fully in the Senate on Wednesday, May 27, 1936, the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] said:

It is my understanding that the cooperatives themselves requested the Farm Credit Administration to appoint someone to make an investigation into their affairs and to cooperate with them in curing defects and in making recommendations as to changes necessary to strengthen the whole structure of the cooperatives. Mr. Hermann's report is now under consideration by the cooperatives themselves, and they expect great good to result from this investigation.

A few days ago I wrote to the Department for a copy of this report, which the Department had already given the cooperatives. The Department declined to give me a copy of the report, and I send to the desk and ask that it be made a part of the RECORD Mr. Sanders' letter. However, from another source I have received a copy of the report, and I ask that it be made a part of the RECORD.

It is indeed remarkable that a bureau of this Government will give a copy of a confidential report to the corporation or association investigated and at the same time refuse a copy to a Senator. I think both the Bureau and the association should be investigated. At the next session I shall certainly have this Bureau investigated as to its unusual dealings with this association.

There being no objection, the letter and report were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, D. C., May 28, 1936.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR MCKELLAR: I have received your letter of May 25, in which you ask:

"I wish you would send me the following documents:

"1. Report on general functional survey, American Cotton Cooperative Association and member associations, January 30, 1936.

"2. Operating plans and policies of the Georgia Cotton Cooperative Association, 1933–34 and 1934–35 seasons. September 1935—O. W. Hermann.

"3. An analysis of the operating policies of the Georgia Cotton Growers Association, June 21, 1932. Tetrow (or Fetrow) and Hermann.

"4. Copy of Confidential Report No. 40, April 1936, entitled 'Some Operating Problems of Cotton Operatives.'

"5. Such other later reports bearing on the subject matter, viz, the dealings of the Department with the A. C. C. A."

As you know, the cooperative associations to which you refer are owned and operated by their farmer members and are in no way connected with the Farm Credit Administration. The only relationship which ever exists between these associations and the Administration is that of debtor and creditor; and it was through this relationship that the documents to which you refer were prepared at the request and for the information of the associations themselves. Therefore, in view of the resulting confidential nature of these reports, we do not feel at liberty to surrender them without the permission of the associations involved.

Accordingly, when your request was received we communicated with the American Cotton Cooperative Association and are now in receipt of a wire, with reference to the preliminary report made at the request of the directors of that association by Mr. O. W. Hermann, which reads, in part, as follows:

"* * * These studies made by Mr. Hermann are only the beginning of a program of general expansion and improvement in the services it is our hope to extend to the cotton farmers of the South and will be used as a basis for building a more sound and economical system of marketing our members' cotton. For these reasons and for the further reason that the information embodied in the preliminary report could be of no value to anyone other than ourselves and your department we prefer that it be held confidential." * * *

For your information we do not have "Report on General Functional Survey, American Cotton Cooperative Association and Member Associations, January 30, 1936", referred to in paragraph 1 of your letter. We do have copies of the documents referred to by you in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4. However, we do not have any "later reports bearing on the subject matter, viz, the dealings of the Department with the A. C. C. A.", which are referred to in paragraph 5 of your letter.

I have also noted your statement to the effect "if you can furnish the above reports by tomorrow I shall be greatly obliged. I hope you will not take the position that the H. O. L. C. took sometime ago, refusing information asked for, making it necessary to have a Senate resolution passed in order to get the information."

With our statements now before you regarding the confidential character of the documents and the circumstances under which they were prepared, you may wish to withdraw your request. On the other hand, if you should still desire to make the reports public, we regret very much that we would be obliged to advise you that we could not submit them except pursuant to the authority contained in a resolution adopted by the Senate to that effect.

Sincerely yours,

S. D. SANDERS, Commissioner.

PRELIMINARY REPORT—SOME OPERATING PROBLEMS OF THE COTTON COOPERATIVES

The general manager of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, after a conference with representatives of the Cooperative Division, Farm Credit Administration, requested in a memorandum of August 9, 1935, that the Cooperative Division make a study of certain phases of the set-up and operations of the American Cotton Cooperative Association and its member associations.

The work to date has been confined very largely to a study of some phases of the membership contact and assembling problems of the cotton cooperatives. In addition, considerable time was spent contacting 62 board members of nine State and regional associations in order to ascertain their attitude toward various policies, practices, and operations of the American Cotton Cooperative Association and the member associations, and the working relationships between these organizations. In addition, certain questions will be raised relative to the status of cotton received from various individuals and agencies.

The information included in this preliminary report covers only a limited part of the study of the American Cotton Cooperative Association and the State and regional associations which was suggested in the previously mentioned memorandum. We are attempting only a few specific recommendations at this time. We are definitely planning a continuation of the study to include, if possible, every phase of the operations of the cotton cooperatives from the farmer to the mill. As the study continues we hope to analyze and make recommendations from time to time relative to the following:

1. A detailed analysis of the performance of the cotton cooperatives as related to sales, classing, transportation, warehousing, insurance, billing and shipping, membership relations, etc., and comparative costs.

2. The division of administrative control and functions of the cotton cooperatives.

3. A continuation of the study of the membership contact and interior classing problem.

4. Problems of cotton cooperatives in special areas.

5. Functions of the directors of the American Cotton Cooperative Association and of the State and regional associations.

6. Formulation of a long-time program for cooperative cotton marketing as contrasted with the immediate operating problems of the associations which we now have operating in the field. This program will point out the functions which we believe a national organization should perform, as well as those which are best suited to smaller associations, and it would also outline a program for building up a better tie-up to the member and the farmer.

THE OBJECTIVE OF COOPERATIVE COTTON MARKETING

The objective of a cooperative cotton-marketing association is to obtain for the member the highest possible price for his cotton. To accomplish this objective, directors and officials are charged with the responsibility of protecting and promoting the interest of the members of the association in every way possible. There are only two principal avenues which will lead them to success in cooperative cotton marketing. These are the establishment of a system of marketing members' cotton which will (1) enable the association to sell its members' cotton at the highest possible price and (2) perform only essential and necessary marketing services in the most efficient and economical manner at cost.

While cooperative cotton-marketing associations are attempting to accomplish this objective great care must be exercised to see that their operations with their members are on a strictly cooperative basis. Cooperation is based on equality and justice to all. The only reason for the existence of a cooperative association is that a group of farmers feel that they cannot always get justice and equitable treatment from an old-line marketing agency, and that net returns through the operation of their own association, set up for their mutual benefit, will be greater than if they sold their commodities through established channels. If a cooperative association is not operated for the mutual benefit of its members, but is operated for the benefit of certain individuals, agencies, farmers, or members at the expense of others, the policies of such an association are out of line with the best cooperative procedure.

MEMBERSHIP CONTACT AND ASSEMBLING PROBLEMS

Membership relations are always a serious problem of a large-scale, centralized cooperative-marketing association. The wide area covered and the distance from the member to the headquarters office make it difficult for the association to maintain close contact with its members, with the result that many feel that the association is just another foreign corporation buying cotton in that territory. As you all know, in the early years of cooperative cotton marketing the State cotton associations attempted to meet the membership problem with a field-service plan and a staff whose function it was to inform the member of the association's services and to assist him in delivering his cotton to the association. A few associations also maintained local receiving agents who represented the association at various points, but the greater part of the membership was left with no tangible service in their local communities and received very little information as to the operations of the association.

The field service and assembling plan which was in vogue during the years of 1921–30 was very expensive and the service and information dispensed by these itinerant field men were scattered much too thinly and in some cases none too well throughout the South.

Beginning with the 1930–31 season, several of the associations adopted a sales option (the immediate fixation pool) which would enable them to pay their members the approximate value of the cotton on the day the member delivered to the association. This sales option revolutionized the entire assembling plan of the cooperatives and necessitated a complete change in the personnel of the field forces. Instead of the old type of speech-making field man, it was necessary for the association to have men who could accurately class and value cotton. In order to find men of this type it was necessary to go to the trade and hire cotton men because their cotton experience best fitted them for the task which was immediately before the association in establishing the interior classing offices.

The principal contact which the cotton cooperatives now have with their members is through the interior classers. To the member the interior classer and the interior classing office are the association, and his opinion of the association is based very largely on the treatment which he receives at the hands of the classer. It is, therefore, extremely important that the interior classer conduct his office in such a manner as to give the member efficient, equitable, and courteous service, and, in addition, give the member the proper understanding of what cooperative cotton marketing is all about. This indicates that any program of education of the membership must start with the interior classer. This statement is further supported by the opinion of the directors.

When asked whether their classer understood cooperative marketing or operated more or less like a cotton buyer, only 40 percent of the total number of directors stated that they felt that their classer did. The remainder indicated that they did not or they did not know whether he did.

As we see it, therefore, the big problem which is now facing the various cotton associations is the education of the interior classers in cooperative marketing and cooperative cotton marketing. The A. C. C. A. can fit into this program in a very fine way and assist the State associations' procedure materially in giving the interior classer the proper background to carry on his work with farmers, keeping in mind that membership contact is the State job.

We do not believe that large membership meetings will be successful unless the speakers have some outstanding message for the member. The talks should not be propaganda, but should be built around the idea of helping the farmer analyze his problem and how cooperative cotton marketing can be of assistance in solving it. These meetings should be distinctly a State-association affair in which A. C. C. A. should have little or no part. For the present, at least, membership meetings should be secondary to education of the classer in cooperative marketing and membership contact technique.

This outline of the background and division of function in membership contact work brings us to a discussion of the immediate problem.

The place of interior classing in a membership contact and educational program: The interior classing service represents the first attempt on the part of cotton associations to place their service at the immediate disposal of a relatively large proportion of the membership. The nearness of these offices to the member offers an excellent opportunity for membership contact work which was not possible under the old set-up and which is not fully appreciated by many cooperative officials at this time.

In the reaction against the old field-service set-up it was felt that the interior classer needed only to be a cotton man. Ability to contact and get along with farmers, knowledge of the principles of cooperative marketing, and a proper and sympathetic attitude toward cooperative marketing have often been largely overlooked as essential qualifications for an interior representative of the cooperative cotton associations. In a majority of cases the men hired to fill the interior classing positions were recruited from the trade. They were cotton men, and their knowledge of cooperative marketing was limited very largely to bias and prejudice which they harbored as private cotton men against a system which they believed was designed to put them out of business. The associations hired these men, called them into the office, gave them a few hours of oral and some written instruction, explained the procedure to be used in assembling cotton and the forms which were used in handling cotton, and sent them out as full-fledged representatives of a cooperative cotton-marketing association. In justice to a number of interior classers in practically every association, it must be said that many of the classers worked out their problems in a sound and intelligent way and have made good. In many instances, however, the men were naturally handicapped because they lacked some of the qualifications and training for the position they were supposed to occupy. With only a very few exceptions these men did not know the theory and practical aspects of cooperative cotton marketing and were not acquainted with the philosophy and objectives back of cooperation. They cannot properly answer the endless number of questions which are put to them by farmers. Furthermore, after the classer was located at a point he was left largely to his own devices, and just as long as the class on his cotton stood up and he did not lose money for the association he received very little attention from the headquarters office. The supervisor who contacted or checked these men was for the most part himself a cotton man. He had exactly the same background as the classer, and the two naturally looked at this problem in much the same way. The procedure which developed from this type of an operating plan, or lack of plan, was naturally directed into the channels which were most familiar to the interior classer and the supervisor. The result was that they have turned out to be largely cotton buyers in almost every sense of the word. The tactics used by these men are almost identical to those used by cotton buyers. It is interesting to note that it was necessary to contact 15 interior classing offices before the writer heard the word "cooperative" used by the interior classer in his dealings with a member or a farmer. Contact was made with many more than 15 interior classing offices, and with only a very few exceptions did the interior classer mention the word "cooperative" in his dealings with the member. In one association practically every classer talked cooperation to the members.

Some of the typical approaches used by interior classers in their dealings with the members are as follows:

1. "What do you have bid for this bale?" (This question is asked as the member hands over his sample.)
2. "What do you want for this cotton?"
3. "Do you want to sell it?"
4. "Do you want to sell it or do you want me to bid on it?"
5. The classer takes the sample, then makes a bid; and if the member does not accept, he tells him to come back.
6. Same as 5, except that he tells him to come back; that the market may change.
7. "We have but one bid, and that is the full value of the cotton."
8. "If you pass through that door you have no bid."

Many classers felt that it was their duty to "buy" cotton as cheaply as possible, and a number of them have boasted that they had purchased a cheap list of cotton, forgetting that they are representatives of the farmer and that cooperation is based upon equity and justice. It is difficult for many of the men who are trained in the trade to understand that they are to pay the farmer what his cotton is worth rather than use the same tactics which the cotton buyer would use in dealing with farmers.

As was mentioned above, the majority of the interior classing offices visited were conducted in a manner identical to those of the cotton buyer. The old tactics and tricks have been carried over into the association procedure. A veil of mystery often surrounds the activities of the classer, and a farmer cannot be sure that he is not being dealt with as the old-time cotton buyer would deal with him. It is only to be expected that if practices of this kind are continued the farmer will naturally trade and dicker with the association and attempt to get as good a price as possible from them. If the farmer cannot trust the classer, he naturally has to protect himself in any way possible. There should be a shift away from practices of this kind as soon as possible.

Interior classers are generally not concerned with whether the farmer is a member of the association when he brings a sample into the classing office. In no instance during our contact with these offices last fall did an interior classer ask a farmer whether he was a member before he classed his cotton for him. To be sure, the classers know a majority of the farmers in the community and know whether or not they are members, but in instances where the farmer was unknown to the classer he made no inquiry whatsoever as to the farmer's membership in the association. In most instances he was told that he had to sign at a certain place on the document which was handed to him, and no explanation was made as to what he was signing.

As was mentioned previously, membership contact and educational work were dropped for a period of years, and unfortunately education in cooperative cotton marketing has really not started so far as the interior classer is concerned. As was mentioned above, we look upon the interior classer as the keyman in the association; in fact, he is the association so far as the member is concerned, and unless he is correctly informed as to the philosophy and objectives of cooperative cotton marketing, the association becomes nothing more than "another cotton firm" to the member.

The greatest return from a small expenditure of money for field contact work can come from training leaders who will, in turn, pass on the results of this training to the many thousands of farmers they contact during the course of the year. A. C. C. A. may assist in training these leaders, but the membership contact job is a job of the State or regional association. Cotton-classing schools have been held for these men. This is good, and it is necessary, but what is seriously needed at the present time is cooperative cotton-marketing instruction.

Not all classers are fitted to a program of cooperative marketing, and those who are not well fitted should be gradually weeded out and replaced by qualified men who have been trained and developed in cooperative marketing. This will necessitate bringing in young men with no experience into the organization and training them. They may be placed with the better interior classers for a period of time, and when they are fully trained and capable, they may be placed in charge of an office. It is desirable that the young men thus brought in for a period of training should have an agricultural background, just as it is desirable that the agricultural college student should have that same background. If he does not, he cannot have a proper understanding and a sympathetic attitude for the problems of the farmer.

The interior classer's program: A year-around program for the interior classer might include a number of the following association and community activities, depending on the qualifications and background of the interior classer and the extent to which other agencies wish his cooperation. Most important among these are:

1. To class the member's cotton accurately, make settlement with him on the basis of quality, and prepare all statements and documents connected therewith.
2. To provide, if possible, a year-around market for the farmer's cotton and to act as a source of information for all member inquiries, the cotton situation, his cotton account, and other association business in which he might be interested.
3. To contact and educate the membership as to the operations of the association and the principles and practices of cooperative cotton marketing.
4. To solicit new members and promote and expand the association business in that community.
5. To educate the grower as to values in cotton and teach him a few of the primary elements of grade and staple.
6. To call the growers' attention to damages which may result from improper ginning and assist them in bringing about improvement in ginning practices.
7. To assist the grower in getting improved seed and assist in the sponsoring of one-variety communities and cotton-improvement programs.
8. To work with Smith-Hughes and 4-H club boys and girls and assist vocational teachers in their program of teaching cotton classing and cooperative cotton marketing and cotton improvement.
9. To work, whenever possible, with the county agricultural agent.
10. In some instances interior classers can be used in connection with a farm-supply business. The classer may be the manager of a year-around operation of a local supply cooperative and devote his time to cotton during the cotton season. This cuts the salary cost and makes it possible to get a better man on a year-around basis for the association.

11. To assist in the improvement of general marketing facilities and practices in the community.

Some practices followed by interior classers which are questionable: We believe that there are extensive possibilities for improvement in the practices and procedure followed by interior classers in the conduct of their offices and in the performance of their duties. So far as we know, no study or work of any kind has been done along this line. Systematic work of assisting the classers along this line should be initiated. It is, of course, admitted that practices and policies cannot be standardized to too great an extent, but there are certain general principles which could be worked out and called to the attention of interior classers which would be of material benefit to them in their work as a representative of the association.

The operations of the interior classers and the methods and tactics which they use in contacting members and in assembling cotton have been studied carefully for several years. We are raising some questions about certain of their practices.

1. Is dickering with members justifiable? Some interior classers follow the practice rather consistently of dickering or bargaining with their members on the price which they are to receive for their cotton. The practice was questioned from a cooperative viewpoint, and we asked the opinion of the State directors on the practice. The following question was asked:

"Do you believe that cotton cooperatives are justified in dickering with members for a price on their cotton? Yes ( ). No ( ). Explain."

Of the 62 who were interviewed, 49 directors, or 79 percent of the total, answered "no", and only 10 directors, or 16 percent, answered "yes." Three directors were undecided. If a commercial organization follows this practice, no one thinks anything about it; on the other hand, if a cooperative association which is operated for the mutual benefit of members, uses those tactics, we feel that it is following a path that will ultimately lead to failure. Some classers justified the practice by saying that they used it only on disloyal members or on nonmembers, i. e., on the farmer they would like to reach and make a loyal member. How can this policy be consistent with building up membership morale and support? Dickering certainly is not conducive to making a disloyal member loyal.

Another bad feature of the practice of dickering is that it leaves to the judgment of the classer the price he is to pay the farmer. This privilege can only lead to inequity, injustice, and favoritism. Dickering is not sound cooperative marketing procedure.

2. Question of inequity in treatment: Payment of different prices for the same quality of cotton in the same market, on the same day, at the same futures price level. The directors interviewed were strongly in favor of all members being treated alike. The following question shows their position very clearly:

"Do you believe that the cotton cooperatives should pay all members the same price for like grades and staples of cotton delivered to the association at the same point, on the same day, at the same futures price level? Yes ( ); no ( ). Explain."

Of the 62 who were interviewed, 54 directors, or 87 percent of the total, answered "yes" to this question. Five directors, or 8 percent, answered "no." Two were undecided and one gave no answer. There seemed to be a general feeling among directors and many others that if the association did not treat all members alike it was violating one of the fundamental principles of cooperative marketing. They felt that cooperation was based on equality and justice with no special favors and that if it became generally known that a member could not trust the association to give him the full value of his cotton without bargaining for it, that the association would be the object of suspicion and would quickly lose the confidence of its substantial members. They were all aware of the one- or two-point topping problem.

It appeared that interior classers who were competent judges of human nature and who had a proper grasp of the principles of cooperative marketing were opposed to a two-price policy and were successful in getting their share of cotton by using only one bid, and that bid being the allowable maximum. So many of the classers had traded with the farmer for cotton all their lives that it is very difficult for them to get the cooperative point of view.

3. Should a discretion be used? The arbitrary use of a discretion to take care of "differences in character or membership" rather than differences in character of cotton is a questionable practice. The opinion of the directors was rather equally divided as to the use of a discretion. We are convinced that this practice is not sound cooperative marketing. If the objective is volume, then the discretion is justifiable.

4. What is member cotton? It would be almost an endless task to classify cooperative cotton as to its source. We, however, found that there was a considerable volume of deliveries which were considered as member cotton which should not be so classified. In order to open the problem for consideration, we are raising questions about the sources of certain deliveries to the cotton association.

There seems to be considerable confusion in the minds of many, even State managers and A. C. C. A. officials, as to what is member cotton. We believe that there should be a clarification of the definition of member cotton. This can only be developed after a careful analysis of just how cotton is acquired by the association. The task is by no means a simple one, although it can be said that cotton purchased from or delivered by commercial gins or ginners, supply companies or supply merchants, cotton buyers, banks or bankers, which was not actually grown on farms of those agencies or individuals, is always open to question.

The attaching of lists of the names of growers who grew the cotton to the invoice when the cotton is purchased by or delivered to the cotton association has no bearing whatsoever on whether it is member cotton. These lists of names are acquired for the purpose of paying patronage dividends, if any, in order to comply with internal-revenue regulations.

(a) We question taking delivery of cotton from commercial gins which have purchased cotton outright from farmers in the operation of the ginning business. Cotton purchased by the association from a gin in this category cannot in any way be considered as member cotton, even though the gin manager may be a farmer, and even though he furnished the association the names of the growers from whom the cotton was acquired.

(b) A question has been raised regarding taking delivery of cotton from a commercial ginner who is a farmer and a member of the association. There is no question but what the ginner may deliver to the association the cotton which he produced on his own farm, and it will be unquestionably considered as member cotton. On the other hand, if the commercial ginner who is a farmer and a member of the association acquires cotton from growers who are patrons of his gin and this cotton is delivered to the association, this cotton cannot be considered as member cotton. This is true even though the names of the growers of the cotton are furnished the association in order that patronage dividends may be paid directly to the grower in case they are distributed.

In a memorandum of March 18, 1931, from Judge L. S. Hulbert to Mr. Stanley Reed, general counsel of the Federal Farm Board, Mr. Hulbert gives an opinion which applies in a very clear way to the problem which we just outlined above. An excerpt from this memorandum is as follows:

"In the report of Mr. Walsh, of Montana, a member of the Judiciary Committee that reported on the Capper-Volstead Act, the following appears:

"'The bill before us during the last session authorized the organization of associations dealing in "products of their members." The bill now under consideration authorizes them to deal in the "products of persons so engaged." Obviously, under the former the associations would be restricted in their dealings to members; in the latter, though they are restricted as to the character of the products in which they may deal, it is clear that they may deal with any person in such products whether he be a member or not.

"'The bill has for its purpose the removal of obstacles, if such there be in the Federal statutes, in the way of the organization of cooperative farm marketing associations, a purpose with which the majority, at least, of your committee is in full sympathy. It may be and probably is true that such associations cannot operate with the highest degree of success or with that degree of success which your committee would be glad to see attend their efforts, unless they are permitted to deal to some extent in the products of nonmembers similar in character to those handled for the members. But the protection of the statute ought not to be given to a small number of persons of the classes named in the bill who contribute from their own farms an inconsiderable quantity of the products handled by the association.'

"It is apparent from the foregoing that Mr. Walsh was of the opinion that the first paragraph of the Capper-Volstead Act covered agricultural products furnished by nonmembers as well as those furnished by members. This fact, as stated above, was the reason for the restriction on the amount of nonmember products in which an association may deal. The view of Mr. Walsh is consistent with the idea that a member of a cooperative association of producers may acquire products of nonmembers and then in his own name deliver them to the association for marketing, provided that the total amount of products contributed by the members from their own farms is at least equal in value to the products produced by nonmembers and that are marketed through the association by members thereof.

* * * * * * *

"I am, therefore, of the opinion that a cooperative association of producers of grapes could be formed and that it could handle the grapes produced by its members and that these members could deliver to the association, in their names, grapes acquired by them from nonmembers up to an amount in dollars equal to the value of the grapes handled by the association that were produced by its members and delivered thereto for marketing."

c. Taking cotton from a supply merchant, which company does not own farms and is not a member of the association, is open to question. There is no question but what this cotton would be considered as nonmember cotton even though the names of the producers who grew the cotton are attached.

d. Taking cotton from a supply merchant, which company does own farms and is a member of the association. There is no question but what the supply company can deliver to the association the cotton actually produced on its own farms. It will be unquestionably considered as member cotton. On the other hand, if the supply company which owns and operates farms, acquires cotton from growers who are patrons of the supply business, but are not on the lands of the supply company and this cotton is delivered to the association, this cotton cannot be considered as member cotton.

If a supply company has advanced supplies to a grower who is farming on land which the supply company does not own and it purchases the cotton which this farmer has grown for the purpose of settling the accounts of a grower, this cotton cannot be considered as member cotton. The same would hold for a bank which has loaned money to a farmer to assist him in producing a crop and the bank purchases this cotton to settle the account with the bank. This cotton cannot be considered as member cotton even though the banker himself may be a farmer and a member of the association.

e. Accepting delivery of cotton from nonmembers or nonproducers is always questionable. This has been a common practice at various times in the past. The cooperatives should confine their activities to members, as nearly as they can be determined, except for a small percentage of cotton necessary at times to fill orders. Two-thirds of the directors indicated that the associations should not do business with nonmembers. Some question can be raised as to the justification of using Government financing if they handle a large volume of deliveries of other than member-grown cotton in spite of the fact that, from a legal point of view, they may handle up to 50 percent of their cotton from nonmembers.

5. Is a farmer a bona-fide member when a ginner or supply merchant gets him to sign a marketing agreement after he (the ginner or supply merchant) had sold the cotton to A. C. C. A. in order that he (the farmer) would get a patronage dividend?

From a practical standpoint it is difficult to ascertain the status of all cotton which is delivered to the association, but in most instances the interior classer will know the details of the operations of the members and individuals in his community, and if he makes an honest effort to determine the status of cotton which he receives for the association, no doubt many of the undesirable features in this type of operation may be eliminated.

6. Payment of patronage dividends to landlords and tenants in proportions other than their rental arrangement is not a sound cooperative principle, although from a practical point of view it offers many perplexing problems. Wherever possible the association should attempt to have these patronage dividends allocated to landlords and tenants in proper proportions. It is assumed that directors should be cooperators to the fullest extent but we found that they are often guilty of keeping all of the patronage dividends rather than passing them back to the tenants in proportion to the amount of cotton they produced. This is an extremely difficult problem and almost impossible to administer, and we are, therefore, urging only that it be set up as one of the long-time goals for making the cotton cooperatives truly cooperative.

7. We believe that it is a sound policy, if the basis is known to be substantially in line, to never ask the farmer what he has been bid on the cotton until after the interior classer himself makes a bid. Some classers always ask a man what he has been bid on his cotton before they even take a look at it. If operations are properly conducted, we do not believe that the classer should concern himself as to what the farmer has been bid on his cotton prior to the time he comes into the office. The classer should class and value the cotton and place a price on it in accordance with what it is actually worth, rather than on what the farmer has been bid previously.

8. Some classers at points where the majority of the members are large growers do not encourage one- or two-bale deliveries from small growers. They say it is too much trouble.

9. Some signs at association offices indicate that the association has comparatively little interest in letting people know where their office is located and what organization they represent. A large number of offices had no signs whatsoever. Others had signs of all kinds and descriptions. Many of them were quite inaccurate and misleading. Some of the signs noticed read as follows:

1. ——— Cotton Cooperative Association, 12-cent loan. We also buy cotton.

——— ———, Manager.

2. ——— Cotton Cooperative Association. We buy cotton. Twelve-cent loan.

3. Farm Board Cotton.

——— ———, Manager.

4. United States Government classer.

We believe that the interior classer should do everything possible and, in fact, go out of his way to assist and enlighten the farmer rather than trying to make something mysterious out of the handling of cotton. In doing so the classer is making a friend of the farmer, and is building up his understanding of how the cooperative operates and his appreciation of the service which the association is offering him.

There has been a tendency for the classer to treat the farmer in a manner similar to the treatment which he has received from the cotton buyer; that is, when the farmer brings his cotton to the interior classing office, class it and tell him nothing. Time, of course, will not permit much of this type of work in the rush season, but there are lull times at the disposal of the classer in which he can go into somewhat more detail with the farmer.

Members' lack of education: Unfortunately, during the past 5 years, membership contact and educational work were largely abandoned and the associations were sold to the membership almost entirely on a price appeal. One indication of the extent to which the cotton cooperatives have failed in their educational, or lack of educational, program with the farmers is the reaction of State associate board members to the following question:

"Do you believe that the average farmer knows what A. C. C. A. is and what it is trying to do?"

Of the 62 included in the survey, 52 directors, or 90 percent of the total, answered "no", while only 8 percent answered "yes." Several did not know.

In connection with our field study we prepared a questionnaire from which we attempted to obtain reactions of members toward the cotton cooperatives. This work was abandoned after a short time because it was so difficult to find farmers who had even the slightest idea about the operations of the cotton cooperatives.

Membership contact work, in our opinion, is definitely a function of the State or regional association. The A. C. C. A. position with regard to this work should be one of assisting the State associations in the development of leadership to do this work and in explaining the operations of the A. C. C. A. to those engaged in membership work. We do not, however, believe that officials of the A. C. C. A. should actually do the contact work in the field. There is, of course, no criticism in an A. C. C. A. official attending a membership meeting, but that meeting should be distinctly a State association affair. The A. C. C. A. does not have funds and personnel to do this type of work. Furthermore, they are too far from the membership to be intimately acquainted with the local problems and have the proper conception of the work which should be done. The State manager and those whom he chooses to assist him should be fully capable of conducting and responsible for the membership work.

MISCELLANEOUS

House organs: Practically 60 percent of the State directors favored the publishing of a house organ by the A. C. C. A., and 73 percent thought that the State association should publish a paper. A house organ is a necessary and very useful device for disseminating information about the operation of the association and educating the membership in cooperative marketing generally. The house organ should, however, be conducted in an economical way and should be supported by a limited subscription fee and conservative advertising service. A house organ should deal primarily with the affairs of the association and should be very careful not to engage in political controversies and follow too closely the political trends of the times or the political fortunes of any individual. We doubt whether the cotton cooperatives are justified in maintaining two house organs, as is the case in some of the associations. The expense is too great, and there is too much duplication of effort.

Directors and membership contact work: The directors of State and regional associations have not kept closely in touch with the work of their association and the opinions of the constituents whom they are trying to serve. The study revealed that nearly one-half of the total interviewed did not attend a single membership meeting during the 1934–35 season. It is believed that the director should give some time to the association by attending membership meetings and in contacting members to the end that he will be in tune with the desires of his constituents and be better able to serve them. We do not, however, believe that the director should be a field-service man or a salaried employee of an association. This is a "little racket" which has long existed in a number of associations. Our inquiry indicated that 82 percent of the directors believed that board members should not be on the pay rolls of their associations.

The volume complex: Unfortunately most of the State associations, as well as A. C. C. A., are afflicted with the volume complex. It appears that they often measure their success in terms of volume rather than in terms of returns to the member. The expense of acquiring this volume and the methods and practices used in obtaining it are often unsound and questionable. We are still in agreement with a statement in our report of January 1932, which is as follows: "Large volume does not mean success unless the methods used to get cotton will stand the test of sound business principles. We need somewhat of a reversal of our thinking with respect to the objectives of the cotton cooperatives. We do not want to be misunderstood in making this statement, but it does seem it would be more logical to first determine the services the cotton cooperatives can render by following certain policies which are known to be sound and then operating according to these policies. In other words, begin with an idea of service, followed by volume instead of beginning with volume in mind and doing anything regardless of its soundness to get that volume. We believe that volume can be secured by sticking to the idea of service economically rendered. If it takes unsound methods to get cotton, the cooperatives should admit that they have no place in the present system of marketing. (Report on General Functional Survey. American Cotton Cooperatives Association and member associations. Jan. 30, 1932, p. 86.) It has often appeared to us that the cotton associations have made a determined effort to get volume in order to maintain their staffs rather than make the staff fit the volume which they could soundly and properly obtain by economical operation on a cooperative basis.

Subsidiary activities: During the past 15 years cooperative cotton marketing associations have resorted to various devices and subsidiary activities calculated to increase deliveries. Among these were the organization of lines of cooperative gins, as well as production credit associations, farm supply associations, warehouses, oil mills, etc. If an association has been successful in its marketing program, and has the ability and finances to carry on these activities, there are certain justifiable projects in which it might engage, provided these activities are for the benefit of the members as a whole.

We doubt the advisability of associations operating facilities or subsidiaries for the sole purpose of adding to the volume of cotton which the association handles. If these facilities and services which are financed by the entire membership are for the benefit of the entire membership, we believe they are justifiable. However, if a facility or subsidiary activity cannot be operated and financed successfully without its connections with the cotton marketing association, we do not believe that it is a sound project to attempt. In other words, such activities should be able to stand alone without the support and financing which they might receive from the associations.

We also doubt the advisability of associations using their assets and reserves, which are the property of the membership as a whole, to construct and operate facilities which are entirely local in character and which can at best benefit only the farmers in a local community. This is especially true if farmers in the local communities in which these facilities will be located have no financial interest in the local project except such interest as they may have in the reserves of the association. If the farmers in a local community are interested in the operation of a ginning plant on a cooperative basis, they should themselves be willing to finance this operation and should not call on the members over a wide area to assist them. The State association could, however, lend support and offer advice to local groups of growers in organizing local cooperatively owned gin associations in the hope that these associations would become members and deliver cotton to the marketing association. The national association is even less justified in going into this kind of a program.

CONTROL

Administrative control, the flow of responsibility, and the division of functions are always difficult in a large organization. So many problems of personality and personnel arise that no iron-clad rule can be laid down even for operations which are identical in character. The control problem so far as the cotton cooperatives are concerned is further complicated by the fact that the American Cotton Cooperative Association finances the cotton and/or assumes the responsibility for loans made both to the American Cotton Cooperative Association and the State and regional associations. We believe that a lending agency should have the limit of safety so far as its loans are concerned. We believe, however, that this safety can be accomplished within an organization in two general ways: (1) By the regulation and control of every detail from a central office, which in this case would be New Orleans, and (2) by a decentralization of responsibility so that the management of affiliated groups would perform those functions which it is best adapted to perform and assume control over all the activities carried on in the areas under the general control and supervision of the central office.

The present set-up necessitates administration from a distance and has not, it appears, made for the greatest efficiency or economy in every instance. It is believed that A. C. C. A. should study its operations with the idea of passing back every possible function and control to the States and furthermore, assist them in developing leadership, management, and personnel to operate these associations.

No central organization can be strong without strong affiliates. This strength cannot be built by too much supervision from above. If the cotton associations wish to build an enduring structure, it will be necessary to divide duties and responsibilities so that, regardless of what happens to the overhead or any of the affiliates, the movement as a whole will go on.

There was a definite feeling among a majority of the board members of State associations that the whole cotton set-up should be decentralized rather than further centralized. Of the total, 61 percent believed that functions and control should move toward the State associations and the farmer, 23 percent believed in centralization, while 16 percent gave no answer to this question.

Board of directors: The control of the cotton cooperatives, according to the bylaws, is theoretically vested in the membership. Practically, the membership has had very little to do with the development of policies and with the control of the various associations. It is true that the membership selects the board of directors of the State association, but, in some instances at least, these boards have become self-perpetuating bodies, not fully in tune with the desires and wishes of their constituents. Our study indicates that a large percentage of the board members were not familiar with the operations of the association and did not feel that the board met often enough to become well informed. Many felt that there was little reason for meeting, because there was nothing left for them to do. An examination of the minutes of the boards of directors of State and regional associations will further substantiate that they have every function and practically no responsibility.

Under the old set-up prior to the American Cotton Cooperative Association the board members of the State associations had definite duties and responsibilities. Under the present set-up these duties and responsibilities are more limited.

We discussed the make-up of the A. C. C. A. board at some length with the State directors. The board of directors of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, as is well known, is made up of one representative from each of the State or regional associations. The personnel of this board is made up of managers or directors of the State or regional associations selected by the board of directors of that association. When the American Cotton Cooperative Association came into existence practically all of the directors were managers of State associations. These managers, however, were employees of the State association and not employees of the American Cotton Cooperative Association. Since that time the proportion of State directors and managers on the American Cotton Cooperative Association board is rather evenly divided, but it must be noted that the managers who are on the American Cotton Cooperative Association board are hired jointly by the State association and A. C. C. A. and receive half of their salary from the American Cotton Cooperative Association. Over four-fifths of the directors were not in favor of this policy.

The directors of State associations were interviewed on this subject, and they expressed their opinion in rather unmistakable terms. As was indicated to the general manager of A. C. C. A. in a letter of January 6, 1936, a total of 62 directors were asked the following questions:

"Do you believe that the State manager employed by the American Cotton Cooperative Association and the State association jointly should be on the board of directors of the A. C. C. A.? Yes ( ), No ( ). Explain."

Of the 62 interviewed, 50 directors, or 81 percent of the total, answered "no" and 9 directors, or 14 percent, answered "yes." Three directors did not attempt to answer the question. Upon further inquiry, a good majority felt that some member of the State or regional association board should be the State's representative on the American Cotton Cooperative Association board. Staff members of agricultural colleges and extension divisions, as well as the agricultural press interviewed, considered that employees of A. C. C. A. being on its own board of directors was one of the bad features of the American Cotton Cooperative Association set-up. They generally felt that it was not a farmer-owned and farmer-controlled cooperative and that a hired employee could not, in every instance, be depended upon to act in the best interests of the cooperative cotton marketing. They all admitted that the present plan involved less expense and that the present board was probably more familiar with the operations of A. C. C. A. than if the board was made up largely of farmers who were members of State association boards. In spite of this, however, they felt that a change was desirable and necessary. A majority of the managers interviewed on this question were also opposed to the policy of hired employees of A. C. C. A. being on the A. C. C. A. board. A number of the managers were themselves directors of A. C. C. A. If the State directors feel as they indicated in our survey, we believe that they should take steps to remedy the situation. Several alternatives may be suggested to the present plan. They are as follows:

(1) Replace all managers on the A. C. C. A. board with State or regional association directors who are, of course, primarily farmers.

(2) Increase the size of the A. C. C. A. board to include two representatives from each association, the manager (who is not an employee of A. C. C. A.) and a State director or member of that association. Managers who are on the board in this instance would not be allowed to vote on personnel or salary matters.

(3) Remove all managers from the pay roll of the A. C. C. A. and allow the selection to be open as it is at the present time, the State association being free to choose either a member of the board of directors or their manager to represent their association on the A. C. C. A. board.

Regardless of the changes made in the A. C. C. A. board, we believe that the directors of A. C. C. A. should not be employees of and on the A. C. C. A. pay roll.

OTHER OPINIONS OF DIRECTORS ON CONTROL

When asked whether they believed that a board member should be employed by their own association or be on the association's pay roll, 62 percent answered "no." Only 7 out of the 62 answered "yes." The remainder gave no opinion.

There seemed to be a feeling among sizeable percentage of the directors that A. C. C. A. was not a farmer-owned and farmer-controlled association. A majority of the directors, in fact 58 percent of the total, believed that it was. The remainder, however, did not believe that it was or had some doubts about it. The percentage is large enough to give officials of A. C. C. A. and the State associations some concern.

There seemed to be a feeling among quite a number of the directors that A. C. C. A. was exceeding the limits of its authority when it arbitrarily changed the boundary lines of associations, shifted counties from an association to another, or organized new associations. It is believed that the membership in the affected area should be the deciding factor in cases of their kind.

FUNCTIONS

Decentralization of functions and of control are necessary according to two-thirds of the directors interviewed last fall. They generally believed that centralization had gone too far, and that the pendulum should swing back toward the State associations and the farmer. They felt, further, that the manager and the board of directors of the State association should be responsible for all of the activities carried on within the area which they cover, and A. C. C. A. should control and direct only through the general manager of the State association. In many instances there appeared to be a lack of coordination of control, and the general manager was not given full responsibility for the functions carried on within his territory or held responsible for their success. The opinion of the boards of directors of State associations is rather clearly outlined in their answers to the following question:

"Should all of the activities carried on within the territory covered by a State association be under the control of the board of directors and manager of that association, or should the control be divided as at present? Explain."

Sixteen of the directors interviewed did not venture an opinion upon this subject. Over two-thirds of those who answered the question, however, were in favor of the board members and manager of State associations controlling all the activities within the area covered by that association. Fifteen directors indicate that they were satisfied with the joint arrangement which is in vogue at the present time. We believe that decentralization is necessary and inevitable.

We will at this time make no attempt to outline the division of all of the functions between all of the State or regional associations and A. C. C. A., but will confine our discussion only to one or two portions of the problem. Based on two studies made of cooperative cotton marketing in Georgia during the past 4 years (O. W. Herman, Operating Plans and Policies of the Georgia Cotton Cooperative Association, 1933–34 and 1934–35 seasons, September 1935) and in other Southeastern States, we believe we have enough information and that the associations in the Southeast have had enough experience so that we can recommend definitely a division of functions for the associations operating in that area, but will withhold judgment until a later date for associations operating in the Middle South and Southwest.

The southeastern associations: In speaking of the division of functions in a report in 1932 (Fetrow and Hermann, An Analysis of the Operating Policies of the Georgia Cotton Growers' Cooperative Association, June 21, 1932, p. 180), we stated that we were convinced that it is impossible for a sales organization in New Orleans to adjust its operations to meet local conditions in the mill area of the Southeast. We further stated that we realized that the sales department in New Orleans would have to guide in a general way the making of sales policies for this area, but the major portion of the responsibility should rest upon the man who is responsible for the sales in that area. From this it would follow that the general manager of a southeastern association should have almost complete authority on both the selling and the buying basis. We believe that he should be given some latitude on the same basis on which he is to sell cotton. This is necessary in order to make adjustments for difference in local conditions. This plan has been used for 2 years and has been successful.

We are still of the opinion that the functions which can be performed by A. C. C. A. in the Southeastern States are very limited. Experience in the Southeast has demonstrated that local problems are such as to make it impossible for an organization located in New Orleans to direct the assembling and sales problems in an area such as associations must operate in the Southeast. The Georgia Cotton Cooperative Association, so far as its operating policies are concerned, is following in a general way the recommendations which we made for operations in the Southeast 4 years ago. We believe that experience has demonstrated that these recommendations are sound, and we would therefore suggest that the associations in the Southeast be given almost complete autonomy so far as their operations are concerned. We believe, of course, that the American Cotton Cooperative Association should have a salesman in connection with each of these associations.

This salesman, in the Southeast at least, should be under the direction of the State general manager of that association so far as the sale of that association's cotton is concerned, and be subject only to the coordinating control of the A. C. C. A. By this we mean that the salesman should have his territory outlined and should represent the A. C. C. A. in selling cotton from other associations. If the cotton delivered by members of a particular association is sold in another State or is exported, the A. C. C. A. would have a definite function to perform in finding an outlet for this cotton and arranging for its sale although the details as to shipping and invoicing, classing, etc., would be handled by the State association. Hedging and financing, of course, are other functions which can also properly be delegated to the A. C. C. A. so far as the southeast associations are concerned. All other activities in the Southeast, including classing, warehousing, insurance, transportation, concentration, billing, and shipping, and the settlement of claims should be under the direction of the general manager of the State association subject only to banker control by A. C. C. A. carried on through traveling auditors and classers.

If the management of the State associations in the Southeast is competent, it should be big enough to handle activities in a territory of this kind with only minor attention from the officials of the A. C. C. A. We believe that the deductions for operating expenses of the A. C. C. A. should be adjusted so as to be in conformity with the services which A. C. C. A. performs for these associations. That is, if the A. C. C. A. operates in the Southeast in only a limited way, their charges for services to these associations would be less than the charges for the associations in the Middle South and Southwest.

The analysis of the southeastern problem will be continued as the study progresses.

The Middle South and Southwest: The associations in the areas other than the Southeast present a somewhat different problem, and we will make no attempt to indicate at this time the division of functions which we believe to be proper between the A. C. C. A. and its affiliates. We wish only to point out one matter which deserves attention and which has the interest of a substantial group of directors.

There seemed to be a rather general feeling among directors that the associations in these territories should have an opportunity to sell cotton through channels other than the regular routine delivery to the A. C. C. A. This they felt should be done by, or closely supervised by, a representative of the A. C. C. A. in order that there may be no lack of coordination in the selling of cotton and no conflict of interest between the organizations such as was present in the set-up of the American Cotton Growers Exchange. The board of directors and the manager of the State associations are duty bound to seek the best price it is possible to obtain for the members who deliver cotton to that association. If it is possible to obtain more satisfactory prices through channels other than the regular channels set up by the A. C. C. A., the directors believed, and we agree, that these channels should be used.

We found considerable complaint in the field during the past several seasons due to the fact that the A. C. C. A. basis was in line only a few weeks during the season. The remainder of the time it was necessary for farmers to dispose of their cotton through other channels. These outlets were paying substantially more than A. C. C. A. was offering. Many of these complaints are to be expected. However, a substantial group of directors believed that a flexible service might be established to take advantage of these outlets when A. C. C. A. basis is out of line, so that the member would have more nearly a year-around service.

We believe that the A. C. C. A. should make a diligent effort to develop ways and means by which they can handle the farmer's cotton, even though the A. C. C. A. basis, as now calculated, may be out of line at the moment. A number of associations have tried plans for selling cotton through channels other than the regular channels of A. C. C. A. and have been successful with these limited ventures. We believe that considerable thought and effort should be expended along this line in the future in order that the set-up and operations in the field may be more flexible and adaptable to conditions as they actually exist.

We cannot see how a member can really be strong for an association if it has nothing to offer him in the way of price or service during the greater part of the season. The directors of the State associations interviewed last fall had some interesting reactions to this question. Their answers were outlined in a letter of January 13, 1936, to the general manager of A. C. C. A. The following is an exact statement of the question which was put to them:

"Should the State associations be allowed to sell cotton on the outside if they can obtain a better price than A. C. C. A. is offering? Yes ( ), No ( ). Explain.

"Sixty-two directors were interviewed on this question. Of that number 49 directors, or 79 percent of the total, answered the question 'yes.' Eight directors, or 13 percent of the total, answered 'no.' Five directors did not answer the question.

"The general feeling among directors and others seems to be that the State or regional association owed it to its membership to obtain the best possible price for cotton, regardless of how or where it is sold. There was also a rather general feeling that A. C. C. A. was not taking the right attitude when they state that 'We don't want that kind of cotton' or 'We have about all of that particular grade and staple of cotton that we can handle.' The directors and others interviewed felt that A. C. C. A. should be willing to take the member's cotton at all times, regardless of its grade, staple, and character, at whatever price they (A. C. C. A.) felt that it could be handled satisfactorily and safely. There was considerable criticism of the fact that A. C. C. A. had a satisfactory basis only a few weeks in the season and that for much of the remainder of the time they were out of the market and had nothing to offer. They felt that some more versatile plan should be available to handle cotton when the A. C. C. A. basis was out of line. However, the group did not feel that A. C. C. A. should take cotton at a loss or that the A. C. C. A. basis should be in line all of the time. Many believed that if the A. C. C. A. basis was out of line, that it was not right for the State association to stand idly by and do nothing for the member when there were outlets which would pay more for cotton than A. C. C. A. was offering. They felt that the State association was charged with the responsibility of getting the member the best possible price for his cotton. The fact that A. C. C. A. stated they were in and out of the market at various times gave it the aspect of a commercial firm rather than a cooperative association attempting to offer the maximum of service to its members at all times."

A complete analysis of the functions of the national association and its member units will be included as the study progresses.

EXPENSES

Our remarks relative to expenses must of necessity be general because to date we have made no attempt to go into the details of operating expenses. We will, therefore, confine our discussion to generalities.

Specific figures are available as to the per-bale operating expense of various member cotton associations, although these figures are not comparable in many respects for the reason that the A. C. C. A. performs different functions for different associations. Operating expenses so far as A. C. C. A. is concerned are less specific than those of the State associations because of the many subsidiary activities performed by A. C. C. A. at varying fees and because of the practice of deducting certain incomes from expenses before arriving at the final per-bale operating-expense figure. The system of pooling State assembling expenses, not including the "cost" of the cotton, was discussed at some length with the Board members. In a letter of January 8, 1936, to the general manager of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, we outlined the reactions of the directors on the question of State associations receiving the direct benefit of savings made in their operations. Our explanation of the way the matter was handled and the reactions of the directors are given in the following quotation from that letter:

"It is our understanding that the basis allowed various State associations is lower or higher, based partially on the possibilities of low or high operating expenses in that State. If A. C. C. A.

is sure that the State will have a low operating expense, the State gets a higher basis as compared with other associations. If that association operates below the budget, it does not get the direct benefit of the amount saved except as that amount influences the expenses of the group as a whole. The same is true of associations operating above their budgets; they receive a low basis, but are not charged directly with their expenses, which may be in excess of the budget."

With this background the following question was asked:

"Should State and regional associations receive the direct benefit of savings made in their operations? Yes ( ), No ( )."

The answers given by the directors of 9 associations to this question were quite conclusive. Of the 62 interviewed, 54 directors, or 87 percent of the total, felt that each association should receive the direct benefit of savings made in its operations. Only 2 directors out of the 56 who answered the question "yes" or "no" felt that the association should not get the direct benefit of savings made in its operations. Six directors gave no answer to the question.

The supplementary remarks made by quite a large number of directors of the State associations to this question indicate very clearly that they believe that savings should be passed on directly to their association if its management is to have the proper incentive to operate economically. They, for the most part, believe that unless the State associations were charged directly with the amount of operating expense above the budget, or if they did not receive the direct benefit of savings, that managers and employees would tend to be somewhat more extravagant in the expenditure of money than if the opposite were true. The majority of the managers who were interviewed on this same subject had more or less the same feeling as the directors. Some of the typical remarks made by directors to this question may be of interest.

1. "Yes. It will be an incentive to keep down expenses. There is a tendency to use the full budget if it is available. Just like Government appropriations."

2. "Yes. The other way tends toward extravagance. If I were running an association and knew that economy meant nothing to my association, I would tend to be extravagant."

3. "Yes. The State associations should bear the losses also. If the stock is ever paid out, the State association can stand to suffer."

4. "Yes. It is an incentive to save. Dangerous not to give State benefit of better management."

A system of pooling State assembling expense, not including the "cost" of the cotton, is open to serious question, not because of the theory upon which it operates but because of the practical results. Because assembling State association expenses are decidedly unequal in many respects, we believe that a system should be devised whereby those having low operating expenses would benefit directly by their economies and efficiencies, and those having high operating expenses should bear the full burden of the excess. It may be argued that expenses depend on volume, and volume depends on the basis which A. C. C. A. gives the State association. We are, however, assuming that A. C. C. A. will grant no special favors to State associations in order to increase their volume, and that the only reason for raising or lowering the basis in any particular State would be a change in the demand conditions in the cotton market or prospects of lower or higher expenses so far as the State association is concerned. If the basis is raised in one State above where it should be, it must necessarily be at the expense of other associations.

We are of the opinion that the State associations cannot be properly impressed with the necessity of keeping operating expenses low unless they get the direct benefit of savings, and are, on the other hand, charged with the amount of the expenses above the budget.

Due to the fact that the A. C. C. A. has operated at a loss for two successive seasons and has paid a cash patronage dividend only 1 year in the past 6, it is believed that the officials of that association should analyze every operation, every department, and the duties of every employee in order to cut expenses to the minimum.

In some ways A. C. C. A. has been handicapped because of the handling of Government cotton. It is true that the incomes from these sources have meant a great deal to the cotton cooperatives; on the other hand, the great volume of business brought on by the handling of Government business necessitated the building up of a large administrative and operating staff which it is difficult to adjust to a strictly cooperative operation.

Another large item of expense both in time and money is the political and public relations activities of A. C. C. A. It is true that some expenditures along this line are necessary because of existing conditions. If the existence of the organization is threatened, a defense is necessary in order to maintain the organization intact. On the other hand, the attacked association should analyze its operations from the grower to the mill with a cooperative yardstick to see whether adjustments cannot be made to prevent further attack and to bring the operation around to the point where it will unquestionably be a cooperative organization by farmers, operated for their mutual benefit. A cutting down of amount of political activity will release the time of officials for their regular duties and obviate the excessive travel and other expense which has been incurred in the past.

Furthermore, the cotton cooperatives are not financially able to fight the agricultural battles of the South single-handed.

"PROFITS" ON COTTON

Sixty-six percent or two-thirds of the board members interviewed did not believe that profits and losses on cotton should be pooled among all State associations. In other words, they believed that each association should stand on its own with regard to profits and losses. Twenty-five percent indicated that profits and losses on cotton should be pooled. One director answered "yes" and "no" and five directors did not attempt to answer the question. In the supplementary remarks which these men made they indicated rather clearly that each association should stand on its own and be willing to stand the losses and take the profits. We are in agreement with this opinion.

We believe, furthermore, that complete records should be maintained as to the cost of cotton delivered to each State or regional association as well as the price for which this cotton is ultimately sold, and that A. C. C. A. should furnish each association with a copy of this record. To our knowledge, this has not been done in the past except where a State association is rather closely in touch with its sales program, as is the case in Georgia. The success or failure of the operations of each State association cannot be determined otherwise. Some changes in accounting procedure may be necessary, but we believe that the State associations are justified in requesting that the cotton of each association be kept separately so far as profits and losses are concerned.

WOMAN'S ADMINISTRATIVE WORK RECOGNIZED—ADDRESS BY SENATOR GUFFEY

Mrs. CARAWAY. Mr. President, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] delivered a radio broadcast which I think is of very great interest, and I should like to have it published in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The magnificent work being done by the women of America in the great task of restoration and rebuilding now going forward under the wise supervision of President Roosevelt is one of the outstanding features of public life today.

The position of women in public affairs now is accepted. The fierce controversy over equal suffrage which waxed intense and bitter less than 20 years ago is all but forgotten today. Exaggeration and hysteria played a prominent part in the suffrage discussion, and, as we look back, it seems amusing to recall the predictions of disaster made by the opponents who recoiled with horror from the very idea of giving American women the right to cast a ballot in a free election.

All that nonsense about destroying the fundamentals of American Government was relegated to the past just as soon as the nineteenth amendment became operative when Tennessee became the thirty-sixth ratifying State in 1920 and woman suffrage became a fact.

The feminine part of our constituency took its new duties in deadly earnestness, and from the start it became apparent that the granting of the vote to women was going to have a wholesome influence upon public life and upon the course of public events.

Although women were accorded the privilege of the franchise many years ago, it may be said with honesty that they played only an indirect part in national affairs before the advent of the present administration. President Woodrow Wilson, during the brief period between the adoption of the nineteenth amendment and the end of his administration, began to set the custom for recognition of women in public affairs and in important official posts. This Wilson recognition was followed more or less grudgingly during the Republican administrations, and it may be significantly noted that few women were given positions of trust and responsibility under the Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover administrations.

Under President Roosevelt, women have come of age politically in the United States. Our Democratic President has appointed women to the highest official positions because he has found them capable, efficient, loyal, and competent. Women no longer are regarded as a class or group to be pampered in election year and then forgotten until another election year rolls around. Their recognition is permanent.

One of the results of the attitude of President Roosevelt toward women has been to make the liberal-minded women in America recognize that the President not only talks equal opportunity, but makes it a realization as well. Every women wishing to end sweatshop labor, to abolish child labor, to give men and women decent living wages and adequate housing in wholesome surroundings, naturally will ally herself with the President's ambitions.

The women followers of President Roosevelt are those who work to ameliorate the conditions of the less fortunate in life, who believe in progressive and humanitarian legislation, and who feel that the Constitution is broad enough to encompass the changing needs and demands of the present day for welfare legislation. It can be truthfully said that there is hardly a department of the Government which has not been quickened and improved under the Roosevelt administration by the excellent women whom the President has appointed to fill important posts—posts which have not been filled by women in previous administrations.

In selecting those whom he wanted to assist him in his great humanitarian work, President Roosevelt thought first and only of the individual's fitness for a particular job or post. Under such a system, it was inevitable that a large number of women should be chosen for responsible positions and that they should occupy official places undreamed of a decade ago.

The President has a habit of practicing democracy as well as preaching it. Today, every woman in the land can feel proud of the magnificent records made by women in executive and administrative positions under the Roosevelt administration. No longer is heard that old canard that women are unfitted for the exacting duties of public life. Those holding high positions in the present administration are distinguished by their tact, ability, and efficiency.

Paraphrasing the plank which certain women's organizations are advocating, it may be said that the Nation now recognizes that woman is an effective unit in American life, and that any policy which prevents her full contribution to society is to be deplored.

Miss Frances Perkins, the first woman ever to serve as a full-fledged Cabinet member, has made an enviable record as Secretary of Labor. It is significant that under Miss Perkins, industrial disturbances have been notably few in one of the most trying periods in the Nation's history.

In the field of diplomacy, the record made by Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen speaks for itself. Her pleasing personality and graciousness, and the skill and understanding which she has given to the post of Minister to Denmark, makes it certain that the field of diplomacy may no longer be regarded as the exclusive meeting ground of men.

The ability of women to deal capably with economic affairs of the Nation has been clearly demonstrated by Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, the first woman Director of the Mint. Elected to the Governorship of Wyoming upon the death of her husband, thereby becoming the first woman to serve as a State executive, Mrs. Ross has given years of valuable service to her State and to the Nation.

In the new Social Security Board, in which all women are vitally interested, Miss Jane Hoey has been made director of the board of public assistance, and under her are many other able women assistants throughout the country.

The people themselves have recognized the value of women in public affairs by electing or having appointed Mrs. HATTIE W. CARAWAY, of Arkansas, and Mrs. ROSE MCCONNELL LONG, of Louisiana, both Democrats, to the United States Senate. Each succeeded her deceased husband and has fully demonstrated that woman are competent to deal intelligently with the highest affairs of the Nation.

Six women are making equally distinguished records of service as Members of the House of Representatives, four of them being Democrats.

The women in the Roosevelt administration have done their work so quietly and so well that the Nation has literally forgotten the fact that they are occupying unprecedented positions in Federal affairs. This acceptance of what they have accomplished is the best measure of their success.

It will be recalled that President Wilson set a precedent by naming a woman as a member of the United States Civil Service Commission when he appointed Mrs. Helen H. Gardner.

The Honorable Lucille McMillin now is serving as one of the three Civil Service Commissioners.

For the first time in the history of Civil Service a woman has been appointed district manager, one of the highest posts in the gifts of the Commission. The last semiannual statement of the Civil Service Commission showed 719 women on the rolls of the Commission as compared to 441 men.

In the Commission's office in Washington the position of Assistant Chief of the Clerical Examining Section was recently established, and this position has been given to a young woman who made an extraordinary high rating.

In the professional section of the same division a new position involving the supervising and rating of some of the most important examinations also was filled by a woman.

There are numerous other positions in the Civil Service Commission which recently have been filled by women, such as Chief of the Service Record Section, and Assistant Chief of the Commission's Editing and Recruiting Sections.

Those chosen for these positions are women who have given valuable service to the Commission in the past and who have demonstrated their efficiency and therefore were advanced during the present administration.

For the first time in several years a number of women have been appointed to investigative positions in the Civil Service Commission's Personnel Classification Division.

In the Treasury Department two of the assistants are women—Mrs. Marion Glass Banister and Miss Josephine Roche.

In the Bureau of Narcotics one of the most successful supervisors is Mrs. Elizabeth Bass, who is supervisor of district no. 9, embracing Chicago.

Another woman, the Honorable Isabel O'Neill, of Rhode Island, has been appointed legislative contact official of the Narcotics Commission.

Women hold the position of collector of customs in the following States: Minnesota, Ohio, Iowa, and Utah. Another woman, Mrs. Palmer Jerman, of North Carolina, is the first of her sex to be named assistant collector of internal revenue.

In the Attorney General's Department we find a woman, the Honorable Stella Akin, as a special assistant and with a fine record of achievement.

Mrs. Annette Abbott Adams, appointed by President Wilson, was the first woman to serve in the capacity of Assistant Attorney General.

On the board of appeals of the Veterans' Administration are three women.

In the Government Printing Office Miss Jo Coffin directs the personnel of the world's largest printing establishment.

A number of women have been appointed commissioners of immigration, one of them being located in Seattle, Wash.

The post of Assistant Director of the United States Employment Service is in charge of a woman.

The Chief of the Children's Bureau is a woman.

Mrs. Harriet Root has been appointed Chief of the United States Information Service, and, with an able staff of women assistants, answers thousands of questions regarding all phases of governmental activity that come from every section of the Nation.

Mrs. Jewel W. Swofford, of Missouri, is chairman of the United States Employment Compensation Commission.

Under the Works Progress Administration, equality of women became a fact. Throughout the country equal pay for equal work has been given to half a million women working on W. P. A. projects. Goods projects, educational projects, clerical projects, research projects, are all being most ably directed by women.

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of Mississippi, has the important job of directing all the women's Works Progress Administration work, and she is conversant with every phase of the work in each of the 8 regions and with every phase of the work in the 48 States. Her subordinates all are women. Any person visiting the women's Works Progress Administration display at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington recently would never dare to go before the country and say a magnificent job is not being done for the unemployed women.

Under the present administration, the important position of private secretary to the Secretary of State was filled by the appointment of Miss Will Harris, who has had long secretarial experience under Secretary of State Cordell Hull since he was a Member of Congress.

In the Post Office Department more women have been appointed to important postmasterships than in any other administration. Among the first-class offices in which women serve as postmasters are those of Portland, Maine, and Oakland, Calif.

Up to September 1935 a total of 1,895 women had been appointed postmasters at Presidential offices, and 3,950 women had been appointed as postmasters in offices of the fourth class.

In the Department of the Interior four offices previously filled by men now are being admirably conducted by women. Mrs. Antoinette Funk serves as Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office; Mrs. Jessie M. Gardner, register of the land office in Denver; Miss Inez Yturri, private secretary to the First Assistant Secretary, and Miss Julie E. Andre, Chief of the Division of Distribution of the Geological Survey.

Dr. Sophie D. Aberle has been made general superintendent of the United States Indian Agency in New Mexico. The agencies in this area formerly were supervised by men.

Under the Public Works Administration three important positions which ordinarily would be filled by men are being held by Mrs. Leona Graham, executive assistant to the Administrator; Miss Elizabeth Rountree, counsel for the legal division of North Carolina, and Miss Louise McCarthy, chief counsel of the legal division of Pennsylvania.

In the Department of Commerce there is a long list of women who have been appointed to positions previously held by men. Among these are the secretary to the Secretary of Commerce, chief clerk of the Bureau of Fisheries, private secretary to the Director of the Bureau of Navigation, and the assistant examiner of trade marks and designs in the Patent Office.

In the Census Bureau the assistant to the Director and three junior administrative assistants are women.

In the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce the assistant economic analyst and the business assistant both are women.

The director of the division for press intelligence of the Government in Washington is a woman.

Some of the ablest work in the National Recovery Administration while it was in force was done by women who headed the Women's Division—the late Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey and Mrs. Emily Newell Blair.

Out in Hawaii a woman, the Honorable Carrick Buck, now sits as judge of the circuit court and is making a splendid reputation on the bench.

Three women now are serving as commissioners of immigration—two in this country and one in Puerto Rico.

The first woman to hold the position as Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office was named under the present administration.

The second woman to be a register of the General Land Office holds that position in Denver.

In Minnesota a woman has held the post of State director of the National Emergency Council and made a great success.

In South Carolina there is a woman register of the Federal Land Bank of Columbia, who is administering her job in a highly satisfactory manner.

In the Department of Agriculture four women hold high positions. They are Mrs. Mary Connor Myers, attorney on the staff of the Solicitor; Dr. Day Monroe, Chief of the Economics Division of the Bureau of Home Economics; and Miss Helen S. Holbrook, engaged in household-equipment work in the Bureau of Home Economics.

In the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, operated under the Department of Agriculture, there are 20 women holding responsible and well-paid positions.

It is to be recalled that, under the Roosevelt administration, a treaty with all of the South American countries has been ratified, stipulating that there shall be no distinction based on sex as regards nationality in their legislation or in their practice.

I could continue this list almost ad infinitum, but sufficient proof has been given that this administration fully recognized the right of women to serve their country through public office; and when wider recognition, if possible, is given to women by any political party, I vouch that the recognition will be given by the Democratic Party.

There is one fact in connection with the presence of women in the Federal Government which should be emphasized. This is the humanizing influence they have had in helping to shape the policies of this country in the midst of the troubles and trials and difficulties which have beset the American people during the last few years.

The outstanding characteristic of the Roosevelt administration is its human approach to the problems of government. From the day he assumed office, President Roosevelt has reiterated time and again his intention to place human rights and human needs above all other considerations. He has kept his promise. In considering this fact it is impressive to note the loyal manner in which the women executives of the Government have stood by and the way they have cooperated wholeheartedly in carrying out that policy.

Every fair-minded citizen should be willing to concede that the humanizing influence of women in Federal affairs has been a fine thing for the country, especially when considering the harmful results that might have followed the adoption of harsh policies toward the unemployed or toward the laboring and farm population.

Those who were most active in behalf of the adoption of the nineteenth amendment to give women suffrage now can point with pride to the fact that women have taken their rightful place in public life and have clearly demonstrated that they are capable of bearing the burden they so gladly assumed.

No tribute to woman would be complete without taking recognition of the great charm, fine intelligence, and deep loyalty to the interests of the country of the helpmate of our great President. Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt holds no official position other than wife of the President, but she is held in the highest esteem by the Nation at large.

President Roosevelt, as leader of his party, has shown his faith in the ability of women to hold public office.

It is to be hoped that the Democratic Governors of the 37 States will follow the example of the President and appoint more women to high offices of public trust and responsibility. It will be a better day for America when women have as large a part in shaping the policies between nations as they now are beginning to have in shaping the domestic policies of the Nation. When this comes about, the result will be beneficial to the whole world in the struggle for justice and equality to all.

"When greater perils men environ,
Then women show a front of iron;
And, gentle in their manner, they Do bold things in a quiet way."

ADDRESS BY SENATOR BARBOUR AT WOMAN'S NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CLUB, NEW YORK

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the speech delivered by the senior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] on May 25 at the Women's National Republican Club in New York City.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Once again the Supreme Court cautions the New Deal to stop its reckless driving. Once again the present administration stands convicted of "hit and run" tactics in government, and the victim in this, as in former cases, is the American principle of orderly governmental progress.

The New Deal has been impatient of any delay as it has roared toward the goal of any particular moment. Constitutional red lights have meant nothing to it. Wide open, it has rocketed down the highways, leaving in its wake the mangled remains of governmental and political integrity.

It is not hard to reach your destination quickly if you disobey the rules and if you give no thought to the rights and privileges of your fellow travelers. If the United States stands for one principle above all others, it is for progress within the law; for playing the game according to the rules. That is why, up to now, we have never been troubled with dictators, whose policy is always to take the law into their own hands whenever it stands in the way of the whim of the moment.

Most of the agencies by which the New Deal has sought to create utopia overnight now have a place only among the archives. They extinguished themselves either by reason of their unconstitutionality or their inherent weakness.

The twin pillars of the New Deal structure were N. R. A. and A. A. A. N. R. A. was to take industry out of the trenches by Christmas 1933. It failed of its purpose. A. A. A. was erected to remedy certain alleged architectural mistakes of the Creator. It proved to be no remedy at all when drought appeared. Both of these agencies were very rickety when the Supreme Court banished them as unconstitutional.

These two instrumentalities were aimed more at reform than recovery. They were to replace traditional methods of industry and agriculture with a new concept. An agency also aimed at reform is the Resettlement Administration, which was expected to change the face of America. Lands now under production were to be turned into parks and areas now barren were to be converted into farm lands. Likewise, under the magic wand of R. A., communities would spring up overnight and people were to be taken from where they lived and placed where the Government thought they ought to live.

R. A. was established by Executive order without any congressional direction. So many rumors of inefficiency and waste in R. A. came to me that I introduced a Senate resolution to secure an accounting of its stewardship. After preliminary New Deal opposition I secured the passage of this resolution and Administrator Tugwell furnished a report in pursuance thereto.

R. A. has suffered a set-back in a court inferior only to the Supreme Court. Simultaneously its funds are running out, even though not one of its projects has been completed. There is a good deal of evidence that it will be allowed to die a natural death.

In relief activities the New Deal frog has jumped from one lilypad to another. It has leaped from R. F. C. to C. W. A., to P. W. A., to F. E. R. A., and finally to W. P. A., with one or two side excursions to little pads too feeble to bear its weight long.

Thus, the present administration has abandoned one after another of its utopian schemes.

The New Deal structure is crumbling from within. All the battering rams of its opponents can hardly be more effective than the erosion taking place within its own walls.

Moreover, nothing new is being offered to supplant that which has disappeared. All its missiles sent up against the enemy, depression, have been proved "duds", and the New Deal is now reduced to mouthing pretty phrases over the air. The present administration has tried and failed to reshape this country by a mass production of laws, orders, and decrees, in disregard of our fundamental American principles. All that this has shown is that the checks and balances which our forefathers so carefully wove into our American pattern of government have stood the test in the hours of darkness and despair, when men are apt to lose their reason and do wild and incalculable things.

I look upon our Constitution as the absolute declaration of our governmental powers and limitations. I do not think, however, that any Republican who is active and thoughtful believes that it should not be amended as provided for in the Constitution itself, if and when the people wish it amended. Republicans are just as aware as are New Dealers that changing times may require changing methods and viewpoints. Certainly the country's experience with the eighteenth amendment bears witness to this. It proves this contention.

While Republicans do not believe that the Constitution is so accordion-pleated that its original form must necessarily encompass all future contingencies, they certainly do not believe that the public interest is served by openly flouting it at any time as the New Dealers have been doing.

Republicans believe in orderly progress. They believe, as I am sure all the members of the Supreme Court do, that if the Constitution needs amendment it should be amended. But never should it be circumvented, disobeyed, or violated.

Certainly, by the same token, we can never afford to so disarm this guardian of our liberties, as to jeopardize our essential American form of government or to permit the intrusion of nostrums and panaceas which have been at the core of most New Deal legislation. If and when the need is shown, in order to preserve and advance the gains we have made under our American form of government, let us not fear at any time to suggest the amending of the Constitution, openly, forthrightly, and without delay.

Our country has its choice of three directions in which it may move. There are only three, names and disguises to the contrary.

We could centralize all governmental activities and so proceed through inevitable regulation and ultimate absorption of all private enterprise, all personal initiative, to a dictatorship which would command every last one of us how to live, how to work, when to play, and whom to worship.

We could choose a leveling process through the insistence of uniformity—not equality—whereby all people would be reduced to the status of a herd—all buck privates, no officers. Under such a system, the weakest link governs the chain—the slowest makes the pace—the stupidest sets the standards. With all attempts at individual initiative and genius and thrift squelched, such a collective society runs along in a sort of second gear, then in slow, and finally, in reverse. This is theoretical communism, the type of government which Russia tried to be and, failing, became a dictatorship.

Or else we can continue with our admittedly complicated but only apparently cumbersome Government, with its multitudes of checks and balances, placed there for a definite purpose. It has proved, when allowed to function, to be the world's finest example of true democracy. In the company of nations we can well afford to hold our heads high. Our form of government is as nearly perfect as government can be. But we must not cheat. We must stick to the rules.

Which should we pursue? Americans are unused to being browbeaten into accepting without question someone else's dogmatic directions. But do they know they are being browbeaten today? They will, I am sure, once aroused to the truth, reject any suspicion of dictatorship.

Neither do Americans have the herd instinct, though at times it seems they fail to notice that the piper is in reality trying to lead them into a corral. Fundamentally, anyway, they are pioneers—individuals—banding only for common defense and common uplift. Any attempt to level and lump them and treat them like guinea pigs in a laboratory will never find favor in their eyes, unless they are individuals no longer, and that indeed cannot be so.

There is left, therefore, as I see it, only our truly American form of government. The American has individual liberty, or at least he always did have it heretofore. He pays for that liberty by his individual responsibility, by the necessity of making his way in some degree alone in the world, forging ahead on his own initiative, competing every inch of the way. He cannot keep his liberty, however, unless he is willing to assume his responsibilities and face his own troubles and try to overcome them himself. I feel that true Americans are perfectly willing to undertake this way of living, because without it their individual freedom would disappear. As soon as a man gives up and says, "I shall be content with a mediocre existence regulated for me in Washington, provided I am kept safe and secure for the time being by my Government. He delivers himself into the hands of his masters. He becomes, in a true sense, a slave. He has always been a free man in America and willing to pay the price of his freedom. Is he no longer willing to do so? I say he is.

The coming campaign is surcharged with elements potentially revolutionary, both to the country and to the Republican Party and to the party system itself. Our accepted American form of government is being more seriously questioned than ever before, more seriously threatened than we realize. The Constitution is no longer a sacred bulwark against the waves of opportunism, or the impractical inexperienced politician, or the social and economic theories of individuals who happen to be in power at any particular moment. The two-party system is threatened with destruction. The Republican Party faces its severest test in its history—its greatest responsibility—its greatest chance.

Remember, however, all forward movements have been liberating movements. They alone increased the freedom of individuals. They have been in the truest sense of the word "liberal." Now, today, I fear, liberalism is being confused with radicalism, fascism, socialism, communism, and many other "isms" which actually curb the freedom of the individual and are not "liberal."

Liberalism, too, is a relative term. It relates principally to the time and to the then-current conditions. The Magna Carta was a liberal document in the time of King John. It guaranteed the freedom of the individual. It climaxed many centuries of public suffering and royal tyranny.

Our own great Constitution is a liberal, liberalizing document. It further increased the scope of personal freedom for a portion of that people who had been liberated by the Magna Carta; and the Constitution and the Bill of Rights did not come into being as the stratagem of a political campaign. It, too, was the result of years of suffering and oppression.

The New Deal has somehow sold a portion of our population the idea that it is a liberal philosophy. It is not that at all. It is hard to say quite what it is, but its principal manifestation is a sugar-coated, but really selfish, centralization of the control of all Federal powers in the hands of the Executive and administered through his bureaus, his commissions, and his patronage, and his politicians. This is distinctly antiliberal.

The moment that any people thus allow the control of their local affairs, their private affairs, to be taken from their hands and placed in those of someone hundreds of miles away, at some seat of almost sovereign power, that moment they surrender a portion of their hard-won freedom.

In justification of such concentration of all power in Washington the New Deal offers the excuse of the emergency and the depression. That is neither true nor courageous. The New Deal really is proceeding quite obviously, it seems to me, toward a studied restriction of individual freedom and is using emergency and expediency as a springboard, striving to change the institutions of government itself under cover of temporary necessity.

There are two counts, among many others, upon which we may particularly indict the New Deal. They are taxes and relief.

Taxes are as necessary as medicine and as bitter to take. They are the citizens' return for the benefits received from the Government. However, taxes are supposed to bear an immediate relationship to the costs of government, and the citizen is supposed to be getting what he is paying for.

The New Deal, however, has made of the taxing power a weapon with which it can smite its particular enemies and arm those in the vanguard of the fight for the moment to achieve a new kind of America. No longer do taxes bear any relation to governmental expenditures. They are to be used punitively by the New Deal for the purpose of "soaking the thrifty", of leveling off the Nation's wealth, and for other disguises, and now boldly to thrust the Government into private enterprise.

We already have instances, under recent banking legislation, where the United States Government in effect sits in at stockholders' or directors' meetings as a preferred-stock holder. In the new tax legislation we find the Government penalizing corporations for accumulating that part of the capital structure known as surpluses. With businesses, particularly small concerns, weakened by their inability to preserve that part of their capital in evil times and to expand it in good, the bulk of the private enterprises in America will from time to time inevitably have to be coming, cup in hand, to the Federal Government for relief. If this administration is in office when that time comes you may be sure that it will offer relief on its own terms. Those terms will be nothing less than an active and constant partnership of individual enterprise and the Federal bureaus and commissions. And I leave it to you to guess who will finally control the whole situation.

Whoever tries calmly and logically to discuss the relief question must trudge waist deep through a swamp of maudlin sentimentality. It is really unnecessary, of course, to have to state that no one wants the unemployed to go hungry or without shelter or medical care. Yet if you so much as hold up an admonishing finger to those conducting the present slipshod spoils system of Federal relief, you are branded as a monster who would see people starve and freeze to death.

The overcentralization of relief in the huge, constantly growing bureaus of the Federal Government has torn up by the roots the old policies of local and individual responsibility for the unemployed and implanted in the public consciousness a belief that Uncle Sam will take care of everyone forever on the occasion of no matter what set-back, and by some wizardry, do it without playing politics.

The American pocketbook will undoubtedly loom up as the biggest factor in the coming national political campaign. No matter what form the New Deal has taken in its kaleidoscopic gyrations, the one continuous effect has been to deplete the contents of that pocketbook. There never has been a more costly administration than the present one. The new dealers need have courage to ask the possessors of these depleted purses for another 4-year chance to make further inroads.

Finally guard yourself against propaganda—it will be legion. It will be as never before witnessed in the history of the United States.

ADDRESS BY SENATOR DAVIS BEFORE VERHOVAY FRATERNAL INSURANCE SOCIETY

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, it was my privilege and pleasure to address the golden jubilee dinner of the Verhovay Fraternal Insurance Society at Pittsburgh last night. Like everything else in America, this organization had a small beginning. It was originally organized in Hazleton, Luzerne County, Pa., 50 years ago by a few Hungarian miners who came to the United States to work in the mines, and lived in a lowly boarding house of the time. By thrift, industry, and intelligence the society has grown to be, numerically and financially, one of the strongest institutions organized in the United States by citizens of foreign birth. The Hungarians are great believers in the American Republic and its representative government. They are good, faithful, loyal American citizens, as are also their sons and daughters, many of whom have attained honor and distinction in the business, professional, and scientific fields of our country.

They are intensely interested in America and have great hopes that the future will bring justice to the Hungarian people and their land, for which they retain an affection. These folk are genuine Americans, loyal to the flag, and the great institutions it represents.

The speech, Mr. President, was delivered before a large and distinguished gathering last night at the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburgh, and I now ask unanimous consent to have it printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I am happy to be here with you at this time. How fortunate all of us are that we are permitted to meet as fraternalists together. Many of us have come from other lands. I am sure that none of us claim to have come over in the Mayflower. It matters not what boat brought any of us here. The thing to remember is that we are now all aboard the great ship of freedom which we call America.

We came here to improve our conditions. When we came we brought with us knowledge of skills and technical aptitudes which have helped to make this country strong. There was much in the lands which we left for which we have true and natural affection. But we came here because of the opportunities of the average man in American farms, mills, mines, and factories. At the time we came there was a great demand for workers, and American agents had been sent abroad to recruit labor for American agriculture and industry. Immigrants poured in by the millions. They added color and strength to American life. Now the need for labor has been replaced by the need for employment. Therefore, it has been necessary to change the immigration policy of this country so that the millions of unemployed now within our borders may have the right to work.

The United States has ever been regarded as a refuge for the persecuted of other lands, and we have sheltered thousands of men and women who found Old World customs oppressive to them. Fraternal societies are not permitted in many parts of the world. How fortunate we are that we may enjoy freedom of speech and the guiding of individual conscience in this great land of our adoption. While we have a policy of restricted immigration, I trust that those who come under this policy will be the noble men and women whose ideals of democracy, constitutional government, and productive genius naturally draw them to this land. Under the limitations of immigration now in effect, we may expect that those who come to us will bring with them those things necessary to help give employment to the unemployed.

I remember when my mother landed with her six children at Castle Garden. Following her usual custom, she walked down the middle of the street when she came to lower Broadway. Looking up at the great buildings, she said, "I am sure that this is the place for my children." And what a great place it has been. Our folks hitched their wagon to a star, and that star was America—the land of endless opportunity. The American heritage of freedom which was transferred to us we desire to pass on to generations yet unborn.

America has always been a nation of volunteers. From first to last our great heroes and those who have made the Nation prosperous have been volunteers. Columbus, Washington, Franklin, Jefferson, Jackson, and Lincoln were all volunteers. Those who organized this Government and those who have defended it were volunteers. The great organizations within this country—the churches, fraternal societies, educational institutions, insurance companies, business firms—all have been free and voluntary. Freedom has been the watchword of our country and local liberty a dominant characteristic. This voluntary spirit has been the basis of our prosperity and success. Without it we have no assurance that our Nation can endure.

The representative principle is the very heart of American democracy. The only way it can endure is for citizens to have some personal knowledge of the people chosen to represent them. Centralization in government carries with it extreme dangers and, if ever justified, is useful only for a limited period of time during the stress of an emergency. Our present problems are now long-term considerations, which can be settled only as local initiative and strength are directed to the task. Centralization in government at the expense of local sources of strength endangers the very life of our people. We need a revival of the spirit of the American volunteer and the contagious influence of American youth. America and youth are synonymous. Without the spirit of youth America would no longer be America.

When is a man old? When he lives in the past and when he no longer looks to the future. When is a nation old? When it rests upon its past achievements, curtails its production, ceases to expand, and begins to talk about its last will and testament. The great issue before the American people today concerns the spirit of our youth. A strange situation confronts us. We have thousands of men and women, well along in years, still active and energetic in labor and industry, who possess the spirit of eternal youth while we witness the so-called young men in Washington who act as though the American people were oppressed by old age.

Today we need to experience the lasting spirit of hope and enthusiasm which is the youthful heart of our Nation. We are proud of the great achievements of our Nation's past, but great accomplishments lie before us. The challenge of the future calls to us. We are not old, but we are in the prime of our youth. We are advancing from adolescence into our young manhood, but beware the man, young in years, old in spirit, who tells you that America has one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peeling.

We must now decide whether we are to keep the marvelous, active, invincible spirit of American youth whereby we shall command the best things of life for ourselves and our children or, confessing failure, retreat down the road of national senility and old age. There is no standing still. We shall move up to a higher level of achievement or we shall retrograde. We are either the victims of our environment or the masters of our high destinies. The decision rests with the American people. We are learning that there is an immortal principle of health and success in us which if we will but utilize can be applied to heal our wounds and furnish a balm for the hurts of mankind. The outworn philosophy of materialism still rises up to oppress us. Only a return to the principle of spiritual power can bring prosperity to this Nation.

But now we have poverty amid abundance and an economic philosophy of scarcity which is a national disgrace. This is the tragedy of the present hour. We have been pouring out Government money by the billions on work projects of questionable and only temporary value, while we have denied our people the right to work at substantial tasks which will prove a boon to future generations. Our people are set to the task of harnessing the moon by controlling the ocean tides at Passamaquoddy—"moondoggling"—while permanent measures for flood control are tied up in legislative red tape so as to defeat them.

Although in some districts the prevailing scale of wages is paid for work relief, the Works Progress Administration has set a new low in American wages. Labor in this country has persistently championed a program of higher wages. Now, with the endorsement of the National Government upon it, the wage scale is set up which penalizes skilled labor and enables unscrupulous employers to beat down the wage scales of private industry. Nothing can be more certain than that a Government scale of low wages will set a standard for low wages everywhere, and when the wages are low the purchasing power of the Nation declines and industry suffers. At the present time, with commodity prices going up steadily, the income of the worker greatly curtailed, and with one-fifth of the workers reported idle, we are facing economic old age and national suicide. This is a disgrace to the American spirit of youth and will not be tolerated while the red blood runs in our veins.

The idea of overproduction is a cruel myth. We do not have too much of bread, milk, meat, shoes, or any other of the common necessities of life. The average man does not have enough. An ordinary family should have 3 quarts of milk a day. Most families are fortunate if they get a quart and many cannot have even a pint unless it is given to them. And yet, under a policy of curtailed production, milk is dumped in the creeks. Our real problem is that of consumption based on the lack of purchasing power.

The forward steps of industry must come out of the increased purchasing power of the workers. It has never come any other way. The wage scales in this country will determine whether we are to keep the American spirit of youth. Real wages—the purchasing power of labor in terms of goods—more than doubled between 1900 and 1932. Higher wages have been made possible by greater production. Wage and salary earners received 67 percent of the national income of 1934. However, a 75-percent increase in the 1929 level of production and consumption will be necessary to provide reasonable standards of living for every family in the United States. There is still plenty for both men and machines to do.

If we pay out our money in taxes, there will inevitably be less to pay in wages. Money paid in taxes goes to the nonproductive enterprises of the Government. Money paid in wages goes into the productive enterprises of industry. Are we going to choose the road of more taxes and more government or higher wages and expanding industry? American youth must answer this problem.

Those who have come from other countries realize better than anyone else the glorious possibilities of the American way of life. They understand the loss of privilege which comes under the regimentation of a dominant bureaucracy operating an all-powerful State.

Those who urge these plans for our country justify their position by reference to other lands. They make the mistake of assuming that the conditions of life in the United States are similar to conditions in those countries. Nothing could be further from the truth. The millions of oppressed throughout the world, seeking liberty, have come here because America is different, because America is a land of youth and endless opportunity. Take away this freedom of opportunity and you take away America.

Consider the circumstances of our American life. Economically we have potential abundance; geographically we have 48 States and outlying possessions; much larger and more highly differentiated than all of Europe; politically we have a well-accepted and successful multiple-party system; religiously we stand for a free church in a free state; and educationally we have developed the greatest educational system in the world on the basis of local-control boards. Now, there come those who have closed their eyes to all this and they urge us to abandon it in favor of Old World ideals of life which flourish through dictatorship; suppression of freedom of speech, press, and assembly; standardized national systems of education; and military discipline of civilian populations. No one understands the futility of such a program for America better than those who have voluntarily chosen this as the beloved land of their adoption.

Let us see what a planned economy for the United States would mean. In the first place, it would demand a complete centralization in Washington. The plans would be made at the top by Government experts who would blue print the activities of 126,000,000 people formerly accustomed to American liberty. We know that 126,000,000 people can maintain an effective government, but certainly no government, without resorting to regimentation, can actuate and guide 126,000,000 people. Under regimentation the policy of plowing under the cotton, killing the pigs, cutting down the wheat acreage would be applied on a national scale to the making of automobiles, shoes, hats, clothing, canned goods, and other manufactured necessities. Governmental sanction from Washington experts would be necessary before any important step in business could be undertaken and specialists in business administration from the great universities of the country would read out of Government textbooks the programs which businessmen and workers are to follow.

A planned economy means regimentation because there is no use in having a national plan unless you execute it, and the only way to enforce it is to regiment society. American citizens of foreign extraction need to be told nothing about this because they left the regimentation of other lands in order that they might enjoy the freedom of this land. They know how it is done.

The primary institution of society is the home, and there it is that regimentation in an all powerful State must have its way or fail. The father is regimented economically in his business. The mother is regimented in her social status and domestic duties. The children are brought up to join junior clubs of national societies, and all are required to meet accepted formulas of thought and action. Independence is not tolerated. The duty of everyone is to conform to the plan produced by those at the top of the social pyramid.

Those who would change the American Government look to the 5,000,000 unemployed young men and women in this country who during the last 3 years have grown to working age, only to be refused their right to work. These young people are rightly disgusted at their enforced inactivity. Many of them stand ready to follow anyone who will promise them something which seems better than they now have. They are restless and crave action. These young people need our most sympathetic and careful consideration. Only two out of five young persons from 18 to 25 years of age in our country are economically productive. The major part of this group, or 60 percent, are either unemployed or within the home.

Political adventurers make their appeal to our unemployed youth and make golden promises which point to a pot of gold at the foot of some far distant rainbow. These pretty promises appear attractive to theoretical and immature minds which lack the human experience necessary to understand what the ultimate effects of these impractical policies would be. But I would ask the youth of America to retain its youth. If our young people are really young and robust in spirit, they will not be satisfied to listen to idle promises of a far-away Utopia. They will demand the right to work and the benefits of American liberty. I ask every young person to whom my words shall come to hold fast to the American way of life, which is the only guarantee which they have of obtaining those things which they have a right to expect.

Inexperienced men, with the self-placed halo of "social pioneers" upon their heads, have used the money of other people to experiment with the National Government. These "social pioneers" have increased the public debt by ten thousand million dollars, tripled our taxes, violated the Constitution, kept millions from private employment, debauched the civil service, used the administration of relief for partisan political purposes, and have attempted to regiment a free people. Let us be governed by the wisdom of Alexander Hamilton, who said: "The accumulation of all powers—legislative, executive, and judiciary—in the same hands, whether of one, a few, or many, and whether hereditary, self-appointed, or elected, may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny."

A charter of liberty, such as the Constitution of the United States, is especially precious to minority groups. Majorities find their strength in their own numbers; minorities require protection. Liberty for oppressed minorities, equal right under law, and religious liberty have been preserved in this country under the Constitution. At a time when fundamental decisions regarding the American way of life and the Constitution of the United States are being made, we may be quite certain that minority groups will stand firm on the only guaranty which they have for their continued existence. The Amercan spirit of youth for them means the right to continue on and to live. Naturally they will lead the way in the present demand for the preservation of our American institutions, whereby their economic, religious, and political security is guaranteed them in the one great land where democracy endures.

Here we are in this country, but 6 percent of the world's population, possessed of more purchasing power than all Europe combined. We have created and now own more than half of the world's wealth. Sixty percent of the world's minerals are extracted in America. Half the communication facilities and nearly half the railways and electrical energy have been developed and are in use here. Seventy-five percent of the world's automobile output comes from our Nation. We consume half of the world's coffee, half of its tin, half of its rubber, one-fourth of its sugar, three-fourths of its silk, one-third of its coal, and two-thirds of its crude petroleum.

We spend more than $3,000,000,000 annually on education which is more than the education bill of all the other nations of the world combined. Sixty-five million life-insurance policies are in effect here. More than half of the farms and urban homes of this country are free of debt. We lead the world in the manufacture and use of cosmetics and beauty aids. No other country has such a large investment in fraternal and public-welfare societies. This is but a brief statement of the vigorous condition of our great Nation. We need to think of it in order that we may throw off the depression complex which has held us down. We need to realize that greater achievements now beckon to us in the future. Seven years of depression have made us hungry for many things which we actually need and has aroused the desire for many other things which we really want. We now need 400,000 new homes to be built every year for the next 10 years in order to bring our national dwelling house standard up to normal, the installation of air-conditioning equipment throughout the Nation in homes and industry, low-priced airplanes for private use, $20,000,000,000 worth of machinery to reequip and modernize our industrial plants, and electric light and power for rural America. Vast quantities of furniture, carpets, radios, and other household equipment are now in demand to maintain the American standard of home life. There are a multitude of things not actually necessary, but none the less desirable, which we would like to have if we could get them—new products, new facilities, new conveniences, and the hundreds of things which we have called luxuries but which the American way of life has seemed to make necessary to progress. Industrial laboratories have given us the radio, the telephone, the airplane, the electric light, the automobile, and the other marvels of our twentieth-century civilization. These laboratories will soon become active again and from them will emerge wonders which will make the machines of today seem as antiquated as the horse and buggy of yesterday. America is young; America is growing; America is as powerful as the matchless spirit of youth which now stirs within her demanding creative and constructive action.

If there is one thing more than another which youth abhors, it is the tattletale. Among young people the sneak who prys into private affairs which are none of his business and then tries to appear important by telling what he had no right to know is put on a par with a sissy. Spying in Government and industry is obnoxious to the spirit of American youth; it is a violation of the American traditions of liberty of speech and privacy of the home which were written into the fourth amendment of our Constitution at a time when the Nation was young. Youth will not tolerate spies and sneaks in industry or government.

I believe that young people of school years have the right to education commensurate with their individual ability. When I was Secretary of Labor I advocated the child-labor amendment because youth should not be deprived of school advantages in its tender years. Young people of working age should not be forced to go to school when they want to go to work any more than young people of school age should be forced to go to work when they want to go to school. I cannot believe that American youth will be contented with a promise of an extension of schoolroom activities when the challenge of the busy world calls to them. Youth has always wanted a greater adventure than a battle with books, valuable as they are. Education can be obtained in workshops as well as in colleges. Often the privileges of school can best be assimilated after a period of practical experience in business. Do not think that you can substitute 4 more years of a schoolroom for a chance to learn in the school of experience at wages. Youth has always created jobs, and youth will create them now.

Youth craves adventure. A generation ago high adventure lured 2,000,000 American boys overseas to fight a European war. Woodrow Wilson, then President of the United States, when he summoned the young men to the carnage of battle said that it would be a war to make the world safe for democracy. Out of that war grew a hatred among the nations of the world such as has never been known before, a peace treaty which held on its pages the promise of an even greater war, a war debt to America which has never been paid but which has fastened the hate of every debtor nation upon us, and a thicket of dictatorships in which the safety of democracy is but something at which to laugh.

The youth of America are intelligent. Ever since the true nature of that war has been revealed to our young people they have joined in a great crusade for peace. They have declared their hatred of war in no uncertain terms; they have affirmed their unwillingness to participate in another European or Asiatic conflict; they have shown that they do not wish to make themselves parties to treaty obligations which would inevitably lead America to war. I credit American youth with this high intelligence. This mountain of war debts, uncanceled and unpaid, will be forever a monument of peace, a fateful memory which shall keep us free from foreign entanglements.

Young America calls to the spirit of liberty which animated the lives of the fathers of our Republic. Youth now requires the same independence which fired the hearts of Washington, Madison, Jefferson, and Franklin. Youth demands economic, political, and religious liberty. Economic liberty for the present generation means the right to work, the right to determine its own financial responsibilities, freedom from tax burdens it does not create, and an opportunity to create new industrial enterprises. Political liberty calls for a return to democratic processes of government, the expression of minority opinions, increased importance of every man's ballot, and release from those who operate in the government without a mandate from the people. Religious liberty asks the right of every man to follow the dictates of his own conscience, toleration of the same right for others, and the use of such opportunities for spiritual development. May the Almighty defend our people from the dominance in government of men who by their words and actions prove true the statement: "A fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." Youth requires liberty. The eyes of all the world are now fixed on America—the one land which, from the very inception of its National Government, was founded on a charter of liberty. Our young men will once again say as did Patrick Henry: "Give me liberty or give me death."

The thinking youth of America will long question the wisdom of bartering away the priceless possessions of our own domestic American market on the counter of reciprocal trade agreements made without the expressed sanctions of the chosen representatives of the American taxpayers. The history of war shows that battleships have always accompanied foreign trade developments. This is no less true of America than of other nations. Let those who desire peace for this country ponder long and well before they ask a continuation of a policy of reciprocal trade agreements which breaks down the American tariff protection and turn our attention to the poverty of foreign markets while the rich fruitage of our own domestic market lies ignored. Youthful men with the spirit of adventure will find "acres of diamonds" in our own backyard.

Meanwhile the propaganda agencies of Old World culture, with its outworn theories of communism and fascism, now made to seem new, direct their activities among the 5,000,000 unemployed of American youth. Again I credit the intelligence of American youth. I judge that there are comparatively few of them who would wish to trade away American liberty for what Professor Tugwell so neatly calls "the industrial discipline" of European regimentation. Communism or fascism have little to offer American youth who have a chance to go to work, and I maintain that we have no right to deny them their inalienable right to work.

When we talk about the right to work, we must consider the question of importing food, clothing, and steel from abroad at a time when American farmers and workers are kept in idleness. Last year over 1,000,000 man hours of labor was denied to American workmen because we imported steel from abroad. That may not seem much of an item to some office clerk in Washington but it represents something intolerable to the factory worker whose children are denied their American birthright of proper food and clothing just as long as this is permitted.

Flood-protection measures of substantial character challenge American youth today. Thinking citizens will not be willing to have gestures of flood relief substituted for flood control. This is a national need. What is done on the headwaters of the upper Ohio in the way of flood control, even though it be nothing more than to hold back 6 feet of water, will bring advantages to those who live on the lower Ohio. The entire Nation will profit and therefore the entire Nation should assume the financial responsibility.

Youth will not unthinkingly accept the increased burden of debt imposed on the Nation as relief burdens are multiplied and the work opportunities of private industry are correspondingly and inevitably decreased because of the appalling tax load.

In Pittsburgh lie buried the master workmen and skilled artisans of other days. Their spirit goes marching on. The challenge of their lives of devotion to the national welfare calls to us today. I rejoice with you that we are permitted to meet in this great industrial city in which they lived and died. Here again in this workshop of the Nation let us renew our allegiance to the ideals of youth and labor to which they gave their all. Here again let us lift up our hearts in praise of this flag which for over 150 years has led the American people to sublime heights of liberty under law. Let us catch anew our vision of the vast possibilities for human welfare wrapped up in the cities, the farms, the mines, and the forests of this beloved State—the keystone of the arch of our Republic—these United States of America.

REGULATION OF MONETARY VALUES—ADDRESS BY FRED H. SEXAUER

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Fred H. Sexauer, president of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association. This address is really an appeal to the Congress to discharge its duty under the Constitution and regulate the value of money.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AGRICULTURE TALKS TO PLATFORM MAKERS AND DELEGATES

Platform architects are busy these days on plans and specifications. Relief and unemployment, monetary policy, taxation, Government spending, and the farm problem are questions discussed wherever politicians meet.

This broadcast is brought to you through the courtesy of the station to which you are listening. The National Cooperative Council expresses its appreciation to your radio station's management. Through its facilities agriculture is enabled to talk directly to National, State, county, and precinct committee men and women, and to delegates to the national conventions. Agriculture addresses all political parties and all candidates alike.

Farm organizations recognize that wage earners, industrial, financial, and commercial concerns, as well as farmers, have problems peculiar to each, which require distinct and separate legislative consideration.

Farm organizations also recognize that there is one major policy which, for better or worse, affects all groups alike. This is the monetary policy of the Federal Government.

After years of intensive study, farm organizations are convinced that permanent prosperity for agriculture must be built upon a secure monetary foundation. They are convinced that on such a foundation, expansion of industry will go far toward solving the unemployment problem, and assuring fair wages to workers. The farm organizations see the necessity of increasing the tax-paying and debt-paying power of all the people to enable them to carry the present stupendous burden of public and private debt. For this there is no solution possible that does not involve monetary policy.

The monetary policy which will be outlined in this brief talk is the policy unanimously adopted by the National Agricultural Conference in Washington last January. The National Agricultural Conference consists of the National Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Cooperative Council, and the Farmers' National Grain Corporation. These organizations represent at least 2,500,000 farm families, and their membership extends into every State in the Union.

These farm organizations believe the monetary policy which they advocate will safeguard the people of the United States against a repetition of the disaster of this depression, and against the inflation so many people fear.

How can this be assured? Is it humanly possible?

Organized agriculture believes quite positively that it is possible. Of one thing agriculture is certain, and on this point the proof is incontrovertible. A fixed gold standard—that is, money of unalterable gold content—never has been stable as to purchasing power and never can be. And unless money can be stabilized in purchasing power there can be no stability for agriculture or for industry and no security for labor.

Gold itself is not stable. In normal times nearly one-half of the world's production of gold is used in the industries and not as money. Whether used by dentists or jewelers or governments, gold is affected by the law of supply and demand, just as is every other commodity. If a fixed weight of gold is made the basis of the currency and the measure of value, the purchasing power of the dollar, whether it be a gold dollar, a paper dollar, or a credit dollar, will change as the value of gold changes.

So farm organizations came to the conclusion that money must be managed—that is, its value must be regulated, as required by the Constitution—if the purchasing power of money is to be stabilized in any true sense.

The stabilization we read about in the newspapers means fixation of the weight of the dollar. It does not mean what it pretends to mean. Stabilization by international agreement, in the sense that international finance uses the term, means fixing the gold content of each nation's money and permitting no change without international agreement.

Then if war, international speculation, financial panic, and hoarding of gold by individuals, banks, or nations causes the purchasing power of gold to rise, the price of basic commodities such as farm products will fall in every country adhering to the gold standard.

With the fall of prices comes agricultural and business depression. Then follow unemployment, increased relief expenditures, higher taxes, more business failures, and general lowering of the standard of living.

This is just what American agriculture wishes to avoid. It is what all producers of primary or basic commodities, whether they come from farms, forests, or mines, should wish to avoid.

The experience of England, Sweden, and 20 other nations whose currencies are similarly managed demonstrates the effectiveness of treating gold as a commodity and making no attempt to fix its price by government decree. In these managed-currency countries depression is rapidly vanishing. In most of them national budgets are balanced, business activity and employment are restored to or above the 1929 level. These countries are concerned with the purchasing power of their money, and not with its gold content.

What agriculture demands is a monetary system for the United States as efficient, as modern, as adaptable to present world conditions as are the managed-currency systems of other countries.

Agriculture knows that America must choose. The choice is between a managed currency and a managed economy. Not liking the manager economy of Fascist Italy, Communist Russia, or Nazi Germany, agriculture prefers the managed-currency system which has brought prosperity to the 22 nations that are using it.

Agriculture does not propose that the use of gold should be abandoned. But it does not want the American price level juggled up and down automatically by accidental variations in the world purchasing power of gold.

No one in history has ever been able to stabilize gold. Therefore, American agriculture insists that gold shall be treated as a commodity and that only such amounts of gold be put in the dollar as will make it buy a stable quantity of essential foods and raw materials. This means managing the currency with reference to the purchasing power of the dollar. In this way we can establish and maintain a more adequate and uniform price level of basic commodities. With profitable prices for basic commodities as a foundation, profits for business, employment for labor, and confidence in the future can be restored. Then would follow higher standards of living for everybody.

Agriculture wants this management of the monetary system in the hands of a nonpartisan board, created by and responsible to Congress. This would bring the regulation of the value of the dollar within the Constitution. Agriculture wants this board, or monetary authority (by whatever name called), to be protected by long tenure of office and life pensions.

Then Congress should give that board a mandate to manage the currency so as to keep the purchasing power of the dollar stable. Agriculture recommends that Congress shall require this monetary authority to adjust the value of the dollar so as to restore basic commodity prices to a sound level. This policy would restore business, create employment, eliminate doles and relief, and make again a prosperous Nation.

The purpose of monetary management, in the words of the National Agricultural Conference, is "to establish and maintain the dollar with a constant purchasing power, preserving the equity of contracts between debtor and creditor, and avoiding the dangers and losses that are inevitably involved in excessive and uncontrolled inflation or deflation."

The National Cooperative Council, speaking for itself, but within the limits of monetary policy adopted by the National Agricultural Conference, addresses the delegates of both the Republican and Democratic national conventions. It calls to their attention—

1. That the average price of basic commodities, including the principal farm, forest, and mineral products, rose step by step as the gold content of the dollar was reduced in 1933. This was before the A. A. A. was fully effective.

2. That industrial production, business activity, and employment were tremendously stimulated during the period when basic commodity prices were rising under the influence of monetary policy in 1933. That was before N. R. A. became fully effective. During that time, however, the cost of living rose but little—and that was logical, as the cost of living had fallen but little.

The farm organizations recognize that equality of opportunity for agriculture cannot be restored by monetary adjustment alone. Nevertheless, agriculture recognizes that its economic ills cannot be cured unless its monetary disadvantage is corrected. And let me emphasize just why it is that a fixed gold standard works to agriculture's disadvantage.

With the dollar kept equivalent to a fixed weight of gold, producers of farm and other basic commodities are tied to whatever price level is dictated by the world purchasing power of gold. So, unless farm prices are to fall and rise every time there is a disturbance in some other part of the world, we must keep the dollar free from a fixed attachment to gold. That means a managed currency system. Nothing radical. Only what the 22 sterling countries are doing today.

Agriculture will not be satisfied by vague declarations at Cleveland and Philadelphia in favor of "sound" or "adequate" currency, or an "honest" dollar. It must know what the platform-makers mean by "sound", "adequate", and "honest."

Agriculture is ready to define what it means. Its definition of "sound" money is money which is constant in purchasing and debt paying power, as distinguished from money stable in gold content.

An "honest" dollar does not from time to time lose half of its purchasing power, and again double its purchasing power. Currency is not "adequate"—no matter how much there may be—if it changes in value so often and so violently as to destroy business profits, depress wages, and prevent the normal interchange of goods and services.

Agriculture hopes that every delegate of both national conventions will realize that the monetary problem is a real one, and that it cannot be evaded in 1936. All that agriculture demands is a monetary system that is really sound and honest. It must be managed, in any event. And it must be hereafter managed in the interest of the public—not in the interest of the managers, nor in the interest of agriculture, nor in the interest of any one group, but managed to give stability in buying power. Then, and then only, will the monetary system serve the welfare of all classes alike.

Our monetary system should be so revised as to prevent disastrous deflation and equally disastrous inflation. The monetary system should be taken out of partisan politics. It should be made to serve with equal justice the interests of all groups—agriculture, labor, industry, commerce, and finance.

WE ARE NOT GOING BACK—EDITORIAL FROM PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, today's issue of the Philadelphia Record contains an editorial which has for its title the battle cry of the distinguished senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], "We are not going back." I ask unanimous consent that the editorial may be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be inserted in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Philadelphia Record of May 30, 1936]

WE ARE NOT GOING BACK

Senator BORAH, in a magnificent speech, crystallizes the issue of the Presidential campaign:

"Is America going back?"

He knows, we know, and the people know that America is not going back; that it will not return to the old deal.

As BORAH cries:

"Talk to the farmer, to the independent businessman, to labor, and to the people generally, and they will tell you:

"'We are not satisfied with this or that, but we are not going back.'"

Yet that's where the G. O. P. is headed. And BORAH makes no bones about it. No mistaking the sting of his words:

"An effort is being made to convince the people that to vote for the Republican Party does not mean we are going back. But that depends. If the men who have dominated the party in recent years * * * still continue to control the party, it is a challenge to the common sense of the voters of the country to tell them we are not going back in case we are given power. We will go back. They do not know anywhere else to go.

"Why is this fight being made by Mr. Hilles, Mr. Roraback, Mr. Schorr, and Mr. Brown, and the powerful financial and corporate interests behind them, except for the very purpose of going back? That is their great objective.

"Has anyone a right to assume that they have changed their political views or policies? On the contrary, we know that they have not."

Here is the truth, the naked truth, from one of the greatest men ever to honor the Republican Party with his loyalty.

BORAH rips the mask from all the pretense of liberalism by the old guard, and, without mentioning his name, their "favorite", Governor Landon.

Back?

If Landon isn't headed that way, if his masters are not headed that way, then why did the Kansas Governor evade 4 vital questions out of 10 asked him by Frazier Hunt? The questions and replies were published in the Record yesterday.

Why did Landon refuse to say where he stood on the gold standard, on a managed currency, on monetary matters generally?

He says he hasn't made up his mind.

On the eve of the Republican convention!

Is Landon waiting for Hearst and Mellon to make up his mind for him?

Why did Landon refuse to answer when asked:

"Do you favor an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the Federal Government to deal with economic and social problems, national in scope, or of limiting the courts as to their right to declare laws of Congress unconstitutional?"

Then Landon was asked: "Do you favor modification or suspension of the antitrust laws to enable businessmen to get together: (a) to agree on trade practices, (b) to agree on labor relations, (c) to agree on control of production, (d) to attempt to fix prices?"

Again, like a forgetful witness on the stand, Landon mumbled and said he was undecided on these issues, also.

Finally, the Governor of Kansas was asked whether he favored T. V. A. expansion and "control of utilities through the Holding Company Act."

And once more he hadn't made up his mind.

* * * * * * *

If any new evidence were needed to support BORAH's charges that the vested interests are running the Republican Party, here it is.

If any further evidence were needed that Landon is simply a stooge for those interests, he himself has given it by revealing that he is waiting for someone else to make up his mind on the questions most vital to this Nation.

That's the kind of man the old guard wants for a candidate. They know where they want to go. They want to go back, as BORAH says.

What better candidate for their purposes than Landon, who admits he doesn't know where he wants to go, except to the White House?

THE MERCHANT MARINE—STATEMENT BY H. O. SCHUNDLER

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD a statement relating to the pending ship-subsidy bill, by Mr. H. O. Schundler, of Madison, N. J., who is an expert on shipping matters.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

It is pertinent to remark that, in order that American ships may maintain themselves on the high seas and commercially compete with comparable foreign-flag ships in offshore transocean services, certain basic items of excess costs of American ships over foreign ships are involved which operate against American ships and in favor of foreign ships, and these excess costs have to be overcome by United States Government subsidies if the United States Government wants a merchant marine.

In reference to unavoidable or fixed costs, the cash investment or the cost of building a ship in an American shipyard is much higher than building a similar ship in a foreign shipyard. The following figures are merely illustrative and indicate the method of analysis that can be used.

For instance, to make a simple comparison, a 10,000-ton modern freighter or cargo vessel may be built (the costs hereafter used are merely used to illustrate a method) at present in an American shipyard at a cost of about, say, $1,100,000 and in a foreign yard at about, say, $600,000.

After putting such a vessel into the water for commercial operation, there are attached to it certain fixed charges, totaling 15 percent per year, on the building cost of a vessel, which are as follows:

A. Interest on the investment, 5 percent per year.

B. Owners' (hull and total loss) insurance on the cost or replacement value of the vessel, 3 percent per year.

C. Amortization of the investment, allowing for a normal 20-year life of vessel, 5 percent per annum.

D. Modernization upkeep, meaning reserve toward overcoming cost of improvements necessary to keep ship in competitive form, 2 percent per annum.

Accordingly the American vessel with $1,100,000 invested would cost $165,000 per year to carry those fixed charges.

This compares with the foreign vessel's investment of $600,000 requiring that fixed charges per year of $90,000 be carried for the self-same items enumerated above.

Since private capital is not available at present for investment in American transocean tonnage, it is necessary, as a first subsidy, for the Government to contribute the difference in the cost of building the American ship as against the foreign ship so that the American ship will have to carry fixed annual charges no more than the foreign ship.

In the cited comparison, a 10,000-ton American freighter, to carry only $90,000 of fixed charges, must be put on the accounting operating books at a first cost reduced to the foreign building cost, to wit, $600,000.

Therefore, unless the Government establishes parity in building costs by contributing the building-cost excess differential, in this case of $500,000, the American ship costing $1,100,000 to build cannot commercially compete with the foreign ship costing $600,000 to build.

In reference to working costs or physical operating expense: In order to maintain certain higher minimum ship-crew wages and the higher cost of maintaining so-called American standards of living aboard American ships there is an excess of the monthly working cost of an American vessel over the same item on foreign vessels.

To cite again a 10,000-ton freight vessel, the difference in cost of crew is about as follows: This size American vessel will or should cost for officers and crew a wage pay roll of about $3,450 a month. As against this, this same type of vessel under a foreign flag will cost about $2,650 per month; thus, there is a difference of about $800 per month against the American ship.

In addition thereto, the feeding of the American crew on a basis of American standards of living will or should cost about $600 per month, as against the cost of feeding on foreign vessels of about $450 per month, or a difference of about $150 against the American ships.

In addition thereto, the premium for the employer's liability insurance, protecting against injuries of the crew, is based on total pay rolls and therefore amounts on American vessels to a slightly larger premium cost than on foreign vessels. There are also some slight extra costs on account of certain sanitary requirements. These slight extra costs amount to about say $50 per month extra on the cited American-type vessel, as against the same type of foreign vessel.

Furthermore, necessary so-called voyage repairs, if made in American shipyards, and necessary deck and engine supplies and consumable ship stores (other than crew victuals) and replacement parts, if purchased in America, increase the expense of physical operation (working costs) of an American vessel over a foreign vessel. This differential can be argued about at length. It is my considered opinion that this item costs an American ship of the type herein discussed as an example at least $24,000 per year of active operation more than it costs the same type of foreign ship in active operation.

Therefore, if the actual new construction cost of the American ships are put down on a parity with the first construction cost of foreign ships by the United States Government contributing this difference in cost, then the American ships are on a parity with the foreign ships as far as first investment costs are concerned and as far as pertinent thereto fixed yearly charges are concerned, and American ships then become competitive; provided that an American ship receives in this cited instance (a 10,000-ton freighter) a subsidy of about $36,000 per year; i. e., if the Government contributes about $36,000 annually to cover the excess of physical working costs of this American ship over its competitive foreign ship, so that this American ship is placed on a parity also with its foreign-flag competitor as to the annual working costs of vessels.

In other words, for instance, if this American 1,000-ton ship does cost to the American ship operator the sum of $90,000 in net fixed costs per annum, and then this operator does receive a Government subsidy of $36,000 per year, he then is put on a parity as to working costs, as well as to fixed costs.

From then on, it is up to the ability and efficiency of the American ship operator operating an American ship to get the business as against the foreign ship operator operating a foreign ship.

The American ship operator who has experience is then placed on a parity as to construction cost and the pertinent unavoidable fixed annual costs of a foreign vessel and is placed on a parity as to the physical operating expense or working costs of the foreign vessel.

In other words, the American ship operator who has the proper experience in transocean business then can and should use American ships, because such are then available on a parity basis with foreign ships, and he has no reason for chartering foreign ships and/or owning foreign ships in order to make profits out of the employment of his capital and the application of his energy and his own experience and knowledge in the ocean-transportation business. It must always be remembered that capital, plus energy and experience, has only one object in view, namely, profits.

The following are comments as to operating capital needed by the operator of ships. Foreign shipowners and operators have, at least as far as British, German, Japanese, Italian, Norwegian, Danish, Swedish, Holland, and Belgium operators are concerned, the willful and intelligent cooperation of ship-minded bankers. This is a decided help and advantage that the foreign operator of foreign ships enjoys and which the American ship operator does not enjoy, for the reason that the foreign operator may readily obtain such facilities as cash advances against the ship's current or future earnings, protected by insurance covering so-called anticipated freight revenues, etc., without difficulty, whereas the American operator is practically without such facilities.

A ship operator should have, depending upon his trade route, from $60,000 to $100,000 in cash operating capital available for the opeartion of a 10,000-ton cargo ship used herein as an example. This money provides him, depending upon his route, with a few months of operating- and cargo-tending expenses and gives him the facility to give reasonable accommodations to his shipping clientele so far as concerns collection of freights earned by ship.

The American operator may be said to be, and he must consider that he is, at a disadvantage, due to the fact that the American cost of working capital per ship is higher than the cost of working capital to the foreign operator per similar type of foreign ship.

This sort of invisible item of working-capital costs is often overlooked by ship operators. Most American shipowners and operators are short of operating capital because they do not sufficiently take this point into consideration. It is my opinion that when American operators give more attention to sufficient operating capital that American bankers will become more helpful because then the American ship operator becomes more responsible. However, at present this item of extra cost of American working capital per such American ship per annum is a definite item of excess cost of operating an American vessel by an American operator as against the same cost to a foreign operator of a foreign vessel.

This item should be in some measure considered by the Government, and it may be necessary for the Government to find a way of contributing the extra cost of this item in order to assure the success of competition of the American ship against the same type of foreign ship. It is difficult to set down a method of estimate for this item because it is flexible; it should be the business of a governmental commission or authority to determine this factor in connection with individual ships and their operators.

Another possible extra expense item pertains to the subject of so-called specific trade routes. If an American ship operator is required by a governmental contract to operate between certain American ports and certain foreign ports on a precise, regular sailing-date schedule, irrespective of cargo offerings, such requirement in many cases creates a loss to such operator, due to the fact that his vessels have to operate partly empty in order to comply with sailing schedules. This item of extra expense also requires consideration by a governmental commission or authority to determine this factor in connection with individual trade routes and their operators and the question of other foreign competition on the same individual trade routes.

The following is also pertinent to working costs: The question whether the shore-staff expenses of an American ship operator are greater than those of the foreign ship operator.

In my humble opinion, American freight solicitors are more efficient than their foreign competitors; on the other hand, foreign-flag operators maintain larger shore staffs right here in the United States than our American ship operators do maintain in foreign ports. It is my opinion that the cost of freight solicitation per ton is greater to the foreign ship operator than the cost of freight solicitation per ton to the American ship operator. Basically there are no wage differentials on shore-staff salaries between American and foreign ship shore staffs, whether the shore staff is localized in the United States or in foreign countries. Furthermore, the individual ship operation and the individual ship operator and the individual pertinent trade route and the respective competition on that trade route are factors entering into this question. It is my opinion that in certain trade routes the foreign ship operator operating a foreign ship between the United States and foreign ports is at a disadvantage in reference to the question of shore-staff expenses and that the American operator of American ships has an advantage. In other trade routes the American ship operator is at a disadvantage. A fair consideration of these points should be given pertinently to the individual operation, and, since this item is a flexible one, it should be the subject of ascertainment in each individual case by a duly authorized commission of the Government which may decide whether the Government should contribute or not contribute.

The following are comments as to regulations pertinent to type of construction, inspection service, classification of vessels, licensing of officers, and qualifications of crews, etc.

A duly authorized Government commission can regulate the above subjects which require the application of common sense and the keeping in mind of the fact that our merchant marine is and must be an auxiliary to the United States Navy.

It is my humble opinion that unless the United States of America builds within the next few years modern freight vessels, modern tankers, modern so-called combination passenger and cargo vessels, and passenger liners, the American merchant marine will again become obsolete and noncompetitive and useless to the United States Navy in case of national emergency. By the expression "modern" I mean vessels coordinated in construction and speed and facilities so as to compete and compare favorably with foreign modern vessels and so as to be usable by our Navy in case of national emergency.

It must be understood that any special feature which adds to the normal cost of the construction of American vessels (such as United States Navy requirements of special type and of extra speed and consequent extra fuel and other requirements and, likewise, extra upkeep requirements and a lessened cargo capacity are features of extra cost and extra upkeep) which the United States Government desires must be overcome by direct additional subsidy pertinent to such extra first cost and to such extra additional annual upkeep. These items are in reality a national-defense expense item, separate from and independent of strict commercial considerations. Passenger vessels especially should be built with prime consideration given to military use in national emergency.

It is my humble opinion that the United States requires the construction of some 200 modern ships, which fleet should be composed of modern freighters, fast tankers, modern combination passenger and cargo vessels, and modern passenger liners.

Comments on the economic features involved in a proper long-range coordinated new ship construction program and the necessary funds involved to equalize American cost to a parity with foreign construction costs and working costs, in order to provide and maintain a commercially successful American merchant marine.

1. It seems expedient that the Government should assume the construction cost of these 200 vessels.

2. This fleet of 200 vessels, when placed in commercial operation on the basis above indicated by me, should produce gross income to the Government sufficient to pay to the operators the subsidies in keeping with the formula stated and leave over an annual net income. In addition to this income, the Government should have an income from taxes paid by ship operators on their profits. In addition, the Government should have an income from taxes paid by shipbuilders who constructed these vessels. From a national economic point of view these Government incomes produced by ships should be invested in additional new vessels. In other words, the income produced by these vessels could act as a revolving fund to finance the construction of additional new vessels. In this manner the average age of the merchant fleet will be kept low and the successful commercial competitive potency of such fleet will be maintained.

The method suggested by the example of the freighter cited above can be applied to these other types of vessels. It must, however, be considered that in certain passenger-line routes the commercial aspect of passenger vessels has been lost sight of entirely; as a matter of fact, many foreign modern passenger vessels now in operation, and some that may be put in operation in the future, can be considered only as disguised extra fast naval auxiliaries of the troop-ship type, or of airplane-carrier type, or of commerce-raider type.

For this reason the formula developed above as to freighters may get into a position whereby the necessary Government subsidy toward overcoming excess working costs of an American passenger liner as against a foreign passenger liner may exceed the payment that the American operator of such American passenger vessel is required to make to the Government.

A passenger is usually not interested in who is the operator of a passenger ship, whether it is owned and operated by a government or by a private firm. The passenger is activated by his own past experience or hearsay from others or he is intrigued by advertisement, but basically the passenger is influenced by the so-called reputation of a line which operates the passenger vessel to give him good service and the price charged.

However, due to the freight shippers' psychology, the average freight shipper does not wish to do business with a vessel operated by a Government. Possible controversies with such a Government owner and operator always mean fuss and trouble to the shipper and entail his being confronted with the red tape or unavoidable delays and troubles caused by the limited authorities of Government employees who cannot, or are not, permitted to acquire a commercial tendency.

Therefore, unavoidably, if the United States wants a commercially potent merchant marine a method must be worked out whereby ships, such as the 10,000-ton freighter example cited, are documented and available to the private responsible American operator so that he can act as owner. The best method would be, in my humble opinion, a proper form of bare-boat type of charter contract agreement on long-time basis between the Government as owner and the private operator as charterer. In the cited instance of the 10,000-ton freight vessel, the private operator would pay $90,000 per year to the Government for yearly bare-boat charter hire, and the Government would pay to the operator the $36,000 per year subsidy or parity equalization aid.

Such private operator should have the opportunity to acquire, over a period of years, the outright ownership of such vessel, without impairing his working capital funds. An owner of a ship without proper working capital is of no account and cannot succeed. The financial responsibility of an operator as to working capital is more important for the successful operation of ships than the ability of an intending shipowner to make some down payments on a ship purchase and then find himself short of necessary working capital.

It may be pertinent to remark that the situation that has existed at a tremendous expense and loss to the Government during the past 15 years here in the United States as to ships originally built by and owned by the Government and officially sold to private operators, or as to ships built by private operators with Government funds covering 75 percent of building costs loaned to the operator, in many, if not most, cases is one of expensively camouflaged Government ownership.

I believe that the formula set up in this declaration gives the private honest American experienced ship operator the incentive to operate American ships in competition with foreign ships, and protects the United States Government in its investment, and what is most important would insure the purpose of such investment.

Respectfully submitted.

H. O. SCHUNDLER.

THE SUPREME COURT—EDITORIAL FROM PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I ask permission to have inserted in the RECORD an editorial from the Philadelphia Record of May 30, 1936, entitled "The Nation's Gift From the Supreme Court."

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Philadelphia Record of May 30, 1936]

MEMORIAL DAY—THE NATION'S GIFT FROM THE SUPREME COURT

Today the Nation honors the veterans, living and dead, of the Civil War.

Today the Nation bows its head in tribute to the 360,000 Union soldiers who perished in that conflict, in sympathy for the 135,000 Confederate victims.

Memorial Day is celebrated so that we may not forget the men who preserved the United States.

It is quite as important that we not forget why those men died—why it became necessary for them to sacrifice their lives in 4 horrible years of death, destruction, and devastation.

The Civil War was fought to overrule a decision of the United States Supreme Court—the infamous Dred Scott decision.

The Court, headed by Chief Justice Taney, chose to twist the United States Constitution so that the Justices might write their own personal bias on slavery into our fundamental law.

The Supreme Court, then as now, stood in the path of the progress of the American people.

The Court told the American people that they couldn't do anything about slavery; that slavery was Constitutional.

The Constitution, in 1857, was what the majority of southern Justices said it was.

And this Nation was plunged into war because it could not deal with the slavery question through peaceful means.

Yet with that lesson before the Court and before our people, the Nation faces the same issue it faced in 1857:

Slavery.

Wage slavery, this time.

And it is confronted with a Supreme Court majority as determined to prevent solution of that problem by orderly process as was the Court majority under Taney.

Congress could have curbed the Court in 1857. It did not do so.

Congress can curb the Court today.

It must do so.

The Record favors a constitutional amendment to clarify, beyond possible doubt, the power of Congress to legislate for human rights as well as property rights.

An amendment which will protect the rights of labor, permit Congress to enact social legislation and minimum-wage and minimum-hour laws, give Congress an unfettered hand in curbing exploitation and fraud in high places as well as low places.

We recognize, however, that such an amendment may require months, if not years, for ratification. Its opponents would need but 13 States to block it, regardless of majority will.

Meanwhile an economic emergency persists. Fortunately the Constitution gives Congress the power to meet the emergency.

Congress does have the right to exercise its power under article III, section 2, of the Constitution:

"In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases * * * the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction both as to law and fact, with such exceptions as the Congress shall make."

Here is one of the checks and balances deliberately placed in the Constitution by the founding fathers. It is a check upon arbitrary abuse of the judicial power.

It is just as important that this check be used by Congress to preserve a balanced American Government as it is that the President and the Court use their powers to the same end.

Congress can limit the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. It has done that in the past, and the Court has recognized its right to do it.

On Memorial Day, of all occasions, the necessity for congressional resistance of judicial usurpation should stand out in the thoughts of our people and their elected representatives.

On Memorial Day, of all days, we have before us a recollection of the terrifying cost of a judiciary unrestrained.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (H. R. 12624) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1936, and June 30, 1937, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] to the amendment of the committee, beginning on line 24, page 29.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, the pending amendment was on yesterday very clearly explained by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], and it will be unnecessary to dwell upon its provisions.

It will be recalled, to review a little of the history of this matter, that, as appears from pages 14 and 15 of the hearings before the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee with reference to the War Department appropriation bill for 1937, the following statement was made:

Funds have been provided from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 for the partial construction of the projects listed herewith which will require in addition to the above estimates $204,174,000 to complete.

The projects listed are:

Passamaquoddy tidal power project, Maine.
The Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal.
Conchas Dam, N. Mex.
Bluestone Reservoir, W. Va.
Sardis Reservoir, Miss.

The discussion which took place in the committee appears in part on page 23, where Mr. BOLTON said:

I want this point distinctly understood, that, as a member of the Appropriations Committee of Congress, I believe we are supposed to provide funds for carrying out activities which have been authorized by Congress, but I think it is entirely wrong to suggest to this committee the appropriation of funds for activities which have never been authorized by Congress. I think that would be entirely beyond the scope of our authority.

Mr. PARKS, who was chairman of the subcommittee, said:

I think it has been held that any project that actually has been begun and on which money has been expended stands on the same level with projects authorized by Congress. Of course, that does not mean we have to do it, but, so far as the authorization is concerned, it is there.

Mr. President, my contention is that these projects have been authorized by Congress under the act of 1935; that work has been begun upon them, fully authorized, and funds have been properly allotted for beginning the work upon the projects. But the House committee decided not to place the projects in the appropriation bill. The bill came to the Senate. I offered an amendment which included the projects and it was referred to the Committee on Appropriations. That committee by a majority of one rejected the amendment. The subcommittee by a majority of one and the full committee by a majority of one rejected the project.

The bill was reported to the Senate. I offered the amendment on the floor of the Senate. By that time the Senators from Maine [Mr. HALE and Mr. WHITE] suggested and claimed that the Passamaquoddy project ought not to be included in the bill, so the amendment which I finally offered on the floor of the Senate referred only to the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal.

On the floor of the Senate, in the meantime, provisions were inserted in the bill for the New Mexico project and for the Mississippi project, the first a dam and the latter a reservoir. The amendment which I offered provided for the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal in accordance with the recommendations of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers. The Bureau of the Budget approved it and submitted an estimate of $12,000,000. The amendment now before us provides for $10,000,000 for 1937, while the Budget estimate was for $12,000,000. The Budget estimate was submitted to the House, so the item was regularly submitted to the Congress by the Budget Bureau and should properly have been inserted in the appropriation bill for 1937.

The amendment came to a vote in the Senate. Unfortunately, quite a number of Senators were absent and the amendment which I had offered was defeated. I think the vote was 35 for and 39 against. One of the Senators then absent, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], returned next day and entered a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the amendment was defeated. When that motion was considered, again some Senators were absent. I know if they had been present some of them would have voted for the motion to reconsider. That motion was defeated by a majority of one. The vote, as I recall, was 35 for and 36 against.

The claim that these projects have been overwhelmingly eliminated by the House and the Senate, it seems to me is not altogether well founded. A majority of only one vote against the motion to reconsider was the result of the test in the Senate.

So far as the Passamaquoddy and Florida ship canal projects are concerned, they come again before the Senate in the form of the pending amendment. The joint resolution offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] was referred to the Committee on Commerce and has been reported favorably by that committee. The amendment now pending is the same as the joint resolution favorably reported by the Commerce Committee to the Senate with the exception that the boards provided for are to report to the President on or before July 20, 1936, according to the amendment, instead of by June 20, 1936, as provided in the joint resolution.

It is claimed that that is too early a time to enable the boards to make study and investigation and examination of the reports which have already been furnished, and the data on file, and then make report to the President. I submit that it is important to limit the time because unless provision is made for carrying on the projects, the work on the canal and on the tidewater development in Maine will have to cease on or about July 1.

The President laid the projects before Congress because he did not have sufficient funds with which to proceed with them under the act of 1935. Having himself initiated them, having allotted funds for them, and having started the work, he submitted the projects to Congress.

On the Florida project the Government has spent $5,400,000. The right-of-way for the canal has been provided by the six counties through which it will run. This has been done at a cost of $1,500,000. The work will have to be discontinued and 5,000 or 6,000 people employed there will be dismissed and have to go on the relief rolls unless some arrangement is made whereby the work may be continued. The work will stop by July 1 or about that time unless something is done by Congress in the meantime. The President has placed the matter squarely before Congress with this in view.

Of course, I can conceive that it would be somewhat pleasing to the opponents of the administration, to those who wish to claim some shortcomings or some abuse of authority or some waste inexcusable in its nature, if they could picture an abandonment of these projects and perhaps exhibit photographs of weeds growing where the work had started and an utter failure of the projects themselves, to say nothing of the distress brought upon the people who were there employed.

The Atlantic-Gulf Canal project would give employment to 20,000 people for 5 or 6 years. At the present time there are about 5,000 or 6,000 employed. Are they to be turned loose? Is this picture to be held up before the country? Is it to be said that here was a project undertaken by the President without sufficient authority and without sufficient funds and that it had to be abandoned? Shall the people have wasted $1,500,000 of their funds which have been used in the purchase of a right-of-way for an abandoned canal? Is that the kind of picture which the opponents of the amendment propose to have submitted to the country?

That, of course, is aside from the main question. I speak particularly with reference to the Florida canal, leaving to the Senators from Maine, who are more familiar with the subject, all reference to the other provision in the amendment with reference to the Passamaquoddy project.

With reference to the canal, the surveys were authorized by the River and Harbor Act of 1927 and again by the act of 1930. Since those acts were passed the Chief of Engineers has been engaged in the work of making surveys, estimates of cost, and his reports thereon. Some 5 or 6 years of time have been spent and expenditures of large sums of money have been made for the purpose of making the investigations, surveys, and studies and ascertaining the data with reference to this project. Those data are all available. The board provided for in the amendment can easily examine the reports which have already been accumulated during past years respecting this project, and I think they can do so readily within the time limit of July 20. The data are all on hand. It will not be necessary to do any field work. It will not be necessary to sink 117 wells, or more, for they have already been sunk. It will not be necessary to do over again the work which has been done. The reports on that work are all now available.

The fact is that the following examinations of and reports on this project have already been made by agencies of the Federal Government:

(a) War Department, Corps of Engineers: Complete physical and economic surveys by a special board of survey, under the direction of the Chief of Engineers, pursuant to the provisions of the River and Harbor Acts of 1927 and 1930.

(b) Federal Administration of Public Works: An examination of the project with a view to determining the justification of a loan for its construction, to be repaid out of tolls to be collected from shipping.

It will be recalled that the application before the Public Works Administration was for a loan sufficient to build the canal. The Public Works Administration considered the application and made a thorough examination:

(c) A board of review, appointed by the President, and representing the Corps of Engineers and the Administration of Public Works: An independent study of the project and a review of the studies and reports of the special board of survey of the Corps of Engineers and the Administration of Public Works.

This board was composed of as able engineers as can be found in the country, two of them river and harbor engineers, two of them P. W. A. engineers, the Chief and his assistant; and they selected a fourth, Mr. Douglas, of New York, an engineer of international reputation.

(d) A special board of geologists and engineers appointed by direction of the Chief of Engineers.

An examination and study of the possible effects of a sea-level canal on the underground water supply of Florida.

Those reports are all on file, and all the special board will have to do is to examine those data and pass judgment upon them.

2. The coordinated findings of the above-named agencies are substantially as follows:

(a) A sea-level canal is preferable and will have no adverse effect on the agriculture or underground water supply of Florida.

(b) The cost of the project is estimated to be $142,700,000, exclusive of land and interest during construction. Land is being furnished by the State of Florida.

(c) The canal is economically justified as a river and harbor project, on a 4-percent basis, at a cost upward of $160,000,000.
